MANUFACTURERS' COMMITTEE TO PASS UP NO MEANS OF SECURING INDUSTRIES

Will Keep Peterboro Before Eyes of Industrial Magnates in U. S. and England

Mr. H. A. Heaton, of Heaton's Agency, Toronto, interviewed the city's Manufacturing Committee last night on the question of renewal of contract for advertising in Heaton's Annual and continuing an agreement, by which the agency is paid a fee for services in securing the location of any industry in Peterborough. Heaton's Annual is an industrial magazine circulated largely in the United States among manufactures and all engaged in large commercial and industrial operations. It brings before such men the advantages of Canadian localities as sites for new industries. The committee decided to renew a contract for two pages of advertising at $100 a page, in this journal, which will henceforth be generously circulated in England as well as across the border.

Heatons' Agency also makes a business of securing for municipalities new industries by direct personal communication apart from their Annual. That is to say, they keep in touch with propositions for establishing new industries in Canada and furnish data as to available sites advantageous to intending locators. For this service they charge a municipality a fee for any new industry they (Heaton's Agency) secure for that municipality by their "direct" efforts. It was through Heaton's Agency that the Western Clock Co. established their factory here.

The fee charged for such service is three per cent. of the additional pay roll to a municipality represented in a new industry. The total maximum fee charged is $1,200 on a pay roll of $40,000, payable as follows:

One hundred dollars when a new industry decides to locate, $150 when it starts operations, and the remainder of the fee one years after the industry has been in operation. Should an industry cease business in five years then Heaton's Agency returns to the municipality one half their fee collected. If the whole fee is paid when the first installment falls due, the municipality is allowed 20 per cent. discount.

The committee decided to continue the city's existing agreement with Heaton's on the above lines.

The committee will also get prices on illustrated booklets showing Peterborough's factories, scenic points business centres, private residences etc. They will also get the cost of portfolios of photographic views taken by Mr. Fred. Roy, a sample of which Alderman Whitehouse had previously submitted. The idea is to use these booklets where they will do most good in attracting attention to this city's advantages as a manufacturing and residential centre. Ald. Whitehouse suggests that portfolios of photos, which would cost considerable, could be "loaned" industrial heads with whom the city's officials are in direct touch on the question of locating here. Only a few, if any, of these would be ordered.

CLEANLINESS IS HEALTH

By the use of Gillett's Lye, house cleaning is made a pleasure instead of a drudgery. It softens the water and cleans thoroughly whether the dirt is visible or invisible. Destroys all bacteria and infectious germs, removes obstructions from drain pipes, closets, sinks, etc. Refrigerators are made delightfully fresh and clean by using one teaspoonful of Gillett's Lye dissolved in two gallons of water.

The Path to Health

For many thousands of women the Path to Health has certainly been through Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. When this great remedy was first introduced, and for many years after, skeptics frowned upon its curative claims, but as year after year has rolled by and the little group of women who had been cured by it has since grown into a vast army of hundreds of thousands—doubt and skepticism have been swept away as by a mighty tidal wave, until today this purely vegetable medicine is recognized as the greatest remedy for woman's special ills in the world. This is because it is a wonderful tonic and reconstructor which acts directly and favorably upon the feminine organization and is a specific for that purpose.

MR. BURNHAM FIRES HOT SHOT FROM PLACE IN HOUSE

WOULD ABOLISH CAMPAIGN FUNDS AND SAYS PROHIBITION IS UNCHRISTIAN

Ottawa, April 16.— There was considerable discussion in the house of commons today on a motion by J. H. Burnham, West Peterborough, dealing with large campaign funds. The resolution follows:

"That, in the opinion of this house, in view of the reported statement by the Rev. Ben Spence, that another prohibition referendum in Ontario would cost the prohibitionists five million dollars, and in view of the fact that such immense sums tend to the corruption by patronage and otherwise, of press and people, and to the destruction of public liberty and public morals, and in view of the reported collection of party funds for the Farmers' party and parties, and in view of the fact that a coming struggle in Canada will probably be between the owners of land and the employers of labor, and, in view of the charges made against other parties in respect of party funds, it is desirable that all campaign funds be prohibited and made a criminal offence, and that an amendment of the criminal code be made to that effect."

Campaign funds, said Mr. Burnham should be made illegal. Mr. Burnham was particularly critical of the Dominion Alliance, the Y. N. C. A. and the Farmers' party.

Says Methods Bolshevistic

Mr. Burnham compared the methods of Bolshevism with those of the Dominion Alliance. When any organization, he said, threw aside ancient practice of law and justice and used all its weapons to force its wishes upon the people, a dangerous precedent was established, and the way would be paved to civil war.

"We must take out of the hands of the people who would forment disturtance, the powerful weapons which they propose to use," said Mr. Burnham," "and we must take from Mr. Ben Spence and people of that like, the means by which they propose to make themselves their brothers' keepers."

Remarks on Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Burnham next paid attention to the Y. M. C. A., declaring that it collected large sums of money on the pretence that such was for Christian work, when it had been found that the only way to make the institution pay was to run it on a self-supporting basis and supply the demand for popular amusement, such as billiards and pool, rather than religious instruction.

He spoke of the farmers shaking their fists in the faces of the people, "after having deluded them into believing that they have given their money to rid the country of corruption."

Mr. Burnham, in finally withdrawing his motion, concluded with the remark that so far as prohibition was concerned he believed it was anti-Christian, and came from the devil, to whom it would finally return.

KITCHEN OF RESIDENCE IS DAMAGED BY FIRE

DEPARTMENT HAD FIGHT WITH FLAMES AT HOME OF W. G. CLOSSOMS

At 11.15 this morning the Fire Department was called out to a fire in the kitchen of number 250 Euclid avenue, occupied by Mr. W. G. Clossons. When the department arrived on the scene the whole kitchen was a mass of flames. With the aid of one line of hose and the 45-gallon chemical tank, the blaze was confined to the kitchen where it originated, keeping the damage sustained down to a small figure.

It is not definitely known how the fire originated, but it is thought that a spark from the cook stove flew into a box full of cleaning rags which was situated on the floor in front of the stove and ignited it. The material of the kitchen was very inflammable and after smoldering in the box the flames spread to the walls while Mrs. Cossons was upstairs working. When she returned to the kitchen the blaze had already assumed large proportions.

Mrs. Andrews, London, the mother of five children, who eloped with D. McCallum, and was arrested in St. Thomas, was alowed to go on suspended sentence, and McCallum was fined $100.

After a man has suddenly struck it rich he will be surprised at the number of people who grasp him by the hand and say, "I told you so."

WILL OPPOSE MOVE TO HOLD ANOTHER REFERENDUM

CONSERVATIVE LEADER SAYS PROVINCE SHOULD EXERCISE PRESENT POWERS

Toronto, April 16.— Opposition seems assured in the Legislature to the McCreary resolution, which calls for a referendum on the question of importation of liquor. Advantage is being taken of the position that it is not Government-introduced business, and as far as present indications go a good deal will be made of this point by those who will take exception to the motion. It is not possible at present to accurately guage the strength of opposition or arrive at a conclusion as to whether it is strong enough to endanger the resolution. Opinion seems to be in a fluid state, and it is likely that caucuses will be held to determine what steps may be taken.

Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, the leader of the Conservatives, stated it had not been decided what the party would do as a unit, but he had some objections to offer. He insisted that a matter of such importance should have been introduced by the Government and responsibility assumed. He declared the people by their votes had already shown emphatically what their mind was on the question and consequently why the need for another referendum? He stated the Government could go the length of Provincial jurisdiction and legislate against any body having liquor in their possession.

Labor Group Opposed

A solid opposition to the proposal of applying to the Federal Government for power to take another prohibition referendum in Ontario, is to be expected from the Labor group, according to M. M. MacBride, M.P.P., of Brantford. "The reason is entirely for reasons of economy," he said. "We already know what the people want, and that is a sane measure which will gain the support of all parties, Labor, Farmer, Liberal and Conservative. It would cost us about a million and a quarter dollars and it would only be spent for nothing. Labor wants the temperance issue removed entirely from the sphere of party politics. Prohibition must cease to be a party football."

The Manitoba Legislature has adopted the proportional representation plan for the next election of Winnipeg's representatives, who will be ten in number, instead of six.

AMATUER NIGHT TO-NIGHT | TO-NIGHT "My Boy Jack" | CHANGE OF PLAYS EACH EVENING

: : AT THE GRAND : :

By special request tonight the Ernie Marks Stock Company will repeat "My Boy Jack," which was so successful on Monday evening last. In it Will L. Phillips will be seen at his best in the character of Jack Padden, Jr. This role is particularly fitted to him, and at the last presentation of this play, he made an immediate and lasting hit with his audience. The sketch is covered in four acts, the first being "poverty," the home of the boys; the second, the apartments of Harold Hunting; the third, the same as the second, and the last act is in the green room of the Metropolitan Opera House. It is a humorous play, designed to keep the interest of the audience from start to finish, and that it is capable of doing this, was demonstrated on Monday last.

Between each act some fine vaudeville turns, which are worth the money themselves, will be given. Henri Levy is unsurpassable with his Jewish stories; Ed. H. Stauffer, with his ballads, is a first-class entertainer, and Wm. H. Desmond, as a funny fat comedian and dancer, is a scream. A bit of Broadway vaudeville, presented by Wood and Sarrazine, is also worth seeing. A feature of the entertainment tonight will be the performance of sixteen or more amateurs who will compete for special prizes.

MAYOR TO ACT AS CHAIRMAN

AT HEAD OF BOARD OF WORKS PENDING NEW APPOINTMENT

Tenders were opened by the Council's Property Committee last night for the purchase of the three old houses on Burnham street standing on the land purchased by the city for its gravel for use on the new bridge.

John Dunsford bid $166 for 381 Burnham street and $45 for 371-373 on the same street.

David Conroy bid $275, F. McMurray $102 and M. H. Quinlan $77.50 for the whole property.

Mr. Maniece offered $10 for an old shed on the Rogers property.

The city clerk was authorized to purchase a new typewriter for his office.

A Complain.

Committee took up the complaint by residents that the use of saw mill machinery on the Utilities Commission's property at the corner of Aylmer and Sherbrooke streets constitutes a nuisance. Mann's saw mill was operating on this site, but now H. Dinsdale is running a woodcutting machine there.

Ald. Whitehouse said Dinsdale is a returned soldier who has invested all his capital in this wood yard at the corner of Aylmer and Sherbrooke streets, and it would be a hardship to ask him to remove. Such action would mean in fact putting him out of business.

On motion of Ald. Hamilton and Whitehouse, the Utilities Commission will be asked to request Dinsdale to keep this yard in good shape.

New Chairman.

His Worship raised the question of a chairman of the Board of Works a position vacation through the death of Ald. Harry Phelan. It was decided that Mayor McIntyre shall act as chairman of this committee until a new alderman and chairman of the Board of Works is appointed.

There were present Chairman Ald Jones, Mayor McIntyre, Aldermen Hamilton, Whitehouse and Crowe.

DR. SUTTON LECTURES ON "FOUR GREAT PLAGUES"

DISCUSSED FILM "THE END OF THE ROAD" AT ALLEN THEATRE

He spoke of the four great plagues which medical men were concerned with. They were tuberculosis, cancer and the two disease with which the picture that was being shown dealt. Of these a campaign of publicity and medical knowledge had during the last 20 years resulted in a steady decrease in the number of cases of tuberculous and an increase in the number of cures. The same could not as yet be said for cancer. There was not yet the medical knowledge necessary for a real clean-up of this disease. Of the last two plagues the medical knowledge necessary was at hand and the means of treatment had been perfected, but the daylight had not been let in.

At the final showing of "The End of the Road" at the Allen Theatre last night the audience was addressed on behalf of the Peterborough Medical Association by Dr. N. H. Sutton, who in a few sharp words, condemned the former "hush, hush, don't mention it" idea in connection with the diseases handled in the picture.

It must not be thought that these diseases were always venereal in their origin. In many cases it was the innocent who suffered and it was to prevent this that the campaign of publicity being waged by the National Council for the combatting of venereal diseases was necessary. In the picture it would be shown how the effects of these diseases were passed on to others, generally the innocent.

They would see how the wise mother instructed her daughter and how the more worldly mother flatly refused to answer the natural questioning of her child and left her to find her answer from sources obscene. As was explained in the picture children should receive instruction at the age of about seven years and again at about 14.

Dr. Sutton had but one fault to find with the picture. He felt that it did not lay sufficient stress in the evil effects of the diseases on the men themselves. In speaking of the effects, Dr. Sutton stated that 80 per cent. of blindness at birth were through the diseases shown in the picture. It was not generally realized that 10 per cent. of the population of our cities were infected. The stirring facts revealed by the war were the cause of the daylight which was now being let in to these diseases. It was well known how the Canadian boys were victimized overseas. In the army, however, these diseases were notifiable with the result that the disease had been controlled and cures effected before the soldier was demobilized. The civilian population was just as badly infected as the army or even more so, but they did not have the methods of treatment available in the army. Now, however, the Dominion Government had set aside a large sum of money to fight these diseases and the Provincial Government had added to it and it was likely that a clinic would be established in Peterborough which would be available to fight these evils. The clinic would also be useful as a laboratory to assist in the work of combatting other communicable physical ills. In conclusion, he appealed to the audience to get away from the "hush, hush, don't mention it" idea and to obtain a working knowledge of the diseases and the ways in which they could be transmitted.

The picture during its four days' showing here has created a profound impression as to the seriousness of these facts on all who saw it. It is the first time that this subject has been dealt with in Peterborough in such a frank out-spoken manner and the lesson which has thus been learned will be of inestimable value to the public health of the city.

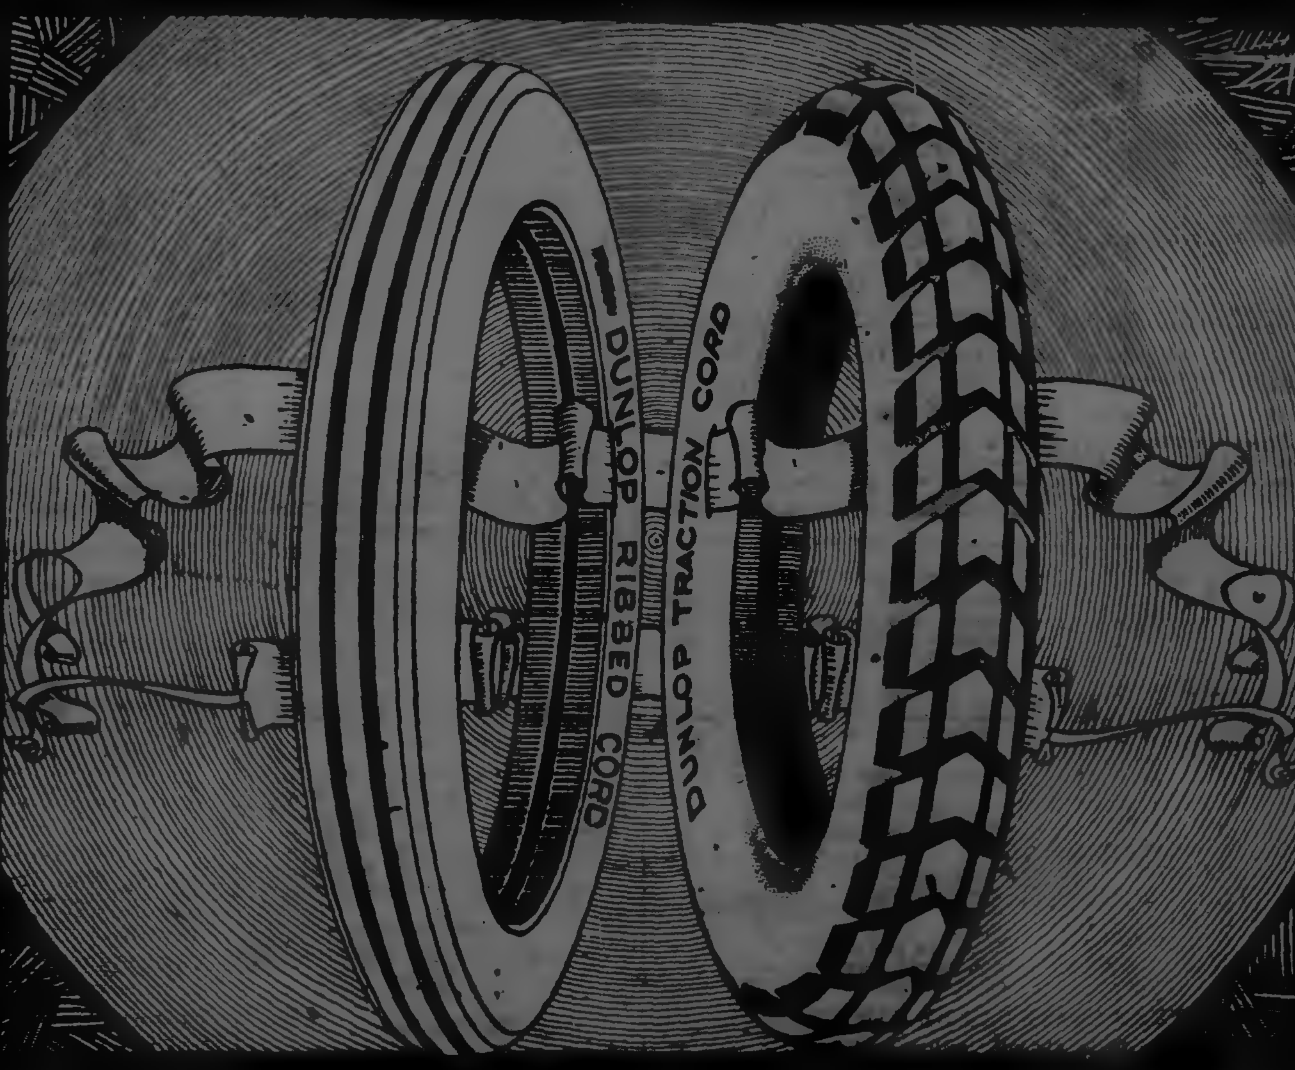
A MESSAGE FROM THE KING

Will Be Received by Those Who Were Bereaved by War.

The next of kin of every Canadian soldier killed in the war, or who may die within the next six years from causes attributable to his service during the the war, is to receive a handsome plaque and scroll, accompanied by a message from His Majesty the King.

An announcement to this effect was made by the Militia Department. The memorial will come from the British Government, which will bear the entire expense in connection with the issue. The records branch here is now preparing nominal rolls for despatch to England in return for which the number required for distribution in Canada will be sent out.

It is an artistic bronze plaque to emblematic design and in addition to the King's message, will be accompanied by a parchment scroll with appropriate wording. The plaque, which measures 4 3-4 inches in diameter, and 1-8 of an inch thick, will bear the deceased's Christian name, surname and regiment.



DUNLOP CORD TIRES

IF YOU had the time to note the tire equipment on automobiles these days, you would believe, as we do, that

1920 IS A DUNLOP YEAR

¶ You may not know where rubber comes from, but after a purchase you'll soon know that it goes into Dunlop Tires.

¶ Try "Traction" or "Ribbed." The verdict on these two exceedingly popular tires is

1. That the Quality Never Varies.
2. That the Mileage Keeps Adding Up.
3. That the General Serviceability is Matchless.

RUTH THE PHENOMENON LOST GAME FOR YANKEES

MUFFS A FLY AND THE ATHLETICS WIN BY 3 TO 1

Babe Ruth, the $250,000 wonder, featured the major league's opening in muffing a fly and the lowly Athletics beat the Kankees 3 to 1. Eddie Eayres of Brown University, hurling ing for the equally lowly Braves, grabbed a win in his first major league start, beating the Giants 6 to 3. Walter Reuther, the alleged unbeliever in training, pitched rings around Grover Cleveland Alexander and the world's champions set the Cubs back 7 to 3. Proving there's still a kick in the old carcasses, the White Sox went eleven innings to beat Cobb and the Tigers 3 to 2. Sothoron could not food the Cleveland Indians without his "spitter," and the St. Louis Browns lost 5 to 0. The Pirates presented their new manager, George Gibson, last year with Toronto with a ten-inning victory over the Cardinals, 5 to 4. Uncle Wilbert Robinson's Dodgers won the only victory of the day for Greater New York by flopping the Phils 9 to 2.

Knotty Lee's Brantford M. O. Club beat the Milwaukee club in the fight for Outfielder Orme. The Milwaukee club bought Orme from Manager Pearce of the Flint team of 1919 after he had been sold to Brantford, Orme was the outfielder star of the circuit. The exquisition of the player means much to Brantford, which will now have what is regarded as the best outfield in the Michigan-Ontario League. Orme will replace Martin Murphy in centre field with Clark of the Baltimore team, a .300 hitter with Brantford last season, in left and ~~Smith in right. Wannamaker of Green~~ville, a first baseman, and Gallagher, a Louisville pitcher, will also be with the Red Sox.

Lee Magee, former member of the Chicago National League Baseball Club, today, filed suit for $5,500 damages against that club, and asking for an attachment against the Cubs' share of the opening game receipts at Redland Field.

BIG LEAGUE CLUBS OPEN IN BASEBALL SEASON FOR 1920

BRAVES BEAT THE GIANTS AND ATHLETICS WIN FROM THE YANKEES

"It was baptized auspiciously," the flowery one might say.

"Ha! the old ball wagon's off on its long roll," the bleacherite might put it.

"Well, here goes another long grind," the player sighs.

"Packed house and the weather was rotten," magnate exuberates, and shakes hands with himself.

No matter how you look at it, or how you say it, baseball is away down the 1920 stretch.

Bands played in the National and American Leagues, and the American and Southern Asociation. Governors, mayors and prominent native sons went through the time-honored ceremony of tossing out the first ball. Some flags were raised. Some parades were paraded. The rookies and the veterans posed for several thousand pictures, and the well-known weather man smiled, only one of the 16 games scheduled being forced into postponement.

Heavy hitting marked most of the major league games. Chilly weather in most of the parks did not help to uncover the best pitching. In seven games 118 hits were made for an average of close to 17 swats per game. The Cleveland Indians led with 13, and the Deroit Tigers got only four, the least of the day.

In two instances the lowly rose up and smote the alleged mighty. The Boston Braves, with advance rights to the cellar conceded to them, made the highly touted Giants look bad, and the faithful Yankees were dropped by the Athletics. Incidentally Connie Mack seems to have served notice on the other pilots that there is a place lower than seventh for them to finish.

Maybe the Reds did cut up down in Miami and make Pat Moran greyer, but they're settled now apparently. Grover Alexander couldn't find anything 'wrong with their batting eyes, and Walter Reuther didn't appear to be in such "terrible shape."

The White Sox, too, were an eye-opener. Claude Williams started at his old trick of winning an eleven-inning game. Gleason's bunch all acted naturally, even down to Swede Risberg, the restaurant king, who made an error.

The Brooklyn Robins showed the well balanced promising club that Uncle Wilbert Robinson has been crowing about, and the Cleveland Indians hopped off according to the dope.

Cravath's Phils haven't been strengthened much during the off season. The other clubs appear to have improved.

HENS ARE VALUED AT $2.50 EACH BY THE MAGISTRATE

NEIGHBOR'S DOGS DESPOILED MRS. CARTER'S CHICKEN ROOST

A chicken squabble headed the bill at the police court this morning when Elizabeth Carter of 60 Murray street laid a charge against Arthur Johnson, Brock street, in respect to five hens which she claimed Johnson's dog had destroyed. Both Mrs. Carter and her daughter gave evidence to the effect that they had seen Johnson's dog with one of the hens in his mouth. This had happened on two different occasions on April 13 and on the second foraging trip the dog was accompanied by a dog owned by Harry Evans, of which Mr. Johnson was taking care, Mrs. Carter said that upon this ocasion she saw feathers on both dogs and chased them out of the yard. The hens could not be bought for $1.50.

Arthur Johnson, in the witness box described his dog and that of his friend. His friend's dog could not catch a hen even if it ran across the court room, he asserted, amid laughter. It has been suffering from a broken shoulder for four years. His own dog had been brought up among fowl all its life and he did not think it possible that the dog would chase anyone else's chickens when it would not chase his own. Furthermore, when the dogs returned home on the night in question there was no sign blood on either of them.

The magistrate was inclined to believe that the dogs had been sufficiently identified and that the damage was the fault of the defendant. He had committed a breach of the by-laws in that the dogs were running around loose and unmuzzled and he therefore ordered the defendant to pay compensation to Mrs. Carter to the extent of $12.50 and the costs of the court amounting to $3.10.

Opposed to Winter Work

"I don't calculate to work in the winter time," was the calm response made by John Heath when he was charged with vagrancy this morning. His landlord, Mr. Foster, was placed in the witness box after the prisoner had pleaded not guilty and stated that at the present time the accused, who had not been working since last September, owed him $30 board money.

"Can he eat three meals a day?" Magistrate Dumble asked, to which the witness replied: "he could if he got up for them."

Heath said that he had a banking account with the Bank of Montreal but that he would prefer to pay half now and half later. A cheque book was produced by Chief Thompson and the defendant signed a cheque for the $30 board money and the charge of vagrancy was then dropped.

A local man was fined $10 and costs on a charge of being intoxicated.

G.W.V.A. WEEKLY DANCE

With orchestra augmented, the lunch improved and the announcement that two large electric fans are to be placed in position in the hall immediately, the weekly dance of the Great War Veterans' Association last night was one of the most successful ever held. There has been a slight increase in the price of admission which was formerly 35 cents and is now 50 cents but it is the unanimous opinion of all who attend these dances that with the improvements mentioned, the entertainment is well worth the extra admission price. The war Veterans' dance always has been and is still the most economical method of obtaining an evening's enjoyment in Peterborough and its popularity continues to grow each week.

These dances have also been successful to a large extent in financially assisting much of the good work of the Association. The returns made by the entertainment committee since the first of the year amounting to a very substantial sum.

Harold Snelgrove, the new saxaphone player, made a great hit last night and it is assured that he will be a great drawing card to the dances. Last night he was slightly handicapped by the lack of suitable saxaphone music but nevertheless he was right there with the music and had the effect of greatly strengthening the orchestra.

MEMORIAL TO BE UNVEILED SUNDAY

A bronze tablet to perpetuate the memory of soldiers belonging to St. John's church, who made the supreme sacrifice in the war, will be unveiled at the evening service on Sunday.

The Great War Veterans, officers and men of the 57th Regiment and all units of the Peterborough garrison are invited to be present, as well as nursing sisters and all who were connected in any capacity with the great world struggle.

"NOT ON YOUR LIFE"

Not on your life! Our concert to be held in our church on Friday evening, April 23rd, is not going to be postponed, because it might rain that night. The weather man is all right, but he don't run the whole universe. We have been preparing for this entertainment for a month, and we expect a crowd. If you want to hear something out of the ordinary, just come along on the 23rd.

"Is it true that we're going to have whistling choruses, chinese motion songs and a program all our own?"

Well, you better not miss it; come if it does rain. Guess you won't melt.

Now, don't get the idea that this concert is not going to be a record-breaker, because the tickets are only a quarter. We don't want your money. We just want you. We think the people had better get there by 7.30, and make sure of a good seat. —Boys and Girls of Mark Street Church.

REGRET MATRON'S RESIGNATION

Mrs. Read, (now Mrs. Chambers,) who has recently resigned the position she held as matron of the Children's Shelter has received the following letter from Superintendent J. J. Kelso, one of the outstanding figures in this line of work.

Dear Mrs. Read:

As I just happened to note in a newspaper that you were resigning as matron of the Children's Shelter. I want to express to you my regret that you find it necessary to give up the work. When I visited the Shelter I was much impressed with the good work you were doing and felt that the work had fallen into the right hands.

Yours sincerely,

THE RAILROAD STRIKE CRIPPLED EVERY BRANCH OF BUSINESS IN UNITED STATES

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 17—Developments of the week in the securities market were governed largely by tighter credits and the railroad strike. Neither of these factors acted as a deterrent, however, to the aggressive operations of the Bull Pools.

Call money rose to fifteen per cent when the demand was at its height; albeit most of the week's loans were made at 8, marked relaxation being shown when the interior banks came into the market. Time money lost none of its stringency, slightly higher bids being made for short time accommodations with few acceptions. The railroad strike had little or no effect on transportations beyond reducing the dealings in that quarter to a minimum, but reports from industrial centres indicated a serious curtailment of production, due to scarcity of coal and other raw materials.

On the surface the investment market derived further strength from the success of the Pennsylvania Railroad bond offering. This being followed by the announcement of the Standard Oil Compwany of New Jersey, of an additional issue of $100,000,000 prefered stock.

The effect of these new undertakings upon previous issues with less attractive interest returns was most obvious in liberty bonds and victory notes, nearly all of which suffered depreciation to the new low records. Additional reasons for the weakness of the Government's war flotations were found in the higher interest rates attached to a new treasury certificate and involving railroad liquidtaion from sections of the country where industral unrest has been most conspicuous.

STRIKING SWITCHMEN RETURN TO WORK

(By Canadian Press.)

The speedy termination of the transportation tie-up wrought by the unauthorized strikes of railroad workers throughout the United States seems assured today.

Switchmen, yardmen and other employes of the Pennsylvania, Reading, and Baltimore & Ohio lines in the Philadelphia district, one of the Eastern strongholds of the strike, were returning to work this morning under orders of their strike leaders.

Strikers at Baltimore also were returning this morning, having voted last night to end the strike.

In the New York district railroad officials declared the men were returning rapidly, and reports from all sections of the country indicated that the swing back to work was fast gaining momentum.

This was reflected both in the increased amount of traffic handled by the lines and the loss of enthusiasm for the strike apparent in the attitude of many of the strikers.

The Philadelphia settlement was effected on the basis of a promise from the Pennsylvania and Baltimore & Ohio officials that the returning strikers would be permitted to retain their seniority ranking and would be free from dismissal because of their action.

COUNTERFEITERS AT WORK

Vancouver, B. C., April 17.—The demand for American currency here has been taken advantage of by clever "bill raisers." Many American ten-dollar banknotes artistically designed to represent hundred dollar bills have been picked up by the authorities.

MICHIGAN WOODMEN WILL GO ON STRIKE

THEIR DEMAND IS TEN HOURS PAY FOR EIGHT HOURS WORK

(Special to The Review.)

Menominee, Mich., April 17.—Paper mills, lumber mills and all other wood working manufacturing plants of the nation will suffer on May 4 when many thousand timber workers of all kinds throughout the upper peninsula of Michigan go on strike for eight hours work and ten hours pay. This is the greatest timber producing section in the United States so that when the strike breaks the paper shortage as well as all other products depending upon wood will ge greatly augmented. Employers assert that they will close down permanently rather than meet the demands. They are showing right by shipping out more lumber than has ever been known here. Great lumber piles which have not been depleted for fifty years today stand nearly empty.

DEMAND FOR FARM LABOR

The demand for farm labor continues to be far in excess of the supply. There was a little activity in the women's departmnt of the labor bureau this week, there being two applicants and one charwoman placed. The returns for the week are: Applicants, 50; vacancies, 52; placed, 44.

MANITOBA WILL HAVE ELECTION BEFORE WHEAT CROP IS GARNERED

Premier Norris to Lead Liberal Forces Again and Government Will Put up a Candidate in Every Constituency.

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, April 17.—Manitoba's sixteenth legislative assembly is to be elected before another harvest is gathered, and it is expected that a date in July will be chosen. The fifteenth legislature, which concluded its last session recently, was elereted in mid-summer of 1915 and thus, under the premiership of Hon. T. C. Norris, conducted the affairs of the province durin gthe greater part of the war. Mr. Norris is to lead the Government forces in the forthcoming campaign, and from present indications every member of his present cabinet will go back for re-election. Hon. A. B. Hudson, who has been a conspicuous figure in the Government ranks for the past five years, part of the time as attorney-general, will retire to private life.

The old Legislature contained 48 members. In the next there will be an increases to 55; an increase made up by giving four more members to Winnipeg anw by the creation of three new rural constituencies. Winnipeg has had six members, being two each for Centre, North and South Winnipeg constituencies. Henceforth there will be ten members sitting for the capital, to be elected at large by proportional representation. Outside of Winnipeg the voting will be conducted in the old-fashioned way.

A portion of the old constituency of Dauphin, lying northwest of the town of Dauphin, has been created into a new constiuency of Ethelbert. Two new constituencies have been created in the newly-settled district between Lake Winnipeg and Lake Manitoba. They are named Fairford and Fisher.

In the old Legislature the Government had an overwhelming majority. There was an official Conservative opposition of three members, and two or three other independent members. Various new factors will influence the membership which gathers next winter in Manitoba's palatial new government buildings.

It is expected that the Government will have a candidate in the field for every seat. The Conservative party elected R. G. Willis as provincial leader some months ago and began making plans for the campaign.

WOMEN TEACHERS GUILD GIVE ANNUAL FESTIVAL IN THE COLLEGIATE HALL

Pupils From Each of the Schools in the City Took Part in the Entertainment.

Perhaps the most successful entertainment of the scholastic year was the Spring Festival put on in the Collegiate assembly hall last evening under the auspices of the Women Teachers' Guild of Peterborough. Pupils from each of the different schools in the city took part in the program, and each little band not only earned glory for the school they represented, but brought the audience to a finer appreciation of the dramatic talent possessed by young Peterborough. Even the tiny tots deported themselves in surprisingly graceful manner, giving evidence of the splendid training received at the hands of their teachers.

The choruses under the capable supervision of Miss Raney were a decided success, the numerous voices blending perfectly with a most harmonious effect. Then the dancing was an extremely graceful interpretation of the music, each of the young artists bringing out the beauty of the selection with fine understanding.

Another somewhat unique performance was the mock fight by the girls of the Normal School. Each young lady, gowned in a fantastic manner, went through the motions of a sham battle with her partner, to the accompaniment of military music. This number was a clever one, and furnished the topic of much comment. The little pupils of St. Mary's Convent were seen in a charming song-dance number, each gowned in a colored tissue paper outfit, and they looked very sweet, also giving evidence of fine tuition.

Perhaps the most interesting number on the program was the living reproduction of famous painter. "The Age of Innocence," "The Girl With the Apple," "The Strawberry Girl," "Cherry Ripe" and many of these were depicted by different little girls, suitably dressed and perched in a huge frame at the rear of the stage. One of the most beautiful of these was "John," a striking likeness of the famous painting.

After the entertainment, beautiful bouquets were presented to those in charge and also to the pupils taking part.

The Assembly Hall was crowded to the doors and a number were unable to obtain admission at all.

JAPANESE HOLD TOWNS

Heavy Fighting is Reported From the Russian Front

(By Canadian Press.)

Vladivostok, April [illegible].—Heavy fighting between Russian and Japanese forces continues at Khabarovsk on the Amur River, and the casualties suffered by each side are heavy, according to reports received here. Towns along the Ussuri River branch of the trans-Siberian railroad north of here are all in the hands of the Japanese, but hundreds of Russians are fleeing to the hills and have again started a guerilla warfare. Arrests of Russians by Japanese in the city continue, but the government buildings are being returned.

FIGHT TO CONTROL THE FUR TRADE IN FAR NORTH

HUDSON BAY COMPANY AND AMERICAN FIRM IN KEEN COMPETITION

(By Canadian Press.)

Dawson, Y. T., April 17.—Constables Wm. A. Campbell and Brooker, who arrived here with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police expeditions from Herschel Island and Fort McPherson, on the Arctic coast, bring the first advices from the vast region on the topmost end of the world since last summer. They report a titanic battle for control of the fur trade in the vast McKenzie valley between the Hudson Bay Co. and the new American firm of Lamson and Hubbard, who aret cutting prices of commodities and raising offers on furs in order to get established. The average prices paid for mink were $15 and for muskrats $1.50. Three ships made Herschel Island late last season. One of the ships forged ahead of the others and beat them to Banks Land, where there had been no ship for two years, and scored a big scoop, buying up two years' fur catch. Constable Campbell reports having met Iukiro Wada, noted Arctic Japanese gold discoverer and stampeder, who was outfitted in New York last year. He made an expedition down the Mackenzie last year, and is now exploring for lost gold mines reported to exist on the Arctic slope south from Herschel. He was last seen en route there last fall.

FORTY CANDIDATES MAY BE NAMED BY WINNIPEG VOTERS

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION WILL GIVE MANY A CHANCE TO RUN

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, April 17.—There is a movement by the official Winnipeg Liberal Association, called in some quarters "Laurier Liberals," to offer candidates in oppositon to the Government. The United Farmers of Manitoba officially will undertake a province-wide campaign, but it is expected that some constituencies will have to deal with candidates running on the Farmers' ticket. Labor and Socialist interests will endeavor to secure representation, and it is predicted that all or most of the strike leaders recently convicted by the assize court will be put in the field in their enforced absence from the hustings. If to these are added the usual number of independent candidates of one kind and another it is seen that the election promises to be of uncommon interest.

It is freely predicted that in Winnipeg the proportional representation ballot will contain thirty or forty names. It will be the first experiment with this modern polling system in Manitoba, and those who favor proportional representation equally with those who dislike the innovation are anxious to learn to what extent the claims made on its behalf are justified by its practical operation.

Production Concluded Owing to Lack of Coal and Raw Material.

Sanremo, April 17.—The Allied nations would be called upon to maintain a force of 300,000 men in Turkey to insure the execution of the terms of the treaty with that country which was framed at London recently, it is understood. This treaty will be considered by the Supreme Allied Council when it opens its sessions here next Monday, and the announcements that Marshal Foch of France and Field Marshal Wilson of Great Britain would be present at the meeting, are regarded as having said that the military experts will be called upon by the Council before it decides finally on the terms to be submitted to the Sultan. The drift of the treaty which has been prepared is looked upon as being susceptible to important modifications with a view to removing obstacles to its execution.

None of the Entente Powers is disposed to furnish large numbers of soldiers to impose the treaty terms on the Turks. Greece, it is understood, is ready to send an army to Asia Minor, but there are serious objections to the presence of Greeks there, as it would probably intensify the Turkish resistance. Hence there is a strong undercurrent of opinion in favor of softening the terms and sparing Turkish pride as far as possible, in order that the treaty may be accepted by a Turkish government strong enough to overcome the Nationalist opposition.

Armenia under the treaty as it stands at present would be given the territory comprised within the boundary roughly outlined by the towns of Erzerum, Bitlis, Van and Mush and the corridor leading to the Black Sea.

MOTOR SHOW CLOSES WITH RECORD CROWD

The last night of the Motor Show proved to be well patronized in spite of the great crowds which attended the first two nights. The usual programs of enjoyment and entertainment were carried on and business generally in all departments thrived. This morning the Armouries resounded with the noise of many hammers busy destroying the work of the past few days. By noon the majority of the exhibits had been removed and the Armouries began to take on its normal appearance.

SCHOOLS IN NORTH MONAGHAN AND CAVAN ARE PREPARINF FOR CONSOLIDATION

The first steps to the introduction of a consolidated school system into schools sections numbers one, two, three and four, Monaghan; number ten, Cavan Union school section, and number three, Cavan, were taken last night at a public meeting convened for the purpose in the Presbyterian Church at Springville. Able addresses explanatory of the purpose of such consolidation were given by Mr. W. I. Chisholme, associate school inspector for the Province of Ontario; Col. J. W. Odell, school inspector of Cobourg and Northumberland counties, and Mr. Richard Lees, school inspector of Peterborough County. After hearing these addresses it was decided to appoint a committee composed of the following to consider the advisability of taking immediate action with regard to the consolidation of the above mentioned school sections:

Rev. G. I. Craw, pastor Springville Presbyterian Church, convenor; Messrs. S. Fairbairn, F. Elliott and W. Douglas, Cairo school section; Messrs. J. Sanderson, Murray McBain and Delbert Smith, Fairmount school section; Messrs. Melville Johnston, John F. Clark and Mr. Whittington, Elendale, and Messrs. Norman Lillico, Harold Snowden and Richard Payne, forBrailey; Deputy-Reeve Wilson, of Monaghan, and Mr. McIntosh. The meeting was very well attended and the concensus of opinion was decidedly in favor of the proposed consolidation, there being not one voice raised in opposition to it.

Rev. G. I. Craw, pastor of the church, was elected to preside over the meeting and Deputy-Reeve Wilson was appointed to act as secretary.

As Inspector O'dell had to catch a train for Cobourg at 9.30, he spoke first. He expressed his pleasure at receiving an invitation from Mr. Lees to attend this meeting. Consolidation of schools was such an important question one would be unwilling to lose an opportunity of saying things in support of such a proposition.

The education of our children was an important matter. If the child was educated led forth from ignorance to knowledge, wrong to right, led forth into all those trails that would make him into a truly educated citizen. There would then be no fear concerning our future citizens. The people should never be satisfied with anything but the best means of education at their disposal. What was good enough for us 40 years ago was not good enough for our boys. It was a process of

WHAT IS THE DIFFERENCE?

EVERY PATRIOTIC CITIZEN of Canada will be ready to accord at least his moral support to the members of the G. W. V. A. in Toronto in their energetic efforts to bar the Hearst inflammatory newspaper publications from Canada. It is not so much that these journals have sufficient influence to poison the minds of the native and educated Canadians. It is rather the principle that is involved. Then again, there is always the danger that the poison of the false and malicious propaganda that such papers spread will have its effect upon the foreigner, whose conversion into a law-abiding citizen of this country is now a matter of so much concern.

But have not the Veterans a missionary work to perform in this regard? Are there not papers in their home city that are offenders in this manner, that are setting nation against nation, race against race, creed against creed? It was the illustrious Bismarck, who had every source of information at his command, who once said that all the great wars of modern times were really caused by the brickbats that the newspapers insisted on throwing at naval powers. Domestic strife may often be traced to the same source.

The Hearst papers cater to the alien mob in the United States. There are Toronto papers that play for the favor of the intolerant masses in that city. The Hearst papers uphold the soviet form of government. There are in Toronto papers that teach daily that the only true civic administration is the kind that is hatched under the eaves of a secret society temple. The Hearst papers laud the murderous resistance of the Sinn Feiner of the south of Ireland, a class by no means representative of the Hibernian race as a whole any more than the occasional Red agitator to be found in this country is a true type of Canadian citizenship. There are some papers in Toronto that see nothing but virtue, Christian and national righteousness, in the opposition to decrees of the British Parliament that is set up in another quarter of the unfortunate island.

And what is the real difference? A rebel is a rebel no matter what his location, his language or his faith so long as he refuses to accept the will of the majority and so long as he declares armed resistance to what he regards as an injustice while less violent measures are easily within his power.

OVERALLS AND THRIFT.

DOWN IN FLORIDA the thrift movement has taken practical form and the people are fighting the high cost of living by wearing overalls not only as their work but at church, at social functions, in fact on all state occasions. The movement is, it is said, general among the males without regard to sorts or conditions. The banker and the mechanic, the merchant and the working man, are all arrayed with the same simplicity and with the same eye to economy. The sartorial splendor of Solomon stands out with greater prominence than ever by contrast with modern conditions.

There are some men who are painfully indifferent as to their attire. There are others who can even wear overalls with an air. But up in the chilly north there is likely to be a misconception with regard to this latest fad down in Florida, where for eight or nine months of the year the mercury in the thermometer dances above the hundred mark and never sinks below the danger point at any time. There the wearing of cotton garments is a necessity rather than an economic virtue. The main product of the southern Elysian regions is cotton, and unpatriotic indeed would be any citizen who would boycott that source of wealth, when it attains its finished stage. Material out of which the overalls with which the North is familiar are constructed can be made up into garments according to the latest fashion plates. Such garments are cool, economical, comfortable, and best of all, washable. Down in the semi-tropical region the natives have all the best of it over the inhabitants of the so-called temperate zones, so far as the cost of living is concerned. Their fuel bill is negligible, the products of their soil grow overtime like so many weeds, any sort of a structure almost suffices for a shelter. Let the Floridian eat the sweet potatoes and other indigenous comestibles, let him wear the overall suitings the raw material for which is grown in his native fields, let him, in addition, prey upon the winter tourists from the North, and even the momentous question as to whether President Wilson will seek a third term or get out of the political gangway is likely to give him little concern. And if, in addition to these blessings, the industry of the moonshiner in the swamps is spared Federal interference, the felicity of the overall-clad native is almost certain to be complete.

MAKING A CANADIAN OF THE ALIEN.

DR. MICHAEL STEELE, M.P. for South Perth, in his address to the members of the Peterborough Women's Canadian Club, laid down a program for the Canadianization of the foreigner, a subject in which he has always taken an active interest and to which he has apparently devoted a good deal of careful study. One of the points brought out was that on his arrival in Canada the foreigner unable to read or speak the language of this country should be presented with a pamphlet printed in his own language and containing a synopsis of what is required of the stranger in the way of law observance.

Any attempt on the part of the Canadians to educate the alien in his new duties as a citizen would certainly be a novelty in this country. The custom followed in the past has been to let him take his own course, to learn where and how he can, and when he fails as a citizen—as often through sheer ignorance as viciousness—the judicial punishment for his offences never fails, but the full measure of the law is poured out upon his head.

Dr. Steele says he would send back to his own country the foreigner who after five years' residence in Canada is unable to speak the English language. The time limit is too short. The school life of the native-born Canadian is set by law at ten years, and even that period is in the majority of cases too short for the mastery of the task which Dr. Steele would have the adult alien, naturally slow of comprehension and unused to anything like the study of language, achieve in half the time. How many Canadians are there who even in these days of compulsory education are able to write the English language not at all and who speak it only indifferently?

The acquisition of a working knowledge of any language—the English most of all—is a difficult problem to any man who has spoken no other than his native tongue all his life. After five years' residence it is generally found that the average foreigner has picked up none of the language of his adopted country unless it be the idiomatic profanity that is unfortunately becoming more or less of a national characteristic.

The alien who has grown up before he comes to this country will always remain a problem. It is the children of such men who should be made the subjects of missionary work and who are the one hope of the country as future citizens. They can be taught the language of the country, and, growing up among the native-born children, can adapt themselves to their new conditions. Very often the alien characteristics disappear altogether in one generation. All depends upon whether the stranger's children are reared in a community made up of the compatriots of his parents or among surroundings where the native-born predominate.

Dr. Steele says that in the event of war between the alien's adopted country and the one of his birth, the foreigner becomes a source of danger, as his sympathy if not his active support, will go to the enemies of Canada. This will always be the case so long as human nature is what it is. Love of native country is something that is inherent in every heart, and it is, too, something that is impossible to educate out of a man even if it were desirable to do so. The natives of the three sections of the British Isles now residents of Canada have their separate national organizations, and they are none the worse Canadian citizens on that account. In the event of internal war in the Empire, how would these different nationalities align themselves? Canada had its alien war problem, and the United States, where the percentage of the foreign population is greater, was really kept out of active participation in the conflict by the necessity of preventing trouble at home.

In New York harbor there is a Statue of Liberty from which blazes an illumination that is supposed to represent the light of civil and religious liberty. Birds of the air, blinded by the unwonted glare, when they venture within its rays, dash out their brains against the statue. The light of liberty in Canada affects the foreigner in the same way. He has been reared in serfdom and peonage, the victim of military oppression, of industrial, mental and religious slavery. He may be improved in the years of life that are left him, but his conversion into a Canadian in that time is impossible. But for his children there is always hope.

NOT ALL PLAY AND NO WORK.

WHEN THE LOCAL merchants agree among themselves to close their stores on some week day afternoon during the summer other than the days observed as half-holidays by neighboring towns, they do so with a perfectly justifiable object in view. When Lindsay or Campbellford has a holiday the inhabitants of either town will naturally gravitate by the excursion route to such a convenient metropolitan centre as Peterborough. They have money to spend in the stores of this city, but will be disappointed, the money will be lost to the local merchants, if the visitors find the stores closed for the afternoon. One substantial method for building up the outside trade of this city and for drawing visitors to Peterborough has been adopted by the home merchants.

All work and no play has a tendency to dull the human intellect now as always. All play and no work will cripple the industrial and business life of any community. Cities, like individuals, must look after their own commercial interests first, and then afterwards attend to the question of recreation.

Complaint is heard on all sides that the city is going mad in the matter of amusements and meetings. There are so many gatherings and entertainments that the home life is being neglected to such an extent that many residents are becoming strangers to their children. Even the work of education can be overdone. One improvement in local conditions is possible by simply adopting a cast iron rule to begin all meetings and entertainments sharp on the hour advertised, and getting through in reasonable time. So long as the opening of the program is delayed to await the arrival of a tardy audience, just so long will tardiness prevail. Give people to understand that it is not necessary to hold the affair in check until their arrival and punctuality will become more of a virtue.

FERRETING OUT BOOKS IN A LIBRARY

BY F. M. D.

Not the least interesting part of work in a library is to ferret out books that have been written by men and women one has known. It is an education in itself. Looking through the biographical section my eye chanced to light upon the name of A. A. Baumann, as the author of a book entitled "Persons and Politics of the Transition." The author had been a prefect at my school and had been regarded as the most eloquent speaker who had ever declaimed within its walls. When he left he entered Balliol College, Oxford, and in due time was elected to the position of President of the University Union, which counts in its membership those who aspire to shine in public speaking.

He entered parliament some years later but although he was in public life for some time he never fulfilled the promise of his youth. His book, written in 1916, is interesting, as it throws light on a good many problems that have faced British statesmen during the last thirty years. His viewpoint is clear and his comments on such well-known characters as Lord Randolph Churchill, Mr. Balfour, Sir Edward Carson and others and on Democracy and the House of Lords are well worth reading.

The Old Magazines

Not very many people realize what a wonderful wealth of material there is in our old magazines. Owing to pressure on our space our bound copies have had to be removed temporarily to the basement but they are there for public use and anybody desirous of obtaining any of them for home reading is at liberty to borrow them. The old copies of Scribner's and Harper's are especially valuable and there are also some good tales to be found in the numbers of Lippincott's Magazine that we possess. In the only volume of the London Quarterly Review, (1869) that we have, there are fine articles on Browning and Tennyson, on the religious wars in France and on the Disestablishment of the Irish Church. To those who are students of history or to those who worship at the shrines of the poets mentioned these articles should have a special appeal. They were all written by experienced and widely-known writers of that day. There is another excellent article in the same magazine on John Keble. We have Coleridge's Life of Keble, in the library, and from this, read in conjunction with the article in the Quarterly, an illuminating description of the causes which led up to the launching of the Tractarian movement can be obtained.

The Christian eYar

Keble, as most of us know, was the author of "The Christian Year," a work which was published anonymously in 1827. Its popularity may be judged from the fact that it ran through 109 editions in less than two years, each edition containing from three to five thousand copies. It was a remarkable work, no less an authority than Thomas Arnold declaring that nothing equal to it existed in the language. He was perhaps prejudiced because then, as now, opinion was by no means unanimous on that point. Wordsworth, who was a friend of Keble's was so much concerned about its unevenness and awkwardness of construction that he actually proposed to him that they should go over the work together with a view to correcting the English. But where it failed in parts, it amply made up in others, as witness those magnificent hymns "There is a book who runs may read," "When God of old came down from Heaven," "New every morning is the love," and "Sun of my Soul, Thou Saviour Dear." All these hymns are excerpts from poems, the verses having been picked out to suit the needs of the Church service. Mention of the name of Coleridge brings to mind that quaint old Devonshire town of Tiverton, famous for its clotted cream, its junket, and its widely-konwn educational institution, Blundell's School. The writer of Keble's life lived at Tiverton.

Uncle Tom's Cabin.

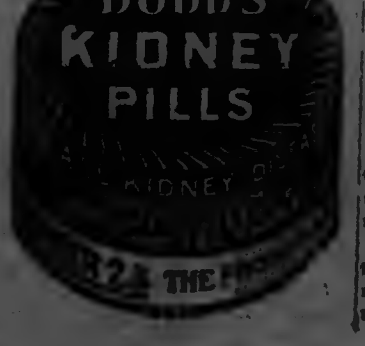
In the Edinburgh Review of April 1855, is a long article on Uncle Tom's Cabin. Mrs. Stowe's book appeared in 1852 and over a million copies were sold in England alone inside of eighteen months. The writer of the article begins it by saying "the sale of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' is the most marvellous literary phenomenon that the world has witnessed." Probably there is no book outside of the Bible that has had such a wide field of readers. It has been translated into most of the languages of the civilized portions of the globe. The first part published was the death of Uncle Tom and this created such interest that Mrs. Stowe added a beginning and a middle to her end, composing and printing the story week by week until it was concluded in March of the year mentioned. There is food for a good deal of thought in the Edinburgh Review article, and it can be commended without reservation to all readers.

Books of Travel.

Attention has been drawn in previous papers to the large number of books of travel that lie on our shelves. But there is one very noticeable lack, and it lies in the fact that although we can journey in good company to the four quarters of the globe and all over Canada, there is little indeed to show us how certain classes of our own population eke out their existence. It would be hard, for instance, to find any book giving a descriptive account of the life of the Canadian pioneer. Mrs. Moodie and Mrs. Traill wrote books depicting certain phases of backwoods life, but they wrote from the standpoint of people who had come from comfortable homes and were equipped by education for a better battle against the world than those who were absolutely dependent on a stalwart frame and stout heart for means of obtaining a living. The real life-struggle of the Canadian pioneer yet remains to be told. When one knows that far in the woodland recesses men, and women too, have chopped in the woods and worked in the clearings with scarcely enough clothing on their backs to be deemed respectable, and that they have labored on no stronger sustenance than turnips and herbs, which have been their sole provision for weeks at a time; when one has knowledge of the fact that many a child has been born in a wretched hovel when the icy blast of winter blew through the unplastered shanty, covering the miserable coverlet of the mother and baby with snow, one realises in a dim, uncertain way that even here in Canada on half of our world does not know how the other half lives. There is many a monument in our cities commemorating the deeds of statesmen, of soldiers and of philanthropists, but where is there to be found one raised to the honor of the real father of our country, the Canadian pioneer?

Phases of Canadian Life.

There are other phases of Canadian life which might easily be dilated upon and of which we learn little save from Government publications and hearsay. There are few tales dealing with life on a survey, and yet there is little that can compare with it in stirring incident. Many a tale of hardships successfully encountered and dangers overcome have I listened to in the wilds of prairie and woodland alike, tales that made one feel that one's own amateurish attempts at pioneering were like a summer picnic in comparison. A picturesque figure looms up in my mind as I write, a man of slight frame, and wonderful endurance whom I met years ago in Port Arthur. Many a chat did we have as we sat by the camp-fire in the grimly desolate region lying beyond the Kakabeka Falls. When I knew him he was close upon sixty years of age. That was in 1884. He had almost gone from my memory until I saw his name as figuring in a strange misadventure in that same district a few years ago. He got lost in the woods and for over a month subsisted on whatever herbs and berries he could pick in his wanderings. He was over eighty years old at the time and yet he emerged safely from that tremendous strain on his vitality. Walpole Roland's adventures would fill more than one book. He fought, as a British officer, under Gordon at the capture of the Tae Ping forts. He was the only man left alive of a surveying party near James Bay when a landslide occurred and carried away all but him to destruction. On another occasion, when he was at Nipigon, he attempted to reach Red Rock from the mainland on pieces of floating ice. He succeeded in doing so, but his dog was drowned.



Mrs. John McNeil, of Wanstead, died of heart failure while across the river at Port Hurton to spend a few hours.

ABOUT NOTED PEOPLE

In the presence of great masses of people in London, the Queen-Mother, Queen Alexandra, unveiled a statue erected to the memory of Edith Cavell the British nurse who was shot to death by the Germans in October, 1915.

The statue was draped with the Union Jack and the Belgian flag, presented respectively by Queen Alexandra and the Queen of the Belgians. Amid a profound hush Queen Alexandra, the life long friend of the nursing profession, drew the cord which unveiled the statue and the beautiful marble figure of Edith Cavell was revealed. The inscription "Brussels. Dawn, October 12, 1915," stood out prominently on the statue.

The silence was broken by the soft strains of the nurse's favorite hymn: "Abide With Me," played by the band of the Coldstream Guards. Another silent interval, and then the soldiers' tribute to the dead—"the Last Post" and "Reveille."

Replying to the address of thanks, Queen Alexandra said:

"This beautiful statue—the work of our distinguished sculptor, Sir George Frampton—will stand for all time as a memorial of one who met a martyr's fate with calm courage and resignation which has rarely been excelled, and we recall the beautiful words which, when death was very near, Miss Cavell wrote to a friend:

"Nothing matters when one comes to the last hour but a clear conscience before God. I wish you to know that I am neither afraid nor unhappy, but quite ready to give my life for England."

The speaker added, in a voice tinged with emotion, that countless thousands who would pass that spot would think with sorrow of Edith Cavell's cruel death, but with pride of her splendid fortitude, and with affection of her unselfish and womanly character.

"The example of Miss Edith Cavell's life will be always before us, and her name will remain honored and revered throughout the Empire."

The statue— which stands almost within a stone's throw of the memorial to the other great "sister of mercy," the heroine of the terrible days of the Crimea, Florence Nightingale —is of grey granite, and is forty ft high, and weighs 175 ton. On the four panels are the words: Humanity Sacrifice, Devotion and Fortitude. On the back the British lion tramping on a serpent, symbolical of Envy, Spite, Malice and Treachery, and above it are the words. "Faithful Unto Death" The statue, of white marble, in itself the emblem of purity, shows Edith Cavell standing erect in her nurse's uniform.

PRESS BLAMED FOR RIOTS

Ottawa, April 16.—That the representative of the Canadian Press Limited, responsible for the dissemination of so-called news regarding the fracas in Quebec City which in 1918 resulted in the sending of troops to that city and to the killing of innocent persons, "should be qualified as a murderer," because of the fatalities which had occurred, was the declaration of George Parent, M.P. for Quebec West, in the House.

OFFER $500 REWARD FOR CAPTURE OF AUTOIST

ONTARIO SAFETY LEAGUE AFTER MAN WHO KILLED C. A. B. BROWN

Owing to the public spirit of a prominent member of the Ontario Safety League, the league is in a position to offer a reward of $500 for information that will lead to the arrest and conviction of the party responsible for the death of Mr. C. A. B. Brown.

Mr. Brown was one of the league's many good friends, and the committee laments greatly his death, which was caused by the recklessness of some motorist who had not learned the A, B, C of safety on the highway. The Ontario Safety League has as one of its objects the promotion of safety on the highway as well as safety in industry. The league is not a prosecuting organization, but an organization to teach safety. However, there are evidently people who can learn only by the enforcement of the law.

A motorist who plays the coward and runs away after injuring another human being must be taught that others have rights on the roadways.

The League hopes to be in a position materially to increase this reward in a few days.

A COLUMN FOR VETERANS

(By Mike.)

Secretary Whatley, of the local branch of the G. W. V. A., says that unless more enthusiasm is shown than at present, Peterborough merchants need have no fears as to the danger of the branch following out the advice of the Dominion Command and starting a Veterans' co-operative store. He stated that all members appeared to be enthusiastic until it became a question of finance and then all ardor disappeared.

The Great War Veterans' Association is to take more of the form of a fraternal society, according to the decisions reached at the recent Dominion Convention. Degrees and ritual will be adopted and the admission to membership made more complete and binding. The new members will be more full addressed an the significance of the badge and their obligations.

The attitude of Toronto Veterans with rgard to the Government's "No" re gratuities is shown in the following item which appeared recently in the Star:

The Federal Government's decision against cash bonus schemes for the re-establishment of returned soldiers is not considered the end of the question by Toronto Veterans. Dominion Organizer J. F. Marsh of the G. A. C. prophesies an election with the gratuity question a straight issue.

"By the efforts of all veteran organizations," he said, "our only means will be to ask the Government to go before the country on a straight issue of the gratuity question."

Although the Government has declared that their decision was final, it was not final as far as the Veterans were concerned. They would never let up until they had obtained further financial re-establishment to meet each individual case.

W. E. Turley, Provincial Secretary of the Ontario G. W. V. A., said that the Dominion Command of the G. W. V. A. had definite instructions from the delegates at the Dominion Convention. The Dominion Command would see that the matter was not summarily dismissed.

Next Saturday will be tag day. The annual tag day of the branch has been discontinued and this source of revenue has been handed over to the ladies of the Auxiliary. This step was taken as it was felt that the ladies were doing most of the relief work now and should have the revenue. All members are urged to do their utmost to make the first tag day of the ladies a success.

To-morrow morning the annual church parade of the G. W. V. A. will take place, and it has been requested that as many as possible of the Veterans should turn out. Civilian clothes will be the order of the day. In the evening there will be an unveiling of the war memorial at St. John's Church. There will be no parade of the Veterans on this occasion, but Veterans are asked where at all possible to attend the ceremony in uniform.

President J. Harry Flynn returned from Montreal to Toronto this week. He anonunced that he would go to Ottawa with Capt. Tupper of the G. A. C., and will address a mass meeting, at which members of Parliament will be present. Mr. Flynn stated: "Our policy from now on will be to demand the resignation of the Union Goverament and the election of a Government which will give the returned men a square deal.

The Great War Veterans of Belleville formed a band, after negotiations which have been going on for the past fortnight. Lieut. E. R. Hinchey, bandmaster of the 21st Battalion C. E. F. band, will be bandmaster of the new organization. He organized the 15th Regiment band some years ago, and the 155th Battalion C.E.F. band. The majority of the members of the new G.W.V.A. band are ex-members of the 21st Battalion band.

The refusal of Sir George Foster to consider the granting of an additional cash bonus to the returned soldier is not to be taken sitting down. Word comes from Winnipeg that the western branches of returned soldiers' organizations are out to fight in earnest for their demands, and that all organizations are united for this one purpose. Different officials in the West state that the refusal will not be regarded as final, but they do not suggest any method to compel the Government to take action. This seems to be the weak spot in the armament of the returned men. They have no alternative when the Government refuses to listen to them. The Government is safe in its position for many months ahead, and is banking on the belief that by the time an election is due either the returned men will have become tired of asking for the gratuity or the public will have become tired of hearing about it. Elehtr will suit their purpose.

Re-unions continue to be the order of the day. Word has been received of the intention of the 2nd Battalion to hold a re-union in the Chateau Laurier, Ottawa, on April 23rd.

A copy has been received at this office of "The Breeze," which is a Veterans' magazine published under the auspices of the Western Ontario Unit Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment at Byron, Ont., a suburb of London. It has a sworn circulation of 10,000 and is published in the interests of all returned soldiers.

An announcement from Washington to the effect that the soldier of the American army is to receive a dollar a day for every day of service in the war has created more or less of a sensation in the circles of returned men in Canada. Heretofore the challenge has been flung into the face of the returned man to find a country where the soldier is being treated better than in Canada. It is admitted that for a time such a country was difficult to locate, but Canada has not been keeping pace and now the United States is well ahead, and information which has been received from Australia and New Zealand gives rise to the belief that they, too, will be ahead of Canada in the treatment of the returned soldier before long.

It will be interesting to know what the Dominion Government thinks of the latest development in the gratuity question. It must be admitted that the hands of those out for the cash demand has been greatly strengthened by the action of the United States. It hardly seems possible that Canada, who led the van in the war effort, is going to sit back and let the United States lead in the matter of gratuities.

SAFE AND EFFICIENT HOME TREATMENT

MANY WEAK AND AILING PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN HELPED STRONGLY RECOMMEND DR. WILLIAMS' PINK PILLS.

There is only one way to build up a run down system if the blood is pale and thin. Many disease are caused by thin blood. Other diseases such as influenza and rheumatism cause the blood to become thin and the wasting effect of these disorders cannot be combatted successfully until the blood is restored to its normal condition.

Pallor, nervousness, indigestion, sleeplesness, headaches, dizzy spells, shortness of breath, palpitation of the heart, these are a few of the symptoms of an anaemic bloodless condition. Some of them are not naturally associated with thin blood, but the quickest way to overcome them is to make the blood rich and red.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing and do it well. They build up the blood increasing the number of red corpuscles. As this is done the blood becomes a richer red and is able to carry more oxygen, the great supporter of human life. As the blood improves in quality the tissues of the body are beter nourished and the functions of the body are better performed. The glands of the stomach are stimulated and the first sign of improvement is usually a better appetite and better digestion.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been used for years as a bloodmaking tonic and system builder with such good results that in every community there are many people who are recommending this remedy to their friends and to others who are afflicted.

Here is the statement of one person among thousands who have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to their own great advantage. Mrs. A. Venlot, Hemford, N.S., says:—"For about two years I was a great sufferer from indigestion, which seemed to carry with it a complication of other troubles. Every meal I took brought with it misery, as it was followed by pain, and sometimes nausea and vomiting. At other times gas would form in the stomach to such an extent that my heart would palpitate at an alarming rate. These conditions brought on extreme nervousness and irritability and I found my general health so much affected and I slept but poorly. I had been doctoring for several months, with no result beyond slight temporary relief, when I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to follow this advice and got a half a dozen boxes. Good results soon began to show from this treatment, and the further continued use of the pills have made me a well woman. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to similar sufferers."

The purpose of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is to build up the blood. They do this one thing and they do it well. They are an invaluable remedy in diseases arising from bad or deficient blood, as rheumatism, neuralgia; after effects of the grip and fevers. The pills are guaranteed to be free from opiates or any harmful drug and cannot injure the most delicate system.

You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

MOOSE JAW RESIDENTS TO DO OWN BARBERING

RECENT BOOST IN PRICES CAUSES BOOM IN RAZOR TRADE

(By Canadian Press.)

Moose Jaw, April 17.— Since the increase in barbering prices here there has been a great demand for both clippers and razors. The employees of the Canadian Pacific freight sheds and roundhouse are going to combat the "high cost of barbering" and have purchased the necessary equipment with which a hair trim will be dispensed at a nominal charge to employees of those departments. "We are not wanting a millionaire's hair cut when a workingman's will do," declared one of the men. "It's the height of nonsense to expect us to pay 75 cents for a few minutes' work like that.

K. Of C. To Erect Statue To Lafayette

When American doughboys entered Metz on the heels of the retreating Germans, who had held the city subject since 1870, the French populace, frantic with joy, entered into a celebration with their rescuers. This demonstration reached a climax when a noose was tossed about the bronze neck of the whiskered horseman labelled Wilhelm I., who from the back of his metallic steed on a great pedestal had glared down for almost a generation on the people of Alsace.

The equestrian statue was tumbled from its base by a pull on the ropes energized by the arms of American soldiers, old Frenchmen, and the wives and children of men who had risked firing squads in 1914 to join the Tricolor; and as it fell and was an exact symbol of the end of Prussian rule in the no longer "lost" provinces of France.

There were members of the overseas organization of the Knights of Columbus in the Metz celebration, and to one of these came the thought that has finally germinated in the commissioning of Paul Bartlett, the sculptor, to make a replica of his bronze equestrian statue of the Marquis de Lafayette that has stood in the court of the Louve since 1908.

It was in Metz that Gen. Lafayette first heard of the bloody effort of the American colonists to win freedom from an English gentleman more or less a replica of Wilhelm I.—George III.—and it was there that his heart was enlisted in their cause. Metz was Lafayette's home. So through the contributions of 600,000 and more members of the Knights of Columbus the home of this hero of the American Revolution is to have an enduring reminder of the love and gratitude of the United States for France in a likeness of Lafayette that is intended to commemorate the return to France of Alsace and Lorraine and to memorialize the American soldiers who died in accomplishing the end of Prussianism.

Prior to the great Paris World's Fair in 1900 the school children of America gave 5,000,000 pennies to provide a statue of Lafayette to stand in the court of the Louvre. They were in a hurry to see their gift materialize, just as the Knights of Columbus are now. So a temporary plaster statue was modelled by Paul Bartlett and erected.

This remained in place for half a dozen years, crumbled and stained by the weather until it was an eyesore. But at the end of those years this American sculptor at work in his Paris studio had finally achieved a clay model of Gen. Lafayette, with upraised sabre, mounted on a huge Percheron horse. Another year was required to make the bronze status from moulds taken from the clay model, and finally the bronze horseman and monster steed were hoisted into place atop a fitting pedestal.

The pedestal of the statue in the Louvre was purchased with the proceeds of $25,000 in bullion appropriated by Congress to be cast into souvenir dollars which sold for $2 each, so that with the money contributed by the school children there was a general fund of $100,000, ample to pay for the gift. And in 1908 the completed bronze horseman was unveiled.

The casts from which the bronze was made have gathered dust in the Paris studio of Paul Bartlett ever since. After the Knights of Columbus began to seek an American sculptor to make a statue of Lafayette to replace the odious bronze like of the father of the former Kaiser Paul Bartlett was about the only man they considered seriously.

He is rather a difficult person to catch, fitting as he does between two studios in New York, another in Washington and another in Paris, but caught he was, and when he heard that another statue of Lafayette was wanted he said it couldn't be done, especially in the short space of time allowed by the K. of C. men. Anyway, he said, as far as he was concerned, the statue in the Louvre court was Lafayette. He had worked on that for about eight years all told, and it was his best. He mentioned the existence of the casts and explained that a replica could be cast in bronze which would be identical in everything but age with the original. The Knights of Columbus became interested. Mr. Bartlett said the casts could be made in good time for unveiling on the anniversary of the date of the relief of Metz. The deal was closed then and there.

The moulding of the statue has been practically completed in Paris and Mr. Bartlett is working on four bas reliefs which are to be mounted on the sides of the pedestal. This pedestal is being designed by Thomas Hastings, the New York architect. If this design is executed in the United States the pedestal will be built of Indiana limestone; if it is executed abroad it will be made of Alsatian sandstone.

One of the bronze bas reliefs, that one designed for the front of the pedestal, will pict are Gen. Pershing at the tomb of Lafayette. On the back will be one depicting Columbus discovering America. On one side will be a likeness of President Wilson, with a caption containing a quotation from the speech in which he said that one of America's war aims would be the righting of the wrong done France in 1870 in the dismemberment of the lost provinces. On the other side Marshal Foch will be represented as on the day at St. Lemont when he predicted that before long the flag of the United States would be flying victoriously at Metz.

The completed statue will be unveiled by Marshal Foch next September. Headed by Supreme Knight James A. Flaherty of Philadelphia, a host of members of the order will cross the Atlantic and journey to Metz. In the gathering will be distinguished statesmen and soldiers. France will be represented by President Deschanel and other French notables.

SCHOOLS IN NORTH

evolution, a change which we must believe in. There was no improvement unless we went forward. There was no such a thing as standing still, Mr. Odell said. It was up to the parents to produce the best possible means of education for the child.

Average Attendance Five.

Ho was that to be done? We saw a little red school house here and there all over the country. In two of his schools the average attendance was five pupils for 1919, and yet the whole energy of keeping a school had to be met for those five pupils. "Bring them together," Mr. Odell urged. More attractive surroundings provided better education, and the wholesome rivalry. The education of a child was what you brought out of the child more than what you put into him.

The education of the city, town, village and rural boy was all different education. A classical education would be entirely wasted on the boy who was going to be a mechanic or farmer and vice versa. The activities to be engaged in should be considered in education. Consolidated schools would give these specialties. The small schools did not have the facilities.

Consolidated schools would also provide a community hall or even a community church, and above all things, a residence for the school teacher, thus making it a real community centre.

"Look beyond the few dollars and cents provided you are assured of a dollar's return for every dollar spent," concluded Mr. Odell amidst hearty applause.

Inspector Chisholm's Address.

Mr. W. I. Chisholm in opening referred with pleasure to the presence of so many ladies. The Legislature head passed an Act making it possible for ladies to be school trustees and they were making themselves very efficient trustees. It was strange that although the ladies could be trustees, they could not vote. However, this was to be rectified at the present session of the Legislature.

He was not here to cry down the one school teacher which had in many cases been a good teacher. He did not like to hear anyone condemn the worth of these schools in the past. However, it was true, as Mr. Odell had said, that conditions were changing and that the schools should change too.

In some of the rural schools today where conditions were favorable progress was being made, but there were many schools of which that could not be said.

He thought that we did not reverence youth as we ought to. The older he got the more he reverenced youth. There was no industry in Canada today that could be compared with that of educating the children.

He took for granted that the audience knew what consolidated schools meant. It was taking two or more isolated schools and placing them together and increasing the area of the school section. This meant the children would have to travel further to school. They would haveto be carried there in fact.

Consolidated schools came into being in the United States under the pressure of the farmers themselves 42 years ago. Consolidated schools should not be forced from outside. All that the department was doing was supply the information, leaving it to the intelligence of the people to deal for or against consolidated schools.

Since the first Massachusettes school was open 12,000 had been established in the United States. As far as he knew not one had reverted to the old conditions. That was the strongest proof that the consolidated schools were meeting a real need. It was in the United States that the movement had taken its strongest hold.

The only two objections he knew were—first, the condition of the roads, and secondly, the cost. Perhaps it did cost too much and maybe it didn't. In many cases the dearer article was in reality the cheaper. The probability was that consolidated schools would cost more, but if they considered the advantages they would be willing to pay the increased costs. Manitoba led Canada in the matter of these schools, having over 100. And yet the climate of Manitoba was colder than in Ontario and the road difficulty worse.

Up to the present there were not many consolidated schools in Ontario. In fact until recently there had been only two, one at Guelph and one near New Liskeard in Northern Ontario. In visiting these schools it was the attendance that pleased him most. At New Liskeard the average attendance was 90 per cent. He did not think that the schools in this district could equal that record.

He thought that if the same work and expense were put on the roads in the winter as was done in the summer there would not be the road difficulty in the winter time.

In considering the question of transportation to school, first a survey of the district would have to be made and of the children attending the school. It could then be planned so that the van or means of conveying the pupils to school would cover the majority of homes of the pupils.

The vans used in New Liskeard were light wagons. Heavy wagons had been tried first but it was found that the light wagons were more successful. The drivers were approved by the department and a teacher went with each van. The children had told him that it was not any colder going this way to school than in the old way.

One of the advantages of consolidated schools was that in many cases it provided High School facilities where this had not been possible before. If the boys and girls could be given a High School education in the country school it would be better for the school and the pupil. It also permitted graded schools which was a great advantage. A teacher present said that she had 11 classes under her charge and the speaker referred to that case as an example of the benefit of consolidated schools. It was a wonder to him that the country school teacher could do as much as she was doing under the present conditions.

In the city there was the right system, but poor environment. In the country they had the right environment for study but not the system consolidated schools tended to combine both these things.

No person could force the sections into consolidation against the wishes of the people. Every section must give a majority before consolidation could be effected.

And From the Government.

A bonus grant of $2,000 was given by the Government without a string to it. Then there was a grant of a percentage of the cost of building which was arranged according to the wealth of the district. If an assembly room was included the Department of Agriculture would give one-quarter of cost up to $2,000. The percentage grant varied from 10 to 25 per cent. of the cost. In addition a grant of $100 is given every year for each teacher. The township grant would not be reduced because fewer teachers were employed.

Address by Inspector Lees.

Mr. Lees said that he was not going to talk tonight on the advantages of consolidated schools, but more of the experiences in the United States as he saw there in his visits. In one township 22 schools had given way to 2 consolidated schools. Of a rural consolidated school in Green township of 205 pupils the average attendance was 200 for seven months. As for punctuality in 3 years one van had been late once. In this township 8 small schools had been abandoned for this one school with Public School grades, High Schools, manual training instruction and domestic science. In this township the longest van route was six miles. He had a controversy some time ago with the present Premier of Ontario on consolidated schools and the Premier had quoted districts in Manitoba where transportation was a real hardship. Mr. Lees had communicated with these districts and was informed that although it was a hardship they would not think of changing. Since that time the Premier had altered his views.

At a large consolidated school in the United States there were 7 vans transporting the pupils to school. At this school the domestic science girls served a lunch. They were also wearing dresses made at the sewing classes of the school.

The education, such as given in the consolidated schools gave the pupil a chance to develop his or her ability in particular lines. In one county there were originally 139 schools. Now there were 20 consolidated schools. There were approximately 700 such schools in the state of Indiana.

The consolidation of schools helped the community to closer relationships. The Farmers' Institute meetings in such districts were far better attended. From Indiana he went to Illinois where no provision was made by the State for Consolidated schools. Even in face of this handicap the schools were successful. The people were compelled to provide their own methods of transportation, but they were so satisfied with the system they were quite willing to do this.

There had been trouble in getting teachers for a consolidated school in one district and this was overcome by the farmers of the district forming a joint stock company and building a residence which was rented to a landlady on condition that she should provide accommodation for the teachers of the school.

Questions Answered.

In answer to a questioner, Mr. Lees stated that there had been consolidated schools in Manitoba for 16 years.

Reeve McIntosh wanted to see more British slides instead of so many American slides, but Mr. Lees apologized for the fact that Inspector Sinclair was at present using the Canadian slides which were limited.

Wheelbarrow for the Readinesses.

Deputy-Reeve Wilson referred to the opposition of the County Council to a radial line and the "ox cart" remark it had brought forth in the papers. He thought a wheelbarrow would be as suitable a conveyance for the opponents of consolidated schools. He would like to see quick action with reference to consolidated schools in the township. He would certainly vote in favor of them.

Mr. Fairbairn said that he had been much interested in the addresses and thought all who had heard them would be in favor of consolidated schools. Like Mr. Wilson, he would like to see quick action in the matter. In his day he was compelled to walk miles to school, but he did not wish the children of today to do so. He would do all he could to support the movement.

Mr. Johnson, for the Town Hall school trustees, Monaghan, said his school certainly did need consolidation. If it would help to keep the boys on the farm it would be worth while.

Mr. Baptie, reeve of Cavan, was pleased with the addresses. He moved that the trustees of the interested sections should be a committee with Reeve McIntosh and Deputy-Reeve Wilson to take up the matter of consolidation of the schools.

It was later suggested that Rev. G. I. Craw's name should be added as convener.

Mr. Lees' lecture was illustrated by a large number of lantern slides showing schools in the United States and Canada, a feature which greatly added to the interest taken in the address.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS
Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.
No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.
The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.
Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.

EXTEND THE MORATORIUM

Toronto, April 16.—Ontario's moratorium is to continue in force until July 1 next. A bill to extend the measure until that date was introduced in the Legislature by Hon. W. E. Raney.

"Representations both for and against the continuation of the moratorium have come to us," the Attorney-General stated. "This appears to be the medium course."

J. W. Curry, "Will all arrears fall due after July 1?"

Mr. Raney: "Yes."

Gustave Evanturel, Liberal member for Prescott, drew the attention of the House to an incident which occurred in the courtroom at Cornwall recently. When a French-Canadian who was on trial asked for an interpreter, Mr. Justice Lennox, the presiding judge, according to a newspaper read by Mr. Evanturel, said:

"Any man who has lived 20 years in Ontario and cannot speak English should be deported. Any foreigner who comes to this country to live should learn to speak the English language."

"French-Canadians," declared Mr. Evanturel, "are not foreigners in the Province of Ontario."

"And never will be," added Hartley Dewart.

"French-Canadians lived in this Province long before Judge Lennox was born," Mr. Evanturel continued. "This judge is certainly forgetting the constitution of the country when he takes advantage of his position as presiding officer of a high court."

The first measure to receive third reading this session was a private bill respecting the town of Sudbury. A number of other bills were also read for the third time.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

IF MIXED WITH SULPHUR IT DARKENS SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

In the Church Bowling League last evening at the Y.M.C.A. the fast St. Paul's team, winners of the first round, too two games from St. Andrew's. The latter were in hard luck all night and with the exception of the second game, hardly left the issue in doubt.

Some dignified men are hustlers.

Beware of the man who has a mania for telling hard luck stories.

If love were really blind age would have fewer terrors for the fair sex.

No, the average man doesn't understand classical music— and he is proud of it.

It sometimes happens that faith hope and charity fill the stage to the exclusion of gratitude.

There isn't very much hope for the man who has reached the age of forty and isn't more or less of a crank.

RANGERS LOST GAME AT BELLEVILLE BY ONE RUN MARGIN

LUCKY TRIPLE PLAY BY TEAM OF 39th DECIDING FACTOR

Before a crowd of over 200 spectators at the Belleville Armouries last night the Peterborough Rangers' Indoor Baseball team went down to defeat by the 39th Regiment by the narrow margin of one run. The local team was playing under many handicaps and in spite of these they put up a glorious fight and came very close to corralling a second victory from their opponents. The lighting in the Armouries was particularly bad and this was a handicap to a team used to the splendid lighting of the Peterborough Armouries. Then some of the ground rules were different. For instance, at Belleville it was necessary for the catcher to catch the ball on the third strike before the player was declared out. This rule is not in force in the City League and consequently the Rangers were at sea.

An incident in the first innings which was absolute luck for the Belleville team combined with quick thinking probably had the effect of giving [illegible] the game. Pitcher Dunkerly took an awful drive at the pill and connected for a fast liner. Right into second baseman McTaggart's mit went the ball and with two men on bases a triple play was effected. This is a most unusual occurrence in Indoor Baseball, and it is safe to say that but for this one play the game would have gone to Peterborough. Another dificulty under which the local team played was the size of the diamond which was much larger than is used here.

The Peterborough team went down to Belleville on the two o'clock train in the afternoon and remained the night in Belleville. After the game the 39th Regiment entertained the Rangers to refreshments and provided rooms for them at the Y. M. C. A. in fact everything possible was done for their comfort and the members of the team returned to the city this morning full of gratitude to their Belleville comrades. The line up:

A DRAMATIC ACHIEVEMENT IN 8 ACTS

It Teems with Humanity, Tears, Heart Throbs

: : AT THE GRAND : :

There were sixteen enteries in the amateur contest at the Grand Opera House last night, but only seven faced the footlights when the call came at the close of the regular performance given by the Ernie Marks Company. The prizes offered were $5, $3 and $2 to the winners, the audience to sit in judgment. Little Miss Evans, the violin performer of surpassing promise and already proficient in the art, captured the audience the moment she drew the bow across the strings, and there was little doubt of the result from the start. This youthful contestant had a stage presence that would do credit to a veteran.

Mr. E. Everett sang "The Bells of St. Mary" in excellent voice, and "Miss" Preston, the now famous local female impersonator, gave a rather startling imitation of a French dance, and was recalled.

Mr. Phil. Taylor, as grave as a church deacon, and with his whole heart evidently in the task in hand, rendered a solo on the concertina. He responded to a number of recalls, and the familiarities of the audience in the gallery failed to dismay him. Hats were thrown at him from the wings, the lights were snapped off several times, but still he persevered.

One by one the amateurs passed across the stage, the amount of applause each received to determine the winner. Ernie Marks himself was the master of ceremonies, and obliged to have Miss Evans, Mr. Taylor and Mr. Everett appear three times before he could decide. Finally the prizes were awarded in the order named.

The play presented by the Ernie Marks Company was "My Boy Jack," repeated by request, having made a great hit Monday night. Every seat in the house was filled, and the audience was not disappointed. The work of W. H. Desmond as the practical minded father of a boy who insists on being a poet instead of adopting a business career, of W. L. Phillips, the comedian, and of Fred Wood in his personification of an old man, one of the hardest roles an actor can undertake, is worthy of special mention.

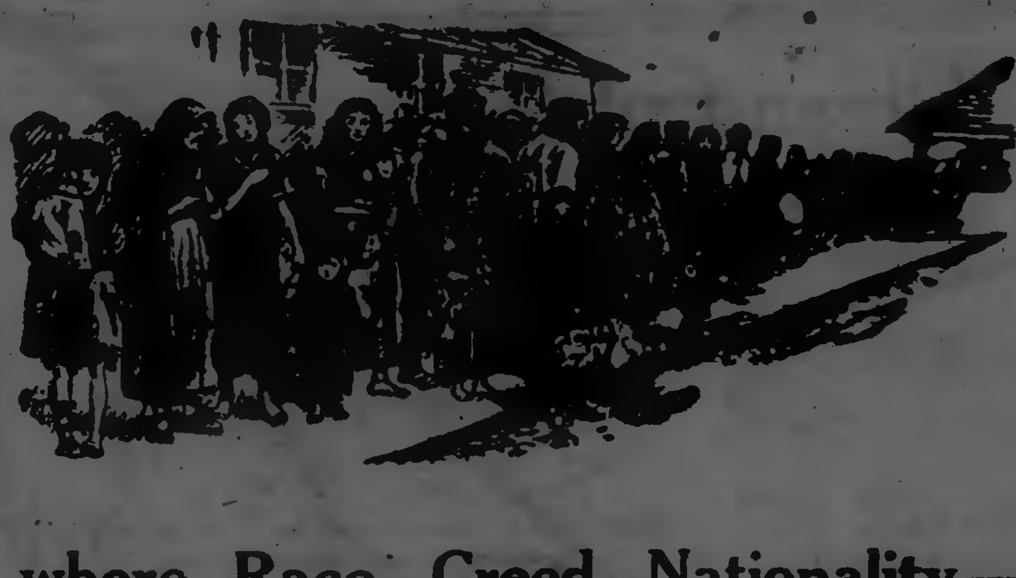
The War's Aftermath



Through no fault of their own, six million people, 800,000 of whom are children, are starving to death in Eastern and Central Europe.

Canadians, red-blooded, charitable, humanitarian Canadians of every religion and creed, are asked to join in saving these human lives and in remedying the horrible conditions that now exist.

Hunger knows no armistice.
Will you, for humanity's sake, help to send relief?

Newspaper reports, confirmed by the stories of eye-witnesses who have returned to Canada, have brought into being a Dominion wide organization which has set one million dollars as Canada's share in a great relief campaign.

Your own individual help is needed to-day as it never was needed before.

Representative men and women in this community will call upon you for a subscription. Let your response be in the measure of your gratefulness that your home is safe—that you and yours live in a land of plenty.

HERE ARE THE FACTS:

25 cents will buy a boy more food than he has had at any one time during five years.
One change of clothes may save a boy or girl from the terrible typhus epidemic which is raging now in Eastern Europe.
Poland is crowded with children of eight or ten years old, no larger than infants of a few months, who cannot walk because of lack of food.
There are hundreds of thousands of children in Poland, Palestine, Czecho-Slovakia, Lithuania, Rumania, Siberia and the Orient left helpless and homeless by the war. Thousands of them, unable to get in to the already overcrowded orphanages, beg on the streets by day and sleep on the streets by night. And this, but for the Grace of God, might have been the plight of your own little boy or girl.

"Humanity Knows No Creed"

FROM FIGHT RING TO LEGISLATURE

Remarkable Career of Marty McCue Now Member of New York State Assembly.

Albany, N.Y., April 16.—Somewhere in the twenty-four hour grind of oratory that preceded the casting out of the five Socialists a square shouldered square jawed man, with a shoebrush pompadour, arose and caught the Speaker's eye.

Each debater was supposed to be limited to fifteen minutes. This one went on, without protest from friend or foe, for seventy-five minutes. Sleeping Assemblymen awoke to demand that the noise be stopped and stayed awake to listen to it. Smoking parties in the cloakrooms were deserted. Down the corridors of the Capitol flew the word that Marty McCue was making the best speech of the whole trial—the best the Assembly ever heard, some insisted—and at 2 o'clock in the morning the Chamber, though surfeited with clamor, filled again.

Voiced What Many Feared to Say.

The two Socialists present at that moment, smiling rather derisively when the new declamation started, were quiet and tense long before it ended. Stinging were the words of McCue.

Within him welled the unmistakable spirit of patriotism, and he was saying the things others had wanted, but had not dared or known how to say. His voice was rather scrapy, his manner of expounding was born far from Harvard square, but he had the gift of sending forth words to leap and do his bidding, and he was sincere. Perhaps in his whole life he never had use for the noun peroration, but the thing itself was perfect. He had found it on his way to the place of meeting.

"And let me say in conclusion," he said, "that tomorrow when we again walk up the hill to the Capitol, let us be able to look unafraid upon the words on the memorial erected to the men of Albany who gave their all and are still 'over there.' These are the words:

"'Fear not that ye have died for naught,
The torch you threw to us we caught,
Ten million hands will hold it high
And Freedom's torch shall never die.'"

The moment of silence that is always the surest proof of real eloquence followed. Then men whom Bryan couldn't have thrilled in that place of great weariness were on their chairs shouting wild bravos and tumbling down to squirm in the crowd that was trying to get McCue and squeeze his hand while he endeavored to bore a hole and get out.

The man who cast this spell was once a prizefighter and later a saloonkeeper. Neither fact has he ever tried to conceal any more than he has tried to conceal the certainty that he is the "father" of the widow's pension law and the same (without quotes) of a boy who went to France as a top sergeant in the old Sixty-ninth and was wounded three times on the road to the Hindenburg line.

Aside from his oratory, which he does not overwork and so is at hand when he needs it, one of the many good traits of Martin Gabriel McCue, who is now serving his thirteenth year as a Tammany Assemblyman from the middle East Side of Manhattan, is his candor. He never attempts to disguise one of his former occupations by telling you he was "interested in boxing" or a practitioner of the "manly art." He says: "I was a fighter." That's his style. Similarly he does not share the prevailing habit of the saloonkeeping fraternity of referring to their place of business as "the store" or, at the worst, as "my liquor store." He says: "I used to keep a saloon." Why shouldn't he say so? That's what he used to keep. He is just as honest in his thought and speech about it as he is about the still earlier newsboy phase of his life.

From his point of view there is no more reason for denying or dressing up these things than there is of bragging about them, so he does neither. He gives the facts to any one who has a good reason for asking and lets it go at that.

From the Farm to Third Avenue.

Martin McCue is essentially of Third avenue, but was born on a farm. His parents came from County Roscommon. His father had fought through the civil war and was farming it in the village of Mendham Hills, N.J., when Marty, one of the youngest of thirteen children, was born. In 1881, when he was six years old, the family settled down in New York. He was so young that the fact of birth in another State was not held to have tainted him when in later years his qualifications for a political career were being reviewed. He couldn't have been many years older than 6 when he sold papers at the doors of the old Grand Central Station. From time to time he frequented the haunts of learning, attending Public School No. 27 in Forty-second street, near Third avenue, and then St. Gabriel's Parochial School in Thirty-sixth street. His father, who loved horses and never was far away from them, worked for Ryerson & Brown, who had a big livery stable in Forty-fourth street.

As Assemblyman McCue recalls the boy Marty, he was a belligerent kid, who ranged the streets and the East River front and led about the same kind of a life as did another boy two years older than he, who was cock of the walk several miles further downtown. These contemporaries never met, however, until Mr. McCue went to Albany, and were thrown together by a mutual friend, who said, "Marty, here's one of our New York boys you ought to know; meet Al Smith."

In those days every Third avenue boy in that latitude went to work, as soon as his parents would let him leave school, in one of two places. These were the wall paper mill at Warren, Fuller & Lang, on the present site of the Hotel Commodore, and the silk mill of John N. Stern in Forty-third street, where the American Express terminal is now. Marty McCue worked in both. He was getting eighty cents a day in the silk mill when his friends matched him against a youth named Jordan for a fist fight for a purse of $5. The battle took place on a Sunday afternoon at the Jerome Park race track. That was McCue's first prearranged scrap, and he won.

A little later the man whose helper he was in the paper mill, Frank Day, an amateur boxer of some note, took him to the West Side Athletic Club, where Marty McCue learned a few tricks and got to boxing in tournaments. He did so well in these, especially in one of Mike Donovan's benefit tournaments in the old Grand Central Palace, that he blossomed out as a professional and earned a good living with his fists for eleven years. He weighed 110 pounds when he entered the ring and only 125 when he left it at the age 27. He was a featherweight and no a slugger, but a boxer, with a national reputation for cleverness and ability to stay the limit of twenty rounds and win on points.

Now as he looks back on those days he has no regrets. He is remembered as a good fighter and a clean one. In proportion to the number of bouts he entered he had more victories to his credit than any other gladiator of his weight. He was anything but a barroom brawler. He has never touched liquor; his side of the bar during the years he had the saloon at 701 Third avenue was the sober side. In his training for the ring he avoided tobacco, and an occasional cigar is the most he allows himself now. He took his religion so seriously that just before each fight he knelt and said his prayers. His seconds, knowing of this habit, always retired from the dressing room a few minutes before he was due in the arena. He then prayed for five minutes, after which he placed his prayer beads in his stocking and thus fortified entered the ring. He was just as faithful in church attendance, never failing no matter what his physical appearance might be after a battering on Saturday night, to go to early mass in the morning.

Paying Toll for Neglect

Needless exposure to damp and cold frequently result in a derangement of the Kidneys and Bladder.

When these important organs fail to do their duty, various evils arise, such as rheumatism, swollen hands and ankles, stiff joints, lumbago, sciatic neuralgia, stone in the bladder or gravel, excruciating pains in the back and sides, constant headaches, dizziness, specks floating before the eyes, uneasiness of mind without reason, and general debility.

These are signs of serious kidney and bladder trouble, which require immediate attention. The most dependable remedy is found in Gin Pills. They often prevent the operations which constant neglect may render necessary. They quickly and safely relieve congested kidneys, passing stone and gravel, healing and soothing inflamed organs and restoring them to normal. Thousands of letters from people who have been relieved are continually coming to us. Their writers often beg us to spread the good news to other sufferers that Gin Pills certainly and surely will bring the help they need. Send for free sample, or go direct to your druggist or dealer, 50c a box. Money refunded if relief not given.

"OTHER MENS SHOES" AT THE GRAND MONDAY

TELLS HOW EX-CONVICT STEPPED INTO PLACE OF PREACHER BROTHER

Do you believe that a man who had served a year in prison could step into the shoes of his minister brother? There is such a situation as the central theme of "Other Men's Shoes," the Edgar Lewis production, released by Pathe, coming to the Grand Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Stephen and Jim Browning were twin brothers so alike in face, form and voice that their most intimate friends could not tell them apart. Both were splendid men morally, but Stephen, the minister, was frail of body and meek of spirit and unable to withstand the buffets of a greedy and grasping world. Jim had heeded the call of Wanderlust for twelve years and had gone to jail for the crime of another.

When the strong brother steps into the shoes of the meek brother interesting complications arise, for no one but his sister and brother know of the masquerade. Blackmailers threaten to besmirch his name in the eyes of the townspeople whose attitude of tolerant respect changed to whole-hearted admiration when the minister suddenly displayed a courageous, two-fisted fighting spirit.

Clean, wholesome, vigorous, human and dramatic, "Other Men's Shoes" has been called one of the finest productions of the new year. Craufurd Kent heads a splendid cast in which are Irene Boyle, Harold Forshay, John P. Wade, Jean Armous, Phil Sanford and Bobby Connolly.

KID LAVINGE WAS ONE OF GREATEST FIGHTERS IN RING

George Lavigne, known in the ring as the "Saginaw Kid," one of the greatest fighters in the history of pugilism and the first American boxer to hold the lightweight championship of the world, has become mentally unbalanced and has been committed to an asylum

Lavigne has been flighty and erratic for some years past, indicating an unsettled mental condition, but only within a few days has he given evidence of insanity.

Sensational Fighter.

George Lavigne was born in Bay City, Mich., December 6, 1869, and as a boy worked in the sawmills that abounded in that vicinity. He showed such aptitude as a fighter that he was induced to enter the professional ranks when he was 20 years of age. He created a sensation from the outset, showing an astonishing amount of vigor, speed, combativeness and ability to take punishment. His first professional fight was with George Siddons, an experienced lightweight, and the pair boxed a thrilling encounter of 77 rounds to a draw. They were rematched and boxed another of 55 rounds.

Lavigne then took on all comers and won nearly all his battles. He developed such power that Jack McAuliffe, the American lightweight champion, then near the end of his rope, decided to retire, and Lavigne claimed the title. After defeating a number of lightweights Lavigne was matched with Joe Walcott a weltes and one of the most terrific hitters in the ring

The Walcott Fight.

Under the terms of the match Walcott stipulated to stop Lavigne in 15 rounds or lose a $500 side bet Walcott was required to make 133 pounds ringside, much below his normal fighting weight. The contest was one of the most thrilling ever seen in a ring. Walcott, weakened by the weight, did little in the early rounds, but came strong in the latter part of the battle. Nevertheless Lavigne gave as good as he received and earned the decision on points He also stayed the limit and won the wager. This bout took place at the Emire A.C., Maspeth, December 2, 1895, and stated a sensation.

In 1895 Sam Fitzpatrick, manager of Lavigne, matched him to box Dick Burge, lightweight champion of England, for the world's title, and the bout took place in the National Sporting Club, London, June 1, 1898. Although Burge was a top heavy favorite, he never had a chance, and was knocked out in the 17th round. On his return to America Lavigne fought any and all who would meet him, but opponents became scarce and the Saginaw Kid started a fast pace that soon resulted in his depreciation as a fighter. He lost his title to Frank Erne at Buffalo, July 3, 1899.

Frank V Perry, London, a C.P.R. conductor, was severely injured when he fell from the van of a train when it was uncoupled.

London teamsters are asking $13 a day for city work.

BEFORE you are asked to buy or try Dunlop Cord Tires, they must undergo a test such as you would never give them.

Tires just like your garagemen and dealers now sell are put on our own test cars, and away speed the drivers.

—A Test that is kept up day and night.

—A Test that takes in some of the worst roads in the country and the generality of bumps, bad turns, and all the sudden stops that go with them.

—A Test that specifies the number of miles which must be made by the drivers each day and night.

The results of this crucial test, naturally, have an important bearing on our manufacturing policy.

Tested-in-Advance Service aptly applies to Dunlop Cord Tires—"Traction," "Ribbed." Can you ask for a greater guarantee than the story the road tells—a story which in the case of Dunlop Cord Tires proves that our manufacturing methods are not only Right but Dead Right?

A KINDLY ACT

The lordly $9,000 McFarlane touring car repainted and re-varnished by A. V. Shadgett, and exhibited at the Motor Show, is the property of Alderman Copping, who kindly permitted its exhibit. As a specimen of car painting and varnishing, it was worthy of its place in the show, and the consensus of criticism was that the work cannot be excelled by any brush. Mr. Shadgett appreciates Ald. Copping's consideration in loaning him so valuable an automobile for exhibition, a courtesy he could not expect from many. A. V. Shadgett certainly has an established reputation as a car painting specialist, and his shop at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets presents a busy scene these days.

THE COMING SOCIAL ORDER

Rev. R. Pogue Will Begin Series of Sermons at St. Paul's

On Sunday evening, the Rev. Robert Pogue of St. Paul's Church will begin a series of sermons on the subject: "God's Purpose for the Race," in which he will raise, and try to answer the question, "what is the Divine ideal for Human Society? Is it Democracy? Is it Socialism or is it Bolshevism?" It is important that those wishing to hear the series, should hear the first. In continuing his exposition of the epistle to the Colossians in the morning, he will deal with "Some modern systems of Error," under the title "Gnosticism Ancient and Modern."

MUSIC AT MURRAY STREET ON SUNDAY, APRIL 18TH

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

LAING—WARE

The marriage took place at 5:30 on Saturday in the Church of St. James the Apostle, Montreal, of Miss Irene Manon Ware, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur B. Ware, to Mr. Richard Ross Laing, S.Sc. The chancel of the church was decorated with Easter lilies were arranged on the altar. The lilies. Palms, primroses, and Easter Rev. Canon, Shetford performed the ceremony. Mr. Ware gave his daughter away, and she was attended by Mrs. Francis T. Cuttle as matron of honour, and two bridesmaids, Miss Winifred Findlay and Miss Margaret Smith. Mr. Savigniy Laing, Toronto was best man, and the ushers were Mr. James Ross, Mr. Jackson Rutherford, and Mr. Arthur Ware, the bride's brother.

The bride wore a gown of ivory charmeuse, the front of the skirt being of real lace and charmeuse, and made with pointed tunic. The bodice was of satin finished (with real lace around the neck and straps of real lace over the shoulders, and short satin sleeves and a long court train lined with pale ping georgette, and trimmed with a lover's knot of pearls. Her tulle veil was arranged in Russian style, with a pearl and brilliant ornament and was caught to the end of her train with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of Easter lilies and sweet peas, and wore the bridegroom's gift, a pearl ring surrounded with diamonds.

A reception was held after the ceremony at 118 Vandom Avenue, the residence of the bride's parents, and Easter lillies formed the decoration for the interior.

Mr. Laing and his bride left for Atlantic City, Washington, and New York. On their return they will reside at Shawinigan Falls, Quebec.

Mr. Laing is a son of Mr. Robert Laing, formerly of Peterborough, now of Montreal.

THE MARKETS

The feature of this morning's large market was the sharp increase in the price of potatoes which rose from $4.50 of last week to $5.00 today and one or two were even asking $5.50. In spite of the high price of $11.30 this morning there was scarcely a potato to be had on the market. Maple syrup was again in evidence in small quantities and fetched 90 cents and a dollar a quart according to the quality. An amusing incident, which seemed to believe the high cost of living cry was a horse which sold for $15 at auction on the market, and there seemed to be great difficulty in getting that price for the animal. The prices running today were as follows:

Dairy Produce.

Eggs, 45 cents doz.; butter, 68 and 70 cents pound; chicen, 35 cents pound.

Vegetables.

Potatoes, $5 and $5.50 a bag; carrots, 40 cents peck; parsnips, 40 cents peck; white beans, 75 cents peck; onions, $1.25 to $1.50 peck.

Meats.

Pork, 27 to 29 cents lb.; beef, 20 to 22 cents lb.

MRS. R. T. BUTTS, of Kansas City, who says her life was miserable for two long years before she began taking Tanlac. She now declares she is enjoying the best of health and that she has gained twenty pounds.

"If it had not been for Tanlac I would still be a sick woman, so I feel like I ought to tell everyone what this wonderful medicine has done for me," was the sincere statement made recently by Mrs. R. T. Butts, 1924 Troost Avenue, Kansas City, Mo.

"By the help of Tanlac I have gotten rid of a severe case of nervous indigestion that had made my life miserable for the past two years. I could not eat anything without suffering afterward. The gas on my stomach would rise up into my chest and press on my heart and at times would almost cut off my breath. My nerves were so up-set that the least unexpected noise would almost distract me. I seldom slept well and was so nervous I would often roll and toss until after midnight and what little sleep I did get seemed to do me no good. I was also a great sufferer from headaches and would often get so dizzy I would have to hold on to something to keep from falling.

"One day I happened to see a testimonial for Tanlac, describing a case like mine, so I bought a bottle and before I had finished it I began to feel just like a different person. Those terrible headaches disappeared and my appetite returned. When my first bottle was gone I got another and I kept on improving until now I can eat just anything I want and I never suffer any more from indigestion. I am not the least bit nervous and rest well at night and never know what it is to have a headache or a dizzy spell.

"Tanlac has not only relieved me of my suffering, but I have actually gained 20 pounds in weight and have not enjoyed such good health for years. Tanlac is certainly a wonderful medicine and I will always feel grateful for what it has done for me. I want to recommend this medicine to all my friends because I believe it will benefit anyone who is suffering as I did."

TABLET UNVEILED IN MEMORY OF NINETEEN HEROES OF GREAT WAR

St. John's Church Will Perpetuate Remembrance of its Members Who Made Supreme Sacrifice—Solemn Memorial Service, Attended by Vets and City Officials.

St. John's Church was crowded to the doors last evening when a handsome tablet in memory of nineteen soldier members of the church who made the supreme sacrifice in the great war, was unveiled with fitting, yet simple, ceremony. Chairs for all three aisles were brought in from the Sunday School to seat the greatest possible number.

The sacred old edifice conveyed a national and military impression with the stately arch of its chancel hung with British ensigns, the memorial tablet shrouded in a Union Jack, the colors of the 57th Regiment inviting attention from the north wall of the nave, the chancel decorated in red and the altar's dominant draperies being in crimson.

The Great War Veterans attended in goodly numbers, and officers of the Peterborough Rangers. His Honor Judge Huycke, the Mayor and alderman and other city officials were also present to pay homage to the glorious dead.

Ven. Archdeacon J. C. Davidson, rector of the church, and Canon of St. Alban's Cathedral, conducted the service, assisted by Capt. (Rev.) C. W. Hedley, late of the 94th, 59th and 123rd Battalions, C.E.F., and now of the S.C.R., Toronto.

For an anthem the capable choir, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, sang in good voice and with impressive effect Dr. Bridge's setting of Tennyson's "Crossing the Bar."

During the ceremonies, and with lights out, Bandmaster Hughes of the G.W.V.A. band sounded "the last post" with the large congregation standing in wrapped attention.

The service itself was impressively solemn. Very fitting to the occasion was the rector's reading from the altar a prayer generally used at the front by chaplains and the singing with heart and voice of that beautiful old hymn, "Abide With Me," which was a favorite with the Canadian forces in their battle zones.

The sermon by Capt. (Rev.) Hedley was indeed a touching memorial discourse, carrying with its eulogy of Canadian heroism and sacrifice a dominant note of joyous, victory over selfishness and the enemies of Christian liberty, which left with his hearers an irresistible conviction that the men whose memory is to be perpetuated by the tablet unveiled were gloriously victorious even in their death.

A touching coincidence of this unveiling was the announcement that on the alter were flowers in memory of Sergt. Sidney Ecobichon, who was killed in action on this date, April 18th, and whose name is on the tablet.

To the Glory of God.

The tablet is of dead black metal, deeply bordered in bronze, with bronze gothic lettering. It is appropriately ecclesiastical in design and rectagular in shape, and is surmounted with a gothic arch such as is seen over the entrance of every Church of England. Within this arch there stands out in bold relief a plain cross in bronze, flanked by crossed ensigns in colors, and these emblems of the Christian faith and our British Empire dominate the following arresting inscription:

"1914, Canada, 1919. To the glory of God and in honored memory of the following members of St. John's who gave their lives in the great war:

"The 19 names here follow in two columns."

This tablet is conspicuously placed on the north-east wall of the nave, just west of the vestry door, and faces the congregation.

RENEWED RIOTING AT LONDONDERRY YOUTH, SHOT IN LUNG, THOUGHT DYING

Police Sergeant Killed in Dublin Yesterday—Another Wounded, Shot From Behind.

(By Canadian Press.)

Belfast, Ireland, April 19.—There was renewed rioting in Londonderry Sunday evening between Unionists and Sinn Feiners, the police clubbing both impartially.

Revolvers were freely used and a youth, named Mathew Deehan, was shot in the lung and now lies in a critical condition. Fighting was so fierce at Carlisle bridge that pedestrians were unable to return to their homes and were stranded for the night.

Police Sergt. Killed.

Dublin, April 18.—Sergt. Carol was killed and Constable Collins seriously wounded today while returning from Mass at the Kilmihill Church in Kilmihill, West Clare. The men were shot from behind. Carol's heart was pierced by a revolver bullet.

Constable Martyn, who was with Carol and Collins, was not wounded. He returned the fire of the assassins, killing Stephen Breen, the son of a farmer, and wounding two or three other persons. Thomas Mulholland, an employe of the Dundalk Urban Council, was shot on the street at Dundalk, 40 miles west of Dublin, Friday night, and died en route to the hospital.

In a statement, made on the way to the hospital, he said a policeman shot him. The police, while not admitting that they shot Mulholland, says that three policemen, while patrolling, were attacked by a mob of civilians, two policemen were knocked down, and the third fired three shots at their assailants. Mulholland was interned after the rebellion of 1916.

The shooting of Mulholland has created a considerable sensation, as it is the first event of the kind that has been reported so near the Ulster border.

A NUMBER OF DIVORCE CASES

PREDICTED QUITE A FEW IN PETERBOROUGH WILL SEEK SEPARATION

It is predicted among local legal lights that the passing of the divorce bill providing for divorce suits being tried in the Supreme Court of Ontario will be the cause of a large number of divorce cases in the city of Peterborough. Several lawyers state that they have two or three cases on their books now awaiting the passing of this bill and that as soon as the bill is passed they will be taken up. One lawyer pointed out that under the conditions which exists at present it costs about $1,000 to secure a divorce, a figure which is too expensive for many people. The bill, which has already passed its third reading, will make it possible for these people who certainly need their domestic troubles relieved to secure a divorce at a much smaller cost than was possible before. The old law is described by lawyers as a law for the rich man as under its regulations it was possible for the poor man to secure relief.

SHOT AND KILLED PROMINENT NEW YORK PHYSICIAN IN AN EPISCOPAL CHURCH

Victim Was Taking up Collection Yesterday Morning When Tragedy Ocurred—Sacred Building Crowded at Time With Fashionable Congregation—Assailant Gives Name as Thomas W. Shelley—Murderer Also Fired in Midst of Worshippers.

(By Associated Press)

New York, April 19.—Thomas W. Shelley, formerly of Calgary, Alta., faced arraignment in court today for shooting Dr. J. W. Markoe, an eminent physician, in St. George's Episcopal Church yesterday. Police officials said they would ask for the appointment of a commission to examine Shelley as to his sanity. He told the police that he had escaped from a lunatic asylum last week.

Story of the Crime.

New York, April 19.—Dr. James Markoe, a well-known surgeon, was shot and instantly killed today while taking up the offering at the morning service in the fashionable St. George's Protestant Episcopal Church, 15th street and Stuyvesant place, in the old aristocratic district of New York.

His assailant was captured after a short chase by a group of parishioners, headed by William Fellowes Morgan, president of the Merchants' Association of New York; George E. Brewer and J. Morgan Jones. At the East 22nd street police station the prisoner gave his name first as Thos. W. Shelley and later as Thos. W. Simpkin. The police said he told them that he had escaped on Thursday from the Eastern State Hospital for the Insane at Williamsburg, W. Virginia. The man was born in London, England, and despatches received last night indicated that he had been a printer in Calgary on the Morning Albertan staff, and also in Duluth. He joined a Canadian regiment during the war, but got only as far as the seaboard. The despatches said that he was always considered a bit "queer."

Fashionable Congregation.

The church was crowded with parishioners, many of them representative of the walthiest families in New York, when the shooting took place. Dr. Markoe was walking down the left aisle taking up the collection while the choir was singing an anthem. As he reached the twelfth pew from the rear and leaned over to pass the plate, Shelley, who was seated next to the aisle, whipped out a revolver and fired at the physician. The bullet struck him over the left eye and he collapsed in the aisle.

Several women screamed and men rushed from their seats, some to the aid of the physician and others in pursuit of his assailant. Shelley, with the revolver in his hand, leaped over the body of the physician and started to run out of the church. The choir, led by Charles Safford, continued singing in an effort to quiet the congregation.

Shelley continued shooting. His second shot, directed at members of the congregation who were pursuing him, went wide. John Tiedman, the sexton, dropped to the floor in time to escape the third bullet, which grazed the cheek of J. Morgan Jones.

Shelley then ran from the church into Stuyvesant Square. Dr. Brewer was the first man to reach him. He grabbed the man's arm, but Shelley managed to wriggle himself loose long enough to fire another shot, which grazed Dr. Brewer's thigh. By that time several other members of the congregation had thrown Shelley to the ground and

WHOLESALE PRICE OF SUGAR RISES

LAID DOWN IN PETERBOROUGH THE PRICE IS NOW $19.20 A HUNDRED

Local dealers are now feeling the effects of the release from control some time ago of sugar. It was stated this morning by one dealer that the wholesale price of this commodity laid down in Peterborough had now risen to $19.20 a hundred. Added to this price there are the various charges such as cartage from the station, bags, weighing and delivery so that at 22 cents, the probable price to the consumer there will not be very much of a margin of profit left for the retailer. At 22 cents, one dealer said, there would be but ten cents upon which to cover all expenses and make a profit and that was cutting it pretty fine. Apart from the usual charges as mentioned above there was a wastage of at least a pound and a half to every C.W.T of sugar which was caused by the weighing up into small quantities.

It is foreshadowed by local retailers that the increase in sugar is bound to have its effect in the increase in the cost of other commodities such as biscuits which had already gone up four cents a pound recently. Canned vegetables are also increasing in price due largely to exportation.

WHO'LL BE FIRST?

Who will be the first Peterborough patriot to don overhauls and help to reduce the high cost of living?

FEDERATION OF LABOR DEMANDS ABANDONMENT OF MOST MEASURES

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, April 19. — Demands for a withdrawal of the French troops sent to the German cities east of the Rhine, the abandonment of new colonial expeditions such as that in Syria at present, and [illegible] release of the 1918 class from the colors, are made in a manifesto issued by the General Federation of Labor in calling upon workmen to join in a May Day strike.

These measures should be adopted, it is said, to show the world that France wishes for peace.

Armenians Help.

Armenia volunteers covered the landing, but, says the communication, were wiped out and the French were unable to advance further than to the protection of their naval guns. BRITAIN'S RECEIPTS £138,500,000 IN EXCESS OF BUDGET ESTIMATES

Chancellor of the Exchequer J. Austin Chamberlain Submits Encouraging Report in Commons.

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 19.— J. Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introducing his budget in the House of Commons today said, the expenditures for 1920 were approximately one hundred and forty-four million pounds in excess of the budget of estimate of last year, but sixty-three million pounds below the revised estimate he made last October. Regarding the revenue, he declared that the result was not only more favorable than had been anticipated but the receipts were nearly $138,500,000 in excess of the budget estimate on the present basis of taxation.

Next Year's Revenue

The Chancelor calculated the revenue for next year at $1,341,650,000. Last year there had been an addition to the country's debt, but this year there must be a substantial reduction. The Chancellor said, the Government had decided that there should be no more borrowing to balance revenue and expenditure; only the borrowing would be to meet the floating debt.

An automobile moving fifty miles an hour should be able to stop in 331 feet.

One gallon of paint should be distributed over an area of three hundred square feet.

RY. STRIKERS ARE HOLDING OUT

NEW YORK MEN WILL NOT WORK WITHOUT SUBSTANTIAL INCREASE

(By Canadian Press)

Washington, April 19.—Representatives of the striking railroad workers in New York and vicinity came here today to ask the Railroad Labor Board to hear their demands for a "substantial guaranted of increased wages."

Edward McHugh, of New York, who headed the delegation, said the men "would not return to work" until they had received assurances that their demands would be met. The Labor Board met early today behind closed doors, to consider the general wage question, as submitted by the recently dissolved by-partisan railroad conference.

NOTED OUTLAW IS THOUGHT IN TOILS

(By Canadian Press.)

Prague, April 19. — There is no question in the minds of Czecho-Slovak authorities that the man they succeeded in arresting at Marienbad on Saturday is Max Hoelz, the notorious Communist leader.

Refuses Statement.

Although the prisoner refused to make a statement, other Communists declare positively that he is the much wanted Saxon outlaw, who for several weeks past has been terrorizing the Planen district by raids of his band of several hundred men. He had 130,000 marks in his belt when captured.

ALLIED SUPREME COUNCIL WILL FORCE GERMANY TO KEEP TREATY

Premiers Lloyd George and Nitti Incline to Suggest Economic Pressure—Allies Firmly United, However, That Treaty of Versailles Must be Observed.

(By Canadian Press.)

San Remo, April 11.—The Inter-Allied Supreme Council began its formal sessions here today. While the Turkish question was on the program for first consideration, it develops that htere already had been discussion over the question of enforcing the execution of the peace treaty with Germany. There seems no doubt that the premiers are agreed that a joint declaration must be sent to Germany requiring her to fulfil conditions, and that if she does not do so the Allies will take compulsory measures.

Positive Demands.

The premiers, however, have not yet agreed upon the form of pressure to be used should Germany continue negligent. They were agreed without a moment's discussion that Germany should be told in the most positive manner that she must observe the treaty, that he Allies were firmly united upon this, and that she should be warned of punitive consequences should she refuse or fail to observe the treaty.

Economic Pressure.

Premier Lloyd George suggested economic pressure, depriving Germany of food, raw materials, and intercourse with the allied countries. Premier Millerand is described as having said that such pressure without the use of naval or military aid would in effect be no pressure at all. He declared it would be another "make believe" and that Germany could conduct her economic business through neutral countries just the same. The only warning that would be respected, the only pressure that would be effective, he asserted, would be force, the application of such force as military and naval advisers might deem sufficient.

Opposes Armed Force.

Premier Lloyd George, it is said, resisted this conclusion. Premier Nitti inclined towards the British Prime Minister's view, and the matter rests there for the present. A compromise may take the form of an ultimatum to Germany with the threat of applying effective compulsion, without indicating what form such compulsion might take.

ATTENDS CHURCH IN OVERHALLS

DAUGHTER FAINTS AT SIGHT OF FAHER—TAKEN HOME IN TAXI

(By Canadian Press.)

Brantford, April 19.—The overall campaign was introduced last night when a local churchgoer attended in a new costume. His wife and daughter preceded him to church. The first hymn was being sung when the daughter noted the style of her father's attire, and the shock was so great that she fainted and had to be taken home in a taxicab.

In Hamilton, Too.

Hamilton, April 19.—The overall craze has hit this city. As a protest against he high cost of living, city hall employes arrived at work in overalls today, and this led to the calling of a special meeting this afternoon, when it is intended to pledge all members of the City Hall Employees' Association to wear denim until clothing drops in price.

Campaign in St. Thomas.

St. Thomas, April 19.—The overall campaign to bring down the high price of clothing has reached this city, some 300 employes of the Michigan Central Railway meeting on Saturday afternoon and organizing a local league. The unique organization is the first of its kind in Canada and is rapidly gaining membership. Each man who attended the Saturday meeting pledged himself to wear overalls and smock not only at his work but during his leisure time as much as possible.

The members have decided to conduct their campaign along moderate lines, for a while at least, and will refrain from wearing blue jeans in places of worship and at social functions.

Employees on the other railroads and in other industries of the city are being invited to join the league, and plans are under way to issue circulars setting forth the object of the organization.

It is reported that if the Overall League proves a success similar measures may be adopted to bring down prices of foodstuffs in the city.

Wallaceburg Club Formed.

Chatham, April 19. — An "Overall Club" has been organized by the young men of Wallaceburg, with a membership of 81, and new recruits are joining rapidly. The membership demands that the young men will not wear any clothes other than those which are made from overall material. This is one of the first clubs organized in the Dominion.

Vancouver Forms League.

Vancouver, April 19. — City employees completed arrangements for an "overalls league." All employees of the Salem, Oregon, postoffice, except carriers appeared to-day in overalls. Carriers telegraphed postal authorities in Washington asking permission to discard their uniforms for clothes similar to those of their fellow workers.

THREE YOUNG MEN HAD NARROW ESCAPE IN RIVER WHEN MOTOR LAUNCH UPSET

Boat Struck Supports of Temporary Bridge Yesterday and Turned Turtled.

Three Ashburnham young men had very narrow escape from drowning in the Otonabee River in the vicinity of the temporary bridge, yesterday afternoon, when a motor launch which they were in upset throwing al three into the river.

They had been proceeding up stream at a slow pace until they reached the temporary bridge. Here the current halted their progress with the result that the engine stalled just after passing under the bridge. The boat sarted to drift backwards, and the young men thinking to head down stream, began to turn, with the result that the boat struck the supports of the bridge and turned completely over. One young man succeeded in securing a hold on the supports of the bridge but the other two were compelled to swim to the shore. Neither were good swimmers and the water was extremely cold.

The boat drifted down stream as far as the C. P. R. bridge where it was secured a trifle damaged and with various articles which were in it missing. One of the young men stated this morning that it was as close a shave as ever he wished to have.

MONDAY, APRIL 19, 1920.

MANUEL ESTRADA CABRERA, deposed President of Guatemala, who is reported to have fled to Cuba, following a revolution which began last February, had the distinction of governing the Central American republic for twenty-two years.

Growth of the Unionist party in Guatemala, the members of which favored an amalgamation of all the Central American republics under one government, was opposed by Cabrera on the ground that it was "reactionary." Upon his reinauguration as President in 1917 he issued a decree severing relations between Guatemala and Germany. During the three succeeding years Cabrera administration had been marked by internal dissensions and difficulties with Honduras and other countries close to the Guatemalan border. Numerous uprisings occurred during his regime and many attempts were made on his life. In 1907 he caused the arrest of one hundred and sixty men on a charge of conspiring to assassinate him. Nineteen of these who were tried and sentenced to death were executed.

Many other attempts had been made to kill him. On one occasion a bomb was thrown under his carriage. Cadets from the Guatemalan Military Academy, who acted as his escort, attempted to shoot him on April 21 1908, when he entered the national palace to receive the American Minister, William Heimke. He suffered a bayonet wound in the hand and escaped death only by his bravery.

Carlos Herra, a financier, was chosen provisional rPesident on April 12, upon the ousting of Cabrera, who abandoned Guatemala City the next day and announced that he and a number of troops who had remained loyal would cut off the capital's water supply and food shipments until "the rebels begged for terms."

Cabrera concentrated his quarters at La Palma, Matamoras and San ose, and, dominating Guatemala City began to shell the capital, killing, it was reported, many civilians. Meanwhile the revolt against Cabrera spread over the entire country. Cabrera's government was in many respects like that of Porfirio Diaz, who ruled Mexico for years with an iron hand. He was born in Quezaltenango on November 21, 1857, and received his preparatory education in the schools of that district, the second most important in Guatemala. Later he attended a law school in Guatemala City from which he was graduated in 1883.

General Justo Rufino Barrios, then "dictator," named him as chief justice of the Department of Retalhulen where he remained until 1886, when he was appointed to the post of chief justice of the Department of Quezaltenango, his native district. In 1888 he was made a justice of the Court of Appeals, and later he became a member of the National Assembly.,

Cabrera soon became a leader of the Assembly. When he had achieved this place, Barrios was assassinated in the streets of Guatemala City in February, 1898, an election was called, and Cabrera was chosen as Barrios' successor. He assumed the Presidency the following October.

It was then that the real development of Guatemala began. Cabrera built one of the most magnificent capitals in Central America. He was the first ruler on the American continent, it is said, to adopt aviation for his army. He organized the West Point of Guatemala. He built a score of modern hospitals and many schools. He opened up the country to railroad builders and restored the National Treasury. He promulgated a decree of unconditoinal amnesty when he became President, thus bringing together all factions, and yet he proved strong enough to hold them in check when his enmies plotted to overthrow him, until the issue of Central American unionism arose.

ALCOHOL BY PRESCRIPTION.

IN A RECENT ISSUE of Good Housekeeping there appeared an article on the attitude of the medical profession toward spirituous liquors by Dr. Harvey Wiley Chief of the United States Bureau of Food, Sanitation and Health. The following extracts are intresting:

There is a rapidly growing tendency among the medical profession to discredit the value of whiskey and brandy as remedial agents. In the preparation of the ninth Decennial Revision of the United States Pharmacopœia, a long and earnest discussion took place degarding the retention of whisky and brandy in the revised edition. A questionnaire was sent to a large number of practitioners of medicine, asking to what extent they prescribed whiskey and brandy to their patients. The response was quite illuminating. Many of the answers stated that prescriptions of these so-called remedies had not been written for years. A few replies were to the effect that occasionally there might be circumstances where whiskey and brandy would be useful. The number of replies advising the retention of these bodies in the Pharmacopœia was so small that the committee finally decided to delete them entirely because of nonuse.

The greatest use of alcohol in medicine is in preparation of remedies which are not soluble in water but are soluble in alcohol. This class of remedies is known as tinctures, in which alcohol is a necessary vehicle. When these remedies are administered, the purpose is to secure the effect of the dissolved body without reference to the vehicle which carries it.

The attitude of the Bureau of Internal Revenue toward legitimat tinctures is one of toleration. It is assumed that the tinctures are denatured in the process or manufacture so that there is little danger of their being used for beverage purposes. It is not well, however, to depend solely on the gustatory nerve for the enforcement of the Prohibition Act. The desire for alcohol is so strong in many persons that they do not hesitate to consume preparations most repugnant both to taste and smell. These are unfortunates whom no kind of legislation could safeguard. Undoubtedly the revenue officials will require that the manufacturers of tinctures, and galenicals containing alcohol, shall use the minimum quantity required to secure solution.

Alcohol is the principal constituent of many so-called patent medicines or secret remedies. Of these the late Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey was an extreme type. It carried no drug whatever except alcohol. Formerly Peruna was a very prominent type of this class of bodies, but Paruna did contain a small quantity of other drugs. In certain secret preparations where the active remedial agent is soluble only in alcohol, large quantities of alcohol are used far in excess of that necessary as a solvent. These so-called "remedies" become only alcoholic stimulants. The "good feeling" which they produce, which makes the patient think he is being cured, is due solely to intoxication. Reputable physicians never prescribe secret remedies. This is the sole business of the quack.

The big open door, however, is the danger of the revival of whiskey, brandy and gin as so-called remedial agents. It will be hard for some physicians to resist the plea of their patients for a prescription for a quart of "red liquor." While all reputable physicians will refuse all such prescriptions if they have the least suspicion that they are to be used for beverage purposes, there will always be found a few unethical practitioners who will be willing to lend their aid to this nefarious purpose. The experience which we have had with the enforcement of the law against habit-forming drugs, such as opium and cocaine, will doubtless be repeated on a far larger scale when it comes to the writing of prescriptions for distilled liquors. The Bureau of Internal Revenue has already taken up this matter under the war prohibition law and has issued instructions or regulations which will doubtless be continued under constitutional prohibition.

Surgeon-General Ireland has said, under date of August 18, 1919: "My own personal opinion is that whiskey and brandy are not essential in the treatment of the sick. If the medical profession as a unit would adopt this view it would then permit the medical department to discontinue the supply of alcoholics as therapeutic agents to our army hospitals."

Surgeon-General Braisted says under date of August 19, 1919, in a letter responsive to a senatorial inquiry: "The great majority of our navy doctors, without any indoctrination of the exercise of pressure from headquarters, have largely abandoned the practice of prescribing alcohol. This is the best sort of testimony regarding it, and a more desirable result than if it had been summarily stricken from our supply table. Taking the medical department of the navy at large, I can assure you that alcohol for this 'influenza' and all other diseases has dropped into a very secondary role indeed in the last few years. I should have no objection to cutting alcohol off from the medical supply table, but I believe the use of it will soon cease almost entirely without any coercive measure, and when a generation grows up which is not accustomed to liquor, so that the habit of dependence on it will not have to be considered in patients, the employment of this agent will cease in itself."

MOTOR TRUCK EXPANSION.

FAITHFUL OLD DOBBIN is being rapidly relegated to the background of "has-beens" by horseless means of transportation both on city streets, country roads and on the farm. Motor cars for both business and pleasure are replacing horse-drawn vehicles, while motor tucks are being generally resorted to for both light and heavy draft work. And before many years have passed away the poor old horse will have developed into a novelty, in place of a general purpose animal maintained for man's pleasure and work. In this connection, Mr. Joseph J. Duffus, proprietor of Duffus Motor Sales, this city, has this to say:

An era of unprecedented expansion is being entered upon in motor truck transportation. The need of locomotives and railroad cars by railroads generally has caused a great demand for trucks. The demands of the times generally are for more and more motor trucks in keeping pace with business. The country is more and more dependent upon motor transportation, and careful analysis of the situation will show any one that the maker of motor trucks must prepare for the deluge of business now so near at hand.

What applies to other countries in the use of motor trucks will apply to this section of the country. The future of the motor truck in all sections where good roads are to be found is exceedingly bright, as every additional mile of good roads will increase the demand to such an extent that before long the motor truck business will be larger by far than the passenger car.

All motorists want good roads, and a large percentage are tillers of the soil in one line or other. With the comparatively small number of motor trucks in use in Canada today, and with several millions of farmers who need motor trucks, the building of good roads means a market for millions of trucks, the elimination of the horse entirely from the farms by the use of the tractor and other automotive appliances, and the use of five acres of land for the growing of produce fo the human race whenever a horse is eliminated. The opening of millions of acres of land now reqquired to keep horses will do more to reduce the high cost of living than anything else I know of, and the building of roads will aid in the motorization of millions of farms and make motor truck manufacturing one of the greatest industries of the world today.

With the dawn of peace we stand on the threshold of a new era. The broad expanse of water washing the shores of the two hemispheres no longer controls the pathway of commerce and transportation, for through the heavens mighty monsters of the air spread their wings in open defiance. The mule pack trains of South America must now give way to more speedy and more efficient means of transportation. To the mind of the Chinese coolie comes a sense of freedom never befor entertained, as he is pushed aside by the thundering wheels of motor trucks. The caravans of Northern Africa, the oxen of Egypt, the jinrickshaws of Japan, the caribou of the Philippines, are doomed to become obsolete. Giants with iron hearts will replace more and more these beasts of burden until they cease to have a part in modern transportation, and the humane laws will guarantee forever their liberty. And as these antiquated burden carriers lay down their task motor trucks will take up their duties on their shoulders of steel and discharge their obligation unfalteringly.

PAINLESS DENTISTRY A FAD NOW

At last painless dentistry has arrived; and it is possible to sit comfortably at ease in the dentist's chair and have any part of your masticating appartus ground, filled, or removed without the slightest twinge of physical pain adding to the mental discomfort connected with the disease of a beloved molar or bicuspid. Modern discoveries have made an actual reality of the age-old longing for painless operations of the mouth area; and as a result of years of paintaking research on the part of nerve specialists, the dental profession can now avail themselves of modern discoveries guaranteed to take the pain out of practically all dental operations. As a patient can be rendered absolutely immune from pain for hours at a stretch while extended operations are being carried on in his mouth; and this, too without in any way affecting his faculties as he is fully aware of everything going on at the time and may carry on an ordinary conversation when the dentist's instruments are removed from his mouth. In other words, the "shriek" can now positively be removed from all dental practice.

And this is a big factor, because in these modern days' people are even more sensitive to pain than heretofore, while at the same time more than ever in need of dental services.

How Pain is Eliminated.

The new method of eliminating pain is known as conductive anaesthesia or nerve blocking. Until very recently the pain reducers were employed locally in the gums or tissues surrounding the tooth or teeth upon which the operation was being performed. By the most modern method an injection is made near or close to the nerve trunk which supplies any part to be operated upon. By this means the whole area supplied by this particular nerve is rendered totally insensitive to pain. Pulps can then be removed and sensitive teeth filled, prepared, or removed without pain.

This is not a local injection, such as has been known to and used by dentists all over the country, but is a blocking at the nerve source. It is a development of only the last six or seven years, resulting from the patient work of specialists in the laboratory. But it has already been thoroughly tested out upon a large number of patients, and has been found to quite definitely take the pain out of practically all dental operations, in a way not formerly believed possible. In the words of the profession the new method "produces a profound anaesthesia and covers a larger area." The new method has been heralded as a great discovery and has been taken up and demonstrated throughout the United States and Canada by prominent members of the profession, including eminent professors of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario.

Every Dentist Painless

It is claimed by the initiate in the new dental discoveries that every dentist can be a painless dentist, if they take the time and trouble to avail themselves of the new knowledge. The men at the head of the profession are striving in every way to make the profession uniformly efficient. But it is to be feared that much of the practical new knowledge is as yet only known by a few. Realizing this, steps have been taken to reach all the members of the profession this year and lay before them all the new discoveries proven to be practical and efficient. At the 53rd. annual convention of the Ontario Dental Siciety, which is being held in Toronto, May 3 to , inclusive, the Dental Educational Association will thoroughly demonstrate all the new methods of painless dentistry. There will also be progressive clinics covering all branches of dentistry; and chair clinics at the Royal College of Dental Surgeons of Ontario, will further prove how efficient modern methods in practice have become. Not only will painless operative methods in all their ramifications be fully demonstrated, but the new method of making and fitting perfectly artificial teeth, repairing natural teeth, and curing diseases of the mouth, will be made perfectly clear. And to cap all, there will be the definite operations performed in the college by skilled professors who will show the actual effects upon patients of correct Modern Dentistry.

Surely it is a far cry from the days of the old untrained "tooth-puller," to the thoroughly equipped modern dental surgeon, who can work all over your face without pain to the patient and none of the old-fashioned obsolete methods should remain after May the sixth!

PETERBORO MEN, WHO MAKE GOOD

The Review Biographical sketch this week deals with the life of the late Tom John Nicholl, former president of the Chattanooga Terminal Railway Company and of the Rochester and Charlotte Turnpike Company.

He was descended from English and Welsh ancestors, the son of Thomas F. Nicholl, an eminent civil engineer, who was associated with Sir I. K. Brunel in constructing the Great Western Railway, England, and later as an assistant engineer in the construction of the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada.

Tom John Nicholl was born in Reading, England, August 21, 1846. He was quite a young lad when the professional duties of his father necessitated a change of location to Canada, and he, therefore, received his early education in this Province. Soon after reaching his thirteenth year, young Nicholl began a career of untiring activity, starting as a clerk in a drug store in Peterborough and from his earnings, accumulated sufficient funds to warrant him in taking a course in military tactics and engineering at the Canadian Military School, Toronto, from which he graduated in 1865. Then he accepted an engagement as principal of a Public school at Oil Springs, Ontario, on experience in those days, without which no ambitious young man considered his education quite complete.

During all these early years Mr. Nicholl was assiduously educating himself for the work of his life, that of civil and mechanical egineering, a love for which he had inherited from his father. He also, whenever opportunity permitted, served as compassman, chainman, leveller and transit man with varlous engineering parties; so that, in 1866, he was qualified to accept the position of assistant engineer with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railway, remaining in that service two years, after which he filled a like position with the Lafayette Bloomington and Mississippi Railway during the years 1868 and 1869 From the last named year until 1874 he was chief engineer on the Plymouth, Kankanee and Pacific Railway. He was then invited to accept the chief engineership of the Gilman, Clinton and Springfield, afterwards known as the Springfield Division of the Illinois Central Railway, a position which he filled until 1879. He later acted as superintendent of construction for the Chicago and Northwest Railway in Dakota for two years; then becoming division superintendent of the Dakota Division of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway.

Mr. Nicholl was offered and accepted in 1884, the position of general manager of the East and West Alabama Railway. Later he was president of the Natchez, Jackson and Columbus Railway and had since been general superintendent of the Louisville, New Orleans and Texas Railway, consulting engineer of the Milwaukee, Lake Shore and Western Railroad, general manager of the Chatanooga Terminal Railway, North Chatanooga Electric Railway Company and the Chatanooga Company, Limited. In 1896 he became vice-president of the Rochester and New York Railway system.

In 1889 he was managing director of the Pratt and Whitney Machine Company of Hartford, Connecticut, and at the same time constructed the Rochester and Sodus Bay Railway and manager the Rochester Railway. He then became president of the Rochester and Sodus Railway Company, vice-president and general manager of the Rochester Railway, president of the Rochester Electric Railway, president of the Rochester and Charlotte Turnpike Company and president of the Chatanooga Terminal Railway Company.

The only positions other than those connected with the railways which Mr. Nicholl held during his strenuous active life were those of postmaster at Hennepin, Patman County, Illinois, and deputy county surveyor. These offices he managed to fill while engaged in that section of the United States in 1873 as chief engineer of the Plymouth, Kankakee and Pacific Railway. He also served in his young manhood as a private lieutenant, captain and adjutant in the Canadian Militia and received a medal from the British Government for meritorious service during the Fenian raids.

Unfortunately Mr. Nicholl has now passed to his eternal reward after a life of the greatest activity and usefulness. Citizens of Peterborough will no doubt call to mind that Mr. Nicholl paid a visit to this city about five years ago. He was then in very poor health and died last March. His proud record is well worthy of emulation by the youth of Peterborough.

Among those who knew him intimately when he was a resident of this city is Mr. John Green, the well-known member of the local Bar.

ABOUT NOTED PEOPLE

The ex-kaiser's sojourn at Amerongen and the proposal that he be sent to Curacao naturally turns one's thoughts to the last days of that other enemy of European peace—Napoleon Bonaparte.

When the Allies entered Paris after Waterloo Napoleon surrendered himself to Captain M'Call of the Bellerophon. He was conveyed to English waters, and in October of the same year (1815) was sent to St. Helena. He died on that island on May 5, 1821. For size and one-half years he quarrelled with the Governor, Sir Hudson Lowe; bickered with his own household, so that some were obliged to leave him; wrote—or rather dictated—his memoirs, cultivated his garden, and drove about the island.

It is interesting to note that the plate used by Napoleon at St. Helena bore the French Imperial arms, and was in fact the same as had been in his service at the palace of St. Cloud. The ex-emperor did not smoke, but solaced himself with snuff, taking it from a box presented to him by the Pope. It is said he once rebuked a priest for saying mass while smelling of tobacco.

Britain's action in sending the former emperor to St. Helena naturally evoked a great deal of French abuse, and much hostile criticism centred about the climate of St. Helena, which is moist and exposed to strong winds, although there is extreme of neither heat nor cold. Napoleon's own physicians, however, admitted, after making an examination of the body, that the confinement there did not in any way hasten his death.

Napoleon's death was shrouded somewhat in mystery, and many malicious stories were told. The simple facts were that the ex-emperor died from a cancer in the stomach.

By his own wish, he was buried at a spot he had selected near his residence, the grave being eleven feet deep and surrounded by three weeping willows. It was also Napoleon's desire that his own carriage, which was used for excursions over the island, should be converted into a hearse to bear him to the tomb. Full military honors were accorded to him.

Back To France

In 1840 Britain granted permission to have the remains removed to France. Shortly after midnight on October 5 a commencement was made to open the grave in the presence of commissioners representing Britain and France. About nine o'clock in the morning, the granite stonework having been removed, everything was ready to bring up the remains, encased in three coffins, to a tent erected alongside. They were at once opened, when it was found that even after nineteen years the face of the late emperor was easily distinguished by those who knew him in life. His uniform, orders and hat were intact, and the body had all the appearance of having been but recently interred.

The caskets having been closed down, they were put into a massive ebony coffin brought from France; this was locked, and the key handed to one of the commissioners. It was nearly the end of December before the flotilla arrived off Cherbourg. A salute of 21 guns was fired when the remains first landed on French soil. Amidst much ceremony the casket was placed under the dome of the Chapel of the Invalides.

In 1858, the French Government having expressed a wish to possess all the relics of Napoleon's last days, application was made to Lord Palmerston to have the funeral car, which had been brought back from St. Helena in 1829 and deposited at Woolwich, presented to the French nation.

It was found it had suffered much injury at the hands of corroding time, and by the fact that visitors had chipped off pieces as mementoes. The vehicle was, however, put in order and decorated at the expense of Britain, and handed over to France.

SMALL NEWS STORY BRINGS A FORTUNE

MARSHALL BURNS LLOYD REAPS $1,500,000 FROM SIMPLE INVENTION

Menominee, Mich, April 19—(Special.)— A small news story on inventions has brought $1,500,000 to Marshall Burns Lloyd, anin ventor.

Several months ago, Mr. Lloyd invented a new method for producing baby carriages, woven furniture and baskets. It was the only change in the method of weaving wickers since Jochbed, mother of Moses, wove a basket in which Pharoah's daughter found him on the River Nile. Soon after Mr. Lloyd invented a loom which weaves wickers into any shape and does so thirty times faster and better than the fastest hand weavers.

The stories of these inventions was printed in patent journals and copied by a trade paper in Milwaukee known as "Packages." A New York representative of Lusty and Sons, London, England manufacturers, read the story, investigated and reported to his clients. They came here last week and left with Mr. Lloyd $1,500,000 richer. This huge sum entitles them to extensive British Empire rights. Permits have been sold by the inventor in Canada, New Zealand and Australia.

Mr. Lloyd began life as a fish pedler in Meaford, Canada, although birn in St. Paul, Minn. He was a hotel waiter, street hawker of soaps and cheap jewelry, mail carrier by dog train and small manufacturer. During his idle moments he tinkered away at inventions but never had money enough with which to produce big things until he sold a wire weaving devise for bed springs, door and table mats. This was followed by a new method and machinery for making steel tubing. He was dismissed as an "insane inventor" when he tried to sell his patents to the steel corporation. Later independent firms which have since been absorbed by the steel corporation paid Mr. Lloyd enough money for American rights so that he could develop his wicker weaving ideas.

Two South Sea Countries Are British Dominions, But They Differ Entirely

THE proposal made by Viscount Jellicoe that a powerful Far Eastern fleet be created, toward which Australia would be expected to contribute 20 per cent. and New Zealand five per cent. again calls attention to the growing importance of a far away corner of the world.

"Usually, in our mental geography, Australia and New Zealand are conveniently grouped, yet one of the first surprises awaiting the tourist from the northern hemisphere is to find that Australia and New Zealand may not be regarded as two islands of like appearance, differing mainly in size; near neighbors which may be treated as a unit," say Herbert E. Gregory.

"New Zealand is nearly twice as far from Australia as Bermuda is from New York, and is not only east but also south.

"Four days' travel across a chilly sea is required for the traverse from Wellington to Sydney, and after exchanging chill midsummer climate of the New Zealand lake region for the heat of Adelaide, one readily accepts the evidence of the map that the southern coast of the Australian mainland has the latitude of central New Jersey, while the southernmost of the three islands which comprise the Dominion of New Zealand occupies the position of Southern Newfoundland.

"In climate and vegetation the two dominions are as unlike as Norway and South Carolina. New Zealand is a land of mountains, gorges, rivers and fiords. The higher peaks of the South Islands are eternally snow-capped and the glaciers of its southern Alps rival those of Switzerland. The surrounding seas are too cold for corals. Among the mountains of the North Island volcanic fires are still active and the geysers and hot springs are little less impressive than those of the Yellowstone Park. The aboriginal inhabitants of New Zealand, at the time of their discovery by Captain Cook, were the most advanced of all the South Pacific races, while the aborigines of Australia are the lowest in intelligence of all human beings.

"Australia is in no sense inferior to New Zealand in geographic interest, but lofty peaks, profound canyons, and active volcanoes are lacking; its rivers are unimpressive and its permanent lakes small and few in number; it is a continent composed of plains interrupted by ridges and mountain knobs.'"

Aloof Englishmen.

Sir Thomas MacKenzie, High Commissioner for New Zealand, who is a native of Edinburgh, in speaking of the aloofness of the average Englishman, recently said, in London: It was hopeless. I got tired and went to the United States, where I found the Americans friendly and homely, and have never forgotten it. It is much the same to-day. The various societies and clubs here do good work, but the right spirit is missing somehow." On this account he is planning to found, in the heart of London, a great imperial and social club for visitors from the Dominions. It is estimated that the undertaking will cost £1,000,000, and, in addition to a restaurant, receiving, entertaining, and business rooms, the club will contain 500 bedrooms. For the sake of Anglo-American friendship, it is to be hoped that Americans will recognize that Sir Thomas uses the word "homely" in regard to them in the sense of "belonging to home," and not as "uncomely," as usually constructed in America. As for the Englishman who is unconscious of any aloofness, no doubt he will think that Sir Thomas, like another Scotsman who visited London, saw only the heads of departments.

New Women in Egypt.

The "new woman" organizations in Egypt are rapidly growing in strength, and despite the ancient traditions of the Mohammedans, are being favorably received. Harem laws are being broken and many of the younger women have discarded their [illegible] veils and are taking part in political processions.

The King's Cellars.

Major Edne Thomas Kingscote has lately been appointed to be Gentleman of the Royal Cellars in place of Mr Thomas Kingscote, who has resigned.

The King's cellars are under St James' Palace, and it is from there that all the various royal residences, including Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace, are supplied. Wines are purchased in the wood and laid down. They are then bottled in the cellars and stored until required.

In Queen Victoria's time these cellars, which cover a quarter of an acre, contained an immense amount of fine old sherry, but when King Edward came to the throne, most of this was sold.

There is, however, still some left, and when King Alfonso visits England, he vows that he gets better sherry at Windsor than he does in Madrid.

King Edward's wine was champagne, and he was one of the best judges of champagne in the kingdom. He was also a good judge of clarets, of which there is a fine stock at St. James'.

The preference of King George and Queen Mary is for light wines, and large purchases have been made of Australian vintages.

There is also in the cellars some wonderful old Tokay, originally purchased by the Prince Consort. When seen on the royal table, it is used only as a liqueur. It is a wonderful nerve restorative.

Half a Farthing Damages.

Someone once asked that famous judge, the late Sir Henry Hawkins, who afterwards became Lord Brampton, what was the most wonderful verdict he ever obtained as a barrister. His reply was: "Half a farthing!"

He was not joking, for at one time half-farthings were actual coin of the realm.

They were first put into circulation in 1842, and were legal tender for any amount up to sixpence.

The coins themselves were made of copper, and on one side bore the effigy of Queen Victoria, with the inscription, "Victoria D. G. Britanniar, Regina F.D."; while on the other side appeared the words "half-farthing," with the date of the year, surmounted by the royal crown, and, below, the united emblem of the rose, thistle and shamrock.

Presumably half-farthings were found to be more trouble than they were worth. Anyway, their use was very soon discontinued.

New Orleans Cemeteries.

Surrounded as it is on three sides by the Mississippi and on the fourth by Lake Pontchartrain, no wonder New Orleans must bury its dead above ground! Even a shallow grave becomes a well. The cemeteries, with their wildernesses of stone and marble tombs, are one of the sights of the city.

EUROPEANS FLOCK TO CANADA

(1) Capt. MacDuff, of C. P. R. Colonization Department, meeting first party of emigrants [illegible] 1920 at St. John. A fine type of prosperous settlers.
(2) British emigrants arriving [illegible] for western farms.

The immigration buildings at any of the Dominion's ports of entry present a curious scene of hustle and bustle shortly after the arrival of one of the giant ocean liners, and a witness is not likely to soon forget the commotion created by the discharged emigrants. A vast mass of humanity surges through the galleries past the immigration officer and the various inspectors, and once accepted for Canadian citizenship, men, women, and children of every kind, loaded down with baggage of every shape and form rush hither and thither making multitudinous inquiries of everyone generally unacquainted with the next steps to be taken to further proceed on their journey.

It is neither pleasant nor comfortable to land friendless in a strange land. The hardened traveller feels this and more deeply those who set foot in a foreign land where customs, conditions, and possibly language differ from those to which the emigrant has been accustomed from childhood. Then the petty worries incidental to travelling are intensified by the total unfamiliarity on every hand, and each move is fraught with embarrassment. Yet each month thousands of potential Canadian citizens are arriving at the Dominion's shores from the British Isles, France, Belgium, Holland and Scandinavia people who have broken up homes and life-long ties at the promise of the great new land. Into a whirl of unfamiliar sights and sounds, in a confusion of humanity and baggage, many unacquainted with the language they hear on every hand—thus, at the gateways of the Dominion, arrive the ancestors of the Canadians of to-morrow.

First impressions are often lingering; they are apt to have a considerable bearing on future outlook. Realizing this and the expediency of rendering the utmost service to these Dominion builders-to-be, the Department of Colonization and Development of the Canadian Pacific Railway, interested among [illegible] progressive phases, in the human development of the country, has appointed a colonization agent as foster parent to emigrants arriving on the company's boats. When a vessel steams into port he is there to go on board with the immigration officer Capt. Andrew McDuff, veteran of two wars, versed in many languages, sympathetic, tactful and schooled in the many sides of human nature. He is at the service of these new arrivals to assist with information and advice. He shepherds them from the boat to the waiting [illegible] and sleeping [illegible] arrival [illegible] point of destination [illegible] the train on [illegible] journey. [illegible] citizen-to-be, [illegible] impression [illegible] that they are welcome and that Canada wants them. A cheerful send-off, free from annoying worries, means a great deal, and to this end the Colonization Agent has been appointed.

A Prompt Suitor

By CECILLE LANGDON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"This is no place for you, Miss Denzil," said Walter Richards, and Edna Denzil regarded him askance. "If you will allow me to call upon you this evening I will tell you why."

Young Richards spoke in a low, impressive tone and as Edna nodded as if in assent, went into the front office of Moore & Allen, drew what salary was coming to him and left the place. Edna followed him with her eyes. She confessed to a slight pang of jealousy as Richards met a flashy, bold-faced girl of her own age who had been of late quite a frequent visitor to the office. On several of these occasions Miss Martine made it a point to parade her fancied beauty and fascinations for the benefit of the young clerk and student.

There was some mystery about this Miss Martine that neither Edna nor Richards had fathomed. When either of the partners consulted with her it was behind closed door. She wore a certain air of audacious superiority, indicating that her visits to the firm were of great importance.

Edna puzzled her mind all the rest of that afternoon as to the reason why Walter Richards had given up his position. She had liked him from the first moment she met him. He was courteous to the point of gallantry. He had walked home with her on several occasions and Edna was attracted and pleased by his quiet, gentlemanly ways. She was glad that she had assented to his calling upon her, for he was about the only friend she had made since coming to the city.

It was seven o'clock when Richards appeared at the home where Edna boarded. "If you don't mind," he said, "suppose we take a stroll to the park, where we can find a quiet spot to talk over things," and Edna was nothing loth.

She went up to her room and reappeared dressed for outdoors, the handbag she usually carried in evidence. Richards insisted on relieving her of this. He selected a remote bench when they reached the park.

"You have probably been surprised and mystified as to my leaving Moore & Allen so abruptly," he spoke. "You also perhaps wonder at what I said about the office being no place for you. I am going to explain. I have a long, hard road ahead of me before I become a full-fledged lawyer, and I may not readily find another place, but I have learned enough concerning the devious and tricky ways of my former employers to know that every hour I remain I am imperiling my reputation for the future."

"You amaze me!" murmured Edna.

"Last week they asked me to assist in deluding a client whom they were willing to sell out for a money consideration. This Miss Martine who comes so often to the office is, I am assured, a mere adventuress whom they intend to use in some plot, the details of which I have not yet learned. But I shall learn," concluded Richards, with determination. "As to yourself, I hope you will believe that I am deeply concerned in your well-being, and if I can find you another position, with more honorable men, I trust you will resign from your present one."

Edna murmured a vague assent. He was so earnest, so sincere, somehow the fervor of his apparently unselfish interest in her touched and influenced her. Then at the door of her home Richards handed her back her handbag and asked permission to call again at the end of the week.

Edna had pleasant dreams that night. She decided to trust to Richards as to changing her position. Just as she was ready to start for the office next morning she made a discovery that annoyed and worried her. She had carried in her handbag with her other belongings, a key to the office door and one to a metal cabinet where Moore & Allen kept their private papers. They were both missing. She had left the house about a square behind when Richards met her.

"I hope I have not made you anxious," he said, "but did you miss your office keys?"

"Why, yes," assented Edna.

"Here they are," said Richards extending the missing articles.

She awaited him expectantly the following Saturday evening. There was a noticeable vivacity in his manner as she greeted him. "I have a strange story to tell you, Miss Denzil,—rather Edna. Now do not become offended, because I hope soon the right to call you that. I took your keys, purposely."

"Oh, Mr. Richards!" cried Edna in a tone of dismay.

"Yes, to visit the office and pry into the private papers of Moore & Allen. I found what I suspected. A wealthy man named Richard Tate had employed them to look up a half niece. They found that she had died years ago but plotted to have Miss Martine assume her identity, benefit by the claim and share her ill-gotten gains with them. When I revealed all this to Mr. Tate he became grateful for our interest in him. He has offered me a position at two thousand a year, and oh, Edna! don't you think that enough to marry on and settle down in a dear little home of our own?"

A NEW KIND OF HOSPITAL.

Toronto to Have Institution to Investigate Mental Cases.

Manitoba is the first province in Canada to have what is known as a psychopathic hospital. But thanks to the efforts of a certain progressive element of the medical profession it looks as if Ontario will rank second in this connection.

This type of hospital is designed to accommodate patients who are suspected of suffering from mental trouble. Here they are observed and studied, and measures are taken which may serve to prevent the further progress of the disease.

As matters now stand in Toronto and elsewhere, a person whose actions are such that he is suspected of being mentally deranged, is sent to some such place as the Haven or the jail. There are no proper facilities in the hospitals for handling such cases, and the unfortunates, who, under more favorable conditions, might have stood a chance of recovery, are subjected to treatment which tends to put them beyond the range of help.

With the establishment of a psychopathic hospital here, a new field would be opened for those engaged in social service work. It is often impossible to judge of a case without some knowledge of the family history and surroundings. These workers could go out and investigate the conditions under which the patient lived before he was admitted to the hospital. They could study his former environment and find out if there was not some cause at home which might have been back of his trouble. Very often a patient, after two or three weeks of detention, could be discharged, but for a time, at least, he would be kept under supervision as an "out-patient." Frequently such people wander from one place to another, and if no record has been kept of their "history," and there happens to be a recurrence of the disease there is no data to guide those who may later have to take up the cases, and much time is wasted.

Captain Speaks for Canada.

James Morley, a captain in the Canadian infantry, writes as follows from Hoboken, N.Y., to the Hudson Observer:

To those opponents to the League of Nations who are constantly bringing to everyone's attention the fact that under Article X of this League the United States will be far less represented than Great Britain in the number of votes, it seems it never occurs that Canada, Australia and India, who all did valiant work in the late war and made terrible sacrifices, much more so than the United States, are entitled to full recognition and representation in the League, and are fully and entirely entitled to one vote apiece, just the same as the United States. The United States by insisting on Great Britain having only one vote would be showing the most gross discourtesy towards their Canadian friends and also toward Australia and India who are just as much entitled to recognition as we are. Let those opponents of Article X look at the matter in a fair and open-minded spirit and place themselves in the position of the above dominions, after which it is probable that a new light will dawn upon their now beclouded brains. Let these agitators, instead of reading William Randolph Hearts' "editorials" in his yellow journal, look up the casualty and war records of the above countries and ponder on the thought as to whether they are really living up to the American idea of "fair play."

More Land for Soldiers.

The Soldier Settlement Board announces that action is being taken to dispose of 75,000 acres of Hudson Bay reserve lands, which have been cancelled by the crown, situated in the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, and 10,400 acres of Doukhobor reserve lands near Kamsack, Sask.

The opening of a further area of 30,000 acres, now held within grazing leases, will be arranged for as soon as their release, now being negotiated for, can be secured.

Within the area being thrown open there are a number of quarter-sections that are specially valuable, some ranging as high as $5,000, because of the quality of the soil and their nearness to populated centres. These lands will be advertised and sold at a reasonable price, and the proceeds applied to a reserve fund for the purpose of offsetting settlement losses, and in aiding returned men physically disabled, but whose condition and circumstances necessitate their being sent on the land. The balance of the area, comprising a considerable proportion of it, will be thrown open about April 30 for soldier grant entry, and assistance will be given in the form of loans for stock and equipment to all whose knowledge of farming will enable them to proceed with the development and operation of their lands.

Gearing Reversed.

I put a new rear axle in our car and wishing to take a ride I threw in the reverse gear to back out of the garage. To my surprise, the car started forward right toward the end wall of the garage. In putting the axle in I had got the driving gear on the wrong side of the drive shaft, so that it reversed the gearing.—Exchange.

WHY ANY CITY NEEDS A BOARD OF TRADE

Director of Reorganization Campaign in Hamilton Writes a Number of Substantial Reasons.

Hamilton, April 17.— "Several questions are being addressed to the management of the reorganization campaign of the Hamilton Board of trade, which reserve special answers,' said Lewis Buddy, director of the campaign. "Obvious as the answer may be, one is this. "Why should Hamilton have a board of trade or a chamber of commerce?" Others are, "What can the reorganized board of trade do?'. Who is going to run the Hamilton board of trade when it is reorganized?' What about the permanency of the Hamilton board of trade when it has been reorganized upon the lines propsed?' And, 'How will the new board be financed?'"

"Let me take up the first question leaving the others to another time. A growing city needs an organization of the type which the board of trade will be when it has been reorganized. It needs it because it will bring men together to do the things that the city should have done.

"This coming together arouses discussion of the multifarious problems of the community; it suggests things to be done tht had not been thought of before; it creates a united force which can always be relied upon to stand behind the individual seeking to have things done, but who cannot get them done alone. Discussion naturally leads to the discovery of the ways and means.

"This is what we mean by the creation of the spirit of enterprise in a city. Once acquired no city will permit this spirit to die.

"Again, a well manned, well planned board of trade, or chamber of commerce furnishes the city with a mechanism for the utilization of the ideas and energy of the whole citizenship. It is hardly necessary to point out the menace of a disorganized factory to the industrial life of the city where it is located. Such a factory is a liability. An unorganized community is a liability to the nation.

"No man lacks a margin of time and strength beyond the daily activities to give to his city. Notwithstanding this fact those who are doing things are constantly hindered by the response of the citizen when asked to perform some service for the common good that he is too busy with his own affairs.

"Such a citizen will soon discover from the accomplishments of a well organized board of trade or chamber of commerce that he does have a margin of time to devote to his community.

"Unselfish service, the step next taken, when men work together every day for the common cause is the best investment a man can make.

"A well organized board of trade or chamber of commerce brings immediate and tangible rewards to a city and its people. It builds up the business of the city and the pride of its inhabitants in it by making it a better place in which to live and work. The cities where working and living conditions are pleasant always grow."

LOCAL WOMEN ASK HEARST PAPERS BE BARRED OUT

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL ALSO PROTESTS AGAINST OBJECTIONABLE POSTERS

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the Local Council of Women was held on April 15th. Reports of Committee were received, also the nominations of the executive of the National Council of Women for the coming year.

The convenor of the committee on objectionable matter and films reported favorably on the children's section of the Public Library. Objectionable posters noted had been passed by Board of Censors, but local authorities are willing to co-operate in eliminating undesirable posters. A new committee under the Board of Censors will deal directly with theatrical posters.

It was decided to forward to the Provincial Government an emphatic protest against the admission of the Hearst publications into Canada, because of their anti-British tone.

A resolution is to be forwarded to the Provincial Committee of the National Council of Women requesting that a committee be appointed to prepare and publish a list of films which can be recommended to the general public.

The executive of the National Council will be invited to hold the fall executive meeting in Peterborough, probably in October.

The president, Mrs. Haratone, gave a brief but comprehensive outline of the proceedings of the National Council executive meeting held in Ottawa in March.

With one or two exceptions the nominations of the executive of the National Council were endorsed.

The Local Council of Women will recommend to the Board of Trade that that body recognize the visit of the Historical Society to the Kawartha Lakes this summer in some fitting manner, the Local Council to co-operate.

DUKE'S FAMOUS RACE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC OCEAN

EFFORTS MADE TO GET GOVERNOR-GENERAL TO ENGLAND IN TIME

The following account of the race of the C.P.O.S. Empress of France from St. John to Liverpool against time, to enable the Governer-General to reach London in order to preside at a banquet given to Sir Auckland Geddes on the night of March 22, is taken from the Liverpool Echo of that date: "The Duke of Devonshire, the Governor-General of Canada, has won a big race — a race against time. His Excellency arrived at Liverpool this morning from Canada in the C.P.O.S. liner Empress of France. The importance of the Duke of reaching England today is explained by a pledge he gave per cable, that he would preside tonight at the dinner to be given to Sir Auckland Geddes, the new British Ambassador at Washington, by the Canada Club, at the Prince's restaurant, Piccadilly, London.

"He was unlucky at the outset of his voyage, which began at St. John N.B. The Empress of France was scheduled to leave that port on Saturday, the 13th. At the time she was ready to sail, however, a terrific gale was in progress. Such was the fury of the storm that it was deemed advisable to delay the start of the voyage for twenty-four hours. Accordingly the liner did not leave the harbor at St. John until Sunday morning, the 14th instant. Thus the Duke began his race under handicap conditions—a full day lopped off the time originally allowed for the Atlantic run.

"Capt. E. Cook, who commands the Empress of France, was consulted by the Duke, and gave a solemn undertaking that if the engines of his steamer could possibly manage it, His Excellency would be in Liverpool by March 22.

"It is probable that never before has such interest been displayed in the steam gauges of this famous C.P.O.S. liner as on this trip. Every pound of steam pressure was extracted that could be coaxed out of the boilers by the most skilful firing of th stokers, who entered into the spirit of the adventure with true British zest. Fortunately, the sea and climatic conditions were eminently favorable, and, driven for all she was worth, the majestic liner ploughed through the ocean with a rare turn of speed and, making the port of Liverpool at an early hour this morning, enable dthe Duke to have the pleasant reflection that he would fulfil his promise to take the chair at the Canada Club dinner in London tonight.

"A dense fog prevailed when the Empress of France 'made' the Mersey soon after midnight. By cautious navigation, Captain Cook crept up the river with his great vessel, and at 6 o'clock this morning was safely riding at anchor in midstream right opposite the Prince's landing stage. The fog was to othick to allow of the liner coming alongside the stage. Therefore, at 7 o'clock a tender went out to her and brought the Duke and his party ashore in time to catch the forenoon train from Lime street station to London.

FLOODS CAUSE DAMAGE IN MICHIGAN TOWN

PROPERTY WORTH $1,500,000 LOST WHEN RIVER OVERFLOWED BANKS

Manistique, Mich, April 17.—More than $1,500,000 property damage was caused here when the Manistique River became a raging current, over ran its banks and buried many main streets beneath from one to four feet of water. The Goodwille factory was completely wiped out, a paper mill was practically destroyed, a lime works, chemical plant and many saw mills badly damaged.

Huge piles of timber to be cut into lumber, pulp wood for paper and other wood for chemicals were swept into Lake Michigan and lost. A dozen houses were ruined whiie twenty more were under water to the second floor for several days thereby ruining household effects. Much merchandise in home and store basements were destroyed. Warm rains and sunshine melted the usual heavy snow in forests north of here caused the first flood thte city has known in fifty years.

EXCLUDES WOMEN IN LOW NECK DRESSES

BUT THIS ACTION IN ARIZONA NOT CALLED FOR IN PETERBOROUGH

A despatch from Phoenix, Aris., dated April 14, says: "The doors of St. Mary's Catholic church here today bore notices saying: 'Entrance into this church is forbidden to women wearing low-necked dresses.' The notices were signed by the rector."

Local ministers are not of the opinion that such desperate measures are necessary in Peterborough despite that fact of the prevalence of such wearing apparel. Rev. J. Price, pastor of St. George's Church, when queried as to the despatch, made the following statement:

"While we deplore the semi-nude attire of some ladies who become offensively conspicuous to the best thinking people yet we would not agree with a notice being placed on the door of our church or of any other church prohibiting such from entering.

HYDRO RADIAL SOON

Indications that it will not be long before the Ontario Hydro Commission commences work on the Toronto & Eastern Radial Railway are not lacking. After a discussion the matter was left over till the next meeting, in order that further information might be had.

SHOT AND KILLED

were holding him down when a policeman arrived, handcuffed the prisoner and took him to the police station.

Meanwhile Dr. Markoe had been carried from the church and placed in an automobile. As he was being lifted into the car he regained consciousness long enough to say, "I will be all right," and then collapsed. He was rushed to the Lying-in Hospital at Eighteenth street and Second avenue, but was dead before being taken into that institution.

Notables Were There.

In the church at the time were George W. Wickersham, former United States Attorney-General; Herbert L. Satterlee, brother-in-law of J. Pierpont Morgan, and Mrs. Satterlee; Sir Fulton Cutting, President of the Bureau of Municipal Research, and many other prominent persons.

Shelley freely admitted that he had shot Dr. Markoe, according to the police. "There are a lot more who are going to get it, too," he is reported to have said when questioned by police detectives.

Search of a suitcase Shelley had checked at the Pennsylvania terminal revealed, the police say, several radical papers and pamphlets. He also had a draft card showing he had registered September 12, 1918, under the name of Thomas W. Simpkin, 203 Fourth street, Sank City, Wis. There were also several business cards reading "Thomas W. Simpkin," and in the lower corner, "representing the Swift County Printing Company," and "Kerkhoven Banner." A letter addressed to him and found in the suitcase, had the address, 5,118 Peabody street, Duluth, Minn. The police believe it was from his wife.

Denies Connection With I.W.W.

Shelley told the detectives he had been given the literature by a man named "Miller," whose first name he could not remember.

"My memory is very bad," he said.

"Are you an I.W.W.?" he was asked.

"No," he replied.

Shelley said one of the things he was certain about was that he had never seen Dr. Markoe before. He told a rambling story of his movements covering the seven years he has been in Canada and the United States.

He said he had been in St. George's Church on a previous visit to New York on February 8, 1919. After arriving here this morning from Richmond, Va., he said he breakfasted and went to the church.

Military Deserter.

Shelley later told the police he brought his wife and two children to Canada seven years ago. He enlisted in the Canadian army and was about to sail overseas, he said, when he asked for a transfer to an organization stationed near his wife's home, but was refused as being "too valuable a man," he said.

"I figure," he explained, "that if I was too good a man for the outfit to lose, I was too good for my wife to lose. I jumped the outfit and entered the United States and later brought my wife and children over."

About two years ago, Shelley added, he escaped from the insane asylum at Gergus Falls, Minn., after three unsuccessful attempts. Six months later he went to Gary, Ind., he said, and there brought a revolver which he has carried ever since, with which he did the shooting.

Pleads Physical Causes.

"They say there is a physical cause for every mental reaction," said Shelley. "I was tubercular and they cured me. Then I got cancer and was operated on for that. So I guess these are the causes.

"The preacher in his sermon at the church," he continued, "told them to be good to strangers, but no one spoke to me, and I resented it."

Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland, rector of St. George's, in part of his sermon, had urged the wealthy congregation to befriend strangers and show Christian courtesy.

In addition to the prominence achieved as physician to the family of J. Pierpont Morgan, Dr. Markoe was noted for his philanthropies to the poor of New York. The Lying-in-Hospital, first established on the lower east side, was the result of his influence, and later he induced the elder Morgan to endow and erect a modern institution. The financier gave $1,000,000 to the charitable project. His son has maintained the hospital. Dr. Markoe was its attending surgeon and consultant head.

Dr. Markoe was physician to the elder Mr. Morgan until his death, and continued to be the family physician. When J. P. Morgan, jun., was shot by Frank Holt, who later committed suicide, Dr. Markoe attended the financier, and a few months afterward the surgeon performed an operation on Mr. Morgan for appendicitis.

MAN KNOWN AS HUMAN FISH

In the time of Frederick, King of Sicily, there lived a diver named Nicholas, who, because of his amazing skill in swimming and the length of time he could remain under water, was surnamed Peace, or the "fish."

Pesce had from infancy been used to the sea and earned his living by diving for coral and oysters. He was frequently known to spend as much as five full days in the water without any other provisions than the fish that he caught there and ate, raw; securing fresh water from the cracks and crannies of the nearby rocks. In fact, so expert did he become that he was appointed a royal messenger and entrusted with letters and packets with which he swam from Sicily to Calabria or among the gulfs of the Lipari islands.

It was Peace's famous ability to combat all the dangers of the deep that finally led to his death. King Frederick had long been curious to konw more of the Gulf of Charybris, inorder to chart the rapid currents of this body of water— currents which, in places, reached the velocity of mill races or miniature whirlpools. Sending for Pesce, the king offered him a golden cup, which was to be thrown into the gulf and to be the property of the diver if he could recover it. Pesce agreed to make the attempt, and after being lost to sight for nearly three-quarters of an hour returned with the cup and an accurate account of the various currents which he had encountered. Wishing to gain still further information, King Frederick offered "the human fish" another and larger golden cup and a purse of gold if he would repeat his exploit further up the coast. But the diver never received his reward, nor was his body ever recovered from the treacherous waters of the whirlpool.

TABLET UNVEILED

The Unveiling.

The grand old Union Jack which veiled the tablet was removed by Lieut.-Col. Clegg, and when the handsome memorial was thus exposed to the expectant congregation, Archdeacon Davidson, in a clear, ringing voice, dedicated it:

"To the glory of God and in proud and loving memory of fallen soldiers of this congregation, we unveil and dedicate this tablet. May it keep in remembrance both those whose names are thereon record and also all others who have given their lives for their country; and may this tablet inspire all who look upon it to deeds and lives of heroism and self-sacrifice. To these ends, we ask upon this memorial the blessing of God the Father, Son and Goly Ghost." Amen.

Lieut.-Col. Jas. Mills here read the honor roll as emblasoned in bronze on the tablet.

Graceful Tribute.

In welcoming the presence of soldiers, veterans, the Mayor and Council and the county judge, Archdeacon Davidson paid a graceful tribute to the late Ald. Phelan, whose death he regretted, and whose public activities he briefly extolled. Appreciating the attendance on this momentous occasion generally, the reverend gentleman urged all to strive to forward the interests of the community of which they are members, and to extend the kingdom of God on this earth. He hoped for a forward movement in closer accord and fellowship the one with the other.

The Sermon.

"This shall beunto you for a memorial" Ex. 12, v. 14), was the text selected by the visiting veteran of the great war, Capt. (Rev.) C. W. Hedley, and from these words he built an acceedingly appropriate and interest-holding sermon. He referred to the custom of erecting memorials to men who have by their deeds helped their day and generation—religiously and secularly—and said that this month of April was rich in occasion for memorial observances, beginning as it did with Good Friday and Easter, when we commemorate our Lord's death and resurrection, these fast and festival days followed as they were this year by the anniversaries of St. Julien (April 19) and Vimy Ridge (April 22), both days, like Good Friday and Easter, of sacrifice and victory. He had no apology for compling these memorials of Canadian heroism with the Christian world's great religious commemorations, for in those great battles of Vimy Ridge and St. Julien—struggles of right against wrong—men made a willing offering of themselves for others, an offering acceptable unto God, and like Christ they won a victory over death.

The speaker here reviewed Canada's proud part in the war on general lines. He told of the horrors of St. Julien, where the first poisonous gas was restorted by the Germans, of the most terrific barrage experienced by the Canadians the world had up to that time ever seen; and of how those Canadians held on, against gas and overwhelming artillery bombardment, without support or protection, held on in spite of terrific odds, barring the way to the channel parts, and thus making Canada world-famous. Not a man, he declared, left his trench without orders and Canadian pluck at St. Julien led up to the splendid victory of April the 15th. "I must take off my hat," the reverend gentleman said, "to those first originals who set a standard of gallantry and heroism for the Canadian army corps, which subsequently sprung into existence.

Vimy Ridge and St. Julien, the speaker continued, wer battles typical more or less of all the engagements in which the Canadians participated, and the stories of which are now so well known. These and other scenes of almost unprecedented heroism he characterized as stupendous victories, not over death alone, but over selfishnes aand craven fear. And don't forget, when you pass this memorial unveiled tonight, to bare your heads and bare your hearts in acknowledgment of the great sacrifice those men made for you, for home, for country and Empire—not only the men whose names are inscribed on this tablet, but sixty thousand brave Canadians in all, the flower of the young manhood of our race.

The speaker here told thrillingly of the happy cheer which dominated all sufferings at the front; and he thanked God for that view such cheerfulness gave of the awe-inspiring beauty of Canada's glorious manhood, for that spirit of unselfish service, unexampled brotherhood and courage which uplifted the commonplace to the heights of heroism.

Touching on the gratuity or cash bonus question, the reverend gentleman, while not actually committing himself, said that many of the men in question had come back incapacitatd to a certain extent; they had returned to find their places filled by men for whom they went overseas to fight, and to find many men grown wealthy and others luxuriating as millionaires as a result of the war. Our soldiers do not find for them, he said, the consideration they have a right to expect, and is it any wonder that to some minds certain outspoken veterans may appear to have dropped to a level of selfishness which is certainly not characteristic of them?

In conclusion, the speaker declared the world is passing through a crisis, in which is dominant the revival of the old-time struggle of class against class, man against man, and he declared that nothing else but the spirit of Christ, which impels those fundamental Christian virtues underlying our faith, and our loyalty to Christ, will save the world today.

FOOTBALL SATURDAY AT EXHIBITION GROUNDS

THREE GAMES CONTESTED DURING THE AFTERNOON — ELECRICIANS WIN

Football held full sway at the exhibition grounds on Saturday afternoon. During the course of the afternoon there were three games in progress. The newly-formed De Laval team tried their mettele against the C.G.E., the Great War Veterans played amongst themselves in preparation for the opening of the season and the Caledonians also played a practice match on their own pitch on the grounds between players picked from the club.

Six-nothing was the score by which the electricians defeated the separator manufacturers, but it cannot be said that this apparently decisive score represents the playing all through the game. During the first half the De Laval, although a trifle slow and awkward, for which the fact that they had not a game this season was responsible, made a fairly good showing and managed to keep the score down to one goal for the C.G.E. From start to finish of the game the play centred fairly close to the De Laval goal and, but for the brilliant saves of that veteran of the football field, Dick Evans, it is quite likely that the score would have been tremendous. Time and again saved what seemed to be a certain goal, and towards the end of the game the C.G.E. forwards were beginning to respect his efforts and endeavoring to score into the corner of the goal at which tactics they were not noticeably successful, Dick showed himself to be able to guard all comers of the goal with equal vigilance.

Brown, De Laval's back, and Bartley, C.G.E.'s forward, provided much amusement for the spectators during the game by their cat and mouse tactics. There seemed to be more real checking by these two players than any other two players on the teams. Brown appeared to be the most promising man on the De Laval team with the exception of the goal keeper.

While the De Laval were slow and lacked combination, it was noticed that the C.G.E. were beginning to get combination playing down pretty fine, and it is prophesied that other teams in the league will have to reckon seriously on the C.G.E. in their hopes for victory.

In the second half Manders was placed in the forward line of the C. G. E. team and the aclaim with which he was received by the supporters of the team heralded him as the favorite. In the subsequent playing, he appeared to merit this position and much of the scoring in this half was due to his efforts.

All the C.G.E. wings seemed to be far superior to their opponents, but it must be remembered that they have played together in several games already this season and should be getting fairly well into condition.

The line-ups were:

C.G.E.—Goal, Naples; backs, Gash and McDonald; half-backs, Parkins, Turner and Mason; forwards, Bartley, Williamson, Hotston, Hartshorn and Manders.

De Laval—Goal, Evans; backs, Hillwood and Styles; half-backs, Watkins, Jones and Brown; forwards, Nicholls, Humpage, Goodman, Hartshorn and Akers.

J. Clark refereed.

Some fine form was shown by the War Veterans' team in a closely fought game in which the A team won from the B team by a score of two to one. As a result of this game it is likely that the A team with a few alterations will be the team that will meet the Caledonians on Saturday, and if the Caledonians are anticipating an easy victory they had better rid themselves of that notion without delay, for the Vets on Saturday proved themselves to be first-class football players.

Perhaps the greatest surprise of the day was the wonderful playing in goal of the genial secretary of the G. W. V. A., Sidney Whatley. Whatley certainly was the dark horse and showed far better form than was ever expected. It is practically certain that although he appeared on the line-up of the B tam on Saturday he will be playing in goal for the Vets' team this season and will be a tower of strength to the team. Another star was McKinley, who showed some fast and brilliant work, and generally speaking, the combination playing of the A team was beyond reproach. As soon as they have been able to have a few workouts together they will have to be seriously reckoned with by other contestants in the league.

Norman and McKinley scored the goals for the A team, and Jones secured the counter for the B team.

The players lined up for this game were:

B Team — Whatley, Hawthorne, Saddler, Murphy, Mallinson, Martin, Evans, Lowe, Jones, Grant, Piggot.

The Caledonian football club struck luck in the arrival from the Old Country last week of a party of Scotchmen. Among the number were several first class football players who even brought their football boots along with them and in the practice on Saturday it was easily seen that they will be a welcome addition to the team. Some fine football was played on Saturday and it is the general opinion of football fans that the Caledonians are the most promising team for the championship although they may meet stiff opposition from the C. G. E. and the Canadian Woollens as to the composition of the Canadian Woollens team and the concensus of opinion is that although their forwards appear to be a trifle light in comparison to the other teams thtey have a remarkably good line-up and will go a long way in the league.

GRASS FIRES

The Fire Department was called out twice on Saturday afternoon to put out grass fires which are getting to be prevalent lately. The first shortly after one o'cloc was near the Oval, north of Smith street, and the second was along the Board Walk on Bonacord street. Both were extinguished without damage to the surrounding property.

PETERBOROUGH CITY FOOTBALL LEAGUE

SEASON OPENS SATURDAY NEXT ON THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS

The City Football League will open the season on Saturday next at the exhibition grounds when the C. G. E. will meet the Canadian Woollens and the Caledonians will play the Great War Veterans. The remainder of the schedule is already drawn up and awaits the approval of the Exhibition Board. It is likely that this approval will be given today.

There will be a meeting of the football executive at Sutcliffe's barber shop on Charlotte street tonight to meet the referees and to complete the arrangements for the opening of the season. It is the intention to "kick off" with quite a splash, but just what form this will take has not yet been decided. The schedule as drawn up at the present calls for 30 games and will carry the season through to July when it is thought the weather will be too hot to continue. Saturday's games will both be called at 2.30 p.m.

WILL LINDSAY TOWN LEAGUE BE THE O.B.A.A.?

(Lindsay Warder.)

As yet the Lindsay Town League has not been organized, but if the town wishes representation in the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association, it is high time to organise as the annual meeting of the O.B.A.A. takes place on Saturday next.

There has been some talk of Lindsay organising a junior or intermediate town league and joining the O.B.A.A., thus allowing the winners of the league to play off with the juniors or intermediates from Whitby, or Toronto.

The O. B. A. A. meeting, says a report, will be a very representative one. The east will send delegates from the Central Ontario League, the Peterboro and Lindsay town leagues. With them they will bring three new members, viz., the Trent Valley, Bay of Quinte and the Whitby Leagues. In the west the old members, including Inter-County and the Brantford, Guelph and Woodstock town leagues, for have for company the proposed Haldimand county league being organized by Cecil Shaw, the former Hamilton city league catcher; the Highway League, composed of Oakville, Bronte, Lorne Park, Port Credit and Cookaville; also the North Wellington League, and possibly the Owen Sound town league. In the north Collingwood, Barrie, Orillia and Midland are organising a strong league and are anxious for affiliation. The Big Four, with Beaverton, Sunderland, Uxbridge and Stouffville will be among the applicants for membership. The Niagara district have yet to be heard from, but will doubtless fall in line. The Hamilton and Toronto associations will have their usual strong delegations on hand and the convention is bound to be a lively one.

Y.W.C.A. WHATS DOING THIS WEEK

The event of the week for those interested in the Young Women's Christian Association will be the gymnasium exhibition on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening at the Y.M.C.A. There will be apparatus work, wand and dumbell drills, character and folk dancing and other attractions. Those who have attended the exhibitions of both of these institutions in the past know what good work will be done this year. Swimming classes will continue as usual. These are getting larger all the time, and it is expected that many more girls will come with the fine weather.

The following clubs will meet this week:

Tuesday—6:00. Athena Club, 8:00, Good Cheer Club

Wednesday — 7:00, Jolly Juniors Club.

Thursday — 8:00, Merry Maids' Club; T.M.T.M. Club.

Saturday—2:00. Ever Bright and Sunshine Clubs; 2:30. Hike. Jolly Juniors.

ANNUAL CHURCH PARADE OF G.W.V. A. TO PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH

Rev. Dougald Brown Preached What May be His Last Sermon to Local Survivors of Great War—An Appropriate Discourse on the Effect of Sin.

The annual church parade of the Peterborough Branch, Great War Veterans Association took place yesterday morning to Park street Baptist church. On account of the state of unpreparedness due to the recent re organization of the Canadian Militia the Peterborough Rangers and the Machine Gun Company were unable to attend the parade this year. The turnout was therefore not quite as large as was expected. Glorious weather prevailed for the occasion, which was fortunate as the march yesterday was considerably longer than last year.

The veterans gathered at the hall in mufti at 10.30 a.m. and, headed by the band, also in mufti, proceeded along George street to Charlotte, along Charlotte to Rubidge, down Rubidge south to the point where it joins Park street and along Park street to the church. The only variation in the route on the return journey was that the parade headed up Aylmer street to the Veterans' Hall instead of George street. Owing to the fine weather there were a large number of spectators on the line of march and the people living in the houses of the streets on the route, crowded to the windows and out on the verandahs to see them go by. Playing the same old marching songs played by many a battalion it reminded one of the days when these same boys were marching away on a more serious mission.

Hearty Welcome

Rev. Dougald Brown, in the course of his sermon welcomed the veterans to Park street church to worship. He hoped that it would be a place of comfort to them and the service of great blessing. At the commencement he mentioned that he had been what they would call physically unfit all week. However he was extremely glad of what might might be his last opportunity to preach a sermon to the War Veterans. It was not his purpose to preach about the war. He had come to the conclusion that they had seen and heard enough about that matter themselves, but he was going to talk to them as men. They had proved themselves to be men, and they would again prove themselves to be so.

They must realize that sin writes indelibly on the life and character of man. It did more than that. It brought down upon them the wrath of God. We read in the scriptures how the sinful were consigned to the sparce parts of the earth and in contrast how the faithful had received the fruits of the earth. Man gradually got away from God. If they kept close to God they would flourish. They must remember that God was the refuge and strength of all. David had said "Before the mountains were Thou are God."

It was one thing wherein God had created, but it was another thing wherein Christ had saved. There was but there were many who were not none today whom God had not created saved. There never was a time when man could not find refuge in God. There they would find refuge from sin and death for those who trusted in Him. He was the Eternal Refuge the Rock of Ages, the omnipotent power whose arms were strong and long enough to lift us and embrace us. He stretched forth to save them. He could and would save all who came to glorify Him. Mr. Brown compared Christ to the Ark of the old testament. None had died there, and ther had been provision for all and today the same could be said of Christ. The great Battle of Christianity was fought on Calvary and the great victory was won on the day of the Resurrection.

Christ drew us to Him with the cords of His love. Man needed His refuge and security.

In conclusion he appealed to them to serve Jesus, in whose friendship they would find security.

CITY HAS RIGHT TO WILSON'S LAND

RAILWAY BOARD GIVES MUNICIPALITY EXPROPRIATION ORDER FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL

Last Friday the city of Peterborough made an application to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board in Toronto for an order giving directions as to how the city should proceed with the erection of its sewage disposal plant and permitting the city to enter upon the land of A. R. Wilson in order to finally complete the plant.

The Board made an order as asked for by the city, and the city now has the right to enter upon the land owned by Wilson and to do whatever the desire in order to dig test pits and to otherwise complete their plans and specifications. While the Board has jurisdiction to fix the compensation for any injury to the lands of any resident, this question was left open and will be taken up at a later date.

C. R. Widdifield, Esq., appeared in the interests of the city; F. D. Kerr, Esq., for the various townships, and J. F. Strickland for certain residents in that neighborhood.

MRS. DOOLEY'S ADVICE TO WORKING GIRLS

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. PRESENTATION TO BISHOP O'BRIEN

ST. PETER'S SCHOOL CHILDREN HONOR HIS LORDSHIP ON EVE OF DEPARTURE

A very enjoyable morning was spent at St. Peter's School on Friday last, when the pupils took the opportunity of thanking His Lordship Bishop O'Brien for his deep interest, in them and their school and bade him God-speed on his journey to Europe. The Bishop was then given a handsome sum of money donated by the school, to be presented to the Pope on His Lordship's visit to Rome. The Bishop fittingly replied to this testimonial of good-will and thanked the pupils for the sentiments expressed by them in an address read by Charles Begley. Several songs were then rendered by the children in an admirable manner, two noticeable features of the program being a vocal solo creditably, given by Dorothy Garden, and an appropriate boys quartette by H. Rudkins, E. Welsh, V. O'Brien and R. McCabe. The Bishop made special mention of these last two pieces, saying that he was considerably surprised at the real talent displayed. Miss Mary MacPherson presented the purse which amount to $122.45.

AMERICANS LOVE GREAT AND SIMPLE THINGS SAYS EDGAR LEWIS

Edgar Lewis, the man whose superb production of such pictures as "The Light at Dusk," "The Great Divide," "The Barrier," "The Sign Invisible," and many others, entitles him to a place among America's greatest directors, is speaking:

"Americans are a heterogeneous mass of humanity whose ancestors came from the four corners of the earth. They love great and simple things, such as nature and children. I like to think Americans have inherited only the best qualities of their foreign forebears. If any of them have not, let them go forth into the big saces to seek a cure for their sick souls. These United States are just one hundred and forty-three years old. There is in them strength incalculable for hundreds of years to come which will produce the brain and brawn to make the nation the mightiest of the earth."

Mr. Lewis' newest production is "Other Men's Shoes." It was written by the famous war correspondent, Andrew Soutar, and contains the same idea which has signalized Mr. Lewis' past achievements—that of a red-blooded people in potent situations where those who are right are the mighty.

"Other Men's Shoes" is announced as the feature attraction at the Grand Theatre Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. This is the first time an Edgar Lewis picture has been released by Pathe. Craufurd Kent, popular leading man, portrays a necessarily dual role, for the story revolves about twin brothers. The cast includes Bobby Connelly, Harold Forshay, Irene Boyle, Jean Armour, John P. Wade and Phil Sanford.

NEWEST EDGAR LEWIS FILM A POTENT DRAMA OF TWIN BROTHERS

The long awaited Edgar Lewis production "Other Men's Shoes," is announced for showing at the Grand Theatre tonight, Tuesday and Wednesday. This is the first Edgar Lewis picture distributed under the Pathe banner.

Edgar Lewis' production of such features as "The Great Divide," "The Barrier," "The Bondman," "The Plunderer," "The Nigger," "The Light at Dusk," "The Bar Sinister," "The Sign Invisible" and many others, has won for him the reputation of the greatest director of outdoor stories. The themes of his stories are always clean and wholesome, yet vigorous and potent and abounding in dramatic situations.

"Other Men's Shoes" is no exception to Mr. Lewis' rule of good photo play entertainment. Andrew Soutar is the author of the story which is skilfully woven around twin brothers who are so alike in face, figure and voice, that one can take the place of the other without detection by his most intimate friends.

Craufurd Kent was chosen by Mr. Lewis as the ideal type to portray the dual role, and others in the cast are Irene Boyle, Jean Armour, Harold Forshay, John P. Wade, Phil Sanford, Stephen Gratton and young Bobby Connelly.

Train to Run From Winnipeg to Guatemala.

Within the next six months it will be possible to travel by rail all the way from Winnipeg to Guatemala City. After several years' delay construction of a railroad bridge across the Suachi river, which marks the boundary between Mexico and Guatemala, has been started, and it is expected that it will be finished by June 15. This bridge will afford a connecting link between the Pan-American Railroad and the International Railways of Central America.

More than ten years ago the Pan-American Railroad was completed to Ayutla, on the Guatemalan border. The extension of the Guatemala Central, now a part of the International Railways of Guatemala, was constructed from Champerico to a point on the Suachi river, just opposite Ayutla. This road passes through the heart of the coffee-growing regions of Guatemala. It connects at San Jose with the main line of railroad that runs to Port Barrios, traversing the country from north to south.

The Pan-American Railroad runs from San Geronimo, on the National Tehuantepec Railroad, to Ayutla. This line was constructed by American interests during the latter years of the administration of the late President Porfirio Diaz. It was sold by the original owners to David E. Thompson, former American Ambassador to Mexico, and associates, and they in turn disposed of it to the Mexican Government for $11,000,000. During the long revolutionary period the line has deteriorated physically to such an extent that much of it will have to be rebuilt.

This condition is also true of the National Tehuantepec Railroad, which spans the Isthmus of that name, running from Salina Cruz to Puerto Mexico. Connecting the National Tehuantepec with the Mexican (Vera Cruz) Railroad and the Interoceanic Railway is the Vera Cruz to Pacific line, which is also in such bad shape physically as to be hardly passable.

In the days of peace, immediately preceding the beginning of the revolutionary period, plans were well advanced for establishing a through passenger train service between points in the United States and Guatemala City. These through trains were to have been put on as soon as the bridge across the Suachi river was built. It was expected that the all-rail route would be largely patronized by American winter tourists.

When the Pan-American Railroad was conceived and built it was planned by its promoters to extend it through Guatemala, Salvador, Honduras, Nicaragua and Costa Rica to the Isthmus of Panama. Inability to obtain concessions for the proposed aid from the Governments of some of these Central American countries [illegible] the project.

LOOK TO SARDINIA FOR CORK

World Turning to That Island for Production of Material So Much in Demand.

Cork has probably passed olive oil as the leading export of Sardinia, and Commercial Attache A. P. Dennis states that recent production has been so stimulated that a large factory at Tempio is quadrupling its capacity. The bark is stripped from the tree once in nine years. At the Tempio factory the dried bark is first thoroughly steamed and flattened out by hydraulic pressure; it then remains in piles about 20 days, when it is taken out covered with blue mold, and is carefully scraped on both sides and cut into widths varying according to the lengths of the cork stoppers desired. The strips are cut by hand into cubes, a process requiring highly skilled labor, with much care in picking out defective pieces. The corks have been rounded and tapered by high-speed cutting machines, but a new abrasive process is claimed to reduce the waste of this finishing from 20 to 30 per cent. Before the war the fine dust sold in Germany for unknown use for about $30 a ton. At Terranova the cork is differently utilized, the best being baled in sheets for shipment, while the inferior is coarsely ground and used with a magnesium surface for walls and floor coverings. The war demand was for cork trench mattresses, which were both light and afforded protection from cold and moisture.

Hearts of Gold

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

Eleanor Boyce trod the shady footpaths of the park with eyes cast down and a heavy heart. She evaded the gay groups, for her spirits were not in accord with festivity or companionship. She came to where they had been filling in refuse and rubbish. Dismal and grewsome as was the spot, at least there she could be alone and think out the problem of her sorry existence.

For over a month she had been out of work, and but for the kind heartedness of her landlady she would have been without a roof to shelter her. It was a poor place at the best, but there were other struggling beings like herself. She was thinking just now of one of these unfortunates, a young man named Dexter Brill. In his more flourishing days he had been courteous and considerate to her, had invited her to the theater once or twice, was a player of the violin and an excellent singer, and acquaintance with him had been a pleasure to Eleanor.

For a week he had been ailing and Mrs. Booth and Eleanor had been faithful nurses and friends. Eleanor had exhausted her last dollar in the purchase of fruits and ice. Brill had laughed at the anxieties of those two. "I'll be all right in a few days," he told them, but for two days past a sort of lethargy had come over him and Mrs. Booth had said to Eleanor: "Mr. Brill is a sick man, dearie, and I'm afraid we will have to send him to the hospital. He has no money and I am way behind in my rent, and oh! the poor good souls that a little help in time of need would help along!" and Eleanor went out trying to get a position at any price and failed. Then this gloomy isolation at the edge of the park.

She noted a frayed edge of the wrap she wore, the broken shoe, and poked at the dirt about it aimlessly with the point of her umbrella. She never took off its case for fear the tattered fabric would fall to pieces. As she prodded she abruptly leaned forward—a bright glint caught her eye. She poked anew and drew a great long breath as a tiny but gorgeous lady's watch came into view.

With eager, trembling hands Eleanor brushed the dirt from the dainty bit of jewelry. The case was encrusted with diamonds.

"It must be worth—" and Eleanor figured out an extravagant value. Then her face fell. "But it is not mine," she whispered to herself. She arose with some precipitancy, looking excitedly all about her, holding tightly to the priceless bundle with her hand in her dress pocket.

"Oh, dearie! Mr. Brill has had a very bad spell," greeted her as she reached home. "We must either send him away or get a doctor."

"I will attend to that at once," said Eleanor. Her lips compressed and her statuesque face showed like a mask of stern justice. Regaining the street Eleanor entered the first pawn shop she came to.

"I wish to borrow twenty dollars till I earn some money," she said.

"I would buy the watch for a much larger price," hinted the pawnbroker, an avaricious gleam in his selfish eyes. "It is a beauty, yes, and worth so much as many hundred dollars."

"No, I do not wish to sell," said Eleanor, and on her way back home left word for a doctor.

It seemed as though brighter skies and new inspiring hopes were to be awarded by fate all around after that. Within a week Dexter Brill was up and well and on his feet in a business way. Eleanor had secured work. At the end of the month she visited the pawnshop.

"I wish to pay ten dollars on the watch," she said, contemplating its full redemption later and meantime advertising for an owner.

The pawnbroker made an ado about detaining her. He went to a rear room and telephoned. As Eleanor was about to leave a man came in from the street.

"You will excuse me, miss," he said, "but I am from the police department of justice, and it is necessary for me to question you. How came you by that watch?"

Eleanor was flustered somewhat, but she narrated a clean, convincing story. Could she lead the detective to the spot where she had found it? "Oh, surely!" and in the rubbish heap the officer probed until he brought to light a dozen similar pieces of valuable jewelry.

He explained to Eleanor how the jewelry had belonged to a wealthy society woman. The receptacle holding them, a silk bag, had disappeared, supposedly stolen by some servant. Now it appeared that in some manner the bag had found its way into the family dust heap and thence to the park area.

Mrs. Randolph Drexel was a liberal-minded lady. She insisted upon seeing Eleanor, further upon the bestowal of a generous money reward. And that became the nest egg of a fund later employed in the purchase of a wedding trousseau, for when the landlady recited to Dexter Brill the story of Eleanor's unfailing interest in him when he was ill, his pent up love burst all bounds in full confession.

A railway extending from Edmonton to the northwest, is built into the Peace River country, and a branch reaches south to Grand Prairie.

GUN COTTON BASIS OF SILK

French Inventor, After Long Study, Has Evolved a Truly Wonderful Artificial Product.

According to Count Hilaire, inventor of artificial silk, which is now produced by vast factories in Switzerland, Belgium, France, England and the United States, it has for its basis nothing less than gun cotton. One of the greatest problems he had to solve in perfecting it for everyday use was to render it nonexplosive.

The gun cotton under the Chardonnet process is first dissolved in a mixture of alcohol and ether and then spun through fine capillary tubes by means of hydraulic presses.

Other chemical processes give it incombustible and nonexplosive qualities, together with the consistency and the transparency of the finest silk from Japan or China.

It took just 30 years of the 80 which Count Hilaire has completed to perfect his discovery and render it of actual and practical commercial value.

The illustrious chemist and scientist has just been elected to the supreme honor of membership in the French Academy of Sciences for his discovery of how to put one over on the silkworms. During the war he had been decorated by the French minister of war with the Cross of a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor for discoveries relative to the manufacture of high explosives growing out of his researches made primarily to render artificial silk stockings nonexplosive.

MOTOR CARS ON STAGE LINE

Old Four-in Hand Vehicles on Nevada Roadways Succumb to March of Improvement

Stage lines in Nevada have abandoned the time-honoured four-in-hand of horses in favor of high-powered motor busses.

Daily, with clocklike precision, these big cars pound along the 100 miles of sun bitten alkali roadway carrying passengers and mail. In much less time and far greater comfort the ranchers and business men of today speed over the same roads where once rattled the four-in-hand stage, slow, jolty and not at all certain of reaching its destination.

The cost of transportation by motor bus compares favorably with operating expenses of the horse stage. The proprietors of the lines are thorough business men and can tell to the penny the gasoline mileage of every car, the oil consumption and just how much service is obtained from tires.—San Francisco Bulletin.

Land Reclamation Scheme.

The British board of agriculture has inaugurated a scheme for the reclamation of land on the Lincolnshire shore of the Wash. A bank is being constructed from Wainfleet, a little below Skegness, to Freiston, near Boston (Lincolnshire), commencing at the Wainfleet end, and by this means it is hoped to recover about 12,000 acres. The work is in charge of a resident engineer in Wainfleet and will employ a large number of men, who will be selected from demobilized soldiers and sailors, and thus obviate the taking away of labor from agriculture. It is said that in the middle of the last century a reclamation scheme was started, and it was then estimated that a sufficiently large area would be reclaimed from the Wash to form a new English county. The enterprise was abandoned, but experts have always maintained its practicability, which is now in the course of being tested.

MUSICAL EXTRAVAGANZA

A gay musical extravaganza is "Fi-Fi of the Toy Shop," it is said, for it is the kind of play that will take everyone back to his childhood days, and yet it has, too, really clever lines, with amusing situations. The little people, such of them as are allowed to sit up for the performance, will find it the most delightful treat they ever had, and will have the greatest fun over the antics of the jumping jacks, the clowns, the Noah's Ark animals, and all the rest of the toys which are brought to life by the magic wand of the fairy. Gay groups of Peterborough's most attractive people will play an important part in the chorus of the production, while the cast is to be made up of clever amateur performers. Miss Helen McLaren will have the title role in the production, that of the Parisian doll, and her lovely voice, her charming stage presence and youthful grace and vivacity will lend themselves to a most delightful interpretation. Miss Hazel Davidson, too, has a most important role as Bonnie, the toymaker's daughter, and a better selection for the part could hardly have been made. Miss Mabel Patterson is to be Loosey, a rag doll, and Miss Gene Herbison will play Ink Spot, the Topsy role of the piece. Miss Daisy Stocker is certain to make a very lovely fairy queen. Miss Greta LeBarr is to be Bo-Peep. Miss Lenore Tyler will play the picturesque Japanese doll, while Miss Helen Bulmer is to be the talking doll, and Miss Elizabeth McDonald has been assigned the role of Puddin' Head and Miss Mamie Cottingham will have an important role as the witch. The masculine roles are also in capable hands. Mr. Robt. Langford is to be the Man in the Moon, an interpretation which he may be relied upon to make a telling one. Mr. Norman Laing and Mr. Harold Snelgrove will play the parts of Lieutenant Tinheart and Prince Lollypop, rival suitors for the hand of Fi-Fi, and Mr. Walter Fitzgerald is to be Capt. Barnacle, the toy sailor, while Fraser Skinner is to be one of the clowns.

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

PROVINCIAL LEAGUE ISSUES HIGHWAY MAP

After long preparation the Ontario Motor League has compiled and published a new road map.

The ordinary map shows a maze of railways, county, township and concession lines, post-offices, canals, rivers, streams and even creeks, but never a road. Such a map is worthless to the motor tourist. The experiment of adding roads are shown without distinction is useless as a guide to motorists and is apt to be misleading. Similar remarks apply to the map which gives improved roads no more prominence than those marked out for future betterment.

The Ontario Motor League's map, just off the press and entitled "Province of Ontario and International Main Travelled Routes," shows in clearcut, accurate outline the best roads to follow on a tour of Ontario, Western Quebec, New York State, and Eastern Michigan with extensions into the States of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Vermont. It also gives the location of all the cities, principal towns and villages, lakes, rivers and summer resorts in this area of over 200,000 square miles.

This network of fine roads as shown in the map, stretching to the international boundary and beyond, is an incentive to touring, especially in view of the fact that the car license plates do not need to be changed in passing from one country to the other.

Of great value, too, is the supplementary information given. On the reverse of the map are printed a number of city plans, speedometer readings for 6,000 miles of important routes, a list of ferries, local and international, and full information regarding customs and license regulations to be observed by motorists in crossing the border between Canada and the United States.

The full size of the map is 38 inches by 24 inches. Folder for pocket use it measures 9 1-2 inches by 4 inches. There is a charge for this map.

OBITUARY

ROBERT ARCHIBALD MORROW.

Yet another prominent and lifelong resident of Peterborough passed away yesterday morning in the person of Robert Archibald Morrow. Mr. Morrow had been ill with influenza for the past three weeks, and, although his condition had been critical for the past week, it was not realised until Sunday morning that the end was so near.

The deceased was born in Peterborough of Irish parents on July 16, 1843, and for the whole of his lifetime had resided in the city. He was an Anglican in religion and had been associated with St. John's Church for many years. He was most prominent among the Masonic fraternity of the city, being a member of Corinthian Lodge of Masons and Corinthian Lodge of Royal Arch Masons.

Mr. Morrow at one time took an in civic affairs and was on several different occasions a member of the town council. At the time the city took over the waterworks he was president of that company, and in many other ways had been interested in the affairs of the community. His favorite pastime was hunting, for which sport during his whole lifetime he had shown a great fondness. The Agricultural Society also found a warm spot in his heart, and on many occasions he gave financial proof of his support.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, H. A., at home, and R. A., Jr., of New Mexico, U.S.A. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock from his late residence on the Monaghan road to Little Lake Cemetery. The officiating minister has not yet been decided.

MRS. PATRICK COURSY.

The death took place on Saturday night after a long illness of Mrs. Patrick Conray in her 32nd year. The late Mrs. Coursy had been a resident of the city for many years and a faithful member of the congregation of the Sacred Heart Church and was well known and highly respected by the pashioners.

She is survived by her husband and eight children: May, of Toronto; Burrill, Loraine, Margaret, Patrick, James, William and Jane Rosana, aged four months, all at home. The funeral will take place from the family residence, 565 Romaine street, tomorrow morning at nine o'clock, to the Sacred Heart Church and thence for interment to St. Peter's Cemetery.

A STRIKING FEATURE

One of the most striking features of the parade at the Motor Show last week was the exhibit of the Y.W.C.A. girls. About 30 girls took part in the parade and there was a symbol to represent each of the various activities of the organization. Two girls dressed in white middy suits led the procession, carrying a blue triangle, others carring banners representing the different clubs, such as Intellectual and Folk Classes, Religious and Bible Study, Physical, Hikes and Sports, Social, Parties and Picnics, and the gymnasium girls gave a unique exhibit. Six girls, dressed as Japanese, Chinese and Hindoos, carried a banner bearing the words, "Will You Share Your Y.W.C.A. With Us; China, India and Japan Need Your Help." Then the Campers' League was fittingly represented, and last, but not least, the swimming pool, which was drawn by 4 life-savers.

REV. R. POGUE OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH PREACHES ON "COMING SOCIAL ORDER"

Declares the Bible Has a Theory of the Universe, of Man's Origin, and of His Destiny on This Planet,

The pastor of St. Paul's Church preached the first of a series of sermons sabbath evening on "God's Purpose for the Race." He based his remarks on two texts. The first was John 1, 3:8 "the Son of God was manifested to destroy the works of the devil." The second was Corinthians I, 15:25, "He must reign until He has put all enemies under His feet."

He began by asking a number of questions. Did God have a purpose when He created the world? What was his thought for man as it related to the different departments of his nature-physical, intellectual, spiritual and social? Under what conditions did He intend His to live His life?

Then: Was God's purpose for the race in any way frustrated? And if so, in what way did God undertake to meet the new situation created by man's failure to live according to the Divine program? Having regard to the complex nature of man, how does God intend him to live his life as an individual, and as a member of Society? What is the ideal social order? Which of the many, if any, of the different forms of government which men have tried is to be the final and perfect one? Shall we ever have a perfect social order? Will there ever be a time when there shall be no sickness, no hatred, no grinding poverty, no tyranny of the strong over the weak, or of the rich over the poor? Will the time ever come when nothing shall hurt or destroy in all the earth?

The only authoritative source of information on all these questions is the revelation God has given us in His word. If the light here fails, there is no light from any other source. Some think they can discover in the trend of human history the probable destiny of the race. Others think they can find it in the Spencerian System of Philosophy which undertakes to tell us how everything come into existence, animate and inanimate, and how everything has developed from the simplest forms of life until the perfection of man was reached. The Bible has a theory of the universe and of man's origin, and his destiny on this planet all its own. It alone can give us true information on social conditions as they exist in the world today, concerning the origin of the human family, or what is to be the end toward which the world movements are hastening.

Mr. Pogue then stated that in this first sermon he would give special attention to man's condition as he came from the hand of his Creator, to the fall, and to the results of the fall as it affected man's social well being. The Bible makes it clear that man was created, not evolved; that he was created in the image of God; that he was placed in a perfect environment, and that abundant provision was made for his social, his physical and also his spiritual nature. Life in the garden of Eden was the golden age for our first parents. Then came the great change through their fall.

The Bible lays the blame on the great enemy of the race—Satan. It is impossible to understand history, to understand those great social upheavals which take place from time to time, to understand the atrocities of Belgium the massacres in Armenia the ruthless war of extermination of the ruling classes in Russia without taking account of what the Bible says about Satan.

How did Satan bring about the fall with all its consequent misery to the human race? He did by posing as a social reformer. A social reformer is one who tries to bring about better human conditions. That was what Satan promised our first parents. He told them they were living a narrow and circumscribed life. He promised them self-improvement through the pursuit and acquisiton of knowledge. "Ye shall be as Gods," he said, knowing good and evil." And when they yielded, accepting Satan's program for their lives instead of God's they entered upon the stupendous experiment of devising a world system according to Satanic principles." In the principle which they accepted for the government of their lives in their individual and social relationships we have the form from which al human history, with its cries and tears, its "oceans of blood and mysery," has unfolded. That is the principle upon which the world has been governed ever since. It is the principle on which the whole world system rests today.

What place as the world system in it for Jesus Christ. At his birth it had no place for Him but a manger, in His life it gave Him no place to lay His head, and in His death he had nothing but a cross. Between Him and the world system, there was nothing in common. When the time arrived for Him to say: "This is your hour and the power of darkness," the leaders and representatives of the world's culture, the world's intelligence, the world's progress, the world's power and the world's religion led Him with expressive ceremony outside the camp and nailed Him to a tree.

That is what the world system did to God's Son and Representative who came to earth to usher in the golden age and establish His kingdom. It had no room for Him then it has no room for Him today. Nowhere in His voice the deciding factor in the counsels of the nations. It was not the deciding factor in 1914 when the world was plunged into the most awful and most desolating war in all history. It was not the deciding factor when the victorious nations gathered round the peace table to divide the spoils. Nor is it the voice to which the statement of the world are bowing in lowly submission. The World has accepted its own program, and it has rejected God's, and it has acepted its trying to create a social order in which there is no room for God, and where no voice is heard save the voice of human reason and human wisdom.

And we shall not have a perfect world, a perfect social order until the world realizes its mistake, in substituting the human for the Divine and accepts its long regretted King and Ruler. This is man's day, not God's. "This is your hour and the power of darkness," said Jesus. "The days will come" he said, "when ye shall desire to see one of the days of the Son of Man and ye shall not see it." Ever since the multitudes cried out: "Away with Him crucify Him, crucify Him." they have desired to se one day of the Son of Man They have wished for it again and again during the long night of Satan's reign. The desire has not long to wait. As surely as we have had man's day, so surely shall we have Christ's day. As surely as we have had Satan's leadership and the very best world that man could fashion upon his principles, so surely shall we have the leadership of Jesus Christ, and a world arranged and governed upon His principles. In view of all this—the certainty and the hope of it—let us heed the exhortation of James: "be patient therefore brethren, unto the coming of the Lord."

SERVICES AT GEORGE STREET CHURCH

The services at George Street Methodist Church yesterday were well attended. The pastor preached at both services, making vigorous appeals for better Christian living.

At the evening service, he took as his theme. "The eye that is Evil,' selecting his text from Matthew VI 22-23. "The light of the body is the eye; if therefore this eye be single thy whole body shall be full of light But if thy eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness."

This chapter shows the attitude of Christ to the world, to emphasize which, he said: "Lay not up to yourselves, treasures on earth where moth and rust doth corrupt. and where thieves break through and steal; but lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven." The same spirit of worldliness existed as today, though not on such a big scale, and Jesus sought to contract it. He saw many people laying up treasures on earth, their ideas of values being awry. He saw the best for riches, spoiling the brotherhood of God's children. He saw the beginning of the spiritual life being crowded out

This spirit was among both rich and poor; and his words were spoken to the poor peasants of Galilee. Here he tried to reconstruct their idea of values.

A Timely Warning

The warning of Jesus is timely today. Property, pleasure and power are monopolizing the time of very many to a greater extent than ever, since the great world struggle. Jesus does not want us to look with scorn on the world. He did not condemn a man because he was rich, but because he did not put his riches in right relationship to God. Jesus said there was one high purpose and everything else must be subordinated. That was to (1) lay up treasure in Heaven and (2) seek first the kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you. In other words, it should be our supreme endeavor to keep our lives in harmony with the supreme will. Our lives should show a due sense of proportion and wealth, for example, should not be allowed to compete with character for the throne in our lives.

Light comes thorugh the eyes. If both are focused, one sees single. If they do not, one sees double and everything is obscured and blurred That is the meaning of the single eye and the evil eye.

God or Mammon

"Jesus showed," said Mr. Thomas, "that we cannot serve two ideals, self and Jesus at the same time. If we did so, it would be as though we saw double. We can serve God with mammon or mammon with God-given powers, but never both.

Jesus might have advanced many arguments for this, but emphasized but one—that of the security and permanency of heavenly treasure and the transiency of earthly possessions. If we have laid up treasure in heaven and we lose our earthly wealth, we have a satisfaction which cannot be destroyed. There are no pockets in our shrouds, and we can only take our character into the next world.

Warning to Yuoth

The warning of Jesus should be heeded especially by youth. Youth is standing on the threshold of life. The world is clamoring for the devotion of youth, offering money, power and wealth—the constant temptation to worldliness, and it is important that there should be a true conception of values. Nothing but a high, holy ideal can save from disaster.

In choosing a career, settle on an honourable occupation. Law, medicine etc., should not be chosen for their material dividends but to be carried and to the glory of God.

Nothing in the world compares with the value of a soul. Esaw sold his birthright for a mess of pottage. Judas sold his soul for thirty pieces of silver. Let us all refuse to exchange our souls for the world.

AT THE MARK STREET METHODIST CHURCH

BOTH SERVICES YESTERDAY MARKED BY LARGE CONGREGATIONS

Large, earnest and appreciative congregations greeted the pastor of Mark Street yesterday at both services, and the meetings were deeply spiritual.

The choir, under the able leadership of Mr. Bruce Quinn, did excellent work, and the solos by Mrs. E. Wand in the morning and Miss Peters in the evening were much enjoyed.

The subject of the morning's sermon was "The Great Divide," and the text; "They saw no man save Jesus only." The following points were discussed:

1.—Peter, James and John, representing the church on earth go with Jesus to the mountain to meet the representatives. Moses and Elijah, from the church in heaven. Jesus presides at this meeting on the mountain, or the "Great Divide."

2.—The disciples are about to face mighty issues in the valley below, so need a mountain-top experience, and so do we.

3.—Down there in the valley nine disciples are fighting the devil on behalf of a suffering boy, but they fail, they require Jesus and the experience of the mountain.

4.—These men will be called upon in a few days to witness the agonies of Gethsemane, Pilate's Judgment Hall, Calvary, and the tragedy of all the ages, so they are equipped with the mountain-top experience.

5.—They behold the full-orbed glory of Christ, they hear the voice of God, and meet the shining ones from heaven on the mountain, and so are ready for any conflict which may overtake them in the plain.

6.—Notice again, heaven's visitants meet earth's visitors on the "Great Divide." Heaven's joys meet earth's sorrows. Heaven's power meets earth's weakness. Heaven's immortality meets earth's mortality, and Peter knew the heavenly visitants.

The evening text was "A little child shall lead them." and the subject was the "Gentleness of True Manhood."

1.—Qualities of leadership are humility, faith, freedom from guile, freedom from care, purity of motive, purpose and character, understanding of and sympathy with humane nature.

2.—Leadership needed today as never before. No man is fit to lead who cannot follow. No man should try to lead who is not willing to play the game fair. The man who will scrape, and bow and fawn, is despised by both rich and poor. All are hungry for strong, wise, firm leadership.

HIGH PRICES FOR RICE LAKE RATS

FETCH MORE LOCALLY THAN IN ANY OTHER PART OF THE WORLD

At the sale of Rice Lake musk rats at Hiawatha last week the fact was amply demonstrated that Rice Lake rats command a higher price locally than in any other part of the world. The sale had been incorrectly described as an auction sale. It was not so. The skins were sold by sealed tenders, the highest bidder being given the option. At the sale there were three buyers from Toronto, one from Montreal and two from Peterborough. The highest bidder was Mr. T. E. Curvin, of the Peterborough Raw Fur Company, who has brought the Rice Lake rat skins for the past four years. The price he paid this year was $4.55 and for the entire stock of over 2,500 skins he aid out more than $10,000 in cash. There were as many if not more skins at the sale this year as there were last year and with these facts considered the price paid is fairly high.

Mr. Curvin resold the entire stock to Barries Limited, the same as he has done for the past four years for manufacturing purposes. Barries have always demanded these furs because they are superior in quality to any other and it therefore follows that Peterborough people should be able to get the superior garment right in Peterborough.

Another interesting fact in connection with the sale was that the Pictorial Review Company had a photographer on the scene and it is likely that in a short time the pictures of the sale will be shown in every moving picture house in the Dominion. This feature should be a tremendous advertisement for the lake district.

Y. W. C. A. AND Y. M. C. A. EXHIBITION

On April 22, 23 and 24 the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. are having a combined exhibition of the work their gymnasium classes have done during the past year. Plans for the seats may be seen at either the Y.W.C.A. or Y.M.C.A.

APPOINTED DENTAL OFFICER

An announcement has been received from Ottawa to the effect that Dr. C. H. Fulford has been appointed dental officer for Peterborough in connection with the re-establishment of returned soldiers. In future all returned soldiers requiring dental treatment should apply to him.

A TEST OF G.W.V.A. OPEN DOOR MEETS WITH ADVERSE VOTE HERE

One Candidate Decidedly Rejected Peterborough Branch Last Night—Comrade Whatley Would Throw Church Parade Open to all Local Organizations.

A precedent was established at the regular meeting of the Great War Veteran's Association, last night, in connection with the recently amended constitution which permits soldiers who have never left Canada to join the Association. A proviso was added to this clause that such applicants should satisfy an investigation committee as to whether it was their fault or not that they did not leave Canada. An application which came under these provisions was received and on the motion of Comrade Oxley, president Muir appointed Comrades Staunton, Johnson and Guerin a committee to investigate the application. The investigation was carried out immediately, and the committee brought in an adverse report, which was accepted by the meeting and the applicant rejected. This was more or less of a test case to decide what action the Peterborough branch would take in view of the Dominion Convention amending the constitution as stated above. It is a well known fact that the Peterborough branch was opposed to the open door and this first application was scrutinized carefully by the committee.

Comrade Whatley would throw the annual church parade open to every organization in the city, not forgetting the City Council.

In a suggestion which he made during the general business he referred to the "Hospital" day that was carried out in the Old Country, and thought that as under the present method of carrying out the annual church parade the day might come when the parade in commemoration of the fallen comrades would no longer be carried out. It would be as well to start right with the next parade and broaden the idea so as to include all the militia units in the city and the various other organizations, even to the Boy Scouts. Although nothing was decided in this matter the general tenor of the meeting was in favor of such a proposition.

Aerial Flights

A communication was received from the Bishop Barker Aerial Company with reference to paying a visit to this city to conduct pleasure flights. It was proposed that the Great War Veterans should set the date to meet one of their field days, and that the Association should sell 50 tickets at $10 each, and receive a fifteen per cent commission. On the motion of Comrade Johnson this was referred to the executive for action.

Subscription Campaign

A communication from the "Veteran" with reference to the local branch putting on a subscription campaign at first met with favour until it was pointed out by Comrade Johnson, who was the delegate of the branch at the Dominion Convention, that the affairs of the "Veteran" had met with such criticism there that a committee had been appointed to investigate into the apparent dropping of $4,000 in one month. Another comrade pointed out that as a result of this investigation the editor of the magazine had last week been compelled to resign and that a re-organization of the staff was being effected. It was therefore decided that the communication would be filed and that nothing should be done in reference to the proposed campaign.

Archdeacon There

Very Rev. Archdeacon Davidson, rector of St. John's Anglican Church, appeared to express his appreciation to the members of the Association for the splendid way in which they had turned out on Sunday night for the unveiling of a memorial to their fallen comrades. He realized that the difficult circumstances which it had been impossible to avoid existed and this was all the more reason why he so fully appreciated the splendid attendance for the evening service and for the order maintained while in the church. He did not thank them for what was their duty to the fallen comrades just as it was his duty, but he simply expressed his sincere appreciation. The Archdeacon was greeted with loud applause.

During the general discussion there were many matters of minor importance brought up including everything from the gratuity question to Tag Days, and at times the speakers became quitae heated but nothing of importance developed.

President Muir was in the chair except for part of the discussion, when he vacated to Vice-President Clancy.

HUNDRED THOUSAND MORE MEN ON RAILROADS THREATEN STRIKE

Will Quit Work on April 28th Unless Demand of Dollar a Day Increase is Met

(By Canadian Press.)

Chicago, April 20.—The strike fever among railroad employes suffered a setback today when thirty thousand railway clerks and eight thousand freight handlers in Chicago district announced their decision to permit a hearing of their wage demands by the Railroad Labor Board at Washington.

Freight Moves

The freight movement in the Chicago district continued to increase today, and elsewhere in the Middle West and far West traffic conditions were returning to the normal.

The possibility of another serious blow to the railroads in th Chicago district loomed up with the threat that a hundred thousand members of the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way and Railroad Shop Laborers would quit work on April 28 unless their demand for a temporary increase of one dollar a day and other benefits were granted.

PUBLISHERS MEET

Gathering in Toronto of Newspaper Men to Discuss Postal Rates.

Toronto, April 20.—A meeting of Ontario newspaper publishers was held here this morning, when a discussion of the proposed new newspaper postal rates took place. W. B. Burgoyne of the St. Catharines Standard presided.

OVERALL MOVEMENT INVADES COMMONS

G.W.V.A. OFFICIALS APPEAR BEFORE PENSIONS COMMITTEE IN KHAKI DENIM

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 20.—"Denim overall" movement invaded the House of Commons today, when C. G. MacNeil and David Loughnam, G.W.V.A. officials, appeared before the Pensions Committee clad in khaki denim suits, and stated that the G.W.V.A. executive had all joined the movement.

Members Too.

Members of the House of Commons this morning stated they intended to wear either overalls or old clothes. Many of them claim it would be better to wear out old clothes rather than start a rush on overalls.

HAMILTON REJECTS DAYLIGHT SAVING

WILL HAVE NOTHING WHATEVER TO DO WITH FAST TIME THIS YEAR

(By Canadian Press.)

Hamilton, April 20.—There is no possibility of daylight saving being adopted here this year.

The city refused to have anything to do with "fast time" last year, and will follow the same course this summer. Objection on the part of Labor, now strongly represented in the City Council, is the reason.

BIG RAID ON VICE IN AMERICAN CITY

PANIC IN UNDERWORLD

MAYOR IGNORES REGULAR POLICE, SUSPECTED OF ALLIANCE

Bridgeport, April 20.—An exodus of large proportions has begun in Bridgeport as a result of the vice raids here last night, when Burns detectives acting under the authority of Mayor Clifford B. Wilson, who [illegible] Lieutenant-Governor of Connecticut, raided twenty-two disreputable resorts and arrested more than 300 men and women.

Fearing that the detectives might again swoop down upon the dives, those who escaped the dragnet have been piling all day onto trains for New York, Boston and Philadelphia, leaving behind them not only their "easy pickings," but in many instances their personal belongings and property. It was said tonight that there are not now one-third as many disreputable characters in Bridgeport as there were yesterday before the raids began.

Mayor Wilson, in conjunction with the Board of Police Commissioners, went over the heads of the police in ordering the raids, and there were many rumors afloat today regarding his next action. It is generally predicted that it will very closely concern the police but he has not yet given any inkling of what he intends to do. He held a long conference this afternoon with J. C. Stanley, head of the Board of Police Commissioners, but the result was not made public.

Vice Handled as a Business.

The Burns detectives declared that their investigation has shown that vice in Bridgeport has been handled as a big paying proposition, with women of the streets, gamblers and other characters paying tolls to the men on the inside, and in some instances to the authorities, for protection.

The most startled men in all of Bridgeport were the 250 policemen, because from Supt. John H. Redgate down they knew nothing whatever of

ROBBERS ATTACK QUEEN OF SPAIN

HOLD UP TRAIN ON WHICH HER MAJESTY WAS TRAVELLING

(By Canadian Press.)

Seville, Spain, April 20.—Bandits attacked the train last night on which Queen Victoria and her brother the Marquis of Carisbrooke, were travelling from Madrid to Seville. The robbers made an unsuccessful attempt to carry off the royal plate which the Queen was taking with her.

Were Well Armed.

The robbers, who were well armed, opened a regular fusilade when discoverd, wounding two of the railway men, one of them probably mortally. The bandits escaped in a two-horse carriage, leaving no clue to their identity.

AMERICAN DAY IS SET BY GOV. ALLEN

GOVERNOR OF KANSAS CALLS FOR PATRIOTIC PARADES IN ALL TOWNS

HIS ANSWER TO THE REDS

ASKS FOR COUNTER DEMONSTRARTION ON OCCASION OF MAY I HOLIDAY RADICALS

Topeka, Kan., April 20.—Gov. Allen proposes to have a showdown on May 1 on the Americanism of the American people. The Governor fixed this day as American Day and asked that the occasion be observed in all the cities and towns of his State. In announcing the plan which he hopes will be taken up by other States, the Governor said:

"An organized group of radical agitators is threatening the foundations of organized society. The government of the people, by the people and for the people is on the defensive. The principle of majority rule may be endangered at this hour unless that unmistakable majority organizes for protection.

"The bad of foreign birth have been accepted to our shores along with the good on a equal basis and no adequate attempt has been made to instruct them in citizenship. The vicious element among them, in spite of the large element of loyal American labor who believe in upholding the laws of our country, constitute a menace to Anglo-Saxon institutions.

"The question whether the American spirit and our historical institutions shall predominate is as vital today as was the subject of preparedness four years ago, when the preparedness parades revealed wholesome public sentiment at that time.

"Recently this group has transplanted to America the policy long in vogue in Europe, of making May 1 a day given to parading the forces of irreconcible radicalism. To that end and that people may have the publicity to demonstrate their Americanism and their determination to uphold it against the vicious assaults of radicals and internationalism, I hereby designate and set aside Saturday, May 1, as American Day and recommend that the day be observed in all of the cities and towns of Kansas.

"Parades could be arranged in all towns, featuring the indiscriminate marching together of men and women, headed by the Mayor and his committees, by the local posts of the American Legion—always 100 per cent. American. Special divisions of school children and teachers should be given prominent places as the makers of America.

"I have supreme faith in this country and its people. The heart of our people beats passionately for the integrity of American ideals and for our Constitution and the institutions bequeathed by to us. The day appropriately observed will give concrease expression of the emotions and convictions of our people that America will fulfil her proper destiny in the final realization of the ideals of equality of justice and opportunity for all."

Owing to the increased cost in transportation, salaries, equipment etc., the Toronto International League Baseball Club has decided to advance the prices of admission.

GERMANY WILL DISBAND CIVIC GUARDS ON DEMAND OF ALLIES

Does So Under Pressure, and Complains That Act Will Deny to Population Adequate Protection

(By Canadian Press.)

Berlin, April 22.—The disbandment of German civic guards demanded in the Allied note of March 12 has been decided upon by the Berlin Government.

Complies Under Pressure.

In a note to General Nollet, head of the Allied commission of control here, the Government states it is taking this step "under pressure exercised by those who ignore actual facts."

The assertion is also made that there was no idea of using civic guards for military purposes. Every precaution had been taken to avoid employing them in this way, but the guards during recent troubles performed valuable protective services, the note says. "The Government," it continues, "cannot but recognize that stipulations of the Peace Treaty compel it to deny to its population every possibility of protection which in the present extraordinary circumstances is essential for the maintenance of Germany's internal security and fulfillment of the terms of the treaty."

In conclusion, the Government says it will examine what permissible organizations can serve to this end, and will maintain the local protective character of such forces, avoiding centralization of military organizations.

Plans for the new buildings are about completed. It is expected that the plant will be in full operation within a year. The directors of the new company will be Lammot du Pont, Walter S. Carpenter, Jr., William C. Spruance, Jr., F. W. Pickard, F. Donaldson Brown, Leonard A. Yerkes, Benjamin C. Paskus and Albert Blum.

PROHIBITION DOES NOT SUIT BURGLARS

INTERFERES WITH THEIR PROFESSION AND LEADS TO ARREST OF TWO

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 20.—Prohibition is interfering seriously with the profession of burglary. The other night two expert cracksmen entered the home of Mrs. Josephine Geddes, St. Nicholas avenue, and did up all the loose valuables in neat bundles ready to carry away. Just as they were about to depart one of them chanced to open a sideboard door. Inside were four quart bottles all nearly full. There was one of vermouth, one of whiskey, one of gin and one of brandy. The burglars decided to linger a little. When they finally left all four bottles were empty.

Chanting praise of the flowing bowl at the top of their lungs, the pair staggered downstairs. In the lobby of the apartment house they were stopped by a gathering of citizens attracted by the clamor, and handed over to the police.

KILLED IN TORNADO

Fifty Also Injured This Morning at Aberdeen, Miss.

(By Canadian Press.)

Aberdeen, Miss., April 20.—Several persons are reported to have been killed and between forty and fifty injured in a tornado which struck Aberdeen early today.

A broadside of criticism was directed in the Legislature yesterday against J. Walter Curry's bill to make Toronto responsible for damage done to restaurants in the riots of August, 1918.

P

Terms of Treaty Regarding Disarmament Must be Complied With, Otherwise Allies Will Discontinue Relations With Germany—Food and Other Necessities Will be Withheld in Event of Revolutionary Movements,

(By Canadian Press.)

San Remo, April 20.—All the Allied Powers concerned now have approved a form of collective representations to be made to the Berlin government regarding execution of the Versailles Treaty. The declaration is regarded as an ultimatum, and probably no time limit will be set for Germany's reply. She will be told that unless she complies with the terms of the treaty regarding disarmament the Allies will be unable to continue those relations re-established by the peace treaty.

Strong representations will be made likewise regarding the continuance of insurrections in Germany, and the prospect will be held out of the withholding of food and other necessities in the event of the development of a counter revolutionary movement.

The Charge d'Affaires of the Allied nations will probably be instructed to call at once at Wilhelmstrasse and deliver this declaration. Italy's approval of the representations, which had not been immediately forthcoming, was received today.

Italy Represents Russia.

Paris, April 20.—Although Soviet Russia is not officially participating in the conference at San Remo, it is virtually represented by Italy, who will take up the cudgels for the Soviets before her allies.

France is understood to be altogether opposed to recognition of the Bolshevist government until the latter has given ironclad assurances that it will pay the debt contracted by the Czarist regime.

The French representative who talked with the Soviet commissary, Krassin, at Copenhagen, returned empty-handed, while the Italian delegates actually closed an agreement whereby an Italo-Russian commercial treaty was practically stipulated, giving the Soviets the right to establish a regular bureau at Rome, with a corresponding bureau to be set up at Moscow by Italy for the furtherance of mutual trade relations.

The reason the French failed to come to an agreement with the Soviets is explained by diplomats by the fact that both French delegats were pre-eminently financiers and did not approach the Soviet representative "in the right way."

Their paramount object, it is stated, was to obtain from Krassin a formal promise by the present Russian government to recognize the foreign debt. To this request, Krassin replied that he had not the power to accede because his mission was purely commercial, not political. He added the question of recognition of Russia's foreign debts undoubtedly belonged within the province of regular peace.

Krassin further told the French delegates that his government would probably agree to discuss the question immediately, provided she was given an official place among the other nations around the Supreme Council table.

France's representatives declined even to consider such a request. They apparently drew from Krassin's declarations [illegible] conclusion that he meant Russia would refuse to recognize her debt. Krassin himself has declared this interpretation incorrect, while British and Italian diplomats also assert there is no ground for it.

BISHOP O'BRIEN PRESENTED WITH HANDSOME GIFT LAST EVENING

One of the most impressive ceremonies ever seen in this city took place in St. Peter's Cathedral, last evening, when His Lordship Bishop O'Brien was presented with a handsome gift of money, on the occasion of his departure for Rome. A large number of cergy from the surrounding parishes were present to wish His Lordship God-speed on his journey and tahe cathedral was thronged to the doors. Binshop O'Brien gave Benediction, assisted by Father Scanlan as Deacon and Father P. McGuire as sub-deacon, after which Rev. Mgr. Casey, of Lindsay, read the address and Rev. Mgr. Murray made the presentation.

The cathedral arrangements were perfect under the direction of Rev. Father Phelan, the rector, and the altar was beautifully decorated with roses and lillies. Members of the Knights of Columbus acted as ushers and appropriate music was beautifully rendered by St. Peter's choir.

The Address

Peterborough, April 19, 1920.

Right Rev. M. J. O'Brien, D.D.

My Lord:

We, the priests of the Diocese of Peterborough, are assembled today to wish you God-speed on the eve of your departure for the Eternal City. After nearly seven years of faithful service in the episcopate, you are making your first official visit "ad limina," a duty that you would have performed some years ago were it not that the recent war rendered it unwise to undertake such a journey. It brings us nearer to the heart of the Catholic Church to realise that the object of your mission is to present to Pope Benedict XV., our beloved Holy Father, the report of your stewardship over this portion of the Lord's vineyard entrusted to your care, to lay at the feet of the successor of St. Peter the record of your activities and ours in the care of souls.

We beg leave on this occasion to express to your Lordship our appreciation of your efforts to further the spiritual and temporal welfare of your subjects. We have time and again witnessed the spirit of earnest and sincere endeavor which actuated you in the interest that you took in our affairs. Your prudent counsel, your ready sympathy, and encouragement, and your quick grasp of the needs and possibilities of the diocese, gave ample proof of those qualities of heart and mind so necessary in the discharge of duties such as yours.

Keenly alert to the necessity of increasing the number of your clergy in order to cope with the growing needs of the diocese, you have devoted yourself wholeheartedly to the task of fostering and encouraging vocations to the priesthood. The success of your efforts manifests itself in the goodly number of young men who have equipped or who are equipping themselves for the sacred ministry. Our sisterhood, too, has been the object of your solicitude. For the amount of work, charitable and educational, which fell to their lot, you realized that the number of our sisters was few. Due in large measure to your persevering efforts, their ranks have been so replenished that the activities of the Community of St. Joseph have gone far beyond their former limits.

Among the other works of zeal, promoted by your Lordship we might,

CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS.

THE RURAL SCHOOL PROBLEM seems to be the outstanding educational issue in Ontario at the present time, says the Canadian. At the meeting of the Ontario Educational Association in Toronto during Easter week, the Public school inspectors of the Province gave serious thought to the problem, and embodied their conclusions in a resolution which they presented to the Premier and the Minister of Education. This resolution first pointed out that the greatest needs of our rural schools "are more mature teachers, a greater continuity of service, and a larger proportion of male teachers," all of which, of course, imply much higher salaries than are at present being paid. But the resolution points out "that he present small schools, with an average for the Province of less than twenty pupils, make impossible, from an economic standpoint, the employment of adequately paid teachers, with the result that the greater number of our rural schools employ as teachers young and inexperienced women, who give only a brief service."

The permanent solution of this rural school problem the inspectors think, can be brought about only through a system of consolidation of schools. But this can be secured only with great difficulty as long as we have in the Province thousands of small school sections, each more or less jealous of its powers of self-government. The solution suggested is that the present system of sections should be abandoned, that he counties should be made the units of school administration, and that the support of the schools outside of towns and cities ought to be by means of a uniform tax rate levied throughout the whole county. The inspectors approved of the principle of consolidated schools provided for by the Act passed by the Hearst Government, but suggested some amendments that they think would make it more easily brought into operation.

PAPER CLOTHING.

THOUGH PAPER CLOTHING was invented a hundred years ago, it was never made any real use of till Germany found herself cut off from the world's supplies of cotton and wool.

In 1917 alone over 45,000 tons of paper in Germany was converted into paper yarn, and it is made from the best quality paper. The paper is cut by special revolving knives into strips a little less than half an inch wide.

These strips are twisted and then treated with a special mixture to preserve them from damp. After this treatment this paper yarn can be woven into almost any kind of material varying from coarse canvas to cloth used for making sheets, underlinen, and so on. Every kind of material usually made from cotton or wool has been manufactured by Germany from paper yarn. Blankets, dress materials, water-proofs, even towels and stockings, are made from yarn, which stands sending to the laundry almost as well as ordinary cotton goods.

TOLERANT JOHN BULL.

IT IS SATISFACTORY to note that the Entente Cordiale has not been weakened by recent events in the Ruhr district and that the Allies are a unit that Germany must positively live up to her treaty obligations. John Bull ever was and is a tolerant old soul, who would resort to considerable diplomacy rather than effect his ends by drastic measures. And yet for all that, it is safe to say that in his heart he knew too well that France was justified in sending troops into neutral German territory, for the war had taught him a costly object lesson as to the treachery and deceit of Germany, whose race had perhaps enjoyed England's hospitality to a greater extent than any other aliens in British territory.

For the past forty years Germany had looked forward to no other agency but that of force, or its display, to accomplish her ends when the long-looked-for "day" arrived, and it is only natural that a race cradled in the lap of war, so to speak, will only bow to the inevitable when the sword of her victors is still unsheathed. It is impossible te eradicate in two years that spirit of intrigue, plotting, deception and arrogant might suckled by the children of a nation from their mothers' breasts during a whole decade, and the only way to subdue and bring to time German is to use the same means as those by which she blatantly declared her intention of subduing the whole world, and all that therein dwell—armed force or a fitting display thereof.

John Bull, in that same spirit of tolerance which impelled him to discredit assurances from the most reliable sources that Germany was arming against the British Empire, is even today prone to credit her with an earnest desire to live up to the Treaty of Versailles, in spite of so many visible signs that she has the will to repudiate that treaty and regard it as a scrap of paper like her signed assurances regarding Belgium. He would, it seems, act leniently, and rely on economic pressure to enforce compliance with the treaty's terms; but France, who has suffered so much from German duplicity, contends that unless that pressure is backed up by a display of armed force, Germany will find a way of evading its effects. And France is probably right, for German public utterances, Germany's whole attitude since the armistice, points to her intention to resort to any treachery and any means to get the better of her enemies of 1914-18. Until such time as Germany shall have given ample evidence of her earnest desire to live an honored nation among honorable nations, and to accept that principle of international rights for which the war was waged by the Allies, the Entente Cordiale must stand on guard against her for the peace of the world, and ever maintain a policy of "safety first."

A COMPARISON OF PRICES.

AN ADVERTISEMENT of a fashionable English firm of tailors, in an English paper, prices the best made-to-measure gents' suits at slightly under $25, and not a few people in Canada today are getting English tailoring laid down in their homes at about half what the same quality wear would cost here. How is this? England imports the bulk of her wool from Australia, and advisedly we say that wages and living today in the Old Land are not far short of what they are in Canada, and yet the cost of clothing is away below prices obtainable in Canada. Perhaps here we have an instance of the effect of decreased demand, for during the past couple of years, Englishmen, even in the well-to-do class, have been content to wear frayed trousers and shiny coats rather than pay the prices asked for new clothing. And now prices have tumbled considerably.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THE I. W. W. members seem to care less for good wages as an object for striking than they do for the idleness that such a method assures.

• • • • •

THE DOMINION Government will allow the export of ten thousand tons of sugar to the United States. Well, so long as they take their pay in coal.

• • • • •

ANY PUBLIC OFFICIAL who finds a thorough and drastic reversal of his policy necessary should certainly resign as a further admission that he was on the wrong track.

• • • • •

PEOPLE COMPLAIN bitterly of the high cost of living, but it is unfortunate that when one is dead one cannot very well register a kick against the high cost of dying.

• • • • •

"DOES A MAJORITY in the Legislature desire to see Ontario debauched by the cellar trade?" asks the Globe. The Globe should worry. The modern Ontario cellar is safely padlocked.

• • • • •

THE GERMAN diplomat or military leader who writes his personal memoirs need not fear to convict himself by such testamentary evidence. Veracity and frankness were never characteristics of that race.

• • • • •

AN EXCHANGE says that Canada and the United States should be able to trad in papers and coal without retaliation. The great drawback to this plan is that while one wants al lthe paper the other insists on the entire supply of coal.

• • • • •

WHILE MALES are dressing in "overalls," women are reversing the process and dressing in next to nothing. 'Tis a pity the females of the human race do not "overall" their wardrobes in favor of covering a little more of their persons than they do, especially on so-called "dress" occasions.

• • • • •

CITY ENGINEER GRAY, of Hamilton, Ont., has recommended to the city council that they accept the offer of the Dominion Geodetic Survey to prepare a complete topographical map of the city of Hamilton. The cost of his map will probably be about $40,000, of which the Dominion Government offers to pay sixty per cent.

• • • • •

THE PRICES of overalls have gone up in expectancy of the increased demand by reason of the overall campaign about to invade Canada, and now it remains to be seen if a decreased demand for the better styles of clothing will result in a corresponding decrease in the cost of same. If so, then it can be safely assumed that demand and not value is responsible, to some extent, for he high cost of living, and the question naturally arises just how much profiteering is going on because of demand.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

HAVE HIM PLACED.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

Neal McLean, the Labor party's whip at Westminster, publicly declaring for an Irish republic under Andrew Bonar Law's questioning, virtually backs the Dublin alliance of Irish Laborites with Sinn Feiners. If the Labor party keeps him where he is, its own position is no longer a matter of guesswork.

FARMER MAKES FAMILY A FIRM.

(Farmers' Sun.)

A farmer out in Indiana named Robert C. Cain has formed his family into a firm, known as "Messrs' Cain & Company Unlimited," with a capitalization of $17,000. It is difficult to know why he chose the word "Unlimited" instead of "Limited," but apart from that, the principle of taking the boys and girls into partnership on the farm is an excellent one. In the past too few of our farmers have been willing to give the young people a part in the operations of the farm and this has been a factor in the exodus to the cities. Having a stake in he farm is a big asset.

OTHER CITIES NOT JEALOUS.

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

New York is boasting that four celebrated European rulers—Premier Paderewski of Poland, President Masaryk of Czecho-Slovakia, Clemenceau and Trotsky—are Manhattanites. But to make good its claim New York will have to beat even the annexation record of Los Angeles. For Clemenceau's American experience was as a teacher at Stamford, Conn.; Masaryk lived in the Middle West, and Paderewski, if anything American, belongs to California, where his ranch is and where he is said to be now coming to retire. No one, however, will dispute that the honor of Trotsky belongs to New York.

CHINA DISTRUSTS JAPAN.

(Hong Kong Press.)

The very docility of the Chinese does give rise to the apprehension that they might be used by another Asiatic nation to further a scheme of world conquest as great as that of the Prussians. The fear is frequently expressed that Japan, which retains a militarism based on that which has been destroyed in Europe, may so dominate China as to create a hegemony of Asia that would place the destinies of all free nations in control of he oligarchy which controls the government of Japan. Japan's accretions of territory, while essential to a virile nation, undoubtedly afford support to those who view Japan's expanding Imperialism with suspicion and distrust. Since 1895 she has acquired Formosa, the Liaotung Peninsula, the South Manchurian Railway, established herself in Manchuria, secured huge interests in Shantung, created a sphere of influence in Fukien, into which others scarcely dare enter, besides penetrating peacefully into the Yangtsze Valley and reaching into Mongolia.

TOM MOORE ON MISPRESENTATIVE GOVERNM'T OF CANADA BY PARLIAMENT

Head of Trades Union Movement Quotes From Recent Debates to Show How Far Out of Touch are Legislators With Mass of People—Insincerity on Cost of Living 8-Hour Day, Franchise Act, Etc.

In a signed article in the Canadian Labor Press (Ottawa) issued today, Tom Moore, president of the Dominion Trades and Labor Congress, indicts the present federal parliament regarding its attitude on matters affecting the workers, claiming that Hansard reports of the last few days make interesting reading as showing "how far out of touch with the great masses of our people many of our legislators are."

Mr. Moore takes up the debates that have taken place on matters affecting the workers, such as the high cost of living debate, the Franchise Act discussion and the eight-hour-day circumlocution. He examines the comments on these momentous questions by hon. gentlemen in the House, and draws his own conclusions.

He draws attention to the motion of J. H. Burnham, M.P., regarding the high cost of living. The first part of this motion read: "That in the opinion of this House, whereas he price of necessaries is leaving many of the people of Canada in a desperate condition." It went on to call attention to the full situation, winding up with a statement that it was desirable to discuss the whole question in the House. But the first part quoted was withdrawn, and Mr. Moore says:

"Evidently the parliament of this country hates to acknowledge that the continual rise in the price of necessaries is really bringing about a spirit of desperation among a large number of people who are constantly being faced with the ever diminishing purchasing power of the dollar they earn."

The Eight Hour Day.

The text question dealt with by Mr. Moore is that of the eight hour day. Again Mr. Burnham brought in the motion to have parliament establish an eight hour day. Mr. Moore comments:

"The resolution, if adopted, was certainly open enough to suit even the most reactionary employer. After debate, the report of which covers thirty-five pages of Hansard and which was carried on during he best part of two days, the motion was withdrawn.

"With few exceptions, those who took part in the debate did so in a very academic manner. The discussion also brought forward a few statements which are well worthy of repetition and further publicity."

Mr. Boyce's Contribution.

Mr. Moore quotes some choice examples of debate on this topic, and reproduces the statement of Geo. Boyce, Unionist member for Carleton county, who said:

"Look at the European countries. There is not one of them but has a twelve or fourteen hour day."

On this statement, Mr. Moore says:

"Mr. Geo. Boyce would do well to read a little of the conditions actually existing in Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Germany, Holland, Sweden and many other European countries before making such another ridiculous statement. In Great Britain the farm laborers, by national agreement, have enjoyed a fifty-hour work week during summer months and a forty-eight hour work week during the winter months for the past year, and most people are conversant with the fact that the eight-hour day now prevails to a very large degree among the industrial workers of the countries above enumerated and generally speaking by legislative enactment."

Served Useful Purpose.

Mr. Moore adds, after discussing the comments of other eminent legislators:

"Thanks are due to Mr Burnham if only for securing from members of parliament the declarations as to their ideas on this important matter and with the information we now possess in this regard it seems imperative that every worker lose no time in acquainting the member for the constituency wherein he resides of his desires relative to the enactment of the eight-hour legislation."

Iniquitous Franchise Act.

After some remarks on the Merchants' Shipping Act, Mr. Moore goes on to the Franchise Act. He says too much importance cannot be attached to this bill by the workers. Regarding Clause 10, which prohibits nonpolitical companies and associations or organizations from contributing towards elections expenses, Mr. Moore says:

"Mr. J. H. Sinclair strongly supported this section, stating at the same time that the real cure is publicity of campaign funds. Mr. Guthrie pointed out that there is such a provision in the new Act, but it is the same provision as in the former law. By agreement this section is left over for further discussion. If this section is allowed to pass there is no doubt that contributions from labor organizations, co-operative societies, united farmers' organizations or such voluntary associations not formed exclusively for political purposes will be illegal. The millionaire partner or director of a huge corporation will still be able to donate great sums to political campaign funds, but the workers will be prevented from using their accumulated funds for the same purpose. Too much attention cannot be given by workers to this section, and their protests against its enactment should be sent immediately to their member of parliament."

Proportional Representation.

Mr. Moore concludes his indictment of the parliamentarians with the following:

"In view of the statements of the premier a year ago, intimating that a committee would be appointed to report on this question, and also that the National Industrial Conference, Ottawa, September, 1919, unanimously requested this change, and that the workers throughout the country, organized and unorganized, industrial workers and farmers, have all signified their desires for the adoption of proportional representation in the next federal election, it is to be hoped that the parliament will not finish their work on the franchise bill without having incorporated the principle of proportional representation.

"This summary of some of the proceedings of parliament is issued through the Labor Press of this country in order that the workers may judge for themselves as to the manner in which their representatives are carrying out the trust reposed in them by the electors of their constituencies. As parliamentary representative of the trades union movement, it is my desire to deal impartially with the sayings and doings of all parties, simply taking this means of giving publicity in matters in which I consider the workers will be deeply interested."

CHICKEN WITH FOUR LEGS

A strange freak of nature was discovered in a brood of chickens hatched at the parsonage poultry house, Fraserville, last Saturday. Among the ten was one with four legs, one only being perfect, one turned backward from the middle point and the other two with complete attachment to the body attached for locomotion in an opposite direction. The chicken tired of its superfluous appendages after 48 hours of life. The freak was sent to Farm and Dairy, Peterboro where it can be seen.

LESS HARD AND FAST RULES FOR PENSIONS

CHANGES IN ACT MAY MATERIALLY EFFECT REDUCTIONS IN AMOUNTS

Ottawa, Ont., April 20.— A sub-committtee of the Committee of Pensions met yesterday for the discussion of matters in relation to the owrk of the larger committee. About a score of complaints have already reached the secretary, it is understood, most of them in reference to reductions of pensions. In some of these cases, it is claimed, that considerable hardship has been brought about by too strict an interpretation of the pensions regulations.

It is expected that some changes may result in the Act as the consequence and that a less hard and fast interpretation of the law will be the rule hereafter.

CALLS RAIL MEN INTO BIG UNION

WILL BE NO STRIKES WHEN WORKKERS ARE SOLIDLY UNIFIED

Boston, April 20.—Railroad workers were urged to unite in one big union and "get rid of the labor leaders, labor separators and the labor meal tickets and save an expense of $20,000,000 a year," by J. J. Reynolds, third Vice President and organizer of the American Federation of Railroad Workers, at a meeting here.

Reynolds denied that the organization had anything to do "with the present upheaval which is going on throughout this country." Not a member, he added, was involved in the unauthorized railroad strike.

The meeting was the first of what has been advertised as a series of educational rallies throughout New England to impress upon railroad workers the need for organizing under one union. It was open to the public and agents of the Department of Justice and private detectives were present.

"It has been rumored that this meeting is for the purpose of calling young men out in sympathy with these so-called outlaws.'" Mr. Reynolds said, "but that is an absolute untruth. I am here to educate you to the need of a consolidation of all railroad workers' unions in an effort to make your organization a solid industrial unit like the railroad owners have.

"The present upheaval is a spontaneous uprising of railroad men who are overworked, underfed, underpaid and disgusted with their leaders, who have no produced results. I will venture the strike will be off tomorrow and the men back to work immediately. The railroad managers have already signed an agreement with the 'outlaws' and a new organization consequently has sprung up among you.

"There are 5,000 members of my federation in the United States, with 3,500 in New England. There are 1,000 members of the Boston and Maine system and we already have an agreement with the New Haven Railroad here.

"There won't be any strikes when all the railroad workers are solidly unified in one organization controlled by the rank and file. It is no wonder men revolt when their leaders so consistently fail. There are too many labor leaders in the movement today. The Brotherhood of the Railroad Trainmen has already started a movement to depose William G. Lee."

LOVE AND POETRY

Combination Long Prominent in Japanese Wooing.

Custom of Utagaki First Mentioned in Fifth Century, Though Believed to Be Much Older—Devoted to Verse Making.

One of the prettiest customs of old Japan that has survived the new order is the Utagaki, or gathering of Japanese young men and women in flower season to compose odes to the blossoms and to the moonbeams, forming friendships that often endure through life. It is first mentioned in the time of Emperor Yuryaku in the fifth century, although no doubt much older.

The Utagaki, or primitive form of wooing, according to which Utagaki was most fashionable, took place at Tsuwakinoichi in Yamato, in the vicinity of Mount Utagaki. At these happy gatherings, if a man failed to win the heart of the lady he was bent on winning, the others made a laughing-stock of him and jeered him to indignation. Consequently, suitors were persevering in order to escape ridicule.

As the meeting came to order, if there was order, each of the participants selected a theme for the ode to be composed. After the composition was completed, the man recited his achievement to the company, and a lady was asked to recite hers; and so it went, men and women reciting in turn, until all had done.

Those whose verses pleased the audience most were then commended for their efforts. The man whose verse won most approval was to have the lady whose verse was deemed best. At least it was easier for the ladies to like the men who were most expert in these odes, which created jealousy among those not so expert. The upshot of it all usually was that all finally mated before the festival was over.

This custom of Utagaki continued popular for centuries. Competition in poetry and love was considered worthy of emulation. One does not wonder that it frequently led to war.

As a rule the higher classes did not allow their daughters to go from home unattended; but the Utagaki was always considered an exception to the rule. Nor is it remarkable that we often read in the literature of this period such expressions as "fell in love at first sight," and so on. It was only natural that in time, as civilization advanced, the custom of holding Utagaki should fall into disuse.

There is a belief in Japan that the custom of holding these poetic love-meetings is as old as the first emperor. It is said that an incident in the life of the imperial house gave rise to the custom of Utagaki. In those far-off days marriage, in 90 cases out of 100, took place by the exchanging of odes, which were expressions of love.—Japan Magazine.

Beyond His Control.

Robert had entertained his cousin for two or three days, but at the end of the third day, a discussion arose and a hand to hand fight ensued. His mother, hearing the commotion, quickly rushed to the scene and admonished. "It isn't nice to fight, Robert," she said, "especially your own relation and guest," but her son in the heat of passion, replied, "It don't make any difference whether he is my 'lation or not, my mad feels just the same."

The Better Part

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"It's really true?" interrogated Walter Morse of Lawyer Barnett, with a catch in his breath, as though half-stunned.

"Absolutely."

"According to his will twenty thousand dollars in securities and five thousand dollars in cash."

"Then I am worth twenty-five thousand dollars?"

"It looks that way. Of course the real value of the securities is to be determined, but the money is in bank and we will honor checks up to the full amount at your pleasure."

Walter Morse's eyes sparkled. A humble court clerk for five years, he had plodded on with a fair salary and no chance of advancement. Now he was dazzled. Then a superlatively satisfied look came into his eyes and he said:

"I've wanted my fling since I was a boy. I'll have it now, you may wager!"

"No wasteful dissipation, I hope?" intimated the attorney.

"No, sir. I'm not built that way, but I have always cherished one fond dream. The Martin branch of our family in the city have always held their heads high above us. I just want to drop in on them and show them that all their accidental wealth hasn't placed them one notch above me. The last time I visited them they practically shelved me as a poor relation. I'll spring some surprise on them the next fall, trust me!"

So within a week Walter, transformed as to garb, dignity and the assurance of riches, appeared at the Martin home, a gaudy butterfly, dazed. He made no boasts, but his actions and his appearance enforced attention, if not real esteem. He went out with the Martin boys and flung his ready cash around prodigally. He made his aunt and her daughter presents that almost bewildered them with their expensiveness. He took rooms at the leading hotel, hired an automobile for regular use and cut quite a swath in the social circle into which his relatives inducted him.

There was a young fellow to whom Walter was introduced, who greatly caught his fancy. Somehow Neal Darrow was different to others. He did not sponge on the spendthrift as the Martin boys did; he even censured Walter for his reckless extravagance, although his own family were reported well-to-do. Then, one day, he introduced Walter to his charming sister, Elvie.

It was there that Walter opened his eyes to a new kind of a world. The Darrows were sensible, real home people. From the start Elvie attracted Walter. She was a sympathetic, charitable little body and was deeply interested in missionary work among the poor. One day Walter met her near a tenement house.

"You have taught me something, Miss Darrow," said Walter as he accompanied her homeward.

Walter Morse removed to less expensive living quarters. He got Neal Darrow to "show him about town," not to the flashy places of amusement and billiard halls, but among the slums. Elvie greeted him with a shining face after she had learned that he was completely absorbed in the condition of the poor and helpless.

"Neal says you are recklessly generous with your benefactions, Mr. Morse," she observed. "That is neither wise nor necessary, and you may be imposed upon. There is a sane and circumspect way to encompass the real needs of these unfortunates."

"Teach it to me, will you?" uttered the enthusiastic Walter eagerly, and Elvie did, and, unconsciously, something else—the way to love her. This in time she appreciated, and blushed when they met, and was not sorry for it. The pleasing friendship developed into mutual devotion and then an engagement. At the height of bliss Walter extended his generosity more and more.

"Hello!" he soliloquized one morning as he looked over his bank book. "Bless me! if I haven't got rid of all that five thousand dollars except a few hundreds. Well, my fling has turned out a little different to what I anticipated, but I'm not sorry for it."

But Walter was for something that transpired later in the day. He received a letter from Lawyer Barnett that created consternation. His mind was dejected, his face sorrowful as he entered the presence of his fiancee that evening. He at once made Elvie aware of the contents of the letter. Mr. Bennett had written him that the securities he had inherited had proved utterly worthless.

"So I am stranded and no prospect but the old life again," he sighed. "I am sorry, Elvie, of course, but I can't ask you to share my lot, now that it has become so humble and uncertain."

To his surprise, his bright-faced companion actually laughed at his wretchedness. "You need not," she chirped delightfully. "I shall ask you to share mine. Why, you dear prodigal! dearer than ever because you have shown your true, golden nature by being one, don't you know that I have a little fortune in my own right, and what is mine is yours, and we'll go back to your pretty home town and brighten up the broken lives there just as we have done in the big city."

HUN FEELING IS UNCHANGED

German Clergy Still Talk of Day of Triumph in Store for the Fatherland.

The Glasgow Herald prints from a special correspondent some interesting information regarding the views of the German churches on the peace treaty.

What, asked the writer, is the guidance offered by the churches at this crisis in the affairs of the nation? We are in no doubt as to its character. In the Kreuz Zeitung recently Doctor Conrad, one of the ex-kaiser's chaplains, wrote a homily on the attitude which religious men should adopt toward the peace which is being "dictated to Germany." He wrote: "Possess your souls and do not despair. God in his good time will turn our sorrows into joy. Is there a German man with the fear of God in his heart who does not realize that this humiliation is but for a time and that before long the drama of the new fashioning of the earth will begin again? When that time comes Germany will rise supreme from the fire of her trials. It was in 1870-71 that began it; that was the prelude; we are now at the close of the second act. The coming third act will give us our final peace and God will be with us. All I can counsel is this: Be patient. Our hour is coming. Certainly, sign the peace, for this will give us the breathing time we require and also time for reflection."

In the Kirchen Anzeiger there is a sermon by Stadt-Pfarrer Brockhaus, headed "What Is Now Our Duty?" The preacher after denouncing "the cruel and incredible terms" of the treaty, goes on: "There is a revenge which is holy and ennobles all those who nourish it in their hearts. We cannot sit down under the awful humiliation. But we must wait God's time. We must wait for him to dictate our course. He who led the German people from weakness to strength, he who once blessed our efforts in our world mission is punishing us now for our sins, but he has great work for us yet and he will see that we yet stand on the necks of our adversaries." All through these sermons dealing with the peace and the present situation generally the German clergy continuously exhort their flocks to be patient, to be steadfast during the days of tribulation. In a perfunctory sort of way they acknowledge that tribulation has come upon the people because of their sins and shortcomings, but the sins and shortcomings have nothing to do with the guilt of causing the war or with the ineffable crimes committed by Germany in the four years of its duration.

Amethyst Once Highly Prized.

On account of its fine color, play of light and capacity for polish the amethyst once held a high rank as a decorative stone, perhaps next to the sapphire, but by reason of the discovery of large quantities in Brazil its popularity declined in Europe and consequently its commercial value declined in corresponding ratio.

Of all the quartz varieties the amethyst has been the most highly valued, and the most frequently used for the art of engraving. The deep shades are less brilliant and for this reason the artists of antiquity preferred the lighter shades. Consequently the ancient intagli occur almost invariably on the light-colored specimens so that engravings on the dark shade may be suspected as modern.

But some of the specimens of Egyptian, Etruscan and Roman engraving on amethysts are extant, among which may be mentioned the gem bearing the likeness of the Emperor Trajan, captured by Napoleon when he conquered Prussia in 1806; a bust of Antonia, daughter of Mark Antony; the head of a Syrian king, which is or was in the Pulsky collection, and a superb engraving of Dioscorides now in the national library in Paris.

The Seven Seas.

Did Kipling consult Hindu mythology when choosing the title for his well-known book, "The Seven Seas"? According to the Puranas, the earth is circular and flat, like the flower of a water lily. Its circumference is 1,000,000,000 miles. In the center is Mount Soomeroo.

Evidence Stork Had Traveled.

Julia had been over to see the neighbor's new baby and upon her return was asked how she liked it, to which she replied: "Well, mother, it is all right, only the stork must have been a long time on the way with it, for it certainly is awfully tanned."

STARTING BEEKEEPING

Suggested Outfit for the Apiary Novice.

Start With the Right Hive — The 10-Frame Langstroth Is Regarded as the Best—How to Prevent Swarming — Care of Freshening Cow.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EXTRACTED honey production is the most satisfactory for beginners. Start with three colonies and sufficient up-to-date equipment and then make the bees pay their way. One colony does not give the beginner an opportunity to right mistakes or accidents profitably. Three colonies can be managed by devoting one evening weekly to the apiary.

Avoid many troublesome pitfalls by starting with the right hive. The 10-frame Langstroth hive has given the best satisfaction in Ontario. All beekeepers' supply houses carry this hive and its parts in their regular stock. Buy your first hives from a good manufacturer. It is very necessary to have all hive parts interchangeable so that they may be used in any colony in the apiary. Uniformity and accurate workmanship alone can ensure this need.

One complete 10 fr. Langstroth hive consists of:

1. A bottomboard.
2. A hive-body with self spacing frames and wire.
3. A telescoping metal roof cover.

In addition the beginner should provide for each colony one queen excluder; two extra hive-bodies complete with frames; and 7 lbs. of Medium Brood Foundation which runs six sheets to the pound, to fill the frames with a guide and foundation for the future combs. All hive material should be nailed, wired and painted before the opening of the spring rush.

It is advisable to commence with a 2-lb. package of bees and queen; a swarm or a nucleus. Less danger from disease attends the buying of pound packages than the buying of swarms and nuclei. Pound packages may be secured for delivery from May 1st to June 30th. Early packages will yield a surplus if carefully handled. Enquire of the Provincial Apiarist re disease in your locality before buying swarms, nuclei or colonies. A small colony of bees is much less vindictive than a full colony and thus offers a better opportunity for the beginner to grow with his bees.

1. A veil of black cotton tulle.
2. A standard bee smoker.
3. A hive tool.
4. A spur wheel wire embedder.
5. An uncapping knife.
6. An uncapping box.
7. A complete set of Department literature, Bulletins 213, 233 and 256, and a good reference bee book.
8. A small honey extractor.

With the exception of Nos. 6 and 8 it is advisable to acquire the material needed from a supply firm at once. The uncapping box can be made at home, and the beginner could probably co-operate with another beekeeper in securing the use of an extractor. With the increase of colonies to ten, it would then be advisable to provide a storage can to assist in handling the crop.—W. A. Weir, O. A. College, Guelph.

To Prevent Swarming of Bees.

June is the swarming month and time of supering for the main honey flow which begins between the 10th and the 20th of the month, depending on the season and the latitude. Be sure to give supers enough to avoid any crowding which may cause the bees to become discouraged, quit work and swarm excessively. It should be the beekeeper's aim to prevent swarming as much as possible. This is done by keeping young queens, giving plenty of room and a systematic examination of brood-chambers to detect colonies which are preparing to swarm. When queen cells are found far advanced they should all be destroyed and the queen herself removed. After the colony has been queenless one week the combs should again be examined and all cells except one removed. This one will provide them with a queen and if only one is left they will not swarm again. Where an improvement of stock is desired the new queen may be given instead of leaving one queen cell.

Natural swarms should be hived on the old stand after removing the parent colony to one side. The swarms should be given the supers from the old colony. New swarms work with great vigor because they have no brood to care for during the first week. Colonies held together without swarming gather more honey than those which swarm. It is the beekeeper's patriotic duty to reduce the cost of honey production and thus increase the quantity he is called to produce as greatly as possible. They also cause the beekeeper less trouble at unexpected times. This may be done more by swarm prevention than in any other way. Bulletin 233 takes this matter up thoroughly and should be carefully studied by all beekeepers. By mastering the methods described it is quite possible to manage as many apiaries as there are days in the week, barring Sundays and rainy days.—W. A. Weir, O. A. College, Guelph.

This is the month when a large number of cows freshen. Both fresh cows and newly-born calves should receive special attention. Cows expected to freshen should be placed in a box stall for a few days before and after freshening. Many valuable cows and calves are lost by neglecting to provide box stall accommodation. This should be found in every dairy stable; or else have a special barn for the purpose.

The Leafs defeated Greensboro' in an exhibition game on Saturday by 5 to 4. The deciding run was scored by Spencer in the tenth inning.

A SPIDER'S BRAIN.

Term "Insect" Is Incorrectly Applied to Them.

Spiders are commonly spoken of as insects, but they aren't. They belong to a very different order of animals, being "arachnids."

They get this name, by the way, from a mythological maiden named Arachne, who was so proud of her weaving that she challenged Minerva to a trial of skill. The goddess accepted the challenge, but, finding herself in danger of defeat, lost her temper, struck her presumptuous rival and turned her into a spider.

The spider is incomparably more intelligent than any insect, and its cleverness as a maker of nets obtains for it a well-warranted admiration. It is the female that does this work, the male being only a fraction of her size and of no account except for continuing the species.

A spider has what may be called a recognizable brain. But so, for the matter of that, has a caterpillar, though less well developed. The nervous system of the latter is a mere string with knots of nerve stuff (ganglia) at intervals along it.

The brain of a caterpillar may be said to extend through its length. But one might say the same thing of a human being, whose entire nervous system is properly to be regarded as an extension of the brain. Or, looking at it the opposite way, your brain is merely the principal ganglion of your nervous system.

Natural Enemies of Mosquito.

Dr. L. O. Howard, chief of the United States bureau of entomology, writing on his favorite theme, the mosquito, in a recent bulletin reviews the subject of the natural enemies of this insect. Among fish, he mentions first the common goldfish and silverfish, which destroy mosquito larvae and should be put in artificial ponds. Top-minnows are great feeders on mosquito larvae, and certain species introduced from Texas and Hawaii have proved their value, while a small top-minnow of the genus Girardinus, known in Barbados as "millions," has been used successfully in other West Indian islands. Many predatory aquatic insects feed on mosquito larvae. Certain birds prey upon the adults, and bats also eat them. Many plants are popularly believed to keep away mosquitoes, among them being several species of eucalyptus, the castor oil plant, the chinaberry tree, etc. Scientific observations have not confirmed the popular idea on this subject.—Scientific American.

Swift Handling of Troops.

The Canadian national railways recently broke a speed record in the transportation of troops from one ship. The troopship Olympic docked at six o'clock in the evening, with 4,900 returned soldiers aboard. Eleven special trains were made up to take the soldiers to demobilization points inland. The first of these specials got under way at 7:45 o'clock. The other trains followed at average intervals of 18 minutes. Within three hours all the soldiers were on their way for the interior. The troops averaged 445 men to a train and it took 150 cars to handle them.

Dreams That Annoy.

A queer dream, and a very irritating one, is that of trying to catch a train and missing it, or of getting into the wrong train. If very vivid these dreams usually portend worries of a financial kind, not infrequently embracing the loss of a post or so much pay. If merely vague and blurred, they signify nothing in particular.

CONFIDENCE IN PRESIDENT MUIR

ATTEMPT TO OUST HEAD OF LOCAL G.W.V.A. A MISERABLE FAILURE

At the regular meeting of the Great War Veterans' Association last night President Bobbie Muir received a vote of confidence which was made practically unanimous there being only two dissentient voices.

The "storm in a tea-cup" arose immediately on the call for "general business." President Muir announced that as there was a motion being introduced calling for his resignation, he would be unable to occupy the chair during the discussion, and the vice-president took it over.

A resolution was introduced by Comrade Oxley calling for the resignation of the president. For the time being the clique, which was attempting the "coup-de-tat" was allowed to have full sway, and no supporters appeared for the president. At last when they appeared to have fully stated their case to the best of their ability, and it was seen just who represented this faction, Comrade Johnson and others rose in support of the president. Comrade Layfield introduced an amendment to the resolution expressing confidence in the president. After a heated discussion, in which the supporters of the president appeared to hold all the cards, the vote was taken on the amendment. With the exception of the mover and seconder of the resolution, one and all present rose in support of the amendment, and the amendment was declared carried, thus defeating the resolution. Comrade Layfield called on the remaining two to make it unanimous, but they declined to do so and stuck fast to their guns.

It appears that the opposition arose over the fact that some of the president's statements with reference to the gratuity question had been misquoted so as to give the impression that he was opposed to the gratuity plan o fthe G.W.V.A. He stated clearly last night that this was not so, and that his personal opinion was that the widows and orphans should come first, and that all that he was opposed to was an indiscriminate gratuity. A complaint was also made that he had discussed a resolution from the chair before putting it to the meeting, a procedure which was out of order, but the supporters of the president pointed out that it was a trivial matter and that the best were liable to make such a mistake some time or other.

The meeting adjourned in the best of good-will, and with President Muir back in the chair.

SOUTH AMERICANS' ACCEPT THE DECISION OF ARBITRATOR

Buenos Ayres, April 20.—Arbitration instead of pistols has settled the controversy between Jose de Souza Lage, editor of the newspaper O Pais of Rio Janeiro, and Fernando Saguier, a member or the Argentine Senate, which threatened to end on the duelling field. Two weeks ago the editor sent a challenge to the Senator, the former considering his honor had been impugned by an article written by Senor Saguier for the Government organ La Epoca of this city, in which it was said Senor Lage had misrepresented President Irigoyen in an interview published in his newspaper.

President Irigoyen, it is said, took a hand in the affair after the Senator had reiterated his charge that the editor, in printing the Irigoyen interview, had violated the confidence of the Argentine Chief Executive. The two men had planned to meet at Montevideo, where a fatal duel took place recently, but the Uruguayan authorities were notified the two men must not be permitted to fight in that country.

It was finally decided to refer the whole matter to Dr. Carlos Rodriguez Larreta, former Argentine member of the Permanent Court of Abitration at tthe Hague. In handing down his decision he says: "Without passing judgment on the merits of the controversy, there has not been sufficient offence to justify a duel. I thing in such cases we ought all to agree on a policy of fraternity between the two countries."

Seconds chosen by each of the would be duellists have signed the decision and the incident is declared closed. The dispute excited great interest in South America, owing to its international aspect and the prominence of the men involved.

ACCEPTS CALL TO SCOTLAND, ONT.

REV. DOUGALL BROWN WILL LEAVE AFTER SECOND IN MAY

Rev. Dougall Brown, pastor of Park Street Baptist Church, announced Sunday morning that he was probably addressing the local G.W.V.A. for the last time on the occasion of their church parade, and much speculation followed later by his congregation as where the reverend gentleman was about to remove and when.

The Review is now in a position to state that Rev. Dougall Brown will leave this city after the second Sunday in May to assume the pastorate of a church in Scotland, Ont., near Brantford.

In the removal of Rev. Dougall Brown, Park Street Church loses a loved and earnest pastor, and the city will lose a valued citizen.

PROTECTS RATTLESNAKES

Winsted, Conn., April 20.—Because prohibition forbids the carrying of snake-bite cure the natives here have discontinued the rattlesnake hunt which has been an annual springtime feature of hunting activities here. The hunters have formed a new club and will go after wildcats instead of rattlers in future.

Further appropriation by Congress and the soldier bonus, which is estimated will cost the Government $1,000,000,000, are not included. Last December Secretary Glass figured that running expenses would amount to $6,097,237,000. But he did not take into acount the loss in government operation of railroads.

The principal items which go to make up the nine months' expenses are: War Department, $1,301.605,000; Railroad Administration, $775.590,000 Navy Department, $621,364,000; Shipping Board, $433,100.000, and interest on the public debt, $664,923,000. Congress has spent for its own maintenance $15,300,000, and the executive offices cost $6.177,000.

DID NOT THINK IT WAS POSSIBLE

MISS PARENT COULDN'T BELIEVE MEDICINE COULD DO WHAT TANLAC DID FOR HER.

"Four four months before taking Tanlac I was almost an absolute wreck, but now I am well and strong again," said Miss Marie Parent of 1367 Notre Dame street, East, Montreal, when seen by the Tanlac representative at her home recently.

"For a long while I have suffered from indigestion. After eating I had the sensation of a big lump in the pit of my stomach and I would be seized with such spells of nervous coughing that I could not retain my food and would almost suffocate. I had spells of dizziness when my eyesight became so affected that I seemed to be standing in a cloud of smoke. My circulation was very poor and whenever I went out i nthe cold my fingers would become number and as white and cold as marble. I finally lost all desire for food and became as weak as a girl can possibly be. I had to sit or lie down most of the day and was almost afraid to cross the room by myself for fear I would fall. My joints used to get so stiff that I was afraid I should lose the use of them altogether. At night when I did have a chance for a little rest my sleep was disturbed by the most dreadful nightmares.

"It was father who read in the papers the remarkable way Tanlac was helping people and one day he brought a bottle for me. I never would have believed it possible for a medicine to do what Tanlac has done for me. Why very soon I had a surprisingly big appetite and could eat meals that I never thought I should ever touch. I soon found that I could digest my food perfectly. I no longer suffered from the cold when going out and my sleep at night is as restfull as a child's. I never thought I should be so strong as I am today, and instead of having to be waited on I am able to work like my other sisters. I can now take my share of attending to the younger ones. Many of my relatives and friends have tried Tanlac and are all enthusiastic about it. No one who has not used it can have an idea what a remarkable medicine it is.

BIG RAID ON

the raids until the Burns operatives began knocking down the doors of gambling houses and disreputable resorts under the direction of Allen C. Meyers, chief operative of the Burns agency; William Marvin, general manager, and oJhn MacDonough.

The Burns men had received wide powers from the Mayor and the Commissioner of Police. Here is one paragraph of a letter, signed by Commissioner J. C. Stanley, which every raider carried in his pocket:

"Police officials and officers are to assist him in the performance of his particular duty when called upon to do so, and any officer in the city of Bridgeport, no matter what his rank, who may interfere with the above officer in the performance of his duty is hereby suspended."

Each of the Burns operatives wore under the lapel of his coat the badge of a special deputy sheriff, and none of them was interfered with by the regular Bridgeport police. They battered down doors, subdued frightened inmates and frequenters of the resorts with guns or with their fists, and in many instances uniformed policemen stood by watching, without lending a hand to either side.

Burns Men Accuse Police.

The Burns men said they learned that some twelve or fifteen of the city's police have been paid for protection, and also that 60 per cent. of the earnings of women in the resorts was taken from them by members of the "vice ring."

BLIND VETERAN NOW PLEADS FOR WIDOWS

ASKS PENSIONS COMMITTEE FOR $1,200 ANNUALLY FOR TOTALLY DISABLED

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 20.— James H. Rawlinson, blind veteran of Toronto, was the only witness heard this morning by the special committee of pensions. He pleaded for more generous treatment of widows and dependents and totally disabled men. He asked that $1 200 annually be awarded for total disability, with five hundred per annum for an attendant. Of the sufferings of blinded soldiers he said, there was no monotony like that to total blackness.

mention the establishment of branches of the Holy Name Society in the various parishes; the creation of a more solid Catholic piety among the laity through frequent and even daily recourse to that fountain of grace, the blessed Eucharist; the increase in the number and efficiency of our primary schools, and the founding of a Catholic High school, which latter institution has been the means of inducing a much larger number of our young people to avail themselves of the advantages of that secondary education so necessary to fit them for professional careers and to pursue their studies under the guidance and protection of the Church.

A consideration of the nature of your mission, my Lord animates within us feelings of devotion to the Holy See, and we cannot let the occasion pas without giving expression, in some faint manner, to the love and loyalty that we entertain for our Holy Father, Pope Benedict XV. Unless it dwell on Christ Himself, the mind and heart of a Catholic priest can have no grander concept of true dignity and rightful authority than that with which the head of Christ's Church is invested. The most sacred trust that God ever imparted to man is given him; and how zealously has this trust not been guarded, especially during those perilous and conflicting movements of the last six years! Throughout the dreadful calamity of the world war, in spite of the false accusations that malice and irreligion hurled against him. He showed through it all that he was a ruler not of one nation, but the ruler and common father of all the faithful. Wherever there was injustice, wherever wanton cruelty, suffering and death, be it on one side or on the other, thither went also his pity, his solicitude and his help. His labors for the welfare of humanity, his untiring efforts in the cause of justice, have set up a record truly imperishable.

Since it is to such a one as this my Lord, that you are about to make your official visit, is it any wonder that the occasion should bring a thrill of joy to your heart and to the hearts of your priests? In spirit we will accompany you as you visit these places so redolent of the Church's triumphs and of the sanctity of her children; as you ask the blessing of His Holiness upon your future labor and oars: as you witness those imposing ceremonies that mark the addition of new names to the role of the Church's canonized saints, and as you renew the happy associations which you formed in the early days of your priesthood within the walls of the Canadian College.

In conclusion we ask your Lordship to accept this purse as a slight token of our reverence for your exalted office and of our devotion to and esteem for yourself. It will be our earnest hope and prayer that your journey may be without mishap, and that you may in the course of a few months return to your native city with renewed vigor and laden with choice blessings for your priests and people.

His Lordship Replies.

Bishop O'Brien was deeply touched by this manifestation of affection and esteem, and in his reply thanked the clergy, the parishioners and the citizens at large for the many honors which had been conferred upon him. "Words are empty things," His Lordship said, "but I wish to express to you something of the deep regard, with which I think of the members of this diocese and the people of this city." Continuing Bishop O'Brien expressed appreciation of the many kindnesses which he had received on all sides in the event of his departure for Rome, and wished God's blessing on all.

The following clergy was present: Mgr. Casey, Mgr. Murray, Fathers Scanlan, Bretherton, C. J. Phelan, P. McGuire, J. J. O'Brien, F. J. O'Sullivan, J. J. O'Sullivan, V. G. McFadden, P. J. Galvin, W. P. Meagher, J. V. McAuley, J. J. McCarthy, J. J. Guiry, P. Costello, C. C. Cantillon, L. Gorman, A. B. Cote, M. S. O'Brien, J. Ferguson, J. J. Leonard.

Big Crowd at Station.

A large crowd of citizens were present at the G.T.R. station to bid His Lordship 'bon voyage."

The Bishop and clergy of the diocese here tendered a banquet at St. Peter's rectory by Father Phelan.

Halifax yesterday had a snowstorm which reached the proportions of a blizzard.

ANGRY RATEPAYER DRAWS GUN ON YORK TOWNSHIP COUNCILLORS

Takes Exception to Rebuke of Reeve Miller and Waves His Weapon—Councillors Seek Cover.

Toronto, April 20.—With a shout of, "This is a forty-four. Now I will get justice," Harry Hayes of 167 Rosethorn avenue yesterday afternoon whipped out a revolver and held up the entire Council of York Township. There was a hasty scramble for cover among the members of the Council and the reporters present, and had Reeve Fred Miller not been fortunate enough to make his escape from the Council chamber into the outer office it is possible that a tragedy might have occurred. One staid member of the Council sought refuge behind an upturned office chair, through the perforated bottom of which he viewed the entire proceedings.

After waving his gun for a minute or two at the Council, Hayes slipped it again into his pocket, and this action was the signal for a general exodus of members from the Council chamber, made with more haste than decorum. Locking the door so that he could not escape, they immediately notified the police. Police Constables Jarvis and Gibson from No. 1 Station were rushed to the scene, and Hayes was immediately arrested on a charge of pointing a revolver. His only statement when arrested was: "This is not the end of this. There was a purpose in this."

Wanted the Reeve.

The reason for Hayes' action is at present a mystery, unless it be that he is mentally unbalanced. Yesterday morning at ten o'clock he had appeared at the office of York Township and inquired when the Chairman of the Council would be in. On being told by Mr. Martin, the Assistant Clerk, that Reeve Miller would be at the meeting at the Township Council at 2.30, Hayes went off, to appear again punctually at 2.30 o'clock.

After sitting quietly in the Council chamber for about half an hour while the ordinary routine business of the Council proceeded, Hayes was invited by Reeve Miller to state his case to the Council. On receiving this invitation, Hayes' first request was that the lady typist might be sent out of the Council chamber. Though the request was somewhat unusual, Reeve Miller complied with it, and the girl was told to go into the outer office.

Trouble Over Culvert.

"I am going back to 1914," were the next words o fHayes, "when I installed, at my own expense, a culvert a tmy house on Rosethorn avenue, after you had refused to put in for me." Following this statement was a mass of irrelevant detail regarding the installation of the culvert, its construction and its size.

Here ensued argument between the two reeves and Hayes, in the course of which Reeve Miller threatened to send for the police. This incensed Hayes, who pulled a forty-four and threatened to shoot.

BROKE INTO PENN.

New York, April 20 — Andrew Wasser reversed the usual proceeding the other day when he broke into Sing Sing penitentiary. He had escaped from an insane asylum in Poughkeepsie. "I like this place better," he told the Sing Sing guards who found him.

SEVERAL WELL-KNOWN CITIZENS OFFER THEIR SERVICES AS REFEREES

Arrangements for the opening of the football season at the Exhibition grounds on Saturday next at 3 p.m. were completed at a meeting of the executive committee held last night in Sutcliffe's barber shop. President Parker was in the chair.

TO RE-ESTABLISH GOOD RELATIONS

WAVE OF ANTI-BRITISH FEELING IN UNITED STATES WILL PASS

U. S. WRITER UPHOLDS FRANCE

GERMANY ALTHOUGH DEFEATED A LONG WAY SHORT OF REPENTANT

Toronto, April 20.—While admitting that at the present time the United States was swept by a wave of anti-British feeling for which Sinn Fein propaganda and the exigencies of Presidential campaign manoeuvring were partially responsible, William Frederick Wile predicted at the Canadian Club luncheon at the King Edward Hotel yesterday that when the heat of the election was over Anglo-American relations would find their proper cordial level, Mr. Wile voiced the belief that the Americans would revert to the attitude which had prompted them to enter the war and would realize and accept heir world duties. He pointed out frankly that it would be well for the United States to prepare for a "political rainy day" when the friendship of the British Empire would stand them in good stead.

The speaker is an American journalist who has been afforded unusual opportunities for acquiring a broad viewpoint with regard to the Anglo-American situation. Only recently he returned to his native land after twenty years abroad. For a long period he was the correspondent for American publications in Berlin, Germany, and later accepted a similar appointment for the Northcliffe papers of England. When the war broke out he removed to London, England, where he continued his journalistic work for the Northcliffe syndicate.

Referring to Sinn Fein activities in the United States, Mr. Wile declared: "I sympathize with Ireland. I believe Britain owes a square deal to Ireland, but a square deal within the British Empire." Continuing, he asserted that Ireland during the war, far from being oppressed, had really been the one unoppressed portion of the Empire. "Ireland suffering no restrictions of her eating or drinking," he said. "Irishmen were free to decide whether they would fight for the Empire or not, and Ireland, for very good reasons, had to endure no German air raids."

He remarked that the people of the United States had heard only one side of the Irish question, and he urged that the British people should spread the English version of the controversy before it was too late to prevent he prevalent misrepresentations being accepted as the true conception of the dispute.

Germany Unrepentant

In dealing briefly with Germany he asserted that the Germans, "though down were not out." "We are dealing with a Germany in defeat but unrepentant, and the only regret that the Germans have about the war is that they lost it," he said. "I ask you to believe with me that France has lived alongside the German peril for fifty years. France alone practically has known the terror of invasion. If hundreds of our young women had been deported to Germany to slavery and somethings worse, we would be better able to appreciate France's attitude now."

The CRESSMAN Company Limited

CELEBRATION OF 250th ANNIVERSARY OF HUDSON'S BAY COMPANY MAY THIRD

Sir Robert Kindersly, C.B.E., Will Come From England to Take Part in Grand River Pageant.

Winnipeg, Man., April 19.— With Indian fur brigades and York boatas loaded wtih peltries on Red River, council fires burning at Lower Fort Garry and the smoke of the peace pipe scenting the air, the romance of wilderness days will live again at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company which will be inaugurated in Winnipeg, May 3rd.

Sir Robert Kindersley, G. B. E. latest of the distinguished line of Hudson's Bay company governors that began with Prince Rupert, valiant champion of the house of Stuart in the Cromwellian wars, will come from England and take part in the river pageant and in the subsequent street pageants which will be held successively in Edmonton, Calgary Vancouver and Victoria.

The Red River paggant; which promises to be one of the most interesting-historical spectacle ever staged in Canada, will start from the site of old Fort Garry, early capital of the company's once vast empire and down stream eighteen miles to Lower about which Winnipeg grew, and pass Fort Garry. Tricked out in bravery of paint, feathers and beaded buckskin Indians from a dozen tribes will man York boats and canoes in fur brigade formation. To do honor to the company to which their ancestors paid loyal allegiance. Crees will come from the shores of Hudson Bay; Swampy Crees from James Bay; Ojibways from the Lake Superior fur country; Plain Crees from northern Saskatchewan; Blackfeet, Piegans and Assiniboines form the prairies and the Rocky Mountains; and tribesmen from the Athabasca and British Columbia.

A flotilla of freight boats piled high with bales of furs will trail in the wake of the York boats in charge of factors and trappers in pioneer costumes. As it glides in long procession through a countryside famous in Hudson's Bay traditions,, past the site of old Fort Douglas, the scenes of Lord Selkirk's Red River settlements and the battlefield of Seven Oaks where Governor Semple and twenty men fel in conflict with their rivals of the NorthWest Company, the pageant will seem to sail out of the past of 250 years ago.

When it reaches Lower Fort Garry, whose stone buildings and battlemented stone walls still preserve the picturesqueness of early days, two ancient brass cannons at the gate will boom a salute from their rusty throats Within the walls of the old stronghold where the first treaty was signed between Canada and the western Indians in 1871, Governor Kindersley will seal anew the ancient friendship between the Redmen and the company by smoking the calumet of peace. The pipe, specially designed for the occasion, will bear carved upon its stem the totems of all the tribes and will be presented to the governor as a souvenir. Sir Robert will confer upon each of the braves a medal struck in honor of the anniversary and at a council at which the Indians which squat upon the ground in a wide semicircle, will reply to orations by the sachems and chieftains. After the speeches the Indians will present a wampum belt to the governor in ratification of their pledges of fealty, and will partake of an old-fashioned feast.

Street pageants will celebrate the company's birthday in Edmonton from May 6 to 8; in Calgary from May 11 to 13; in Vancouver from May 17 to 19; and in Victoria from May 21 to 24. Symbolic floats and tableaux ,interspersed with Indians, trappers and dog-teams, will picture the company's pioneer achievements while Dominion, provincial and city officials, clubs, societies and civic bodies will swell the parades. During the pageants it is expected the five cities concerned will declare holidays.

PETERBORO'S PLAN OF GOVERNMENT

BY EX-ALDERMAN EDGAR.

The Board of Works.

Board of Works: This is the largest spending committee of the City Council. Its members comprised up to this year the whole Council. It has to do with all matters pertaining to roads, bridges, streets, sidewalks, sewers and is in fact very much similar to the Public Works Department of the Provincial Government, only on a smaller scale. The chairman of this committee is a very busy man, as his time is so taken up with the duties of the committee that he has very little left for his own business. The work of this committee is not as simple as some might suppose, in fact a great deal is already provided for in the municipal statue. For instance, the building of a sewer. This cannot be done without advertising the same for a period of three weeks. Plans have to be drawn, estimates given, and the whole proceeding sent to the Provincial Board of Health for approval. Again, a tree cannot be cut down (unless dead) without the consent of the owner of the property on whose land the tree is, without first giving him ten days' notice, and many other things are provided by statue.

This committee comes in for more criticism than any of the other committees and is very often unjust, harsh, uncalled for, and were the public more familiar with its work and methods, its powers, etc., they would not criticise so very much. Owing to the very high tax rate this committee is compelled to keep down the appropriations, even though some very important work may be left undone. These men meet very often and carefully plan what is best to do with the limited amount of money at their disposal, and while some of the money spent, seems to be wasted, yet it is not their fault. The public demand repairs to certain streets, sidewalks, sewers, drains, etc., and with only a small sum at their disposal, these repairs are necessarily very small and only temporary.

Don't be everlastingly finding fault because that small hole in front of your lot was not filled just the minute you thought it should be. If there is any fault to find be prepared to assume some of the responsibility. Who is responsible for the methods adopted by this committee? Answer: "The public." So long as you sanction business being carried on in this way, you have absolutely "no kick." If you want a different method adopted, then say so. If you think it better to have your money expended by the Board of Works Committee, by men who give their time gratis, and do the best they can well and good. But if you would rather have it expended by men elected by you and paid by you where you can demand the very best for your money—in fact your work carried on and your money expended by experts—then it is time for you to agitate for such a system.

More will be said later on about this system, which is working so well in a great many places in Canada and the United States. Think of the spectacle presented to you last year in letting the contract for the Hunter street bridge—meetings held night after night, week after week: contracts awarded one night only to be recinded the following night—until the Board of Works became the laughing stock of the whole community, and contrast this with what might have happened had, say three or four experts been representing you.

BRITISH LION IS STILL MUCH ALIVE

NEW CUNARDER "SCYTHIA" WILL BE MODE COMPLETE LINER AFLOAT

The new Cunarder, "Scythia," which is to be launched from the yard of Messrs. Vickers, Limited, Barrow, on the 23rd inst., will be in her construction and her fitting out the most up-to-date and complete liner afloat. In both respects she will possess features that have never before been incorporated in any passenger ship.

She is not only the largest liner to be designed and built for the burning of oil fuel, but she is the first vessel of the liner type to have double reduction geared turbines. The adoption of this solves a most important problem for engineers, the operation of both turbines and propellers at their respective natural and economical speeds. A further departure from all previous practice is that all deck machinery, such as winches, windlasses, capstans, etc., instead of being driven by steam are driven by electro hydraulic power. The steering gear, too, is of the electro hydraulic type, and is connected not only to the main dynamo but to the emergency dynamo. The latter is unusually large and powerful and should the main dynamo get of order the emergency set can not only light the ship but maintain most of the electrical auxiliaries in working order. The "Scythia" will be fitted with a gyroscopic compass, a remarkable invention, which, unlike the usual compass, is not affected by magnetic North, and requires no adjustment.

The "Ccythia" is 600 feet long, with a beam of 73½ feet, and a depth of 45 feet. Her gross tonnage will be 21,000. She will have a speed of 16 knots, and accommodation for 2,600 passengers. Her turbines are capable of developing a collective shaft horse power of about 12,500. Not only in her construction does she possess new features, but also in her passenger accommodation. It includes two garden lounges for saloon passengers, also a verandah cafe for the sole use of second-class passengers.

Another feature worthy of note will be the numerous small subsidiary rooms or alcoves. Forming extensions to the public rooms, from which they are partially separated, these small rooms afford parties of friends comparative seclusion, but allow them at the same time to keep in touch with the proceedings in the main department. Her public rooms, in addition to the dining saloons, will include drawing-rooms, writing-rooms, libraries, and smoking-rooms. There will also be private suites comprising sitting-rooms, bedrooms, baths and entrance hall.

Never on any ship before has such care been devoted to the design of the accommodation for third-class passengers. Open berth systems have been entirely dispensed with, and throughout the ship third-class passengers are berthed in commodious rooms, each accommodating two to four persons. Spacious alleyways separate the groups of rooms, and any congestion is now completely done away with. Two large dining saloons, a general room, and smoking room, all commodious, well lighted, and well ventilated, and ample open and covered promenade spaces complete a scheme that is unexcelled in any ship.

The accommodation for the crew, too, is on a scale of comfort and thoroughness unapproached in any ship hitherto.

Wm. Bell, K.C., for 52 years a lawyer in Hamilton, and for 20 years on the Board of Education, died at the age of 77.

Motor Boat from War's Crucible.

The pacificists at least cannot find in the motor boat an insidious enemy of their own peculiar tenets, but it is an awkward fact that the motor boat is going to be the better for the war. This is shown conclusively by the Motor Boat Show in New York. One significant fact is that virtually "every exhibitor at the show had tales to tell of inquiries made by men who first came to know of the enjoyment and sport offered by power craft during their service afloat in the service of Uncle Sam." The British can tell the same tale of their mosquito fleet that did such yeoman service "wherever it was a little damp." A most encouraging statement, that the influence of war experience makes for increased seaworthiness of design, is to be noticed. It has been a feature of motor boats designed for pleasure and business in the past that seaworthiness has been sacrificed either to comfort or speed or both, and the fact that the motor boat seldom has sail power has sometimes been unpleasantly emphasized. Too many have known what it was to have the motor stopped and presently to ship a sea or two. There lay the craft, her cockpit awash, while she bumped and staggered helplessly. To meet such contingencies, there is more tendency to inclose the bridge deck and thus to have the controls under cover, a most practical change, the wisdom of which is to be praised. Nothing is said of any device whereby the chug-chug of the fisherman's power boat is to be tamed and mollified. This hardy adventurer does not mind the noise, but others do who have seen a whole stretch of honest coast made well-nigh intolerable by this nuisance. Perhaps it is a small matter of enforcing the law.

Quadricentennial of Magellan.

March, 1921, will be a good time to visit the Philippines, for it will then be an even 400 years since Fernao de Magalhaes, as he was named in his native Portuguese, although better known, as English usage afterward changed it, by the name of Ferdinand Magellan, first visited the islands, discovering and taking possession of them for the crown of Spain. And plans are now under consideration to celebrate that anniversary in a way to outdo any celebration ever held in the Orient. One will hear, no doubt, a great deal about Magellan in the next twelve months, and the first navigator of the Pacific will reappear in newspaper columns and magazine articles; nor is it unlikely that his counterfeit presentment will rediscover the Philippines in a proper pageant. The celebration, indeed, comes at an appropriate time, for the Pacific Ocean is only just assuming reality in the thoughts of the great majority of Americans, and it provides historic background against which the modern islands can display their products, their development, and their opportunities for the investment of American capital. Like Columbus, Magellan was not seeking new lands for Spain. He set out to find a passage from the Atlantic to the ocean that Balboa had seen some years earlier on the other side of the continent, and having passed through the Strait of Magellan, he believed that he was steering for the Moluccas, or Spice Islands. And so, incidentally, he found the Philippines.

The Oldest Drawings.

The oldest drawings in the world are believed to have been made about 25,000 years ago by prehistoric man in the caves of the Pyrenees mountains, says Boys Life. Some of these pictures show remarkable skill in drawing, suggesting that civilization was comparatively well advanced at this period. From the relics of this period it is believed that these men had a religion of some kind, that they buried their dead, were governed by chiefs and made instruments of flint. Examples of their painting and sculpture have been found. As man goes about the earth analyzing and dissecting every object a great amount of scientific information is being gathered which will some day enable him to solve this great mystery of his early history.

The Alto Parana River.

The Alto Parana river, which divides Paraguay from Argentina and Brazil, and its many tributaries, would make Paraguay an important industrial centre. The power of these waters is practically unknown. It is estimated as having, in some places, a fall of 200 feet and a force of 100,000-horsepower. The Iguazu falls are regarded as even more powerful than Niagara.

Elizabeth's Prayer.

There had been a difference in opinion in the preacher's family in which six-year-old Elizabeth thought she got the worst of it. So at prayer-time she was unhappy and resentful toward the world in general and her own ministerial family in particular. But she knelt at her mother's knee as usual and went through her usual evening petitions. Finally she prayed: "Oh, Lord, make all the bad people good." Then as an afterthought she added: "And, God, if you can, please make all the good people nice."

Assyrians Have Strong Case

Although it may be found impossible, not to say inadvisable, to grant to the Assyrian Christians the demands they are putting forward in London, through their representative, Severius Aphrem Barsaum, Archbishop of Assyria, there can be no doubt that, like all other Christian peoples of the former Turkish empire, they should be assured security from the Turk and the Kurd.

The case for the Assyrians is not an easy one to adjudicate upon. Their sufferings during the war have undoubtedly been as shameful as their courage and determination have been remarkable. In spite of the fact that, in the early days of the war, the Russians failed to come to their aid, as they had promised to, the Assyrians never submitted to the demands of the Turk that they should take up arms with them against the Allies. Neither did they cease to resist with dogged determination the attacks which were made upon them in consequence. When the Russians failed to send them the guns, ammunition, and reinforcements they had promised, the Assyrians retreated into the mountains, and, when it was found impossible to winter there, and help was still lacking, more than 70,000 of them, men, women, and children, undertook the perilous retreat to the Russian lines in Persia. There they remained in comparative safety until the outbreak of the Russian revolution, and the collapse of the Russian army on all fronts abandoned them, once again, to their own resources. They refused to retreat with the Russians, established themselves as best they could, and, in spite of repeated onslaughts from Turk and Kurd, managed to hold their positions. Some time after the British forces entered Baghdad communication was opened with them, and ultimately they were transported to the banks of the Tigris, where they have remained ever since, under British protection.

The 50,000 or so who managed to complete the journey to Baghdad represent only a comparatively small part of the Assyrian people, who claiming direct descent from the ancient Assyrians, have, for centuries, inhabited that ill-defined territory along the borders of Persia, Turkey and Russia. In the course of a recent interview with a representative of the press, in London, Archbishop Severius declared that some 200,000 members of the Assyrian race had been massacred by the Turks and the Kurds, during the war, and that although large numbers of Assyrians were now living in safety under British and French protection, many others were still at the mercy of the Turk. Their position, in fact, is very much the same as that of the Armenians, and, indeed, in point of actual hardship and suffering, the Assyrian story is much the same as the Armenian.

The Assyrian claim, however, for the "emancipation of the vilayets of Diarbekir, Bitlis, Kharput, and Ourfa, wherein they could live a national life of their own," could scarcely be entertained, if by this is meant the formation out of these territories of a separate Assyrian state. The vilayets of Diarbekir, Bitlis, and Kharput are three of the six historic vilayets of Turkish Armenia, and must unquestionably be embodied in the new Armenian state. The case for the Assyrians, nevertheless, needs to be heard, not only for its own sake, but because it reinforces so tremendously the case for the abolition of Turkish rule from these regions, and the establishment, once for all, of some form of righteous government.—Christian Science Monitor.

The Cats of Warsaw.

A picturesque story of the war comes from Warsaw, where all the cats had disappeared. One went about the city and saw never a cat. So completely had the cats vanished that when the Red Cross warehouse, just outside of Warsaw, became overrun with rats and mice, to the serious damage of food and clothing stored in it, almost every other expedient was thought of and tried before it occurred to anybody that perhaps there might be a cat or two still left somewhere in the community. Then some official of the warehouse mentioned to a Polish workman that if a cat could be found, the animal would be a great help in protecting the Red Cross property; and from here, there, and everywhere came the wives of the citizens, and the citizens themselves, each carefully hearing a treasured cat. As the story goes, there seemed to be as many cats offered for duty in the Red Cross warehouse as there were rats and mice at work in it. The emergency had overcome the unwillingness of the people to admit that they were guarding their pets, and after a guardian had been chosen for the warehouse, the cats again disappeared from Warsaw.

"The adjective still clings to him."

"How is that?"

HOUSECLEANING TIME

In the Spring a Woman's Fancy Turns That Way.

She Finds the Work Fascinating—Some Very Practical Hints as to Doing the Job — Recipes for Cleaning and Polishing.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

Housecleaning for the most part is a fascinating work, that is, after we pass the cellar. After all, this is really the most important part of the house and should receive first consideration in the spring. Probably it will never be known how much of the low state of vitality found in some families is to be charge to illy-ventilated, badly-lighted, poorly-drained cellars, where decaying vegetables are kept, sending its foul germ-laden air to every part of the house. If vegetables are stored in the cellar they should be carefully picked over and all growth and decayed ones removed. In addition to thoroughly cleaning, the walls should be whitewashed, and if the cellar is at all damp, it is well to keep a metal or earthen receptacle containing unslaked lime constantly present. Not a day should pass without the cellar being properly aired. In the very hot summer days, the windows should be opened every night and closed during the day. The reason for this is, that the outdoor air in the daytime is much warmer than in the cellar. This warm, moist-laden air enters the cooler atmosphere of the cellar, and the moisture condenses and rests on all surfaces making the cellar damp and warm. By opening the windows at night and closing them in the daytime the cellar is kept dry, pure and clean. It is well, too, before leaving the cellar to see that the screens are placed properly in the windows—screens of fine wire netting to prevent flies, or insects entering. We cannot emphasize too emphatically the need for proper protection against flies. More diseases are caused by flies than we are wont to believe, and while doing the spring cleaning it is well to see that each room is screened properly to prevent the entrance of flies.

If we attend to the little things before we start the actual cleaning, such as sorting and cleaning drawers, putting away furs, winter curtains, extra blankets, etc., and laying in a supply of cleaning materials, this will save a lot of time. It has been customary to envy the home with new furniture. We think it would be easy to make the house look well if we just had some new chairs, dressers, tables, etc., but, as a matter of fact, it does not make the housecleaning half as interesting as if we have some old furniture (which we have longed to discard for years) to transform into something new. What could be more fascinating than the painting of chairs, tables and other furniture in order to have it harmonize with the walls, the drapery, the woodwork, and the floor.

It is not only that a floor looks much better if it is painted or polished, but it saves time and energy in cleaning. The rough surface collects grease, moisture, dust settles into it and soon grimy discolored and unhealthy conditions exist. Pine floors are hard to keep clean. The following methods of treating them may be of value:

1st. Spread over the floor strips of old sheeting; to this add two coats of paint. This will secure a very satisfactory border for the floor and the centre may be covered with a rug.

2nd. Apply a coat of linseed oil. Then fill cracks with "Crack and Crevice Filler," and apply an oak stain and two coats of floor finish.

It is difficult to say which rooms in the house should receive the most careful consideration. The bedroom is important because it is in the bedroom the person should receive that perfect sleep which will insure physical and mental strength.

"The kitchen, too, is important, because here the woman spends a great deal of her time. It will be found most satisfactory to have linoleum placed on the kitchen floor. This is easily kept clean, and is soft, warm, elastic and wears well. There should be nothing in the kitchen which can not be washed. The furniture, walls, etc., should be washable. While cleaning this spring it is especially important that we should see that all the utensils which are being used constantly should be in a convenient place, and if possible, closed cupboards should be placed in the kitchen. The following recipes and information may be found of value in doing the spring cleaning:

Washing Windows.—Always dust first and clean the woodwork before the glass. The glass may be washed with warm water and soap, ammonia, or kerosene, or whitening and ammonia. In washing wring the cloth almost dry, rinse off the window, and dry with a soft cloth and polish with a soft paper or cloth.

Painted Woodwork.—Wash in warm soapy water with a soft cloth, doing a little at a time and drying as you go along. For light painted wood use whitening paste.

Vanished Woodwork.—If very soiled use soap and water. Dry very thoroughly and then rub with ammonia or kerosene. To use kerosene just dampen the cloth and after rubbing on the varnished woodwork rub again with a dry cloth. If not, you will find a white glow will result.

Dustless Dusters.—Dip the cheese cloth in a mixture made from ½ cup melted parowax.

Note.—These dusters may be washed several times before they require to be dipped again.

There are many helpful suggestions for cleaning, and labor-saving devices appearing in weekly papers and magazines from time to time. It is a good plan to cut these out, place them in a labelled envelope or box for future use.—Miss D. M. Sutherland, Women's Institutes Branch.

Make 2,000 Ukeleles a Month.

The ukulele, the Hawaiian musical instrument, which has attained considerable popularity in the United States the last year or two, was first produced by a Portuguese at Honolulu, and it at once made a hit with the natives. It is made chiefly from a native wood known as koa wood. The peculiar tone is obtained only when well-seasoned wood is used, properly prepared and fitted. In the islands the instruments sell at from $3.75 to $20 each, according to quality and decoration. In the past year the monthly production of instruments has trebled, that for September amounting to 1,600. A company was recently organized at Honolulu to manufacture 2,000 ukuleles a month; it is estimated that the total output in the coming year will be about 40,000.

Will Develop Island Property.

Evidently there is one man in England who is not seriously disturbed by the idea that the ownership of large estates will progressively give way to the division of land into small holdings; at any rate Lord Leverholme has not hesitated to purchase Lewis island, which, next to Great Britain and Ireland, is the largest of the British Isles. Lewis island covers some 770 square miles, off the west coast of Scotland, and has a present population of about 30,000 people. This, however, it is said, the new owner regards as quite an inadequate population for his island, which he thinks should reasonably support 300,000. His idea is to make his property the center of the British fishing business, and he has already shown his ability on the Mersey.

A Peer as a Corporal.

Lord Crawford, chancellor of the duchy of Lancaster, whose principal house is Haigh hall, Wigan, has applied as "Corporal Crawford" for membership in the Wigan branch of the Comrades of the Great War. In the early days of the war he enlisted as a private in the Royal Army Medical corps, served in France as a private, and was later promoted to a corporal, which rank he still retains.

STYLES KEEP WOMEN YOUNG

Desire for Latest and Prettiest Things an Evidence of Wisdom, According to Authority.

"Woman has gained her political and intellectual freedom," said Emil W. Kohn in an address before the New York Retail Jewelers' convention at Saratoga. "She has declared in public and in private that never again will she be the slave of men. But I venture that she will remain the willing slave of fashion.

The woman who declares she would rather be dead than out of fashion expresses a thought in every woman's mind. As it is a man's privilege to pay the bills, he may at times express displeasure. That man, however, who is permanently and chronically displeased at or indifferent to milady's pretty hat, becoming gown and beautiful jewelry is a brute and should be caged with other wild animals.

"To be contented with the thoughts and things of yesterday is to stand still, and stagnation breeds decay. To be sensitive to new ideas is to be youthful. Woman's desire to possess jewelry that is new and fashionable and beautiful is an evidence of growth, and growth is the law of life."

Saw George Eliot's Ghost.

The death of Mrs. Katherine Macquoid, the veteran novelist, at the great age of ninety three, severs another of the few remaining links with the Victorian past. A contemporary of George Eliot, Mrs. Macquoid used to tell how she once saw the famous writer in a vision.

When George Eliot went to live at Chelsea Mrs. Macquoid proposed to go and call on her. But before she could do so a remarkable and tragic thing happened.

One night Mrs. Macquoid awoke suddenly, and saw the figure of George Eliot standing between the bed and the wall. The apparition was distinct and unmistakable. On the following evening Mrs. Macquoid learned of George Eliot's death.

"FI-FI OF THE TOY SHOP"

"Fi-Fi" is just the sort of entertainment that one would expect if Hans Christian Anderson, and Gene Field should decide to liven up "The House Boat of Styx" as a musical extravaganza.

Legendary characters are portrayed in living flesh and blood and when the Man-in-the-Moon in an impulsive moment rashly promises to fickle Fi-Fi (the finest Parisian Doll in the shop) that if she will marry him he will never go out at nights and never get full, we sober minded folks far removed from the subtle spell of moonshine and Marguerites will certainly agree that this is a reckless vow for even a moon-man to make.

Then there is our old friend, the Sandman, and Aurelia, who was late of Queen Mab & Co.," and all sorts of toy and fairy creatures dear to the heart of childhood days. Two hundred local people appear in the big extravaganza. The popularity of the production is attested by the fact that more than 2,000 performances have been staged by Mr. Rogers and his associate producers. The production has been well received everywhere and it is expected that Peterborough will be no exception to the rule.

Nature seeks other means than that of the wind to carry seed from place to place. Whoever tramps through the autumn woods must needs extricate himself from patches in which ticks and burrs have made life miserable for him. All over his clothes will be sticking the hairy, two jointed pods or seed vessels of the tick.

"Father of the Chapel."

This term, as applied to the printing industry, is one of religious derivation. When centuries ago, printing was done in monasteries, it was customary to discuss all matters connected with the work in the chapel, with the father superior in the chair. Hence the term "Father of the Chapel."

Japanese Training.

Japanese children begin to study jiu-jitsu in their earliest years, for it is a system of physical culture, hygiene and ethics, and the exercises give strength and flexibility to the limbs. Later the pupil is shown the fine art of using an adversary's strength against himself.

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

LAWN BOWLERS TAKE 3 FROM THE PASTIMES

PETES WILL ROLL IN BIG TOURNAMENT IN TORONTO THURSDAY

Last night at the Water street alleys the Lawn Bowlers took three straights from the Pastimes. Some good score were put up by the Lawn Bowlers, four of their men passing the 500 mark—Gillian 596, Maynard 571, Pratt 568, Ross 515. For the Pastimes Eakins was high with 530.

For Toronto Tournament.

Peterborough bowlers roll in the Toronto tournament on Thursday, and the boys are getting into good shape. The five-men team will compose of J. Maynard, A. Gillian, T. Pratt, J. Perry, H. Ballard. They will also roll in doubles and singles. T. Barrette and Jake Solomon will also roll in doubles and singles.

Meet on Saturday.

The 6th Line and 8th Line of Otonabee will meet on Saturday for a match game. The way the out-of-town boys are bowling, it would take a hard team from the city to beat them.

Special Prize for Bowlers.

Mr. Sid Jackson of the Regent Tailors donates a pair of trousers made to measure to the Peterborough bowler who wins the highest prize from this city in the five-pin tournament which is taking place this week in Toronto.

INDOOR BASEBALL

Collegiate Institute Team Failed to Clean Up Belmonts.

The intentions and hopes of the Collegiate indoor baseball team to clean up the Belmonts last night were not realized and the reverse turned out to be pretty much the case in the actual playing. Despite all their efforts the school boys could do nothing to prevent the Belmonts from piling up a tremendous advantage right from the commencement of the game and it was soon realized that it was simply going to be a case of "by how much?" When the final tally was taken it was found that the Belmonts led by a score of 26-6. Capt. Cobb, and Sergt.-Major Dunkley refereed the game.

WORK FOR WOMEN.

What British Commission Says About Canada.

The only kind of immigrant that is of any value to a country, especially a new country, is the immigrant who "comes out" fully understanding what he must expect. The weak point in many immigration efforts, in the past, has been that quantity and not quality was given first consideration. A disappointed, disillusioned immigrant is of no use to any country. It is for this reason, amongst many others, that the report, recently published, of the commission sent out to Canada, last year, by the British Government to inquire into the openings for women in the Dominion, is so specially useful.

The commissioners have done their work well. They have stated the facts just as they are, and, whilst there is no attempt to produce a discouraging picture, there is also no attempt to produce an unduly roseate one. The commissioners were well aware that the work which Canada has to offer to women is, of course, just the kind of work which will appeal to certain women, and that these women will make a success of it. They saw, in fact, that the only way to induce the right women to undertake the work, and to prevent the wrong women from doing so, was to tell the truth about the situation. Thus, in dealing with the question of domestic service, the commissioners point out that greater friendliness is to be found in Canadian homes, and opportunities are shared by mistress and maid alike. But they do not hesitate to warn prospective immigrants that Canada is not the Eldorado of the labor-saving device that it is often held out to be; that the work in domestic service is hard and, especially in the country, often very isolated. The wages, however, are good; freedom of individual action considerable; whilst life in the country offers much the same attractions and opportunities to all, no matter what particular part of the work they may be engaged upon.

The report deals with the same frankness with the teaching profession. Englishwomen able to teach are needed, especially in foreign communities. The work is hard in isolated districts, but progress is assured to those courageous enough to take up these teaching posts, whilst there are, the report insists, great attractions in such a life. Then again, the woman agriculturist is warned but not discouraged. She is told about the rigorous winters during which little or no cultivation is carried on, in many parts of Canada; she is warned that she must expect strenuous work: and she is shown the desirability of three or four women joining together in any agricultural enterprise, if they want to make a success of it.

Perhaps the chief service performed by the report, however, is the decided way in which it condemns the bonus system in immigration. Under this system the shipping agent is paid a bonus on every immigrant secured through his agency. In order, therefore, to secure as many emigrants as possible, the agent undertakes to pay practically the whole of a girl's expenses from England to her destination in Canada, requiring the girl, however, to sign a bond agreeing to make repayment by installments out of her wages. This bond is frequently taken over by the girl's employer, who thus secures a hold upon her which, until the obligation is discharged, practically reduces the girl to the status of an indentured laborer. The report is most emphatic in the matter. "Practically every experienced authority consulted in Canada," it declares, "agrees in expressing the opinion that the system of capitation bonus paid to an agent for inducing an emigrant to land in the Dominions is a mistake, and has been the source of much evil."

Religious Cults.

Religious cults were highly developed among the prehistoric peoples of middle America, and the ceremonial rites connected therewith were correspondingly elaborate. Commonly the latter included human sacrifice.

The gods, generally speaking, are temperamental beings, easily angered, extremely vindictive and merciless, and fond of flattery. This description may be said to apply to the divinities of all savage and barbarous peoples.

The sacrifice of human beings has been deemed especially pleasing to them; and among the ancient Peruvians such pious manslaughter was pursued on an extensive scale, the blood of virgins being supposed to be particularly acceptable to the powers up aloft.

In Peru are still to be seen "sacrificial stones," on which the appointed victims were obliged to recline, in a place suitably hollowed out. It was the business of the officiating priest to thrust a knife into the chest of the unfortunate person and cut out the heart.

Similar rites were frequently performed in the temples of ancient Mexico, which crowned lofty pyramids ascended by flights of steps. In this way thousands of unoffending men, women and children were put to death every year.

THEIR GREAT MOMENT GONE

Writer Has Little Expectation of Creative Ability Being Displayed by Returned Soldiers.

The spiritual point is this, writes John Galsworthy in Scribner's. In front of a man in ordinary civilized existence there hovers ever that moment in the future when he expects to prove himself more of a man than he has yet proved himself. For these soldiers of the great carnage the moment of probation is already in the past. They have proved themselves as they will never have the chance to do again, and secretly they know it. One talks of their powers of heroism and sacrifice being wanted just as much in time of peace, but that cannot really be so, because peace times do not demand men's lives—which is the ultimate test—with every minute that passes. No, the great moment of their existence lies behind them, young though so many of them are. This makes them at once greater than us, yet in a way smaller, because they have lost the power and hope of expansion. They have lived their masterpiece already. Human nature is elastic and hope springs eternal, but a climax of experience and sensation cannot be repeated: I think these have reached and passed the uttermost climax, and in Europe they number millions.

This is a veritable portent, and I am glad that in America you will not have it to any great extent.

Now how does this affect the future? Roughly speaking it must, I think, have a diminishing effect on what I may call loosely—creative ability. People have often said to me: "We shall have great writings and paintings from these young men when they come back." We shall certainly have poignant expression of their experiences and sufferings, and the best books and paintings of the war itself are probably yet to come. But, taking the long view, I do not believe we shall have from them, in the end, as much creative art and literature as we should have had if they had not been through the war.

Will Go Back to Work in France.

If Charles W. Bradlee Jr., formerly a teacher of manual arts in Worcester academy Worcester Mass., hadn't been an obliging sort of gentleman, he wouldn't be carrying a shell splinter today under his right cheekbone, so cunningly lodged there that physicians hesitate to operate for fear of his face becoming paralyzed.

While a worker with the Foyer du Soldat in France, Bradlee consented August 7 to replace another worker on the front line at Ubery. The other welfare man was away on leave so Bradlee, with his knapsack filled with Y. M. C. A. supplies went up near the front line. At that time a jagged scar caused by a shell splinter was healing on his forehead. He had been working only a short period at Ubery when a Hun shell burst and he was given another memento of service. This time the sliver of a flying shell lodged in his cheek.

Bradlee learned to love the French and will return to Flanders to work among them in the devastated sections as a member of the international committee of the Y. M. C. A. He said that he feels he will be able to aid permanently wounded men in learning new occupations.

As Man to Man.

"Doctor, I want to discuss a matter with you," said a man, stopping his medical adviser in the street; "but not in your professional capacity."

"I'm listening," said the doctor.

"It's about my liver."

"As a physician, I can't discuss your liver except in my professional capacity."

"Hang it all, doctor!" snapped the man. "I don't mind paying you a fee but I'd like to know what you would do for my liver if it were yours."

Prince Given Police Command.

It was announced by the Government in the House of Commons a few days ago that His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, had consented to become honorary commandant of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the new name of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. In a cable received from London it was stated that the prince was highly pleased with the work of the police as his escort in Western Canada, and that he was an ardent admirer of the force.

Lions as Fountains.

The water in a great many public fountains, whether for man or beast, comes out of a lion's mouth. This is said to be the reason: Among the ancient Egyptians the rising of the waters of the River Nile was the most important event of the year, since it meant life and prosperity to the whole nation. The rising always took place when the sun was in the constellation of Leo, or the lion; so the Egyptians adopted the shape of a lion as the symbol for the life-giving waters of the Nile.

COIN SURGEONS.

How Crooks Make Money With Currency.

Operative treatment by surgery has been rather popular during recent years with practitioners interested in dealing illegitimately with the currency.

The appearance in large numbers of $1 bills "raised" to an apparent denomination of $20 is typical, the best specimens of this kind having figures neatly inlaid. If one asks where the money-doctors get the nice figures the answer is that they cut them out of internal revenue stamps.

Counterfeits of any kind are so infrequently seen nowadays that even bank tellers do not look closely at the cash they handle. If paper money has an elderly and worn appearance it is particularly likely to pass without scrutiny. Manifestly it has been long in circulation, and this in itself seems a sufficient guarantee.

It is, therefore, the business of the counterfeiter to make his notes look old and worn. He has several methods, but the best is to place between two of them some wet tea leaves in a fold of tissue paper, using a hook to hold all tightly together. A most desirable discoloration is thereby obtained, and, with crumpling and repeated wettings, the money soon acquires the appearance of age.

Surgical operations are performed most commonly on gold coins, usually double eagles. Not very long ago in Philadelphia an ingenious female person made a highly profitable business of gouging out the insides of $20 pieces. With a tiny drill, driven by steampower, she bored a hole from one edge, extracted $15 worth or so of metal, filled the cavity with lead and neatly plugged the opening with gold. Just like that. Easy money.

She might have gone on with this remunerative industry indefinitely but for the fact that the treated coins were unduly light, lead being only about half as heavy as gold. She was sent to jail—a fate which likewise befell two Chinamen in Chicago who adopted the more artistic and difficult process of slicing each goldpiece in two edgewise, digging out the interior, filling the shell with lead and soldering on a thin rim of gold, the coin being finally "rereeded" in a machine to give it the requisite corrugations around the edge.

A number of years ago a clever crook hit upon the notion of gutting gold coins and filling them with platinum, which gave them about the requisite weight. Platinum at that time was worth only half as much as gold. But at the present time, when its market price is five times that of the yellow metal, the industrious money-surgeon does not find this expedient available.

Bright people, these money doctors. The United States nickels with a big "V" on them had hardly made their appearance (as will be remembered) before they were found in circulation wearing the guise of $5 gold pieces. It was a simple matter of electro-plating, requiring no apparatus other than a small tank of cyanide and a few feet of copper wire, with a plug in the wall to tap the electric-light current. But the American Treasury dropped that big "V" like a hot potato.

The same sort of modest equipment has been used to bestow an attractive gold-plating upon base-metal imitations of gold coins, but with a modification of the process whereby the requisite yellow stuff was chemically abstracted from a gold-piece at one end of a wire and deposited upon the counterfeit at the other end.

Things Looking Up in Serbia

There are many evidences of bettering conditions in Belgrade, Serbia. Belgrade university opened a short time ago. The American Red Cross is now erecting barracks to house the students during the summer.

In the spirit of the people there is a marked change for the better in the last few months. Social gatherings are more frequent, and a few moving picture theaters are in operation.

Shops in the city are gradually refilling with stocks. Prices are high. Reports from the interior indicate a large grain harvest with a possible surplus for export in South Serbia. These reports have had encouraging effect on life in the capital.

China to Make Cement.

The cement requirements of North China will probably soon be supplied by domestic production. One large concern is said to control this industry in North China, and its plant is located at Tangshan, a small town about 100 miles northeast of Tientsin, on the Peking-Mukden railway. It is equipped with modern machinery, and secures its supply of limestone on the site of the works.

THE OLD CHICORA.

Best-known Boat That Ever Plied Lake Ontario Waters.

A veteran of three wars, the most popular boat that ever sailed the Great Lakes; a victim of the great storm which swept Ontario last December when she sank; raised, dragged through the Division Court and now to be refitted for passenger service. All this is only part of the halo of romance that hangs around the steamship Chicora, built in Liverpool by Airds Company in 1864—56 years ago. At that time she could walk away from any battleship, and was built to run the blockade of the United States men-o'-war blockading the ports of the Southern Confederacy, and carry in goods from England. Under the ownership and command of Captain George Boyton, she plied between the British port of Turk's Island in the Bahamas, and the blockaded city of Charlestown, S.C. On one notable trip the vessel was spotted by one of the American patrol boats of the blockading squadron, but left the "Yank" far behind.

Crossing the Atlantic was no mean feat for this 518-ton, iron, paddle-wheel vessel. She is only 230 feet long, is 52 feet wide at her greatest breadth, and is built over a slender hull. In 1870 the Chicora was called into war service for the second time. In May of that year she sailed from Collingwood, Ont., with Col. Garnet Wolseley, late Viscount Wolseley, and a detachment of the regulars from the 60th Rifles of the regiment of H.R.H. Prince Arthur. The troops were landed on the shores of Thunder Bay and formed the first expedition for the suppression of the Riel Rebellion.

Great difficulties were experienced at first as the only lock by which vessels could pass from the level of Lake Superior was owned and controlled by the State of Michigan. Several cargoes of supplies as well as a great number of troops had to be disembarked at the Canadian Sault and portaged across to Point Aux Pins on the Canadian side of the rapids, where they were picked up by another boat and taken to their destination.

In 1874 the Chicora gained further distinction by being chartered as a special yacht for the use of Lord Dufferin, then Governor-General, on a tour through North Ontario and the Upper Lakes.

In 1878 the vessel was taken off the service of the Upper Lakes and was brought to Toronto and placed on a regular run from Toronto to Niagara. For ten years she ran single-handed until relieved by the Cibola in 1888. The following year she was overhauled and again ran on the Toronto-Niagara service until 1904, when she was placed in Kingston, Ont., drydock and replated at an expense of $37,000.

Returning on the Niagara service, and for four years carried troops and stores to the military camp at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

While the vessel was on the Toronto-Niagara route tens of thousand of Canadians and tourists from every part of the globe have fared forth as passengers on this veteran of the Great Lakes. Middle-aged citizens fondly remember the days of childhood when from a ferry-boat or from some island beach they watched the long, graceful hull gliding through the water, a black banner of smoke trailing from her twin stacks of red, her unmistakable whistle resounding melodiously as she swept into Toronto Bay. Memories of pleasant summer days, picnics, jaunts to Niagara are conjured up for many tourists by the name Chicora.

The name Chicora is the southern Indian word for Land of Flowers, and was a term applied by the early Spanish discoverers to the Florida-Mississippi country, and to the plains beyond. Her first name was "Let-Her-Be," and she was a sister ship to "Let-Her-Rip" and "Let-Her-Go."

Previous to the war she was valued at $43,000. During the great storm which swept Ontario on the first of December, 1919, the Chicora, in her ice-bound slip, was damaged and sank to the bottom of the bay. She was raised and put up for sale, and was sold to a Toronto lawyer for $4,000. The Chicora is to be refitted and used on the passenger service on Lake Ontario in the early future.

Canadian Cars.

There are at the present time 59,516 Canadian railway cars in the United States and 40,632 American cars on Canadian lines. Thus the balance in favor of the States is approximately 19,000. There are nearly 20,000 more Canadian box cars in the States than there are American cars in Canada.

Goods for Roumania.

Practically none of the Canadian exports to Roumania went through American ports, it was recently stated by Sir George Foster, Acting Prime Minister. Some 2,000 tons of goods were sent via New York, owing to better facilities for handling that class of goods.

PRICES HINGE ON WORLD MARKETS

TEN YEARS TO ATTAIN PRE-WAR STATUS ON MILK PRODUCTS

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 20. — Farmers throughout Canada will continue to get good prices for their products during the next two years, according to the opinion of Dr. W. J. Robertson, who addressed the Parliamentary Committee on agriculture and colonization today.

It would take at least two big crops to ctach up to anything like normal supplies of breadstuffs, ten years to attain pre-war statutes on milk products and four or five years for beef products. Dr. Robertson reiterated statements that prices were entirely dependent upon world conditions. The announcement was made that the Federal Government intends to send representatives overseas to watch the European markets.

PIANO RECITAL A HUGE SUCCESS

A large crowd attended the musical event last evening in St. Paul's Church when Miss Norma Moore gave a piano recital assisted by Mrs. S. J. Richardson, A.T.C.M., and Miss Florence Emerson as contralto soloist, pupils of Mrs. W. A. Greenslade. Somewhat of an inspiration to lovers of music was the excellence and beauty of expression with which the program was rendered. Miss Norma Moore, pianist, excelled herself on this occasion, while Mrs. S. J. Richardson, A.T.C.M., assisted at the piano with all the capable ease and perfection of technique possessed by the true musician. Miss Florence Emmerson's solo selections were particularly well received by the audience. This singer is possessed of a beautiful contralto voice of fine range. There was also a violin obligato by Mrs. Hooper rendered with much sweetness of interpretation and meeting with generous appreciation.

A feature of the entertainmnt and one that was greatly appreciated was the concerto by Miss Moore and Mrs. Richardson. This was a musical number of special merit.

Beautiful bouquets were presented to the artists of the evening, after which a hearty vote of thanks was moved by Rev. R. Pogue and seconded by Mrs. Nelson, president of the Mission Band.

RE-UNION SECOND BATTALION C.E.F.

FRATERNIZE IN EMPRESS HOTEL APRIL 22—CLUB TO BE FORMED

At a meeting of original members of the 2nd Battalion, C.E.F., held in the War Veterans' hall last night, it was decided to hold a re-union at the Empress Hotel at 7.30 p.m., April 22. It is hoped that all members of the battalion who took part in the fighting at the second battle of Ypres, April 22 to 30, 1915, will be present on this occasion. It was also decided to extend an invitation to the nearest male relative of every soldier of the battalion who fell during that fighting, and it is believed that this proviso will affect several relatives in Peterborough.

It is the intention of the prime movers of the re-union to form a 2nd Battalion social club at a later date that will include in its membership every soldier who at any time served in the battalion.

The order of dress for the re-union will be dress uniform or mufti.

CAPT. E.O. HUYCKE COMMAND BATTERY

FOUR LIMBERS ARRIVED TODAY AND WERE TAKEN TO THE ARMOURIES

The first steps to the organization of the 4th Field Battery for Peterborough were made at a meeting held in the armories on Saturday last, when Capt. E. D. Huycke was appointed to command the unit, and the following officers were included in the strength:

Lieuts. Douglas Lawrie, M.C., Meredith Huycke, Crawford, Walton Stevenson, J. L. Kennealy, D.C.M., and A. R. Wilson. It was also announced that there are a number of other artillery officers in Peterborough whom it is expected will be included on the corps reserve of officers.

Four limbers arrived in the city today and were taken up to the armories and the 18 pdr. guns are expected to arrive any day now. The battery is brigaded with Belleville and Cobourg batteries, under the command of General Ralston, of Port Hope, and the Cobourg [illegible] Battery will be attached. It is also expected that the battery will go to Petawawa early in June for live shell practice, which will be an interesting event for all ex-artillerymen.

Recruiting will be opened tomorrow night, and as Peterborough has always been a great artillery town, it is not expected that there will be any difficulty in filling the ranks in a short time.

Hitherto Peterborough has been represented in the 4th, 26th, 33rd, 52nd and other batteries of the C. E. F. and it is hoped that all these service men will rally to the new battery, which is to perpetuate the name of the 4th Battery, C.E.F., and to retain all its war honors.

It was announced this morning that as soon as recruiting opens up tomorrow night a permanent caretaker will be appointed. Quarters have already been secured in the armories which were formerly occupied by the old 24th Battery, and everything is in first-class shape in this regard.

PRESENTED WITH $117 AND ADDRESS

GLOWING TRIBUTE PAID MISS RUTH JONES BY PHONE SUBSCRIBERS

A glowing tribute was paid to Miss Ruth Jones, formerly telephone operator at Bailieboro, on the occasion of her leaving to come to Peterborough. Messrs. Joseph Madill and Welford Dawson called on Miss Jones in the city and presented the following address to her, together with a cheque for $117 donated by the subscribers of the Bailieboro Telephone Company in recognition of her services:

The Address

Miss Ruth Jones,
Peterborough:

"In life, hearts need fond words to help them on their way: Need tender thoughts and gentle sympathy to cheer the passing day; Whatever adds in even the smallest way to the world's store of brightness and cheer is surely well worth while."

With such words do two different writers pay their tribute to the thoughtfulness and faithfulness in human life. Thoughtfulness is love working in all delicate ways, in an unselfishness that forgets itself thinking not to be served, to be honored, to be helped, but continually of serving, honoring and helping others. It manifests itself in such a modification of one's conduct that whatever would give trouble, inconvenience and hurt to others is avoided. Faithfulness in service not only has its own pecuniary reward, and the Divine and individual approval but also a very helpful and inspiring influence on others.

These two characteristics of thoughtfulness and faithfulness in your service to us as subscribers of the Bailieboro Telephone Company have prompted us to take this means of expressing to you our gratitude for the many valuable and highly appreciated services you gladly rendered while you so faithfully filled the position of "Central." With these feeble words of appreciation we would combine this cheque for the sum of $117, with the hope that as you may use this, our gift, it may be a pleasant reminder of our esteem for you and your loving service while in Bailieboro.

Signed on behalf of the subscribers of the Bailieboro Telephone Company.

JOSEPH MADILL.
WELFORD DAWSON.

JEWISH WAR RELIEF OFF TO A GRAND START

$55750 COLLECTED YESTERDAY AT NOON LUNCH IN TORONTO

Toronto, April 20.— The satisfactory total of $55,750 for the first half day was announced at the noon luncheon of the Canadian Jewish War Relief Campaign, in Toronto. Some of the large subscribers were: Toronto Jewish Conference, $15,000; Frankel Bros. $5,000; Jule J. and J. B. Allen, $5,000; Henry Greismann and Sons, $2,500; Gelber Bros., $2,500 S. Lorrie, $2,000; Hary Rottenberg-Yolles, $2,000; Brodey Dramin, $1,500; M. Granastein and Son, $1,500; N. L. Nathanson, $1,500; Tip Top Tailors, $1,500; H. Miller and Co., $1,500.

Among the subscriptions this morning was $500 from Col. Sir Henry Pellatt.

Four hundred workers were early on the job, and gratifying reports of progress were made before noon. The first check to be received from any outside point was for $43.70 and came from the village of Stephensvile. No letter was enclosed and it is believed that the amount is the result of a colection.

The first Toronto contribution to drop into the headquarters at 36 King street west was a young working man who subscribed $2. Since then a large number of individual voluntary subscriptions have been received in the same manner.

An intense spirit of enthusiasm permeated the whole body of voluntary workers this morning, and they are confident that they will not only reach, but exceed, their objective.

This campaign is unique inasmuch as the campaigners have already personally subscribed a large proportion of the total objective.

TORNADO SWEPT AMERICAN COUNTIES APPEAL TO OUTSIDE WORLD FOR HELP

Death List Already Totals 157, and Property Loss Will Run Into Many Millions--Local Forces of Physicians and Nurses Inadequate to Cope With Situation--Tornado Ranks as One of Most Disastrous Storms in Southern History.

(By Canadian Press.)

Birmingham, Ala., April 21.—Assistance from the outside world is urgently needed for the relief of the tornado sufferers in a dozen Mississippi, Alabama and Tennessee counties. With a death list of one hundred and fifty-seven already reported, and property loss which will run into many millions, the tornado has taken rank as one of the most disastrous as well as the most widespread in the annals of the South. Hundreds of injured require medical attendance, and the forces of physicians and nurses available locally are inadequate to cope with the situation.

Tents and other temporary structures must be erected for the numerous families whose homes were obliterated, and a shortage of food is foreseen.

Communication Difficult

Communication with many of the stricken districts is difficult, but fragmentary reports agree that the tornado swept down with deadly suddenness, obliterating everything that lay in its path. In at least one case—that of Rose Hill, Miss.—practically the entire town is believed to have been destroyed, and in several instances all members of a family were reported to have been killed.

Many Communities Suffer

Striking first, apparently, in Lauderdale county, Mississippi, about 10 o'clock, the storm swept a path over the State, carrying destruction to a dozen or more communities. About the same time death and damage from the same or a similar disturbance was reported from counties in the northwestern corner of Alabama, the extreme force of the wind being expended before the Tennesse line was reached, in Williamson and Maury counties.

Meridian, Miss., the heart of a rich farming district, suffered heaviest, according to late reports, with a known death list of 21. The village of Glen, Alcorn county, numbered its dead at ten, Aberdeen ten, Ingomar six, Egypt five, Baker five, and Bay Spring seven. A large lumber camp near Philadelphia, Nesbola county, lost welve workers killed and thirty injured, several probaly fatally.

In Alabama, the rural districts around Sheffield, Garley, Little Cove and Waco, felt the full force of the storm, and with some sections still cut off, a score of bodies have been recovered.

Across the Tennessee line, 160 miles from Meridian, near where it originated, the storm still had force sufficient to wreck homes and farm buildings and to cut a swath through forest and field. Only three deaths are known to have occurred in the State, however.

More Than One Storm

The width covered by the tornado led to a bleief that there was more than one atmospheric disturbance. Reports describe the local destruction as having been confined to a path measuring from 100 to 500 yards wide, within which the cyclonic wind, when at its height, left nothing but the most solid structures standing.

Twenty-one persons were killed on a single plantation near Aberdeen, Miss. Harbold's hog ranch near there, one of the largest in the South, was wiped out, 500 of the stock being killed.

SUPREME COUNCIL DECIDES THAT TURKEY MAY RETAIN CAPITAL

Ruhr Problem Still Unsolved and France Stands Apart From Her Allies on This Question—Britain and Italy Morally Backed by United States.

San Remo, April 21. — The Supreme Council, at yesterday's meeting here, put its final sanction upon the Franco-British proposal to allow the Turks to retain Constantinople as their capital.

The Council decided to insert a clause in the Turkish treaty, making Batum a free port for the Republic of Azerbaijan, Georgia and Armenia. The Council spent considerable time considering the protection of minorities in Anatolia.

Much of the day was taken up with deliberations on the German problems, but no decision was reached and as the week wears on through endless arguments and counter-arguments it is becoming doubtful whether this question will be settled at the conferences here. Premiers Millerand and Nitti expect to leave Saturday. It can be said with a considerable degree of certainty that so far no definite solution of the Ruhr problem is in sight.

Britain and Italy, morally backed by the United States, continue to insist that if France allows herself to be rushed into the course of action mapped out by her military chiefs, she will endanger the Versailles treaty, and undermine, if not rupture, Allied unity. France is opposed by all other powers in her alleged deire for absorbing the Ruhr coal district, and her known plan to extract from Germany by force the coal due the French under the treaty. The other Allies are convinced such "strong-arm" measures would invite the economic collapse of Germany.

Italy reinstituted the censorship on outgoing news despatches today calling forth strong protests from the Britisht and American newspapermen, who sent their complaints formally to the Supreme Council.

As regards the differences between Italy and Jugo-Slavia about the Adriatic settlement, it is learned that little if any headway has been made in the efforts to get together on that problem, the viewpoints of the two Governments still being wide apart.

The Communique issued after adjournment of the afternoon session of the Council, says:

"The Supreme Council met at four o'clock and discussed certain military questions connected with execution of the Turkish peace treaty, and heard M. Venizelos, the Greek Premier. It then continued its consideration of the Armenian question."

OVERALLS BUNCH TOOK COLD FEET

LEGISLATORS APPEARED AT QUEEN'S PARK ATTIRED IN BUSINESS SUITS

(By Canadian Press.)

Toronto, April 21.—All of the fifteen members of the Legislature who yesterday agreed to don overalls 'reniged" when the time came for them to live up to their agreement today, and appeared at Queen's Park attired as usual in business suits of serge or tweed. Questioned as to what had caused them to change their mind, the members concerned for the most part were inclined to pass over the compact as a joke.

Tax on Profits.

The basis of an appeal as outlined by race men is that the Federal authorities will impose some tax upon profits which may be derived from gambling devices installed at racetracks. To just what extent these profits will be limited is as yet unknown, but the claim is made that were a $10,000 daily impost levied on all mile tracks, together with a still further Federal levy, racing regardless of betting would be killed.

TRADE WITH RUSSIA PROGRESS DELAYED

ALLIED REPRESENTATIVES HAVE MET SOVIET DELEGATION

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 21.—Andrew Bonar Law, replying to questions in the House today regarding negotiations with the Russian trade delegation at Copenhagen, said preliminary discussions had occurred between that delegation and representatives of the Supreme Economic Council, but that further progress could not be made, pending consideration by the Allied Governments of questions raised by the Russian delegates.

AEROPLANES TRACK CRIMINALS

Manitoba Police To Adopt This Method in Future.

(By Canadian Press.)

Winipeg, Man., April 1.—Escaped criminals from Manitoba jails will in future be trailed by aeroplanes, Lieut.-Col. J. G. Rattray, chief of the Manitoba Provincial Police, has decided. In making the announcement, Col. Rattray stated that it would be possible in this way to trace prisoners across the country not yet served by the railways. Arrangemens have been made for a local aeroplane company to hold a plane at the disposal of the Provincial Police Department should the need arise.

AMENDMENTS TO PENSIONS ACT

SCALE OF ASSISTANCE FOR TUBERCULAR SOLDIERS DECLARED INADEQUATE

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 21.—Representatives of tubercular soldiers were placed before the special committee on pensions this morning. It was urged that the present scale of pensions is inadequate to provide for tubercular men and their dependents.

Other requests wer for changes in the regulations governing pay and allowances to patients in sanatoriums, free issue of clothing to pensioners taking the S. C. R. training, extension of training period, reservation of civil service positions for tubercular men fit to hold them, extension of free medical treatment to dependents of tubercular patients while such patients are in a sanatorium or while in receipt of full disability pension, and several other amendments to the Act.

SAYS U. S. FACING BAD FOOD FAMINE

VERY ALARMING REPORTS REACH WASHINGTON OF DECREASED PRODUCTION

SCARCITY OF FARM LABOR

WOULD SUSPEND MANUFACTURE OF LUXURIES FOR WORK ON FARMS

Washington, April 21.—Alarming reports of decreased food production, due to scarcity of farm labor, have been made by Senators and members of the House who have recently returned to the Capital. The reports have been sent to Secretary Meredith, of the Department of Agriculture.

Senator Ellison D. Smith, of South Caroline, who is just back from a trip through the south, predicts that the country will soon be face to face with the most serious food famine in history. Thousands and thousands of acres hitherto given over to the production of foodstuffs are lying idle and unfurrowed in the states he visited.

Similar reports have been made by Senator Capper, of Kansas, and Senators from others of the great food producting states.

Senator Smith declares that while the amount of farm labor last year was 84 per cent. of the normal, this year it is only 72 per cent. of normal, and is of an age and character which are not conducive to the highest productivity.

The only remedy, in Senator Smith's opinion, is for the manufacturers of articles not classed as necessities to suspend operations for a time and permit the labor to go back to the farms.

He has found that out of the thousands of farm boys who went into the military service during the war only a small percentage have gone back to agricultural labor. The bulk of them have found in the cities work which is more attractive and more remunerative. If work of this kind could be dropped for a short period, Senator Smith believes that many of the farm boys would go back to the country.

Senator Smith intends to address the Senate on the subject some day this week. Discussing the situation today he said:

"I am having tabulated the figures showing the percentage of farm boys who went to war and the percentage who returned. The figures so far are simply startling. In the states of the South, which I visited, especially in Georgia and South Carolina, not a furrow has been turned in the fields which have been depended on heretofore for bid crops."

TRAPPERS MAKE HUGE PROFITS

Fact Is Revealed at the Trial of a Kispiox Indian.

(By Canadian Press.)

Victoria, B. C., April 21.—Profits to be earned in the north by trappers are shown by the experience of Gun-a-noot, the Kispiox Indian, who was acquitted from a charge of double murder at the Assizes last fall. He recently returned from six weeks trapping with furs which sold to dealers for $870. Before facing trial last year he trapped beaver for five weeks and made $185 to keep his family while he interviewed the judge and jury.

Turkeys Found To Be Still Alive When Snow Disappears.

(By Canadian Press.)

Brandon, Man., April 21.—On the day of the big snowstorm about the middle of March a farmer near here lost two turkeys, and expected to find their dead bodies when the snow disappeared. On April 7 the turkeys came to life again after being buried under the snow for three weeks and two days. One of the turkeys was able to get out of the snow prison, and when the other was liberated it flew away as if nothing had happened.

GERMANY AGAIN ASKS MODIFICATION OF MILITARY CLAUSES OF PEACE TREATY

CALIFORNIA OFFERS AN IDEAL EXISTNECE

A LAND OF FLOWERS AND SUNSHINE AND HAPPY HOURS

California! What visions of an ideal existence are associated with the name; what illusive suggestions of a sunny clime where nature has showered her gifts with a generous hand and an infinite consideration of the needs and convenience of the human race. We hear of some person going to California and instantly the inward vision conjures up a picture of rose-strewn fields, balmy airs and smiling skies—a land where the orange tree swings it perfume-breathing branches in the breeze and the grape vine boughs beneath its luxuriant burden. And so it is.

Mr. Harry Cressman, who accompanied by Mrs. Cressman, has spent the past number of weeks in California, tells a very interesting story of conditions there at the present time. Mr. Cressman, who spent the greater part of his visit in Southern California, speaks of the weather conditions there as being most favorable, in fact a more ideal climate could not be imagined. With the temperature continually hovering around 65 and 80 degrees, the days were pleasant and the nights cool—delightfully cool. This evenly-balanced temperature was one of the most commendable features of the country.

Flowers there were in profusion. Roses and geraniums and blossoms of almost every variety and hue filled the place with a riot of color and luxuriant foliage, spread [illegible] exquisitely stencilled leaves to the sun.

An event of considerable importance which takes place annually in Pasadena on the 1st of January, is the "Rose Carnival." Visitors from all over Canada and the United States throng into Pasadena to be present on the never-to-be-forgotten occasion.

One of the most pleasing features of California is the unique mode of architecture which is adopted in the construction of even the most unpretentions bungalows. Beautiful in design are the houses of worship, the residences and farm homes with a style of architecture that tends toward the Spanish.

Another feature and one that would delight the motor fan is the excellent condition of the highways throughout the country. All the roads are finely paved and that they are taken advantage of is evident from the fact that there are more motor cars in Los Angeles according to population than any other centre of the United States. Even the steep mountain roads are paved and motor cars are used extensively in these places.

Fairly thickly populated, the fruit and vegetation industry is indulged in with lucrative results, by the Japanese coolies who represent a large share of the population.

Perhaps the most notable characteristic of this southern country is the scenery, some of which is beyond the brush of the artist. Beautiful sunsets crown each day, shrouding the earth and sky with a mantle of glory that holds in its depths an inpiration.

Mr. and Mr. Cressman in their return trip visited Santa Barbara, San Francisco, and enroute through the Canadian West, remained off at Vancouver, Banff, Calgary and Winnipeg, arriving home last Sunday. The weather conditions in the Canadian West are exceptionally cold with little or no sign of approaching spring.

Says She Must Have Larger Armed Force Than Provided for to Maintain Law and Order in Own Land--Also Holds Out Threat That Hun Army Would Not Accept an Order for Dissolution—Names Forces She Hopes For.

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, April 21.— Germany has asked for modification of the military clauses of peace treaty, so as to enable her to maintain a larger armed force than permitted by that pact. This request was contained in a note handed to the French Foreign Office last evening, with a demand that it be sent to the Supreme Council at San Remo.

Must Keep Order

The note set forth that an increased force is necessary for the maintainence of order in the interior and that, furthermore the army would not accept an order for its dissolution.

The note further requests that Germany be allowed to retain the entire general staff corps officers, which means the entire framework of an active army. It proposes that the forces she is permitted to maintain be divided as follows. Twelve divisions of infantry, with a complement of artillery; three divisions of cavalry, five special brigades, composed each of two regiments of infantry and two groups of artillery.

The note also asks for one battalion of heavy artillery for each division of infantry, 160 airplanes divided into eight groups, and four special companies of troops for railway work.

DIVISION AMONG ALLIES GROWING

MILITARY PARTY IN FRANCE LIKELY TO PRECIPITATE A CRISIS

London, April 21.— Indications are multiplying that differences of opinion among the Allies as to the policy to be pursued toward Germany are becoming accentuated. The special correspondent of the Daily News at San Remo telegraphs that the views of the military party, headed by Marshal Foch, appear to be obtaining supremacy in France, with the result that the question of military occupation of the Ruhr District is one more at the front.

It is to be seen whethetr it will be formally proposed by France's representatives at the Peace Conference. In such an event, a critical situation would arise, as neither Britain nor Italy could be identified with such a policy.

STRIKING RAILROADERS REFUSE TO VOTE ON "RETURNING TO WORK"

Trouble in States May Soon Terminate--Strike Outlaws Must Return to Work.

(By Canadian Press.)

Chicago, April 21.—Striking railroad men in the Chicago district refused today to vote on a question of returning to work.

All efforts of a committee of strike leaders to obtain action failed.

Trouble Nearing End.

New York April 21.—The striking employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad, who formed part of the general "outlaw" strike, were directed to return to work before midnight tonight in an ultimatum issued by the company tonight.

Employees who fail to comply with the order, it added, will be regarded as having permanently quit the service and efforts will be made to fill their places. The employees who report will be restored to service without prejudice and without loss of seniority, the road said.

The grip of the "outlaw" strike in New York was confined last night to the New Jersey water front yards. Some of the men still were out, but their places were being filled rapidly, according to railroad officials. J. J. Mantell, spokesman for the Railroad General Managers' Association, declared tonight that normal conditions, both for freight and passenger service, would be restored by the end of the week.

FRENCH TROOPS, EQUIPPED WITH ARTILLERY, ENTER AINTAB, ASIA

Position in Citadel However is Considered Difficult--Turks Cut Railroad Communications

(By Canadian Press.)

Constantinople, April 21.—French troops, equipped with heavy artillery, entered Aintab, Asia Minor, on April 14th, and have effectively relieved the situation there, according to a statement made public by the French embassy here. Messages sent from Aintab on April 12 asking for immediate aid for the relief workers there were received in this city late last week. The French position in the citadel is viewed as extremely difficult.

Communication Interrupted.

Railroad communication at Mersida, where French forces landed last week, and at Adana, were interrupted on April 11, it is stated by travellers arriving from the southern Asia Minor coast. The railroad traverses level country without important bridges, and the Turks removed the rails, thus cutting off the French at Mersine from their chief base of supplies. Northward, in the interior, the Turks have cut the railroad by wrecking cars in important tunnels betwen Adana and Ukukishia. The railroad from Adana to Aleppo has also been cut by the Turks.

THE DOG BY-LAW.

CITIZENS GENERALLY are anxiously awaiting our City Council to enforce the dog by-law, and exclude from the streets and private property a nuisance. Some go so far as to suggest that the by-law be amended to include cats, for pussy can and does make of herself or himself, as the case may be, very much of a bury-body on neighboring premises at times. But, leaving cats out of the question, with the advent of spring, dogs are again beginning to gather on the streets and exchange mutual felicitations, and the time is rapidly approaching when their attenion will be directed to flower beds and garden plots. Yesterday half a dozen joyous canines were revelling in doggish festivities at the corner of Charlotte and George streets, reminding one of a country village, where pedestrians are few and far between and where such a thing as a dog by-law is yet to be thought of. Then, garbage receptacles are quite irresistible to these domestic animals in question, and one cannot leave a garbage can out at night but what some dog is waiting around the corner to explore it with his cold inquisitive nose and distribute its contents all over the street.

People who are fond of dogs should keep them in their own yards, and not allow them to play the dickens with neighbors' lawns and flower beds, to scatter garbage abroad, and incidentally, when things don't go their way, to make a canine assault on some innocent grown-up or child.

MUSIC IN THE LUNCH ROOM.

THE WORLD HAS organized its work hours. For two decades and more it has been striving to organize its hours of play, applying the same essential principle—the elimination of waste effort—that has been applied to its work. People of means, those of even fair circumstances, usually can fill their idle hours without assistance. But there can be no denying that countless thousands of less fortunately situated men and women and those who have been given a new outlook by the sweep to more pay and shorter hours, thirsting for pleasures they have not known before, will welcome such attempts to organize spare time as are typified by the community and group sings.

To sit in a lunch rooms, and there, over the clatter of the dishes, sing "Smiles" or "Annie Laurie," does not mean that tomorrow the laundry worker will love and understand a Brahms symphony. But it does mean that there is song in her life, song on her lips, and a song in her heart. Romance is enthroned a little while, as truly for her as for the lovers of Brahms in the seat at the symphony, his sensitized being attuned to great surges of sound, which, after all, exalt and away because they trace in some way back to the hopes and aspirations, the joys and sorrows, and the simple humanity of mankind. If he is happy, so is she. And what more do we want in this deighted and wearied world, struggling today as never before, to enjoy life in the living!

HIGH PRICES AND PROFITEERING.

PETERBOROUGH has not yet reached the $64 a pair shoe stage, and let us hope it never will, for the profit on such a pair of shoes sold to a New York lady of fashion must be staggering indeed.

It is all very well to say high prices result from an abnormal world demand, but evidence seems to be pretty conclusive that profiteering is a serious factor in the high cost of living, and a source of unrest. In the case of $40, $50 and $64 a pair for shoes, it does not matter if the demand is normal or abnormal, the value is not given in the product, and excessive profiteering results. The law of demand and supply should not govern prices in regard to every-day needs, at any rate; on the contrary, value given for value received—fair profit on fair prices—should be the principle insisted on in every-day buying and selling of indispensable commodities. Unfortunately, the relationship between supply and demand has a controlling influence on prices, the one way or the other. And equally unfortunately in so many instances, the results have been higher prices for a poorer quality of goods. The dislocation of the world's economic structure is offered as an excuse for high prices, which excuse is accepted, and profiteering is made possible.

All manufacturers, however, are not profiteers, and neither are all merchants, but it would be hard to convince the public that profiteering is not quite flagrant in the shoe trade, when we quote the New York Commercial as follows: "As a specific instance of profiteering there may be related the purchase at one of the prominent shoe stores of the city of a pair of men's shoes for which $26.40, including war tax, was exacted. Within three months the shoes were worn down just as if they had been of a cheaper variety. The purchaser took them back to the shoe man with the suggestion that in view of the price paid for them their wearing qualities should have been better, and requesting that he make good. The shoe man admitted some responsibility, but stated that to half sole and heel the shoes would cost $11.80, but that in view of the circumstances he would bear half of the expense and would repair the shoes for $5.90. This the purchaser indignantly refused, and undertook an investigation on his own account. He took the shoes to a first-class repair man, who put them back in condition, including a pair of standard rubber heels, making a thoroughly first-class job, for which he charged $3. The purchaser then took the shoes to three different makers, who informed him that they could be manufactured and sold at retail with a fair profit for $12, thus bearing out the statement of a government investigator who has recently declared that the best pair of shoes on the market today should not cost more than $12. Incidentally it may be stated that the case has been referred to Washington, and that results are likely to follow.

"Another instance may be related of a wealthy woman who purchased a pair of high shoes, but who did not realize until the shoes were sent home what an extravagant price she had paid—$64. In explanation she she said that almost everything that had been shown to her by the shoe man had been priced at $40 or $50, but she found nothing suitable under $64. Even allowing for the extravagance of the wealthy, and for the enormous overhead charges of a fashionable store, the net profit of shoes at $40 to $50 a pair, to say nothing of $64, must be staggering."

The same journal does not attempt to indict the whole New York shoe trade as profiteers, and states that certain well-known firms are putting men's shoes on the market at $8 and $9 a pair, which for style and wearing qualities are fully equal, if not superior, to those offered at $26; and it is possible to buy the very best shoes that one could desire for $12 a pair. It is also possible to buy similar footwear in Peterborough at similar prices to those quoted above, and, while these prices seem high for this city, the cause thereof may we think, be traced rather to the first scenes of production than to the retail men.

But these are days of high wages, extravagance and spending, and too many are apt to judge quality by the price. Such an attitude of mind is neither fair to the merchant nor to themselves, and encourages profiteering by those who cannot resist the temptation thus offered.

Public opinion accuses the demands of some kinds of labor as carried to excess; yet there are many classes of labor to whom the high cost of living is a vital problem, and in the case of such, a heaping on of abnormal profits will naturally be followed by claims for increased wages, and so it may continue until present day unrest terminates in a calamitous smash all round. To offset this possibility legitimate business should be defended and profiteering, whch is dangerous to communities and nations, aggressively attacked. The honest merchant content to make a fair profit on his investment and to reap such reasonable gains as are commensurate with the risks and worries of business, should be in the van of any effort to "down with profiteering."

COMPLAINS OF SNOBBISM.

"JUDEX." WRITING to the Westminster Gazette, London, England, says: "The fantastic result of the recent distribution of British Empire honors to which you called attention, viz., that out of the hundreds of women honored for public service, those who alone obtained the highest honor, and presumably therefore performed the highest service, were a Marchioness and two Countesses, is so incredible in itself that it goes far to reduce the whole business to a farce, a mere orgy of political snobbery. This is a vice to which the British mind was formerly far too prone; and it is being worked up again by some astute wirepuller, or Master Snob as he might be called, for all it is worth at the present time. Whatever is its object, it fails, for it is simply revolting to all the better part of the nation. In homely language, it makes them sick to see the Fountain of Honor used as an instrument for such degrading purposes, and that the great war, which has had a purifying effect upon many of the baser and more odious traits in the national character, has failed to effect the same improvement, at any rate, in the mind of the Master Snob."

We wonder would it be any consolation for "Judex" to learn that there are also instances of snobbery over here in Canada, where honor does not go to whom honor is due? But now that we have a Farmer-Labor Legislature, old Ontario looks for improvement in that connection.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

WHEN WILL Peterborough's overall brigade have its first church parade?

● ● ● ● ●

JUST AS SOON as Fashion's fancies include overalls prices of denim will advance "overall" the country.

● ● ● ● ●

THE TORONTO STAR refers to the Canadian Senate as the Old Curiosity Shop. The name seems quite applicable, for considerable curiosity is prevalent these days as to just where the Senate's usefulness lies.

● ● ● ● ●

MEMBERS of the House of Commons at Ottawa take a sensible view of the high cost of clothing situation. They say it would be better to wear old clothes than start a rush of overalls and thus drive up the prices of the latter to the detriment of workingmen. These legislators are here exercising a greater degree of common sense than credited with by many. For just increase the cost of men's working apparel and see how soon they'll come back at you for higher wages.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

BACKWARD NEW ENGLAND.

(Montreal Gazette.)

To the Massachusetts Legislature has been commended by a joint committee the legislation of amateur sports on Sunday. How backward in some things New England must be! Why, here in Quebec we have professional sports on Sundays, and professional entertainment in the theatrical line also. And there are numerous clubs where the thirst may be assuaged on Sunday, morning noon and night, as on other days.

JUSTIFIES SUSPICION.

(Buffalo News.)

The attitude of the United States toward the League of Nations and our refusal to take part with the other nations of the earth for peace have aroused suspicion to the south of us, and naturally so. Our disinclination to join a movement tending to prevent future wars carries with it the suspicion that perhaps we are intent on future wars. Latin America has always considered herself a natural prey.

A HUSBAND VINDICATED.

(Hamilton Spectator.)

William Valias, a wealthy manufacturer of Chicago, had in his employ a pretty stenographer; he also had a habit of talking in his sleep, and the endearing terms he used caused Mrs. Valias to strongly suspect that she was not occupying first place in his affections. A suit for separation and maintenance followed, but Judge J. P. Rush has decided that absolutely no credence can be placed in what a person may say while asleep; in fact, the jurist clings to the old belief that dreams go by contraries. The decision will be comforting to husbands who jabber out loud while in the realms of dreamland, but it is not likely to have a reassuring effect so far as jealous wives are concerned.

WORK OF COM'N ON WORLD TRANSIT

Brigadier-General H. Mance, C.B., C.M.G., D.S.O., the British representative on the provisional (League of aNtions) Committee for Communications and Transit, established under Article 23E of the Covenant, has made a statement to a representative of the League of Nations Union on the work which this commission will have to undertake. He says:

It is necessary to distinguish between the various bodies concerned with international transit questions since the Armistice. First there was the "Commission of Ports, Waterways and Railways," which was part of the Peace Conference. When the work of this commission was drawing to an end the French Government invited the governments concerned to nominate their representatives on an "International Commission of Inquiry on Freedom of Communications and Transit," on which certain neutral States, as well as the Allies, were represented. This bod has been rechristened as the "Provisional Committee for Communications and Transit" for the League of Nations, and will be replaced by the Permanent Transit Organization of the League.

In an entirely separate category is the "Communication Section" of the Supreme Economic Council. This body deals mainly with reconstruction in Central Europe, and with future international relations regarding Communication and Transit.

Preparing the Way.

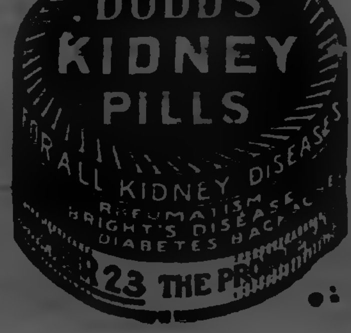
A special meeting of the International Committee of Inquiry was held recently to consider the matter. M. Claveille, who was in the chair, thanked the governments who had recently accepted the invitation to associate themselves with the work of elaborating the new charter. He expressed his entire confidence that the United States would not fail shortly to resume its place on the commission. The commission unanimously decided to consider itself from that date as a "Provisional Committee for Communications and Transit" of the League of Nations.

The commission then examined the draft report to the Council upon the Permanent Organization of Communications and Transit in the League of Nations, presented by the Secretary-General in the name of the sub-commission of inquiry, and unanimously adopted its recommendations. A report on the Permanent Organization of Communications and Transit has already been unanimously adopted for transmission to the Council, and draft international conventions on the subject of "Freedom of Transit," "International Rivers," and "Ports" are under consideration, and will be submitted to the Permanent Organization for Transit as soon as the latter is constituted.

Points To Be Recognized.

It is, perhaps, not widely enough recognized how important it is to establish a liberal policy in this matter of "freedom of communications and transit" from the point of view of world peace, and therefore of the League. The war introduced new conditions. The needs of security and economy of rolling stock resulted in the imposition of a number of severe restrictions, which have not in all cases disappeared with the conclusion of peace. Again, the war has created new States, in which it is most desirable to encourage an enlightened and uniform Communications and Transit policy. It must, however, be admitted that the restrictions cannot all be entirely removed, at present, without inflicting hardships. The disrepair of the railways and rolling stock are so serious in some of the countries devastated by the war that Article XXIII. (e) of the Covenant recognizes exceptions in the interests of their own reconstruction,

In addition to the general duty of encouraging freedom of transit, the League of Nations has specific duties laid on it by the peace treaties in regulating disputes as to the interpretation of the articles dealing with ports, waterways and railways. The League may recommend the revision of stipulations relating to a permanent administrative regime; and the Council of the League may revise certain stipulations at any time after five, and in some cases three, years. The questions which may arise under these provisions are likely to be of a highly technical nature, and the League, therefore, needs the services of an expert advisory body.



IS THE BAD BOY A REALITY ?

Some people will, of course, say "Yes." They think that the only real thing in their lives is a boy whom they think to be "a bad egg."

Those who believe in the existence of bad boys will have to argue the matter out with Magistrate Beveridge of the Children's Court of Calgary. Mr. Beveridge is quite convinced that there is no such thing as a bad boy. Mr. George Webster, a prominent business man of Calgary, has come to the same conclusion after looking into the matter with a great deal of care. At a public meeting not long ago Mr. Webster said that he had been a member of a committee looking into the work of the Juvenile Court. His work of investigation gave him a keen interest in boys and he stated that he intended to give a great deal of his life in future to help improve conditions for the boys of Calgary.

Mr. Webster found that 75 per cent. of the boys with whom he had to deal had got into trouble and had been brought before the Juvenile Court because of bad surroundings. He declared it was not because they were themselves bad, but because they had never had a chance to get into good surroundings and to be influenced by the right ideas. He said that it was the duty of the citizens to provide better conditions for the boys to work and play. He said, in concluding his speech: "This is not a matter to enter upon lightly. If we are going to help, it must be by more than lip service. It means constant attention and constant self-sacrifice, but, believe me, the results will amply repay those who give of their time and resources."

In Toronto recently a group of successful Christian business men listened to a list of the offences for which some boys had been brought into the Juvenile Court, such as pushing one another into church vestibules during service, and so on. When the story was finished, these men burst into laughter, declaring that in their own boyhood days they had all amused themselves in the same way.—Firelighter.

FOUR PROFITEERS ARRESTED

Packers' Manager and "Potato King" Among Those Accused.

New York, April 20.—Louis Joseph, manager of the Brooklyn plant of Wilson & Co packers of Chicago, was arrested Saturday on a charge of profiteering in the sale of meats. Arraigned before Commissioner McCabe in Brooklyn, Joseph was held in $2,500 bail for examination. It is charged that on April 13 Joseph sold to Solomon Strassburger, at 73 Fifth avenue, Brooklyn, quarters of fresh beef at 33 cents a pound, whereas earlier on the same day one of his salesmen called on Strassburger and quoted a price of 30 cents a pound. Strassburger, it is alleged, delayed his order until the afternoon, when he was charged 33 cents.

The Department of Justice made three arrests in New York recently for alleged profiteering. Eugene A. Sullivan, the "Potato King" of 639 West Thirty-fourth street, was arrested on a charge of profiteering in the sale of potatoes. John Fleming, vice-president, and Henry H. Schulte, general manager, of the New York and New Jersey Produce Company, Inc., were arrested on a similar charge.

TRIALS OF MOTORCYCLE NOVICE

Harold Brady chose Sunday afternoon and George street to learn motorcycling. All went well until he reached the corner of George and Charlotte streets, when he suddenly lost control of his machine and collided with a car which was proceedings along Charlotte street easterly. The driver of the car almost collided with the Customs House in an effort to avoid the collision, but in vain and the motorcycle struck the car broadside causing some damage to both machines.

The aftermath occurred in the Police Court this morning when Brady was fined $10 and $2.10 costs for failing to give the car the right-of-way as is required in the Motor Vehicles Act.

A charge of murder has been laid against Besien Delib, arrested in Toledo in connection with the death of Ramouch Hassan, whose body was found in a Wolseley street cellar on Saturday.

MANY CITIZENS REALIZE NOW THAT THEY HAVE LEFT OFF OWNING A HOUSE TOO LONG

Ex-Alderman Dobbin Talks on Present Day Housing Conditions' and What Can be Done.

If the number of those who have asked for information, looked at plans prepared sketches, selected lots, held daily and evening conferences, (men and women) and taken an interest in the possibility of gaining a house were to realize and become fruitful, certainly marked addition to the housing capacity of the city would result. Many admit the almost hopeless situation when measured, the costs of building, up against income and earnings. Many who have lived in the city for years and serenely paid rent, on the ground that it was of the two propositions, the cheaper, realize now that they have left the ownership of a home off too long. And truth to tell, the possibility of numbers owning a home is about as far off as reaching for a flag on top of a flagstaff perched on the top of the spire of St. Paul's church. It simply can't be done.

Is there, it may be asked, a possible remedy. One only, and that partial. That those who may, considering income and intensive economy build houses and so release for rental the dwellings in which they now live. More houses is what we need. If those living in these houses own them, so much, very much the better. But if even not, then they can be housed in the same old way

It is about settled, after strivings and pleadings, and pursuasions and reasonings and appeals to civic spirit that the so-called "capitalist" class will not erect houses for rental. At least to only a limited extent. Not enough to cause any perceptible difference and because at present costs of building the rentals to be asked would be a sore distress to the occupants. It is plain that little reflief can be looked for from this direction.

Depending on the action of the Legislature, the new bill will presently be ready. It is known that the changes from the terms of last year include no further grants by the Province, a guarantee of debentures issued by places, the raising of the initial percentage payable in land or money from ten to fifteen per cent, and in the cases of soldier men to ten per cent, and sure is fate, interest at six per cent. All these are depressing facts to look at and annoying to strive against. It may be permissive for Council to pass a by-law without reference to the property owners, and it may be not so. Let us hope for the latter.

In the meantime the one absorbing question is "what will it cost to build that house," said house being anything from a four room cottage to an eight room dwelling. In order to get at some tangible idea of cost the Commission has had supplied to it real figures, made up by two thoroughly competent builders and contractors, estimating independantly and afterwards the joint figures gone over for verification. As a mater of comparison the results are startling. We shall avail nothing by concealing exactly what is before us. Rather we should honestly look at the situation just as it is

The figures are made up on the basis that the contractor is a "working contractor," one who takes off his coat and suspenders, loosens his collar and pitches in with the men to make things hum. In this case the so-called contractor's profit is eliminated, unless there be some expenses to be met in materials and wastage. The estimate is illuminating and we are to take it, convincing. In any event we haven't anything better to snub to, and a public service has been done by the men who made the estimate Thanks, until they may be better paid.

Among the plans in the hands of the Commission, with the acompanying sheets of details and specification is what is known as the "standard dwelling." It has been built about eighty times already, in other places. Is about as perfect a plan in all ways as may be devised. Reasonable rooms, abbreviated hallways, both up and down stairs, ample closets, side entrance to the cellar and to the kitchen and lower hall, furnace, bath room and three-piece fittings, fire place, verendah, all in good shape. What is known as a six-room dwelling. Living room, dining room, kitchen and three bedrooms. The halls and bath room do not count as rooms. Built of solid brick, cement floor in cellar. Just the sort of house the decently well off (in earning capacity) a man in the mechanical trades, clerk or office assistant should occupy and hope to own.

This house was built last July-October, at Hamilton for a trifle over $2500.00. Ground floor plan 23x28 ft. Just such a house as could be sold any day. Would suit anybody. We got a shock when we find that the estimates at Peterborough, based on present cost of materials and the prospective wages for the coming season is at $4512.00, without the lot. Add, say $300.00 for the lot and we have $4,800.00 Why the blessed brick in the house costs $821.52 as laid in the wall. The lumber looms up as about $1,100.00. And yet we wonder at the increase of crime. The heating apparatus provokes, at the price, hot language. It simply means that the values are not there but one has to pay it, or go without.

It may be put forward that this house is too expensive. It isn't. It has been made expensive, by the same methods that are now at work to see if the price of overalls cannot be shoved up from $1.50 to $6.00. And the overalls will get there if there is any humanly possibility of hoisting the goods. If houses were not in demand, the cost would not be in evidence. You can walk up to Lakefield and buy three houses for the cost of one in Peterborough. Let's all go and live in the village.

The four-room house is suggested as a remedy. Certainly it would partially meet conditions, if one could fit a whole array of families into such houses. For an elederly couple, or a newly married twain the house maight be ideal. Let that family expand and there are hindrances. Even to young people growing up in a small four room house the social significance is one not to be lightly passed over. It may suit the old folks, but not the young. And the ultimate cost would not be over $500.00 less we are told.

A partially completed house may afford some easement. Things could be done without, lessening present outlay, so long as the sanitary requirements are met. It is possible that the urgent necessities of the housing bewilderment may require the local commission to build houses directly and sell to purchasers, on the usual time payments as defined by the Housing Act. This failing the coming forward of individual applicants to build under the provisions as laid down.

OVERALL PARADE NEXT SATURDAY

MOVEMENT NOW EMBRACES MODISH EVENING AND AFTERNOON GOWNS

New York, April 21.—The "Overall campaign" continues to spread on this side of the line. The movement is being given the sanction of municipal authorities in several cities.

In New York plans are under way for the holding of a big overall parade on Saturday. Persons who prefer to wear old, patched clothing instead of committing the "extravagance" of buying new overalls will be welcome in the line of march. An enterprising firm advertises denim "custom tailored in stylish spring and summer models at $10," and "demim tuxedos for evening wear at $12.50." It also offers "modish evening, wedding, and afternoon gowns," of calico and gingham at $15.

At Detroit a number of business women's associations have entered the ring against the high price of wearing apparel. One thousand women office workers have pledged themselves not to exceed these maximum prices: Hats and shoes, $10; suits and coats, $50; dresses, $35; hosiery, $2.50; and gloves, $2.

All city employes at San Diego were authorized by the City Council to wear khaki or other cheap clothing. At Los Angeles, Judge F. H. Taft, of the Superior Court, wore overalls on the bench. The overall has also been adopted in legal circles in Columbia, S.C., where a rule in effect since January, 1836, requiring lawyers to appear before the Supreme Court wearing black coats has been suspended in order that lawyers may wear denim.

OUTLAW STRIKES COLLAPSES

Typos of Daily Star, Montreal, Asked Management for Re-instatement.

Montreal, April 21.—The outlaw strike of the typographical staff of The Daily Star has collapsed. Last night the men decided to ask the management of the paper to take them back at the wage scale in force before the strike, but without discriminating against any of them.

Port Dalhousie ratepayers voted by a large majority to raise $120,000 for a system of waterworks.

Music in the Home

THE TIRED BUSINESS MAN.

The tired business man, like many another celebrated man, may be largely mythical; but the attitude of mind which is supposed to be his is, unfortunately, rather common, even among persons who cannot claim the distinction of being either "business" men or "tired." The individual thus afflicted enters a theatre, an opera house or a concert hall without any preparation whatever and without any intention of exerting his mental faculties. He sinks languidly into his seat, and in effect, says: "Well, here I am; now entertain me if you can." And frequently his words are not so much an invitation as a challenge.

This frame of mind may not be a great drawback at some time performances, but needless to say it is hardly conducive to a proper appreciation of serious music. Any great work of art—a drama, a poem, a painting, a symphony—makes certain demands upon him who would enjoy it. Its purpose is not to relieve the boredom of an idle moment. It must be approached with an open mind and with a willingness to make whatever effort may be necessary to arrive at a complete understanding of it. It must be approached without prejudice and with a determination to avoid the injustice of a hasty condemnation.

INSTRUMENTAL MUSIC TEACHING IN THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS

The importance of teaching wind as well as stringed instruments to selected talented children of Public schools cannot be too strongly emphasized.

It is a well-known fact that music is becoming more and more a necessity to young and old alike. The world war certainly proved the value of music in all stages of the great conflict; from the building up of the morale of new recruits upon their arrival in camp, the maintenance of that morale through long periods of strenuous training and waiting for action, and so right down to the cheering and comforting of the sick and wounded who were confined to the hospitals.

It appears, therefore, that a call for more orchestra and military band performers has been the outcome of the past experiences already mentioned. To meet this demand it seems imperative that certain children of the Public schools should be trained to play band and orchestral instruments.

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful, this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

ADOPTS 18 CHILDREN

(By Canadian Press.)

Racine, Wis., April 20—Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hitchcock, of Ogema, a village near here, have no children of their own, but have assumed care of eighteen, ranging in age from six to twenty-one. In order to do this systematically they became legally incorporated the other day. The name of this adoption firm is The W. H. Hitchcock Family, Inc. Each one of the adopted children holds stock in the organization. The capital consists of a farm and a healthy bank account.

THE PLACE OF MUSIC IN THE COMMUNITY.

If you are a professional musician become a public figure in your community. Identify yourself—and not in any shrinking or self-effacing way—with all possible public movements. There is hardly any important public occasion that does not, at some place, demand, or at least permit of music. Make it your business to see that the musical is there. Be the one to provide it, either through your personal performance or by arranging for the appropriate kind: Bands for public banquets, singers, choruses or quartettes are needed; there should be music at public receptions, and on all holidays. All this counts powerfully towards making music take its place of proper importance in the city life. And don't you mind if such activities do make you a sort of public figure and beget you scowling critics as a "pusher." The world, and especially music in this country, needs a lot of just such "pushers."

THE LIGHT THAT FAILED.

A large congregation has just assembled to hear the opening of a fine new four manual organ in a prominent western city last summer when a thunder storm broke, with violent lightning, and the electric lights all went out. The minister who was a man of ready resource and eloquence, without delay or confusion, began a most interesting impromptu address on sacred music bringing in David, Asaph, Palestrina, Handel, etc., passing on to more modern times and speaking intelligently and appreciatively of the modern organ and its builders. The entire discourse was entirely suited to put the audience in the right mood to enjoy the organ recital, and fortunately, the lights came on again just as he finished—or else he talked until the lights came on—whichever it was. The minster then added a few words gracefully introducing the organist, and the latter climbed on the bench and turned the electric switch would should start the blower suppling the wind. All would have been well, only the motor didn't start—it was burned out. Nothing doing, the congregation sadly dispersed.

Scottish Superstition.

A death in the family, it is believed in many parts of Scotland, is sure to follow if a flowering hawthorn is brought into the house. Among the "sea-going" superstitions of Scotland are those which prevent a Scotch sailor from speaking of any four-footed animal while on the sea, lest he come into bad fortune, and the notion that the fish will be frightened away if a fisherman should pass a bare-footed woman before boarding his ship.

Time.

Now, for the truth of things, time makes no alteration; things are still the same as they are, let the time be past, present, or to come. Those things which we reverence for antiquity, what were they at their first birth? Were they false?—Time cannot make them true. Were they true?—Time cannot make them more true. The circumstance, therefore, of time, in respect of truth and error, is merely impertinent.—John Hales (1628).

A Forgotten Language.

"Tee crowfoot girdle treetop turtle," said one gentleman to another, as reported by the Minneapolis Journal, in an office in that city. "Scalp thirty reel blaze," he continued, reading from an old leather-bound ledger. "Scalp thirty reel blaze," repeated his companion, and wrote it down on a sheet of paper. The two gentlemen, says the Journal, were talking a language once used but now forgotten in Minnesota, for they were respectively a former surveyor general of logs and lumber and his assistant, busy identifying some ancient logs that had been a long time sunk in a river. The strange-sounding sentences were composed of identification marks, of which at least 6,000 have been recorded since the pioneer days when logs were first cut in Minnesota forests. Billions of feet of lumber from the great forests have been thus marked, and once in a while some old logs are recovered from the river bottom, and the old ledger of bark marks and stamps on the ends of the logs is again referred to.

Raising Skunks for Fur.

As wild fur-bearing animals have decreased in numbers and the scarcity and prices of furs consequently increased, many individuals have been led to undertake the rearing of fur bearers in captivity, as for example the efforts to breed foxes in Canada and parts of the United States, and the widespread interest in skunk raising. It is of significance that in one state alone the game warden, within a period of two years, issued more than fifty permits for breeding skunks in captivity. Robert K. Nabours in the National Geographic Magazine.

"ANY TEACHER" WON'T DO.

Any student of the piano can talk for hours about the amount of stick-to-itiveness necessary to become a truly fine pianist. Honest self-criticism is another "often dormant" quality brought into play. Accurac, precision and a great deal of "plugging" are necessary when striving for the goal. If a student brings these finer points of his character into play for six or seven hours daily he is sure to possess them as a definite and abiding asset when dealing with his fellow men during the remainder of the day. So you see that music helps to make one a better member of society, of the community, country and world.

Edgar Allan Poe writes this about the effect music has upon the soul: "It causes harmony and rhythm to penetrate most intimately into the soul, taking the strongest hold upon it, filling it with beauty and making the man beautiful minded; he will praise and admire the beautiful; will receive it with joy into his soul; will feed upon it, and assimilate his own condition with it." If we possess integrity, a staple character, and a "music lighted" soul—the result is a charming personality. For proof of this statement, come into contact with any of our great artists.

Every child should have a proper musical education. It is a parent's duty to the child and to society to see to this. Another point—"Any teacher" won't do, to begin with. When one thinks of the enormous amount of talent lying dormant—yes, perhaps even genisu undeveloped—because of inadequate and erroneous instruction, one cannot feel that Poe's beautiful essay on the importance of musical education has been written in vain.

THE SAAR COMMISSION.

Winnipeg Man is Honored by Important Appointment.

An honor has been conferred upon Canada by the appointment of a Canadian as one of the four members composing the Saar Valley Commission. The commission consists of five members chosen by the Council of the League of Nations. They represent one member for France, a native of the Saar Basin, and three members of other countries other than France or Germany. Canada has been selected as one of these countries. Its representative is Richard D. Waugh, former Mayor of Winnipeg, Manitoba, and chairman of the Greater Winnipeg Water Commission. Mr. Waugh will represent the British Government. Mr. Waugh, who came from Scotland over thirty years ago and settled in Winnipeg, has held many prominent positions in his adopted country, including that of city controller for four years and mayor for three.

According to a statement given out the Saar Commission will, in the Saar Basin, have all the powers of government hitherto belonging to the German Empire, Prussia, or Bavaria, including the appointment and dismissal of officials and the creating of administratives and representative bodies as it may be necessary. It will have full powers to administer and operate the railways, canals, and the different public services. It will insure by such means as it deems suitable the protection abroad of the interest of the inhabitants. It will have the full right to use the property, other than mines belonging to any German Government, in the territory. Existing laws will continue to apply, but the governing commission, after consultation with the elected representatives of the inhabitants, may modify these laws to bring them into accord with the Peace Treaty. The commission will fix the hours and conditions of labor. Existing civil and criminal courts will continue, but the commission will establish a court to hear appeals from these courts and to decide matters for which these courts are not competent. The commission will also have the power of levying taxes and dues in the territory.

The area of the Saar fields is roughly 1,400 square miles, of which about 52 per cent. are occupied by coal industries. It is largely a hill country with little forest, but with good agricultural land. The population is almost wholly German, only one commune being French-speaking. The main areas of the mining and dependent industries are densely populated. In 1913 the total coal production in the Saar fields was about 18,000,000 tons. The reserves of coal in the Saar Basin are estimated at 16,848,000,000 metric tons.

Fatal Timidity.

Every day sends to the grave obscure men who have remained in obscurity only because their timidity, their lack of self-confidence, prevented them from making a first effort. If they could have been induced to begin; if they had trusted in their own powers and dared to forge ahead they would, in all probability, have gone great lengths in careers of usefulness and fame.—Orison Swett Marden.

Something About Olives.

Like other fruit trees, the olive tree has many enemies, including birds and insects. The most dreaded of these is a small fly called dacus oleae, half the size of a house fly. It is calculated that a single fly will destroy 300 or 400 olives. The only remedy is to gather the fruit early and by crushing it at once destroy the larvae.

LANKA TEA

Investigations by the Mexican government to find out who built the great pyramids at San Juan Teotihuacan 27 miles from Mexico City, have brought to light two great granite heads of the ancient Mexican god of the air, Quetzalcoatl.

These heads are almost perfect specimens, bearing all the symbolic markings.

The long-disputed point as to who erected the pyramids is, as yet, unsolved. These huge mounds, one to the sun and the other to the moon, the former being 761 by 721 feet at the base and [illegible] feet high, are generally attributed to a tribe that preceded the Toltecs, probably dating from about the Sixth century.

To Photograph a Star.

A discovery may be made photographically by some astronomer this fall or winter in the constellation Gemini, according to Isabel M. Lewis of the United States naval observatory. It will be a star of the fifteenth magnitude in an elliptical orbit and has been difficult to find and identify because in the Milky Way there are countless others that are brighter.

The orbits of all the planets excepting Mercury, are nearly perfect circles, and discovery of a planet exterior to Neptune that moves in a greatly elongated ellipse will strike one more blow at the nebular hypothesis, which assumes, says Miss Lewis, that the planets' almost circular orbits are due to the fact that originally they were thrown off as rings from a contracting solar nebula.

Irregularities in the motion of Neptune indicate that the unseen planet is drawing near to Neptune and during this period of conjunction astronomers hope to determine the mass of the new body.

Reclaiming Waste Places.

Twenty years ago a news story from Washington says land in the Louisiana parish of Tangipahoa was worth 50 cents an acre and human life was worth scarcely anything at all. It was a case of cause and effect.

Then the immigrants came. They were chiefly Italians and Hungarians. They had lived at home on land that was poorer than the Tangipahoa. They practiced intensive cultivation. Today their parish is one of the greatest strawberry farming districts in the United States.

Land that sold for 50 cents is now worth $100 an acre. And the school authorities have practiced intensive cultivation on the human products of that land. Americanization has made life worth more there than it ever was before.—Binghamton News.

HISTORIC ISLANDS.

Danish West Indies Have Become American.

Modernization, they are saying, is what the people of the erstwhile Danish West Indies are now clamoring for. And they should have it, no doubt, to bring the history of these verdant dots upon the Caribbean up to date? People they had, and trade, and customs of their own, so it seems, even before Columbus got his first sight of them in 1493; and since then they have been successively Spanish, British, French, Dutch, and Danish. Now they are American.

But will even that sort of thing make much change in the islands and their people? Perhaps not even the American enthusiasts really wish to see them greatly changed. Already for years English has been the common speech around the wharves and shops of Charlotte Amalia or Christiansted or Frederiksted, and the American who wishes to take a trip to the islands, and see what the latest American territorial acquisitions look like, can do so without having even so much of linguistic difficulty as he would be likely to encounter in touring Cuba. At the same time he can feel himself much farther from the beaten path of travelers, searching out the haunts of the sea rovers like Sir Francis Drake, or Morgan the Buccaneer, or Martin Frobisher, while safely enjoying the grateful balm of tropic airs and the beauty of tropic scenery.

Why it is that one hears almost never of any one of the Virgin Islands other than St. Thomas, or St. Croix, or St. John, the three of major size, is hard to say, unless it be because the first has perhaps the best harbor in the West Indies, the second raises much sugar, and the third grows bay leaves enough to provide half the whole world's requirement of bay rum. Traders know these largest islands, and have known them from the earliest times. Yet there is something to be said of the other islands, almost fifty of them, that lie scattered over the surface of the sea all about and among the three largest. There is Virgin Gorda, with no town upon it, only little clusters of huts like diminutive villages. And there are Ginger, and Salt, and Cooper, and Peter, and Norman, and the island that some people call Dead Chest and others Duchess (though perhaps, after all, the one name is only a corruption of the other). How the names suggest the days of the freebooters, who "roved the Spanish Main" and made for these outlying cays of the Virgins whenever their ships needed to be beached and overhauled, or they themselves were sick of pirating and eager for life ashore! The white beaches of these secluded islets could tell a story of many a pirate crew, scraping and repairing their swift vessels in the days of old, or perhaps burying just the sort of treasure chest that romantic travelers of modern times are always supposed to be trying to find.

Of course, there is at least one island of the group where, so the story goes, buried treasure was once actually discovered. It was a black who found it, as it is the blacks who, for the most part, tell the story. He was a merchant from St. Thomas, who, having spent some time on Norman Island, suddenly and mysteriously became rich there. It was rumored that in exploring a rocky cave at the far end of the island he had dug up an ancient iron chest, filled with Spanish doubloons. The subsequent finding of an old chest by a fisherman, who chanced to land near the cave, and noticed what seemed to him to be an excavation, naturally served to corroborate the story.

However, stories of that sort never trouble the tourist much. He likes them. True or not, they help to give touring a zest, for journeying to a cave that may, possibly, have been the hiding place of some old buccaneer's ill-gotten gains is far and away more interesting than running up along the shore just to see a cave, as a cave. One may say that the people of the Virgins have already learned how to take advantage of this truism with respect to tourists, for there is, or has been until recently in the islands, a sailing vessel that has been customarily pointed out as an object of interest by reason of her long service. She has been a passenger transport, a mail boat, a cargo carrier, almost everything that can be schooner-rigged, it seems, and is said to have been built in the United States in the year 1800. But tourists of sophistication, who have thought to question the ability of even the product of an old-time shipyard to withstand the successive cruises and storms and sinkings and raisings accredited to this craft of a bygone century, have been able to satisfy themselves that the only section of the original craft now remaining is, after all, only a short piece of the keel. All the rest is patches!

The Label.

As the man and the maid strolled through the picture gallery the woman stopped before an exhibit. "Oh, how sweet!" she breathed. "I wonder what it means?" questioned the young fellow, as he eyed the pictured pair who clung together in an attitude of love and longing. "Oh, Charlie, don't you see?" the girl chided tenderly. "He has just asked her to marry him and she has consented. It's lovely! What does the artist call the picture?" The young man leaned nearer and eyed a little label on the frame. "I see!" he cried. "It's printed on this card here—'Sold!'"

NO COLLECTIONS AT THIS CHURCH

Hamilton, Ont., April 20.—In announcing his acceptance of the pastorate of Ebenezer Tabernacle, Rev. F. W. Hollinrake, who recently left the Methodist Church, says that his desire to his new charge is to "introduce and carry out church plans as free as possible from the machinery and the works of the flesh, conforming as closely as possible to the spirit and form of the Apostolic Church, and reviving the spirit and aims of Puritanism."

The pre-millenial hope will be one of his teachings. He stipulates that there shall be no fixed salary, and will trust to the free-will offerings of his people. There will be no collection plates, but offering boxes will be at the doors, and no individual's givings will be known to any in the church. Concerts, entertainments and teas will find little or no place in this house of worship, and outside appeals for money will be avoided.

Baptism by immersion will be advocated though not insisted upon, and the people will be asked to give a tenth of their income for church purposes, this to be a first charge upon their incomes.

OVERALL SCHEME MAY BE FAILURE

PLAN DID NOT WORK IN FRANCE PRICES SOARED SKY HIGH

Paris, April 20. — Leaders of fashion here are watching with interest the movement in the United States to fool the clothing profiteers by wearing overalls. A similar attempt was made here not long ago, but it failed because the only stock of overalls in France were those of the U. S. army, and they were bought up by a wholesaler who promptly put up the price. When he got through "going up" a pair of overalls cost almost as much as a new gown.

Then there was the "Cotton Stocking League," an enthusiastic and very sincere organization of fashionable but sane Parisian women who tried to take the lead in combatting the high cost of living by spurning silk hosiery and all other "fancy" high priced wearing apparel. Their effort was frustrated by the extravagant section of the smart set insisting upon appearing at the Long Champs races and in the Paris ballrooms in ever costlier and ever more freakish costumes.

However, it is predicted by the more conservative elements of French society that there will be an [illegible] reaction.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

IF MIXED WITH SULPHUR IT DARKENS SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

ASSAULTS MOTHER-IN-LAW

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 20.—Judge Kapper, of the Supreme Court here, has decided that to assault the mother of one's wife does not constitute legal grounds for separation. Mrs. [illegible] Horowitz brought suit for separation and alimony against her husband. Her counsel told the court that Horowitz had assaulted his mother-in-law. "That is not ground for the wife to obtain a separation," the judge ruled.

CANADIANS UNITE UNDER ONE BANNER

MR. J. H. BURNHAM SUGGESTS ONE GREAT GLORIOUS CHURCH

The member of the House of Commons for West Peterborough writes to the Ottawa Citizen as follows:

At this critical moment when success is knocking at our doors we must not falter. Let us remember those of former times who in the fervor of their religious zeal burned at the stake thousands, nay millions, of other people. I can smell the burning flesh yet. Is it a joy to my nostrils? Fighting against the divine right of others they recognised their own divine right only. The truth they taught,—and we must not be behind them in that—is that the divine plan without our improvements is a fizzle. People just run wild under it. It is up to us to put things right and save the world. Should we imitate Christ and teach by His example? Certainly not! Why should we suffer? This is a business age and let us get to business. Therefore I propose as follows:

To the People of Canada.

The request of the Rev. Dr. Chown, superintendent of the Methodist Church of Canada, that the Presbyterian Church of Canada make haste to accomplish the union which has been in the air for some time has set men thinking. Why stop at Protestant union? Why not let all Canada unite under the banner of one great glorious church? The reasons for complete union are just as strong as for partial union. In fact they are stronger. There is no real union at all unless it can be complete and unless it comprises all bodies. It is true that objections have been raised to all forms of union. It has been said that Christian union cannot be maintained in its entirety and that union followed by disunion again would be worse than no union at all. That also is true. But we have laws in this country and can have more. The great union of hearts and hands of all creeds and persuasions in the glorious work of prohibition shows us clearly what to do. We must invade the home. Some have held out against prohibition in some provinces, but they will be compelled to come into the prohibition fold because it is for their good. They must obey a good law, and if a prohibitory law is good in the case of alcohol it is infinitely better in the case of religion. It was the benefit of humanity that justified the one and it will justify the other. The old idea of the liberty of the individual has passed. He has a right to just so much liberty as he may have consistently with the general benefit of the community. A union embracing all creeds and a creed embracing all the Christian verities will be the greatest advance since the great disruption that we are now getting ready in a partial way to repair. Ontario hitherto has been the chief stumbling block. That grand province has seen the error of her ways. She sees that individual liberty is not compatible with the highest good, and that if a civil law regulating private conduct regarding liquor is permissible, so surely is a civil law regulating private conduct regarding religion. Let the heads of all the churches, Catholic and Protestant, come together and arrange a union which we can then enforce by civil law. The law may be made the same in every respect as the prohibitory law governing the consumption of alcoholic liquor, using the words that refer to religion instead of those that relate to liquor. The obstacle heretofore has been the time-honored prejudice in favor of freedom of private conduct so long as it was compatible with decency and the liberty of others. That prejudice is now about to disappear and the submission of the people to a higher law obtained. Let us, everywhere with one accord, take up and carry out this logical and most desirable consummation and the world is saved. Is Christ a prohibitionist or a penalist? Are we with Him or are we infidels and believers only in ourselves? Was Christ's plan a failure?—J. H. BURNHAM, House of Commons.

CANADIANS ARE STILL FAVORITES FOR COMING OLYMPIC SERIES IN ANTWERP

Canadian and American Hockey Teams Practice Daily and Fraternize Freely in Off. Hours.

(By Canadian Press.)

Antwerp, April 21.—The Canadian hockey team has been practising daily in preparation for the opening game of the Olympic series, which will take place on Friday night. The practises have been held at the Antwerp Ice Palace, where the contests are to take place. The players declare the ice is in excellent condition.

The Canadians were on hand yesterday to welcome the members of the United States team, who arrived in the afternoon, none the worse for a few days' rather rough weather. All of the teams entered for competitions are now here, with the exception of the French, who are only a few hours away, and are training steadily in Paris.

After fraternising with the American players during the afternoon the Canadians turned out in the evening to watch the first practise of the boys from the south of the line. They expressed the opinion that the Americans are likely to be strong contenders for the hockey title.

The drawing for the first pairings will be held Thursday afternoon. The Canadians are hoping to meet the Americans early in the series. The players from the Dominion have been given a great reception by the British Army contingent stationed here, and will have a strong rooters' "choir" to give them encouragement during the games. The American Army officers stationed at the Antwerp base will root for the United States team.

Both Canadian and American teams have made arrangement for daily practices until the opening game. The Canadians are favorites.

OBITUARY

LATE JOHN CURTIS

(Port Hope Guide.)

Port Hope's grand old man, Mr. John Curtis, was called home at 12:40 this morning after an illness extending over two months.

The late Mr. Curtis was born in England and came to this coutry with his parents when eight years of age and settled at Perrytown. When he was eighteen years of age his father deid and Mr. Curtis assumed the responsibilities of the farm work and was very successful. In 1878 he moved to Port Hope and started in the pork business.

About the year 1880 hogs were purchased throughout the country at live weight by the incoming packing interests, and Mr. Curtis then started in the grocery business. He was a shrewd business man and met with a full measure of success, and today it is the leading grocery business in Port Hope.

Upright in all his dealings, Mr. Curtis won the esteem of the public, and his store was the first to abolish the old system of requesting the farmers to take trade for their goods.

Although in his eightieth year, Mr. Curtis rarely missed a day from business until his illness four months ago. He was a great reader and followed the affairs of the country with a keen interest. He was a member and regular attendant of the Methodist Church and was a real Liberal of the old school.

His one ambition was to see Port Hope advance and any movement for the betterment of the town's interests always received his hearty support. He served for several years on the Council Board and was one of the oldest members of the Board of Trade.

The funeral service will be held at the family residence, Brown street, on Thursday afternoon at two o'clock. Rev. E. B. Lanceley, of Toronto, a former pastor in the Methodist Church here and an intimate friend of the family will assist with the service To the bereaved family Port Hope extends heartfelt condolence.

The late Mr. Curtis was the father of Mrs. W. G. Kent, wife of the well known druggist of this city and Mr. Kent's store on the corner of George and Hunter streets was closed at noon today as a tribute to Mr. Curtis.

DAVID DROPE.

The death took place this morning at his residence, 787 Water St., of David Drope, in his 69th year. Mr. Drope was in the best of health until Saturday, morning, when he took ill and pneumonia developed. His condition went from bad to worse in spite of all that loving care and skilled help could do, until he passed peacefully away this morning.

He was born in Roseneath, Alnwick township, and lived there all his life until moving to this city some three years ago. During the past few months he had been employed by the Adam Hall Co., Ltd., and in the short time of his connection with this firm had become very well liked. The news of his demise will be greatly regretted by the firm and the employes.

While he did not take an active interest in fraternal societies, he had for years past been a prominent member of the Orange Order.

He is survived by four daughters, Mrs. Nicholl, of Prueax, Sask., Mrs. Curel, of Hastings, and Mamie and Mildred at home, and by one son, Pitt, of Picton.

The funeral will take place Saturday afternoon from his late residence on Water street to Hastings by rail and thence to the cemetery at Roseneath. Rev. Mr. White, rector of St. Luke's Anglican Church, will conduct the services.

JAS. BOGUE REPORTS THAT LAKEFIELD VILLAGE MEMORIAL HALL IS QUITE SAFE

Much Damage Occurs, However, for Lack of Proper Heating—Would Cost Another $7000 to Complete and Put Building in Good Shape.

The regular monthly meeting of the Lakefield Council was held in the Council chamber on Monday evening.

The members present were Reeve Strickland in the chair, Councillors Marling, Smith, Spence and Young.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and confirmed.

The first business taken up by the council was the matter of providing light and power for the village, the necessity arising owing to the electric light plant having been destroyed by fire on Sunday evening, leaving the village in darkness and several industries without power. Quite a number of ratepayers were present as members, expressing their views with regard to obtaining power to provide light.

The only solution to the problem arrived at was to try to secure power from the Canada Cement Company. The company's power house at Young's Point is in good shape and power could be obtained from that source in a short time providing satisfactory arrangements could be made with the cement compnay.

After considerable discussion it was moved by Councilor Marling, seconded by Councillor Spence, that the clerk get in touch with Mr. E. W. Bailey and then with Mr. Jones, the general manager of the Cement Company, at the earliest possible moment re-the lighting during the interval until the Hydro takes it over.—Carried.

Cost of Power

The following communication was received from the Hydro Electric Commission:

Mr. W. Sherin, Village Clerk
Lakefield
Ontario.

Dear Sir—We regret to inform you that a revision of the estimates submitted to you on December 1st, shows an increase in cost of construction of $3,154.00. This is due to percentage increases in items as follows:

'Poles, 20 per cent, were 10 per cent. Labour 20 per cent, board 15 per cent, street lighting equipment 5 per cent.

Owing to these increases we would like to know the council's opinion in connection with a reduction of area covered by the distribution system. We figured on serving the two streets near the Canada Cement Company's mill, viz Oxford and Bishop streets with house and street lighting. If we stop at the corner of Concession and Oxford streets, it will mean a reduction of $1,400. Also on Strickland street east of the corner where the large house was burned, we figured on extending house and street lighting to Bay street. If this is stopped at Prospect street there is a further saving of $300.00 These two places seem to be the only possibilities for reduction.

Will you be good enough to let us have the opinion of the council on this at as early a date as possible, as our construction department are ordering material and making arrangements to start construction.

Yours truly,
F. A. GABY,
Chief Engineer
Per W. G. Ireland.

It was decided that the council recommend to the Hydro-Commission the cutting off of Oxford and Bishop streets, making a saving of $1400.

Reports Building Safe

Peterboro, March 23, 20
To Reeve and Council of Lakefield,

Gentlemen,—As requested, I visited your village on the 22nd inst. and examined your memorial hall I also examined the plans which I must say are very complete. The condition in which the building is now in is not in any way the fault of the design and we must look elsewhere for the cause of its present condition

I consider it a great mistake that a basement was not put under the whole building and windows put in to light it up. As it now is there is no light in the basement. This should be remedied when you are making repairs.

The building having been erected late in the season it was of the greatest importance that no time should have been lost in getting heat into the building. This is one of the causes of the present condition. The second is the diagonal floor was run up too tight to the brick work. There may be other causes but I was unable to make an examination of the foundation owing to the frost and ice. At the present time if fires are kept in the building it will help a good deal to prevent any more damage and will save money to the village later on. After the frost is all out, I do not think it will be a very big matter to repair the damage. I must say that of the workmanship and the material was good and no good workman could find any fault in this regard. Some one should, however, be made accountable for the neglect to heat the building properly. This is the cause of all your trouble.

I think you should not give any consideration to those that are disposed to think that the building is not safe.

The building is perfectly safe. Many buildings have had worse accidents and are still in use and are considered good. It is unfortunate that you should have been caught in one of the worst winters in fifty years. I am quite sure that no structure could stand a winter like the one we have had and have such care as was taken with this, without damage. However unfortunate it may be, you will now have to make the best of it and if a mistake has been made heretofore it is now up to the present council to remedy it and to profit by past mistakes. I do not know that it is necessary for me to say anything further at the present time until the frost is all out then I suppose you will have decided what you intend to do. You asked me what it would take to complete the building. I have not sufficient knowledge of how matters are to give you this information, but I thing roughly estimating, you will require $7,000. This should be sufficient for all purposes.

Another Report

The following report from N. A Kearns, architect of the Memorial Hall was then read:

Welland, March 11, 20
To the Reeve and Council,
Lakefield,
Ontario.

Gentlemen.— I'm presenting this statement in regard to the condition of your Memorial Hall. I wish to draw your attention to the difficulty I am in making a report of construction which I did not supervise. It will be my endeavor to make as fair as possible, leaving to you to place the responsibility with the person or persons who may be to blame for the faulty structure.

Re-crack in north wall. The shape of this crack indicates a settlement of the foundation at the northeast corner of the building. The settlement occurs to the greatest depth at the corner and works back to a part where a fissure shows under the landing of the side entry. The settlement may be due to the neglect of the contractor in removing faulty parts of the old wall or it may be due to a faulty bonding of the concrete blocks and the wall.

It will be necesary to remove foundation here and rebuild the wall.

Re-Stair hall partition.—The outer part of this partition has settled toward the north and toward the south greater settlement occurring to the north. The foundation is badly cracked and it will be necessary to remove and rebuild the entire wall between the seventeen-inch pier and the north wall. I do not know if this wall is carried down to the same depth behind the vault as it is in the furnace room. If t is built to that depth the repairs are to be made.

Re-Fuel room walls.— These walls are badly cracked, apparently due to the action of frost and must be rebuilt. The reason for the cracks in the new walls of the basement may be found in the action of the frost. When the frost is out of the ground the extent of the damage may be ascertained and the necessary repairs undertaken.

Renovation from plans.— Mr. Henderson, with the authority of the ex-Reeve or other members of the former council took upon himself the responsibility of making certain changes to the plans. He evidently considered his practical experience of value in changing the writer's designs. How much of the specification he followed where the work is concealed, I am unable to state.

The following are a few of the changes he made, Wrought iron beam ing plates not used in trusses. Brick wall over entry to assembly hall, instead of the frame wall shown on plan and section. No provision made for the lathing of the exterior walls on ground floor. The steps to the basement are too far forward. The cement floor in the fire-hall not laid according to specifications, concrete lintels over the windows and doors, instead of the arches as shown on the elevations. The pilasters have been omitted from the cupalo. Rowlock arches not according to the specifications.

Re-Frost cracks— It should be understood, that while I believe frost has done some damage to the building I think that the frost cracks may be repaired with little difficulty. The settlement of the main walls is of a more serious nature and will entail considerable expense in the re-building before the building is safe enough for public use.

Re-Inspection—I wish now to state that when the question of building on the old walls came up, I told your former council that a great deal of the old wall should be removed and then recommended the employment of close supervision on the basement wall. How close a supervision was kept on this work. Mr. Hendren alone knows.

Had the plans and specifications been rigidly followed without unauthorized changes, I believe that a great deal of the present difficulty might have been avoided.

Yours truly,
N. A. KEARN,

JEWISH RELIEF REACHES $97,550

HALF OF DESIRED AMOUNT SUBSCRIBED IN TWO DAYS

INDIVIDUAL AMOUNTS LARGE

EVEN NEWSBOYS GIVE THEIR MITE TO DESERVING CAUSE

Toronto, April 21.—The fund for the Canadian Jewish war Relief Fund reached a total of $97,550 yesterday or nearly half of the objective. The canvassers reported to headquarters that they were receiving a splendid reception wherever they went. The spirit of generosity seemed more evident than yesterday. Gentiles as well as Jews were subscribing.

Among the subscriptions received today were $1,000 checks from Brenner & Co., Jack Perkins, W. Weiss and family, Harold Levy, M. G. Cohen, E. Marks, E. Pullan, Joe Swartz, Norman Helpert, DeYoung Co., A. M. P. Goldberg and Backrack Bros.

No House to House Canvas.

The following donated five hundred dollars apiece to the fund: Murray Kay Company, Sterling Dress Company, A. F. Schnauffer, Nerlick and Company, and Mount Sinai, No. 532, The Star Knitting Company gave $800, the Lyon Dress Company, $300; the E. L. Ruddy Company, $200; Londes Co., Limited, $360, and Julian Sale, $200, and M. Langmuir Mfg. Company, $100.

It was pointed out at headquarters this morning that there would be no house to house canvas. Private individuals, who wished to subscribe were urged to use the coupons appearing in the daily papers.

Even Newsboys Give.

One of the first visitors to campaign headquarters of the Canadian Jewish War Relief yesterday morning was a little newsboy. He would be about eight years old. He was small even for his tender age but he's becoming a well known figure at one of the main downtown corners.

Bashfully, he edged up to one of the campaign officials—a man three or four times his size—and said he wanted to speak to somebody. The lad was taken to a chair, for the big man had to sit down to hear him.

After a short while, it was discovered that here was a contributor. He wanted to give 75 cents "for the kids the picture tells about," as he put it, referring to the paintings in the windows of the headquarters.

They carried him over to the "Subscriptions Received Here" table and gratefully acknowledged his precious gift. The lad went away a happy boy—and the big fellow and the other campaign officials felt that the appeal of the suffering little children in Central and Eastern Europe had surely been heard in Toronto.

Another morning visitor was a lady of middle age. The appeal had touched her heart, she said, and though she would willingly give more, if she could, she left a five dollar bill. "If there is to be a tag day I will gladly help," she volunteered. She was thanked for her offer and informed that a tag day was contemplated in connection with the campaign.

BIG CABARET SET ESPECIALLY BUILT FOR "STEPPING OUT"

HUNDREDS OF PERSONS APPEAR IN SCENE OF ENID BENNETT'S NEW PICTURE

One of the biggest sets ever erected under cover will be seen in Thomas H. Ince's latest Paramount photoplay, "Stepping Out," in which Enid Bennett will be featured at the Grand Theatre commencing next Thursday.

The set represents a New York cafe and cabaret. It is two storeys high, sixty feet wide and seventy-five feet deep. Previously it was the custom of moving picture makers to rent a down-town cafe for such scenes.

Only the new mammoth stages at the Ince studio make it possible to erect such a scene, which has the advantages of proper lighting effect, in the studio not possible of attainment in a regular cafe.

In this scene several hundred men and women in evening clothes, a jazz band and many entertainers are used. Miss Bennett is finely supported, Niles Welch being her leading man.

BOWLING AT THE "Y"

George St. defeated St. Paul's in two out of three games last night and thereby won the second round of the Church Bowling League. The second game was sensational, St. Paul's team finishing strong with three double strikes in the last frame and every man with a mark. The game looked like St. Paul's, but G. Robertson, the George St. captain, upset things by finishing with 304 pins, with 6 strikes in the last 4 frames. The play-off has been arranged one week from Thursday night.

How Some English Towns Try Business Ventures To Relieve Tax Payers

SEVERAL towns in England make money for the purpose of helping the rate payer.

Doncaster, for example, has a racecourse which brings in a handsome profit probably a five-figure sum yearly. Doncaster races, always popular "with the crowd," have been in existence since the sixteenth century, and [illegible] therefore have earned an enormous sum for the town in their time.

Plymouth Corporation are the owners of an hotel, the Royal, and a theatre which bring in a yearly revenue of over £2,000. Incidentally the theatre, which has been in the town's possession for over one hundred years, is one of the most popular in the provinces.

Although the rates of Liverpool do not directly benefit thereby, the city makes money out of its Art Gallery, which is visited by thousands every year. An exhibition is held each autumn, the profits from which go towards enriching the permanent collection to the gallery.

In only one case is a university in this country the property of the town in which it stands. The exception is Nottingham, and there is no doubt that its presence has been a great benefit to the city. During the past year the rates of Nottingham have been helped by contributions from its gas department, its tramways and building estate, and various markets and fairs.

Probably Saltash is the only town in the country that owns a church. It was built by the corporation so long ago as the eleventh century. The mayor is church warden, and in that capacity, up to a few years ago, he allotted the sittings, whence money was obtained.

Bristol owns a College of Domestic Subjects, including a Cookery School, and although no money is actually made out of the concern—in the contrary the town contributes towards its maintenance—the citizens regard it as being in many ways a good investment.

The Valley Bridge at Scarborough is the property of the corporation, which, until a month or so ago, levied tolls on passengers and vehicles using the bridge, and although the money thus made did not benefit the rates, the bridge itself is looked upon as being a wise provision for the town.

The Corporation of Halifax are the owners of a stone quarry, from which paving material is obtained for use in the town.—Pearson's Weekly.

A queer thing that occurred during the summer of 1868 was a plague of red squirrels in Ontario. They appeared by hundreds and created so much damage amongst the fruit, particularly pears, that my particular job was to shoot them, says a correspondent. The little red rascals would nibble away at the fruit till they got to the seeds, which they would pick out and eat, then drop the other half of the pear to the ground. As much as a peck to a bushel of fruit would be seen in a heap around the base of the tree.

Didn't Enjoy It.

Young Harley was home for a few days from a cruise with the merchant marine. "Well," said the man from the home town, genially, "how have you been enjoying maritime life?" "Haven't been enjoying it at all," answered the youngster, "[illegible] she broke the engagement."

Bliss Carman Canadian Poet

IT may not be generally known that Bliss Carman, Canadian poet, is seriously ill of tuberculosis at Saranac Lake, N.Y. Some people argue that Carman is not a Canadian poet because he has lived most of his life in New York City. Do not suggest this to any Carman enthusiast or he will bit you. Ask Peter McArthur, or Arthur Stringer, both of whom were pals of his in New York. Read his poems—at least some of the most famous are Canadian in subject.

Every editor in Canada should know "The Ships of Grey St. John." Here is the poem:—

Smile, you inland hills and rivers,
Flush, you mountains, in the dawn,
But my roving heart is seaward
With the ships of grey St. John.

Fair the land lies, full of August,
Meadow island, shingly bar,
Open barns and breezy twilight,
Peace and the mild evening star.

Gently now this gentlest country
The old habitude takes on,
But my wintry heart is outbound
With the great ships of St. John.

Once in your wide arms you held me
Till the man-child was a man,
Canada, great nurse and mother,
Of the young, sea-roving clan.

Always your bright face above me
Through the dreams of boyhood shone.
Now far alien countries call me
With the ships of grey St. John.

Swing, you tides, up out of Fundy,
Blow, you white fogs, in from sea.
I was born to be your fellow,
You were bred to pilot me.

At the touch of your strong fingers
Doubt, the derelict, has gone.
Sane and glad I clear the headland,
With the white ships of St. John.

Loyalists, my fathers, builded
This grey port of the grey sea,
When the duty to ideals
Could not let well being be.

When the breadth of scarlet bunting
Puts the wreath of maple on,
I must cheer too— slip my moorings
With the ships of grey St. John.

Peerless-hearted port of heroes,
Be a word to lift the world,
Till the many see the signal
Of the few once more unfurled.

Past the lighthouse, past the nun-buoy,
Past the crimson rising sun,
There are dreams go down the harbor
With the tall ships of St. John.

In the morning I am with them
As they clear the island bar,
Fade till speck by speck the midday
Has forgotten where they are.

But I sight a vaster sea-line,
Wider leeway, longer run,
Whose discoverers return not
With the ships of grey St. John.

There's real passion for nature in this. No shipping firm ever could use it for advertising. It has nothing to do with cargoes. Just ships and how they make a man feel. A few hundred poems like that here and there in Canada would make the country get a size of the image that cargoes never gave it. And for 26 years Carman has been turning out poetry at an average of a volume a year.

But neither the poet nor the newspaperman has seen each other. Carman's birthplace was Fredericton, N.B. He graduated from college down there and from both Edinburgh and Harvard, studied law, practised as a civil engineer and taught school. He was afterwards an editor and drifted down to New York, where for years he was the principal figure in elevated Bohemia. New York never went wild over Carman. It just knew him. Always if any tourist asked, "By the way, have you any poet in this burg, any more the real thing than Le Gallienne?" there was somebody to answer, "Oh, sure! There's Bliss Carman. He's the realest thing in pure poetry there is since Walt Whitman and Whitcomb Riley. He looks like a statue by Rodin. He never has any money. Got brains enough to be one of the biggest editors in America. Ask Kennerley, his publisher. He'll tell you. But Carman just prefers to use his brains in singing verse with ideas in it. So he's always hard up. Where does he hail from, you say? Oh, from up Canada way, somewhere round St. John. Yes, he talks a lot about Canada. Why didn't he stay there? Oh, well, if a man's going to half starve on poetry it's far more interesting to do it in a big town like New York."

A few of Carmen's well-wishers in Toronto recently raised a fund for his benefit and there is still work to do along that line for the man who is the personal friend of John Burroughs and Le Gallienne, and was of Whitcomb Riley and Theodore Roosevelt, and has never become a naturalized citizen of the United States.

Both Had Cause to Give Thanks.

The following story has been told by our esteemed fellow citizen, James L. Hughes, himself.

On one occasion Hughes was traveling to New York. When he reached the frontier he was accosted by the U. S. immigration official as is the usual custom.

"Are you an American?" inquired the officer.

"Yes," replied James L., "and a Canadian, thank God!"

"Will you be staying long in the States?" next asked the man in uniform.

"No," replied Mr. Hughes, "not very long."

"Thank God!" ejaculated the immigration officer.—Toronto Star.

The fundamental simplicity of the American aborigine is illustrated best in the Indian myths and legends which have come down to us, asserted Dr. Rudolph Rieder in a recent address before the Wisconsin Archaeological Society.

"These myths," Dr. Rieder said, "can not be translated into pretty phrases, as in that case the simple beauty of the original is lost.

"There is a rather interesting legend concerning the origin of the Mandan tribe. It says that once the Mandans lived underground in a cave, from which a large vine grew. One young warrior climbed up this vine one day, and liked the country so well that he induced several of his tribesmen to follow him up the vine into the world outside. Several chiefs and warriors did so, as well as many women, but when a fat woman tried to climb out of the cave, against the counsel of the chiefs, the vine broke and the rest of the Mandan tribe had to remain underground. This fable may account for the fact that the Mandans were a relatively small tribe and also for the antipathy to fat women."

Canada's Air Service.

A Canadian Air Force is to be formed immediately, and the personnel will be drawn from volunteers from the ranks of ex-officers and airmen of the Royal Air Force resident in Canada. These will train at centres which will be in operation all the year round, and officers and airmen enlisted in the new force will spend at least one month out of every twenty-four in active training, receiving pay and traveling expenses during the active period.

The force probably will be limited in the beginning to about 5,000, inclusive of all ranks, and the training centres will not number more than two for the whole Dominion. The Government wishes to avoid an expensive permanent organization. The organization of the force will be placed in the hands of Canadians who have had experience at home and on the war fronts in flying, and who are interested in building up a Canadian air militia which can be readily extended and mobilized in an emergency. The age limit is set at about 36 for junior officers and 38 for senior officers.

Learning English.

Many soldiers brought home French brides and now are busy teaching them to talk English. One of the mothers is trying hard to help her daughter-in-law. Also she is trying to teach her little French daughter-in-law to cook Canadian dishes. The other evening she was showing her how to cook oatmeal and how to stir it with a spool. "You stir it, Josephine," she told her. "Remember — stir!" A few minutes later the family dog walked into the kitchen, wagging his tail in a friendly way at her. Josephine regarded him a minute, and then said: "Oh, [illegible] stir wiz his tail!"

Land for Soldiers.

The State of New South Wales has made available for repatriated soldiers 6,000,000 acres of land, according to a statement by Minister of Lands Ashford, who states that about 4,000 former service men will have been placed in settlement.

Comprised in the available area are 1,620 crown lands in the central and eastern divisions, 128 in the western division, 375 in the irrigation regions, 1,475 resumed under Government acts, and 850 for intense culture. Up to date upward of $15,000,000 worth of property has been approved for purchase as part of the repatriation scheme, some of which, however, will not be made available until late this year.

Harrod's.

"Everything under one roof" will be the motto of a new department store which Harrod's, of London, is to build to take the place of its old store in Buenos Ayres. It is to be three times the size of the present store, being eight floors in height and containing nine acres of floor space. Work has already begun, and the first section of the new establishment is expected to open in about a year, while it is hoped that the entire premises will be in working order within eighteen months. After the realization of its present undertaking it is Harrod's plan to establish a chain of stores throughout Argentina similar to those which it is now operating in English cities.

A Weird Argument.

The following "Appeal to the National Democratic Party," is sent out from Detroit on a postcard, "signed by Looloo Lessinski and one hundred others, mostly American citizens":

"We, the members of the States' rights and Personal Liberty wing of the National Democratic Party, so ably represented by Governor Edward of New Jersey, view with alarm the rapid depletion of our ranks through long terms of incarceration in the Canadian jails. And we earnestly and solemnly appeal to the leaders of the National Democratic Party to help stay the tide of our members to Canada and the Canadian jails by immediately issuing a promise to restore the open saloon in the United States at the earliest possible date."

Will Extend Railway.

The extension of the Timiskaming & Northern Ontario Railway from Cochrane to Moose Factory on James' Bay will be proceeded with some time in the future even if financial considerations make an immediate start upon the big work inadvisable. Ontario would take the first place in fish production if the province secured railway connection with James Bay. In the district to be opened up there are water powers sufficient to develop 1,500,000 horsepower. There is pulpwood enough to supply the world with paper, immense supplies of iron ore and other minerals and indications of rich oil deposits. Lignite and coal deposits might yet solve the fuel problem of Ontario.

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:

Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

THE OKAPI.

Strange Animal Was Only Discovered Twenty Years Ago.

The arrival of a living okapi in Europe is an event of the deepest interest to naturalists, for this rare denizen of the Congo forest was only discovered by Sir Harry Johnson in 1900, and for a long time was never even seen alive outside of its native haunts. The first specimen was recently brought to Europe, among a large collection of other animals, by Dr. Georges Lebrun, Belgian administrator in the Congo, who succeeded, in spite of great difficulties, in bringing them to the African coast, for shipment, from a point over 1,200 miles inland. This animal, when only a few days old, was obtained from Congo natives by Commandant Landeghem, a Belgian district commissioner; and his wife tended it carefully at her husband's quarters, several hundred miles above Boma.

The Zoological Society of London in whose scientific proceedings the okapi was first named, figured and described, offered a large sum for this specimen, but Mme. Landeghem, with a natural preference for her own country, decided to present it to the Zoological Society of Antwerp. It is now in the Zoological Gardens there, next door to its relative, the giraffe. It is very tame, and feeds on bread, green stuff, carrots, clover, etc.

In 1907 the first okapis, dead specimens, were brought to England by Major Powell-Cotton and Lieut. Boyd Alexander. They were shown in a photograph of their native haunts taken by Major Powell-Cotton. Major (now Gen.) Marchand described an animal believed to be an okapi and was probably the first European to see it.

Sir Ray Lankester gives the following description of the okapi:

"That interesting creature, the okapi, allied to the giraffe, and discovered by Sir Harry Johnston on the eastern border of the Congo forest, had never been observed and studied by a white man in its living state until a young calf okapi, about a month old, was obtained by Signor Ribotti at Buabilli, on the Evelli river. Sir Harry Johnston first sent home only a band cut from the striped part of the okapi's skin by the natives, and, as it resembled the striped skin of the zebra, Dr. Sclater thought it indicated the existence of a new species of that kind, to which he gave the name 'Equus Johnstoni.'

"A year later (in 1901) Sir Harry Johnston sent to me the complete skin and skull of a nearly adult okapi, with the information that the name okapi is that which the pygmy people of the Congo forest give to this animal."

"P. C."

A pastor tells of a young candidate for the ministry who called upon him. "Why do you want to preach?" asked the clergyman. "I feel called of God," was the answer. "What makes you think you are called?" "I felt it and my mother told me so. She said I was cut out to be either a minister or an undertaker." "In choosing the ministry you are making a great financial sacrifice," the doctor answered. He tells of another student who declared that he beheld in a vision the letters "P.C." and that these letters stood for "Preach Christ." This young man came from a farm in the Middle West, where harvest hands were sorely needed. "I think you have made a mistake," said the church official whose counsel he had sought. "Those letters undoubtedly stood for 'Plant Corn.'"

A Mountain Tragedy.

Occasionally there are tragedies in the lives of bears just as in the lives of human beings, Mr. Enos A. Mills writes in his new book, "The Grizzly"; and he goes on to tell of an appealing incident in which a pair of cubs whose mother had been shot by a hunter were the heroes. The little bears were discovered peeping from beneath a large rock a short distance from where the slain animal lay, and after hesitating for a moment they came out and stood looking intently toward the men and their dead mother.

As the men did not move, they took a few steps toward them. Hesitating again, they stopped, rose up and looked round, and then hastily retreated to the rocks. Evidently their mother had trained them to stay wherever she left them until she returned, but they had waited a long time.

For a while they stood and whimpered very much like hungry, forsaken children. They could scent their mother, and see her, too, and they were hungry and lonesome. Again they started slowly toward the men, walking closely side by side. When very near, they paused, rose on their hind legs and looked in wonder and longing at their lifeless mother. Then they went to her. One little cub sniffed in a bewildered, puzzled way over her cold, still body. He gently stroked her fur with his paw and then sat down and began to whimper and cry.

The other cub stood looking with awe into his mother's motionless face, but at last he shook off his fright and smelled her bloody head; then, all forlorn, he turned to look into the face of the hunter who had been watching the little cub all this while with tears on his cheeks. After a moment he took a step toward him, rose up and, putting his forepaws upon the man's knee, looked confidingly into his face. The men carried the little orphans to camp, and the hunter raised them. Their mother was the last animal that he ever shot.

A Stamp With a Prophecy.

During the late war Turkey was hard put to it to provide postage stamps. The beautiful stamp issue of 1915 was engraved and printed in London, and when Turkey joined in the war she had only a six months' supply.

As a belligerent, she could obtain no more supplies from England, and so the Turkish postal authorities determined to use up their old stocks of declassed stamps, by overprinting on them the values required and a legend that these "surcharged" stamps were available for postage.

Unfortunately for the Turks—though luckily for collectors of "varieties"—the overprinted design included in the national insignia of the "Star and Crescent" a six-pointed star instead of the Moslem five-pointed species. Now this six-pointed star happened to be the heraldic emblem of Bethlehem, and orthodox Moslems at once pointed out that Turkey could not use a hated Christian symbol.

So a fresh set had to be issued, this time with a star having only five points. Another curious "point" about the whole thing was that soon afterward Bethlehem once more became Christian in possession as well as sentiment.

Slang.

Canadian slang, it would seem from a paragraph in Notes and Queries, is behind the times compared with that of England. The word "stunning" is still often used here to describe anything superexcellent, but the expression has apparently passed out in England. Notes and Queries says, in a review of a new section of the Oxford English Dictionary: "'Stunning,' a popular adjective for a time, answering to the present 'tophole,' did not last, we gather, beyond the eighties of last century." It may be doubted whether "tophole," whatever it may mean, will ever obtain the vogue in Canada of the other expression.

OUR DAIRIES.

Industry Grew Rapidly Last Year and Still Expands.

The season of 1919 established new records for Canadian dairying in several respects; the Dominion increased its total production of milk, and prices were higher than they have ever been before. In 1918 the average price paid for cheese by the Dairy Produce Commission was 23 1-2 cents f.o.b. steamers at Montreal. While similar statistics are not available for 1919, the average price will be somewhere in the neighborhood of 27½ cents a pounds on the same basis.

Record prices were also paid for butter. The average price for all grades of creamery delivered at Montreal works out at a little over 53½ cents. The quantity of creamery butter produced was the largest of any year in the history of the industry, the output showing an increase in every province except Manitoba, where the labor situation interfered with the shipping of cream and caused more butter to be made on farms.

Owing to the unusual channels through which a large proportion of Canadian cheese was handled, it has not yet been possible to secure exact figures of production or export for 1919. The receipts at Montreal were lower than in 1918, but a considerable quantity of cheese was exported to the United States through other ports, and the stocks on hand at country points are larger than they were at this time last year. The home consumption of cheese has, according to the best information obtainable, increased during the year. When the figures are had it will probably be found that there was some decrease in the output of cheese, but this will be more than offset by the increase in the output of condensed milk and milk powder, for the manufacture of which milk supplies were largely drawn from the cheese factories.

The growth of the condensed-milk and milk-powder industries during the war period has been the most notable feature of Canadian dairy production. It is estimated that for 1919 the total output of condensed and evaporated milk will be very nearly 110,000,000 pounds, valued at approximately $20,000,000. The total quantity of milk powder produced during the year amounted to 5,323,537 pounds, valued at $1,662,352. There was also a large increase in the manufacture of ice cream and in the consumption of milk in the towns and cities.

Indians Did Nobly in Great War

An interesting record of the part that the Canadian Indians played in the Great War is told in the report of the Department of Indian Affairs for the fiscal year ending March 31 1919, tabled in the House by Hon. Arthur Meighan, Minister of the Interior. More than 4,000 Indians from the various tribes enlisted with the C.E.F. This was over 35 per cent of the Indians of military age. One man, John Campbell, a full-blooded Indian, traveled 3,000 miles by canoe and river steamer to enlist. Indians were decorated for various deeds of bravery. Several were snipers, and Corpl. Francis Pegahmagabow, of Parry Sound, is credited with having killed 378 [illegible]mans.

The Prince's "Small" Ranch

The E. P. Ranch is situated among the foothills of the Rockies, about 50 miles southwest of Calgary. The prince said he had bought a small ranch, but its area is no less than 7,000 acres, or nearly 11 square miles, which is about one-third the area of Toronto. The ranch, however, is small when compared with the adjoining ranch of George Lane, which has an area of 120,000 acres. The prince's ranch is entirely under grass and at present it is without suitable or adequate buildings. It is to be stocked with cattle, horses and sheep.

A MINIATURE RUSSIA.

In Western Canada, in the midst of rippling fields of flax and wheat, nestles a miniature Russia. Resembling a Turgenieff village of the Caucasus, Brilliant, B.C., and Verigin, Saskatchewan, are centres of a little community of oppressed Doukhobor immigrants who twenty-five years ago fled from Cossack persecution and from Czar Nicholas the Third's imposition of universal military rule. They went first to Cyprus. Later, through the intervention and financial assistance of the Society of Friends, as well as of Count Tolstoy, whose "Resurrection" was written to help defray the expenses of their long journey overseas, they were enabled to go to more distant British territory—Canada. In the shadows of the arched doorways which form the entrance to the twin houses where several families maintain co-operative households, the little barefoot children work or play.

In this community of universal brotherhood there is no wearying routine of labor, for each takes a turn and lends a helping hand at the menial tasks. Speaking only Russian, marrying only among themselves, tilling the soil without wages and turning all profits into the common treasury, these eight thousand or more exiles worship God in the spirit and teach their children to live the gospel spirit of love. On their Far Western Russian-Canadian farms, combining modern mechanical improvements and primitive methods, these simple-minded peasants cultivate their grain and retain and perpetuate the art of "pulling" flax. They never scythe the long fibre, for they want to save its length. Driven to the fields only by their own desire to serve their community, they sometime work from five in the morning to eight at night.

At dusk, when their tasks are ended, they gather in small groups and their Gregorian chants roll through the valley like a glorious litany to the joys of labor and to the soil. One week the sturdy "mother of the village" gathers the ripening grain; another, she is the master cook. Love of animals has made her people vegetarians, who hold that it is sinful to take life of any sort—hence their objection to military service. And so Anastasia, or Marya, or Paula, with linen hand-made plotok, or kerchief, on her head to form a simple frame for the rare beauty of an honest, noble face, makes pancakes from flour of the grain she has helped to gather, and serves them with strawberry jam and Russian tea. Still another week she is found kneeling beside the large stones retting flax at the water's edge.

With her keen flax-eye she soon picks out the right spot in the swift whirling stream. She knows just how long to leave the flax in the river until she must reach over and gather up the fibre in her strong arms. Another time someone else will come to relieve her and she in turn will draw into the chair before the spinning-wheel to spin the threads for the heavy smock of the laborer or the finest weave for her own embroidery. Seated at her wheel—an heirloom handed down from mother to daughter—she practices the tricks of her trade, making the threads lie smoothly in place by moistening her fingers with saliva before she runs the flax fibre between them. At her side is her simple cottage, and behind are the eternal hills, while hollyhocks and marigolds and asters form a riot of color at her feet.

In this scene of rustic beauty she croons her old Slavic folk-songs and tries to forget the horrors of persecution on the distant Caspian shore. The religion of her people is embodied in the "Book of Life," so called because it lives in the memory and hearts of men. Most of it passes from one generation to the next by word of mouth, because only a few of the peasants can read. The songs and chants are based on the Bible in part. On Sundays all gather in the schoolroom, barefooted, with neither minister nor leader, to talk over the needs of the little community. Those speak or pray who hear the voice of God. Sometimes this voice finds expression from the lips of a little child. Behind them all, sustaining them in whatever they do, is the burning conviction that Christ is not dead—that Christ lives in the heart of every man.

Safe Light for Miners

Nowadays the up-to-date miner carries a package of electricity about with him while underground. It is a small storage battery attached to the back of his belt, and is connected by a cord with a lamp fastened to the front of his cap.

The lamp, provided with a reflector, throws quite a flood of light in front of the miner. But its chief advantage is absolute safety.

In olden days miners (who must, of course, have light) carried about with them open-flame lamps. These caused innumerable disastrous accidents through ignition of coal dust or gases. Sir Humphry Davy's invention of a safety lamp whose flame was protected by a wire gauze saved an immense number of lives. It is in common use today, but the electric mine lamp is better and more convenient.

HANDSOME BUILDINGS.

A Few Facts That All Canadians Should Know.

Owing to the fact that the tower of the new Parliament Buildings has not yet been constructed, the temporary main entrance to the House of Commons is at the western end of the building. The walls are lined with tyndall limestone which was quarried in Manitoba and brought from there to Ottawa in huge blocks. The surface has been tooled or "crandalled," giving it a very effective appearance; the stone is gray with a slightly creamish tint, thus taking away from the coldness of a stone interior. Intricate patterns made of thousands of fossils are traced and in some cases a perfect section of a shell can be seen, presenting the curves of an Ionic capital or part of the vertebra of some prehistoric animal. Because the building was commenced during the war (1916) it was impossible to obtain the well-known Belgian black marble, but a satisfactory substitute was found in the Province of Quebec where, before the war, very little of this marble had been quarried. The marble stairway in the foreground leads up to the House of Commons lobby or rotunda. The supporting arches to the floor above form a cloister while the ceiling is pierced and opened to the daylight. Where the arches spring from the piers they are decorated with carved bosses which take the form of caricatures of statesmen of the past and present. There was at one time considerable unfavorable and rather uncalled for criticism of these "gargoyles." On the arch facing the main door to the Commons Chamber is a carved head of Sir Robert Borden and facing him is the "gargoyle" of Laurier. The doors opening into the various rooms from here are oak ornamented with linen fold panelling.

The Bald Eagle.

Extinction imminently threatens the "American" or bald eagle, one of the most beautiful and magnificent of birds. And by a curious irony the destruction is being accomplished at public expense, as provided in the bounty law passed by the Territorial Legislature of Alaska on April 30, 1917.

The bald eagle has never been an abundant species. Estimates of its numbers have generally been greatly exaggerated. It is only on the basis of the occupied nests that its real numbers—or rather its real scarcity—can be estimated. Computations based on observations of the birds themselves are obviously unreliable. For, conspicuous by its size and habits, it is very apt to attract considerable attention, and the same individuals are doubtless seen again and again.

The only region where the bald eagle has maintained encouraging numbers has been the coastal region and large river valleys of Alaska and Northwestern Canada. Here it did breed in numbers surprisingly large for a bird of its size. But the Alaskan bounty law, which provides for the payment of fifty cents for each eagle destroyed, although it went into effect only on April 30, 1917, had already, by April 10, 1919, resulted in the killing of 5,600 eagles. Moreover, the bounty seekers have undoubtedly not confined their depredations to Alaskan territory, but have extended them into the British provinces adjoining Alaska.

It is possible that by this time more than one-half—perhaps more than three-quarters—of the entire species have already been sacrificed. If action is to be taken it must be at once. For protection, to be effective, must come not merely before the species has been annihilated but before it has been so reduced as to suffer the weakening effect of inbreeding or the failure of the scattered individuals to find each other and raise young.

In view of all that is known by naturalists of the habits of this inoffensive bird, the hostility to the eagle in Alaska is based rather on misinformation and ignorant prejudice than on any real damage done by the birds. The tales of its ferocity and destructiveness to game or domestic animals are for the greater part pure fiction, for the rest usually gross exaggerations.

How He Told It.

The atmosphere of the smoking car lent itself to reminiscence, says a correspondent. "Captain," asked the hardware salesman, "would you mind telling me how you lost your arm?" "Not at all, not at all," replied the bronzed officer, with the empty sleeve. "It happened this way: We were due for another turn in the trenches the next day, so they were giving a dance for us that night back in the rest camp. A few welfare workers were there, and among them was the cutest little girl I ever met. I managed to dance with her most of the evening, and toward the end we wandered out in the moonlight. 'Captain,' she said, after a while, 'please remove your arm.' And, you know, she was such a little queen I just couldn't refuse her."

Objects of Middle Class Union.

Miss Rosamond Boultbee, of Toronto, recently addressed the members of the Women's Canadian Club at Ottawa on the question of the Middle Class Union. Miss Boultbee explained that in England such a union was started in March, 1919. The union had already over 160 branches, with a membership running into hundreds of thousands. The objects of the union Miss Boultbee explained were (1) to secure fair play for all classes and to render tyranny impossible; (2) to organize for defence against legislative and industrial oppression; (3) to assist, as during the railway strike, to keep essential service in operation; (4) to register and classify all forms of voluntary service; (5) to secure representation of the middle interest in all national affairs; (6) to lighten the national burden of taxation and make it equitable.

EXHIBITION OF ARTS AND CRAFT AT CONSERVATORY HALL NONE SHOULD MISS

The Best Display of Paintings, Painted China, Oriental Rugs Ever Seen in Peterborough.

A private exhibition of arts and crafts was given by the Peterborough Women's Art Association last night at the Conservatory of Music hall to their members as a preliminary to the public exhibition which will take place during the next few days. The exhibition is the best ever shown by the association and has been gathered together by the Toronto Women's Art Association.

Standing out among the handsome oil paintings on exhibit are the works of Mrs., Digman, honorary president and one of the founders of the Canadian Women's Art Association, which include Muskoka, Quebec, the Saguenay and Gibraltar. Two very highly prized exhibits are those of the famous Belgian artist, Mmle. Romer, "Autumn" and "Elms." "Fairy Lake," "Fairy River" and "Muskoka," by Miss M. Fitzgibbon, also attracted a great deal of attention last night. Other artists are Miss Murray, Mrs. Percy Deebe, Miss Cary Macdonnel, Miss Daisy Dowsley, Miss Cameron Edwards, Miss L. Adams. Mrs. Elliott, Mrs. Edward McLaren and Miss Mary Hamilton.

Some fine hand-painted China is on exhibit and was attracting a great deal of attention and praise. It is the work of Mrs. Munro. There are also some beautiful specimens of pottery, the product of the clay from the Don Valley, near Toronto. Other exhibits include "Lace Hammered Copper," by Miss West, hand-wrought silver and water-colors.

The homespuns of Quebec were decidedly favorite exhibits among the ladies last night, and there was a special interest due to the fact that it was the Women's Art Association which sent ladies to the peasants of Quebec to instruct them in the method of obtaining soft colors for their homespuns and thereby making them much more valuable. It is a well-known fact that the homespuns of Quebec are among the most valuable in the world.

After viewing the exhibits the ladies adjourned to see Dr. Frederick's fine collection of Oriental rugs and to hear his splendid lecture in connection with them. Dr. Frederick spent three years in the lands where these rugs are made, and during that time gathered together many valuable rugs and much knowledge about them. He was introduced to the Art Association by Mrs. Mowatt.

Dr. Frederick stated that people were beginning to realize more today than they did before that Oriental rugs were jewels to be prized greater than pieces of gold or silver. It was in the islands of Lemmos in the Aegian Sea that he first became interested in Oriental rugs. He bought a rug for his tent at a village there for £1, and when taking it to a dealer to get it repaired later discovered it to be worth £40 or £50. Thus his interest in Oriental rugs commenced. To consider art in Oriental rugs it was necessary to know the conditions under which the people who made the rugs lived. It was even necessary to go back to the first ten dwellers, and discover how they made their rugs. They were first made out of rushes and then wool mats, and then someone conceived the idea of putting knots into the mats to make a design, and thus originated the primitive embroidered rugs which developed into the Khilim rugs. This was followed by tying the knot into the warp as it was being made, and this was now recognised to be one of the finest of art works. The rug makers lived in Persia and Turkey and all of the old rug makers were shepherds. Dr Frederick described the method of obtaining the wool and making it into yarn, and the method of securing the dyes from flowers and fruits.

The beauty of the Oriental rug was that the simple scenes from nature were woven into the desgin. One of the most famous patterns was developed from the simple sheep folds. If one knew the history of the rug makers, romance and tragedy could be read in many a rug. For instance, the little American girl started a rug, and before she could finish it tragedy such as we heard about overtook her, and the design was completed by someone else, perhaps years later, and with different dyes. This effect could often be traced in a rug. The Paisly shawl pattern was taken from the old cashmere shawl, which some said represented the loop in the river in the valley of delight in Cashmere, but which in his opinion represented nothing more than the ordinary olive cone. Dr. Frederick, with the aid of a blackboard went on to show how different patterns were developed from this one original design. Running streams with the colors of sun set were favorite motives for designs, and the evil eye and the necessity of combating it also had an effect on the pattern. A cross in the design of a rug would suggest that it was made by Christians, probably Armenians of the Caucasus. Another favorite motive was the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, of which we read in scripture. This was shown in many famous patterns.

In the Turkish rugs no images or hunting scenes, or in fact anything that might give the impression of a craven image was woven. This was on account of the hatred for idolatory which made itself manifest in the law prohibiting such designs in rugs. The elephants foot was also the motive for many designs and some tribes worked the foot into a pattern which they used much as we would use a crest. Even the saddle bags of these people were woven in beautiful colors and designs.

Regrets were expressed by the ladies when it was discovered that many of the Oriental rugs were now being made with analine dyes, but Dr. Frederick pointed out that in Persia there was still a law forbidding the use of analine dyes in the making of rugs, although on account of the ease with which these dyes were obtained they were sometimes made from smuggled dyes.

After tea had been served the evening was closed with the National Anthem.

REBEKAH LODGE SOCIAL

Amusements, Dancing and Cards Contribute to Pleasant Evening

Rebekah Lodge, I. O. O. F., met in the hall on the corner of George and Hunter streets, last night, for a social evening. Arrangements for the evening were complete even to the last detail under the capable management of the entertainment committee, of which Mrs. Thomas Sproates was convenor.

The amusements included dancing and cards, and refreshments were also served to all members at 11:30. Music for the dancing was supplied by Miss Peters, the pianist and Mr. Drysdale. the drummer. A most enjoyable time was spent by all and from the appearances of the happy gathering as they dispersed at an early hour in the morning, there was little room left for doubt that it was one of the most successful evenings spent by the lodge.

A HAPPY SOCIAL

ORDER PLACED FOR MEMORIAL TABLET

WILL BE IN BRONZE AND BEAR THE NAMES OF 52 MEMBERS

At a meeting of the board of the Y.M.C.A., held last night, it was decided to place the order for the proposed memorial tablet immediately so that it can be placed in position in the Y.M.C.A. as soon as possible. It will contain 62 names of former members of the association who paid the supreme sacrifice in the great war, and will be beautifully designed in bronze. When it is completed it is intended that the memorial shall be placed in the lobby on the south wall just right of the fire-place in a position where it can easily be seen by all who enter the building. It will be a surprise to many that there should be 52 names of fallen members of the Y.M.C.A. and it is a silent proof of the position held by the Y. M. C. A. in the community.

Bicycles Stolen.

During the week three bicycles have been stolen from in front of the Y.M.C.A. and this variety of theft is becoming more or less prevalent now that the summer weather is arriving. It is thought that boys are responsible for these cases and that there will not be much trouble in locating the guilty parties. In the meantime bicycle riders would be wise to take more care of their wheels.

Joint Jubilee.

Preparations for the joint exhibition of the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. are practically completed, and a program that will be of interest to everyone is assured. There will be a rehearsal tonight, which will be the last before the opening tomorrow night. Already many of the seats for all three nights have been reserved, and additional accommodation has been arranged so that all desiring to see this exhibition will have the opportunity of doing so. The exhibition will be repeated for three consecutive nights, concluding on Saturday night.

Improved Dress.

Thanks to the forethought of the C.P.R. the Y.M.C.A. has now a greatly improved appearance especially in the lobby. Many beautiful views of scenes along the transcontinental route of the C.P.R. have been presented to the association, all handsomely framed and they now adorn the walls.

TENDERS WANTED

Sealed Tenders marked "Tender for Fuel" and addressed to the undersigned will be received until 12 o'clock noon, on Monday, April 26th, for approximately 500 to 600 tons of soft coal (¾ Lump Youghiogheny), and also approximately 100 tons of hard coal, delivered to the various schools as required.

DON'T MISS THIS MEETING TONIGHT

MEMBERS OF PROVINCIAL HOUE WILL TALK ON LIVE TOPICS

A meeting full of public interest will be held tonight in the Great War Veterans' Hall when several prominent speakers will be present to air their views on topics of the moment.

Mr. C. Swayzie, M.P.P. of Niagara, will give an address in explanation of his bill before the Provincial House to tax municipal property and public utilities. Dr. Stevenson, M.P. of London, the Labor candidate who was successful against Sir Adam Beck at the last Provincial election, will speak on subjects of special interest to the returned soldier. Mr. T. Tooms, who represents this riding in the Provincial House, and Mrs. Hector Prenter, of Toronto, will also speak. It is predicted that Mrs. Prenter's address will be of particular interest to the ladies.

Mr. Toom's bill to amend the Ontario Railway Act to permit cities of 15,000 or over to run street cars on Sunday passed its third reading in the Provincial House yesterday and it now appears certain that this amendment will become law and that the city of Peterborough will be able to have Sunday cars if it so wishes.

SENTENCED TO TEN YEARS FOR CRIMINAL ASSAULTS ON FOURTEEN YEAR OLD GIRL

Miccolucci Repays Family's Kindness Shown Him by Ruining Daughter of Tender Years.

One of the most disgusting cases in the annals of the local police came up for hearing before His Honor Judge Huycke at 10.30 this morning, when Joseph Miccolucci faced a charge of serious offence against a 14-year-old girl.

The Father's Story.

The father, who was the first witness, stated that the accused boarded at his house for about three months until last December, when he put him out for slapping his daughter. Later when Elizabeth complained of sickness, Dr. Camichael examined her and stated that she was in trouble. At the police station prisoner said: "Whatever Elisabeth says that is right, because she never told a lie."

Mr. Marino in the witness box gave evidence to the effect that Elizabeth was 13 years old last August. She first discovered her trouble on the 2nd of March. Mrs. Marino could not speak English, and D. M. Minicola acted as interpreter.

Elizabeth Marino.

The next witness was Elizabeth Marino, who on being question by the Judge, apparently knew nothing about oaths, but knew what it was to tell the truth. The kindly manner of Judge Huycke soon put her to ease, and she answered the questions of Crown Attorney Hatton readily, although at times indistinctly.

She had known the prisoner since she was very small. When she was examined by the doctor she did not admit what was wrong at first. Some of the questions proved embarrassing to the little girl and the aid of the Judge was necessary to elicit the necessary information. She was about 8 or 9 when the first offensive was committed. The last offense was just before prisoner was turned out of the house, about the last of November. Later, she stated, he came back again several times after he was put out of the house, but no one knew. She thought the prisoner knew of her conditions and wanted her to leave home with him, and he said that he would marry her. The prisoner had struck her more than once. On other occasions he pointed a revolver at her and threatened to shoot her. In answer to Mr. Gordon, the witness replied that she was afraid to tell her father of the gun episode. Being afraid of the prisoner she used to admit to him that her brother was also committing offenses, and also said this to her mother at first, but it was not true.

Dr. Carmichael.

Dr. Carmichael stated that he was the family physician of the Marino family. He examined the girl in February at his office. He concluded from that evidence that she was pregnant. She at first denied everything, but he did not accept her story and later in the store she admitted she had told a lie.

Chief Thompson.

On account of the prisoner's faint knowledge of England, Chief Thompson was called to relate what took place at the police station. He told both the prisoner and Marino to speak in English there. Marino asked the prisoner what he intended to do, and the prisoner said that he would marry the girl. He also said: "What ever the girl says will be right. They will believe her before they will me."

In summing up the defence, Mr. Gordon stated that the case rested on the necessity of corroboration, which was lacking. The code called for corroboration of the evidence of a child under 14 years of age. He quoted similar cases which had fallen down on the same condition as the present case. Also the girl's testimony showed that under certain circumstances such as fear, she would deny and make false statements. He submitted that the court should consider her testimony carefully under the above circumstances. A jury would hesitate to find the prisoner guilty on the evidence of the girl.

Crown Attorney Hatton claimed that corroboration was not necessary. He described it as one of the most harrowing cases that has come before the courts. Taken into the family at the age of 15 the man repays confidence in this manner. It was that very confidence reposed in this man that had led to the present condition of affairs. He felt the prisoner should suffer the utmost penalty of the law.

Judge Huycke was satisfied of the guilt of the prisoner and accepted the evidence given by the little girl. He must find that the prisoner did commit the offense charged many times. It was one of the most horrible cases that had come to his knowledge. He did not find corroboration of the girl's evidence necessary in this case.

He found the prisoner guilty.

"Joseph Miccolucci, stand up!" said His Honor. "I cannot find words strong enough to express my reprehension of your conduct. You have been taken in, treated kindly by the family, and you should have treated this little girl as a sister. You are not a man worthy of the name."

These strong words were spoken to the prisoner by His Honor Judge Huycke in imposing a sentence of ten years in Kingston penitentiary.

Head of American Red Cross Party Has so Reported

Victoria, B. C., April 22.—Typhus has killed thousands in Siberia and other thousands still are falling victims to the scourge, Dr. A. K. Higgs, head of an American Red Cross party returning from there, said today.

"The allied Red Cross organizations have done splendid work in Siberia," said Dr. Higgs, "but conditions are so fearful that it was absolutely impossible to cope with the dread disease."

The Russians are left to their own resources in fighting the pestilence and famine, for the other allied Red Cross organizations evacuated the field prior to the departure of the American mission, said the doctor. Only a few staff officers remain in Siberia to wind up details.

"The Russian situation is continually changing and it is impossible to predict the outcome," continued Dr. Higgs. "The chaotic conditions of the moment cannot prevail indefinitely and the great masses of Russians are earnestly in favor of stable government. The Russians will ultimately get on their feet and then we may look for big things in Siberia."

LABOR MEMBERS OF PROVINCIAL HOUSE GIVE ACCOUNT OF THEIR STEWARDSHIP

Police Bill, Political Economy, Housing Question, Marriage Licenses in the Foreground of Discussion—Mrs. Hector Prenter Attacks Overalls Fad—Prices Will Only go up She Declares, and Even Now we Have Overalls With Gold Buckles and Other Costly Frills.

At the most successful open meeting ever held by the Independent Labor Party in Peterborough last night, in the War Veteran's Hall, Mrs. Hector Prenter, of Toronto, Dr. Stevenson, M. P. P. of London, Ont., and Mr. C. Swayzie, M. P. P. of Niagara Falls, explained in detail the legislation which had been brought before the Provincial House so far and the plans of the party for the future, and made eloquent appeals for the support or the working people The chair was ocupied by Mr. T. Tooms, the Peterborough member of the Ontario Legislature, who introduced the different speakers of the evening.

Dr. Stevenson

In opening, Dr. Stevenson paid a glowing tribute to Mr. Tooms. The first time that he had met him was in the House this year, and he realised that he was a member who had the interests of his district at heart, and who was working hard on their behalf. The speaker elected as the Labor representative for London in the Provincial House at the same time that Mr. Tooms was elected here, but before that time had been interested in municipal affairs for twenty years. He wanted to help men and women to make an easier living. There had been much legislation of great benefit passed at the present session and it was their purpose to explain this tonight. A bill had been brought in to remove the property qualification, and the old interests had put up a strong fight against this. As things stood a man could hold property in different wards and vote in every ward in which he held property, while another man might own more property altogether, but all in the one ward and have only one vote. This was obviously unfair. Their policy was that of one man one vote without consideration of the amount of property owned.

The St. Lawrence Canals

The Labor Party would protect the rights of the people, and there need not be any fear that the Hydro systems and radial lines would be in danger on account of the advent of Labor to power. The Labor party realized that the life of Ontario depended on the building of the St. Lawrence canals. When this was done ocean boats would be able to go to the head of the lakes, and collect the wheat, and also bring coal from Nova Scotia and thus make the province independent of the United States for its supply of coal. There was enough coal in Nova Scotia to supply the whole of Eastern Canada and there was enough coal in British Columbia to supply Western Canada. Coal could be laid down at Montreal at $2.40 a ton and to carry it up the Lakes would not cost much more.

Police Bill

With regard to the Police Bill which he believed this city was greatly interested in he understood that since Mr. Tooms had introduced that bill in the House he had received communications from many cities and towns of Ontario urging him to go ahead with it. There had also been a great debate over the Street Railway Bill, but that had now passed its third reading and as far as he knew was now on the statute books.

The bill with reference to marriage licenses had caused much discussion. They had no objections to the present people who were handling the marriage licenses, but they felt that the city clerk's office was the proper place for the issuance of the licenses and that the change would have the effect of hindering indiscriminate marriages. It would also provide the Province with an additional revenue of from $200,000 to $300,000 which could well be used in paying the proposed mothers' pensions.

Political Economy

"Political Economy is the greatest religion," sair Mr. Swayzie, in commencing his address. If the country was being managed by the people all would be well, but history showed us that countries fell not from the enemy without but from the enemy within. He ventured to say that if things had gone on politically for the next twenty-five years as they had for the past twenty-five years, this country would now be in a state of revolution. The only weapon necessary was the use of the ballot. The people could be the dictators of the policy of the country, but they had been asleep for the past tweny-five years. Over ninety per cent of the wealth of the country had been given away to the few by those who had control of the Government in the past. The greatest example of this was in Northern Ontario, where wealth had been given away to five foreign companies which made a clear profit last year of five millions of dollars. "Your money; your natural resources," asserted Mr. Swayzie amid some applause. In this connection he mentioned that 17,600 acres of nickel land had been given away to one company, the British American Nickel Company, in which Sir Joseph McKenzie and Sir William Flavelle were interested parties.

Turning to the question of education Mr. Swayzie feircely attacked the present system which he characterised as being modeled on the German system, where they were put through the schools in platoons and if they didn't learn the first time they were put through again. Under the present system it was impossible for 92 per cent of the pupils to go further than the public schools. And yet it was within the realms of possibility to have a high school at almost every cross road. Applause.)

The Labor party intended to change the Workmen's Compensation Act, Mr. Swayzie said, so that instead of the present fifty-five per cent of pay to the disabled workman he would receive 75 per cent. The widowed mothers' pension was to be raised from $20 to $40, which even then was not any too much. In this regard he pointed out that under the present law the mother only received a pension for children up to a total of three, it was their intention to see that she received a pension for every child, no matter how many there were. The children were the greatest natural assets of the country, and they should be taken care of. These things never had even been considered by the other parties. It was also their intention to see that every returned soldier, no matter of what age, who

THIRD HUSBAND IS A BELGIAN COUNT

No True Happiness For Rich Says Bride-to-Be.

Philadelphia, April 22.—Mrs. Helen Gallatin Welsh has informed her friends that she will become the wife of Count Jean von Zenuckens, a Belgian who lives in Paris. They will be married in that city in July.

Mrs. Welsh is a daughter of the late Albert R. Gallatin, of New York. In 1898 she was married to Mr. George Kidder Davis, of Wilkesbarre. They were divorced in New York in 1904, and three years later Mrs. Davis was married to Mr. Chas. N. Newbold Welsh. They were divorced here in 1918, and at the time of the trial she was quoted as having said: "True happiness never can exist among the rich." She will sail for France next month, accompanied by her two children, Masters Chas Newbold Welsh, Jr., and Albert R. Gallatin Welsh.

SLAYER SETS FIRE TO SELF IN CELL

Delaware Youth Who Killed Father May Die

Laurel, Del, April 21.— Ollie Morris, the 19-year-old-youth who murdered his aged father by cutting his throat, tried to commit suicide this morning by setting his coat afire.

Morris was confined in a steel cage. Both Sheriff Johnson and Deputy Mitchell were away. Their wives were startled by Morris's cries of fire. When they reached the cage Morris was naked. His bedding was mostly destroyed. Everything points to the fact that the patricide in tended to commit suicide, but that the pain was more than he could stand.

Morris says he was smoking a cigarette and fell asleep, but this is not believed. His burns are thought to be fatal.

SHARP NEW BREAKS TODAY TOOK PLACE IN CHICAGO CORN MARKET

Heaviest Fall in May Delivery, Which Makes a Sheer Descent of Six Cents a Bushel—Quite a Stampede Yesterday When Rush to Sell Was Stupendous.

(By Canadian Press.)

Chicago, April 22. — Sharp new breaks in the corn market took place today right at the outset. The heavest fall was in May delivery, which in some cases exhibted a sheer descent of six cents a bushel since last night. Renewed weakness developed in New York securities, and was responsible for a decline here.

A Rush To Sell.

Excited selling cut down prices this afternoon on the Board of Trade almost as much as quotations were first hoisted at the beginning of the world war. Corn dropped nearly nine cents a bushel, oats six cents, and pork $1.30. The flurry was due mainly to uneasiness regrading financial conditions.

It was a case of stampede. The rush to sell appeared to come with all the speed and force of high explosives. The duration was about fifteen minutes, the period which elapsed between the close of the New York Stock Market and the finish of dealings on the Chicago Board of Trade. When the final gongs cleared the crowd of perspiring brokers from the pit, values had shown little if any power to rally, and were at virtually the lowest point reached, with July corn typical at $1.58 to $1.58½ as compared with $1.66⅝ to $1.66½ at yesterday's finish.

The bulk of the selling was ascribed to liquidation by ill-protected holders, unnerved by the strain of the day's huge shrinkage in the worth of securities and bonds and of staple commodities like cotton. Aggresiveness, however, was not lacking among the bears in the grain trade, once the stampede started.

NEW YORK MARKET MAKES SHARP RECOVERY AT NOON HOUR TODAY

Renewed Pressure by Professionals is Combatted by Maintenance of a Seven per cent. Rate for Call Money On Rally Some More Speculative Stocks Make Gains

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 22.— After renewed pressure by professionals at the opening of the stock exchange this morning, the market made sharp recovery at noon, sentiment being favorably influenced by maintenance of a seven per cent rate for call money.

On the rally some more speculative stocks made actual gains of three to fourteen points over yesterday's closing.

Sterling demand is $3.89 3-4, Canadian dollars 91.5 cents.

Spectacular Plunge

Wall street yesterday furnished the new sensation of the country, heavy liquidation in the stock market sending prices to a spectacular plunge. Leading issues especially those of a spectaculative nature dropped five to 15 points. General Motors fell 42 1-2 points to 275.

Foreign exchange fell with the rest of the market. Demand sterling droppel nearly four cents, European issues declining accordingly. Selling by Japanese interests to strengthen their reserves at home was given as one of the features for the drop in exchange

The big crash came in the final hour when nearly one-third of the day's extensive turnover of more than two million shares took place. So great was the rush to sell that the ticker was 15 to 20 minutes behind in reporting transactions.

Sympathetic action marked the trading in the cotton market here, and in the grain and provisions markets in Chicago. There was a break of more than $5 a bale in the cotton market, attributed to prospects of better weather in the cotton belt and the failure of bullish crop advices to stimulate buying. In Chicago prices of grains and provisions collapsed suddenly under an avalanche of selling. Corn fell over eight cents a bushel and pork $1.30 a barrel.

Caught the Professionals

Banking interests expressed the belief that the decline in the local market was precipitated by the weakened bull position of professional traders, many of whom found themselves without funds for the extension of their commitments. A large proportion of the day's selling originated at interior points, where banks were reported to be once more reducing "unessential loans." It was intimated that locally further curtailment of credits is in progress.

United States Steel fell below par for the first time since the third week in March, falling 2 3-4 points to 98 3-4. Baldwin Locomotive lost nearly 15 points. Motors, oils and other favored issues dropped five to 10 points. Liberty Bonds found the lowest levels yet, some of them dropping to prices where they represented an interest return of nearly 7 per cent.

FIVE THOUSAND RAILROADERS ENDEAVOR TO EXTEND STRIKE

Reject All Overtures For Peace on Their Behalf—Vote No to Return to Work.

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 22.—Approximately five thousand railroad strikers, meeting in Jersey City today, voted not to return to work, but to appeal to men on all lines who have not walked out to do so in their support.

The position of the strikers was confirmed by Edward McHugh, chairman of the strikers' Executive Committee, who said the men had decided to "remain out, if necessary, until the Railroad Labor Board handed down a decision." He said the next move must come from general managers of the railroads.

All Overtures Rejected.

With all overtures on their behalf for peace rejected, members of the so-called "outlaw" union of railroad workers of America, still on strike in New York district, met in Jersey City today to decide on their course of future action.

Strikers anxiously awaited a report from E. A. McHugh, chairman of the union's Executive Committee, on results of his negotiations at Washington.

Improvement Seen.

Some improvement in movement of freight was reported by all lines in this district today, but it was admitted that the absence of switchmen and yardmen was hampering a complete resumption of traffic. Passenger service was declared to be almost normal.

POLISH BISHOP AND CLERGY ARE ARRESTED BY RUSS. BOLSHEVIKI

Number of Poles Killed and Wounded When Participating in Easter Demonstration.

Stockholm, April 22.— Polish residents of Petrograd, who participated in the demonstration of Russian Easter Day were attacked by Bolshevik troops and a number were killed and wounded, says a Helsingfors dispatch

Bishop Arested

Numerous arrests were also made by the Bolsheviki, it is said. Bitter feeling was raised by the arrest of a Polish Bishop and members of the clergy in Petrograd, it is reported and a manifestation was planned.

Paraders carrying banners marched through the streets to the prison where the bishop and his colleagues were held. They were ordered to disperse, and upon refusing to do so, were attacked by Bolshevik troops.

SUNDAY STREET CARS.

IT IS ALTOGETHER likely that Peterborough is going to have the privilege of Sunday street cars, in company with other cities of its size in Ontario, if the people themselves vote for such a service. And why not? Is there any more breaking of the Sabbath in riding on street cars on the first day of the week than there is in driving around town or out into the country in one's motor car? We think not. Then why should not the masses of the people who cannot afford motor cars be allowed opportunity for reaching any part of the city on their one day's rest from work each week in a public conveyance and at a cost of but a few cents? Of course, some street car men would perforce have to labor on Sundays, but, like employes in many other occupations where Sunday work is counted a necessity they would have one day off each week, it is assumed with arrangements for Sunday being that day, in turn with their fellow workmen.

Sunday street cars are no new thing in the world even in the most Christian countries; in England, the birthplace, one may say, of modern Protestantism, they are allowed, and still people flock to places of worship many devout citizens travelling some distance in the cars to attend their favorite church. In the city of London, England, the cars (trams they call them there) run on Sundays up to and after church time. During actual morning and evening service not a wheel turns and that give a tram's crew opportunity to drop into the most convenient place of worship should they feel so disposed. It may be argued, of course, that, like not a few members of bands who play parades to church some prefer to stay outside, but that is not the fault of the system, which we contend to be both reasonable and democratic. The days of fanaticism and tithes are passed; a man cannot be forced to contribute to the support of a church, neither can he be coerced into attending one. All the Sunday observance laws in the world will not induce a modern human to engage in public worship against his will; neither will Sunday street cars, we think, tempt any devout Christian from attendance at his church. On the contrary, such a service will offer means for reaching places of worship to people who cannot walk the distance or afford other means of conveyance—and Peterborough is expanding into a city of distances. Sunday street cars will convey worshippers to the church of their choice, irrespective of what part of the city such is situated in; and the poor man has as much right to ride to church as his more fortunate brother. It is simply a question of ways and means. Like the present liquor laws, prohibited Sunday street cars reflects a question of privilege—one law for the rich and another for the poor. The man of means, with a taste for liquor, can get it—in quantities; the other fellow must go without. With no Sunday street cars, the average man, woman and child are deprived in too many instances of the privilege of visiting friends at even a reasonable distance on their only day of leisure in the week, or of reaching the outskirts of our city to enjoy the manifold beauties of God-created nature. The man with a car of his own is not so handicapped by the lack of cheap public conveyances.

Why not treat this question from a broad-minded standpoint? No one, nor no institution, is going to suffer from Sunday street cars, but the many would be benefited. Surely our Christian principles would not be imperilled, neither would that inherent worship of the Great Architect of the Universe, which is common to all civilized peoples, be impaired by the introduction of the means for that quiet, moderate Sunday recreation which stimulates and strengthens for the following six days' often too arduous toil, either by brain or muscle

THE HOUSING PROBLEM.

THE HOUSING PROBLEM is indeed one which causes vexation of spirit. No definite action is yet taken by Council toward borrowing $200,000 for this purpose and ex-Ald. Dobbin comes forward with somewhat of a knockout blow when he states that a six-roomed house with modern conveniences, such as was built last year in Hamilton for a trifle over $2500, would cost today in Peterborough $4512 without the lot. Mr. Dobbin we can visualize as scratching his head in exasperation when he declares, "Why, the blessed brick in the house costs $821.52 as laid in the walls, and the lumber stands at about $1166." Well, what are we going to do about it? We must have houses, or the city's promised expansion is going to suffer, and we cannot resort to tents in a climate where in winter the mercury plays sportively between zero and twenty-five below.

Four-roomed houses have been suggested, but can you imagine a self-respecting, comfort-demanding modern mechanic living in a four-roomed dwelling at a cost of but $500 less than the above figure? Not much! He wants a house, not a diminutive cottage—a home with all modern conveniences, and one which will give his young people a certain measure of social respect.

Ex-Ald. Dobbin has gone pretty thoroughly into this problem, and it is plain to be seen from his article in yesterday's issue of this paper that he is somewhat nonplussed. Other thinking men are in the same position. One thing seems quite evident, and that is, no man is going to contract, either on his own account or through a commission, for a home which will cost him here, taking Mr. Dobbin's figures, some $2000 more than it could be built for in Hamilton last year. He naturally visualizes quite a slump in prices before many years, in which event his loss in depreciation would be positively heart-breaking.

It is understood that the Trades and Labor Council have volunteered to help out in this situation on a plan of supplying labor under contract with the city and eliminating contractors' fees. This might be worth looking into, at any rate. The commission has plans for suitable houses, and it is just possible that men associated with the Trades Council are qualified to co-operate with the city, and substantially reduce those figures which have shocked Mr. Dobbin and his colleagues.

If anything worth while is to be accomplished this year, some one will have to step lively, for our building season is short, even under the most favorable conditions. And besides, in the question of houses, we know of no substitute like "overalls" in the case of clothing. It is hard enough for single people to get rooms here today, and as to whole houses, of all sorts and conditions, why, they are at a premium.

FINANCIAL MADNESS.

THE NEW YORK Sun and Herald has this to say of the financia situation in the States, which may also offer a lesson to Canada:

Lord Rothermere warns his countrymen that Great Britain, like the rest of Europe, is afflicted with financial dementia. So is this country.

It is financial madness for the United States Government to be spending money—spending it seventeen months after the war—at the rate of more than seven billions of dollars a year. It is financial madness for the United States Government to be piling up a deficit at the rate of between three and four billions of dollars a year. It is financial madness for the United States Government, when it is pouring three-quarters of a billion of dollars into railroad losses, nearly half a billion of dollars into Shipping Board expenditures, and two-thirds of a billion of dollars into interest on public debt, to propose to pile on top of such prodigious outlays and deficits billions more of indiscriminate bonus contributions and other drains of the national treasury.

It is financial madness for American industries, when they are facing interminable taxes of stupendous volume, when men will not work and capital will not flow, to be borrowing billions of dollars to put into new construction, reconstruction, extensions and improvements at prohibitive costs of interest, prohibitive costs of materials, prohibitive costs of labor.

It is finacial madness for the American people, when they are facing like taxes, facing inordinate living costs, facing a desperate struggle to make both ends meet, to be spending money like men delirious on all sorts of non-essentials, pleasure, indulgence and follies.

When the only way to decrease prices of commodities is to increase production and the only way to have money enough to do the nation's legitimate work is to stop prodigal waste, it is financial madness and it is economic madness for hundreds of thousands of workers to be incessantly off their jobs on strike, and for all the public to go on spending none the less wildly.

The United States Government must check its mad spending and pay up its billions of I O U's. The American people must cut off every penny of waste that can be trimmed from their careless, reckless spending and get down to hard work. If the United States Government and the American people both together don't slap on the brakes, then, with all the riches Nature has bestowed upon this country, with all the opulence there is for its sons to gain by energy, industry and thrift, we shall go careening through financial squander and economic profligacy into disaster as terrific as fell upon Europe through war's carnage and destruction.

MILITARISM DEAD IN GERMANY.

THE LONDON TIMES in the first of a series of studies of present conditions in Germany, contributed by one who has been the Berlin correspondent of that paper, bears witness to the death of the militarist spirit in Germany:

"Out of the indeterminate mass of the Berlin middle classes—and, I believe, the same applies to other cities—the militarist spirit has been exorcised by the terrible lessons of the war and by the suffering which has followed it."

In elaborating the theme, the correspondent claims that the army officers have not only lost their positions and their means of living, but their social standing. "They cannot even hope to beg a meal." The Prussian army is in its grave, and the people have no wish to see it revive. This is notable testimony, considering its source. The fear of the revival of militarism are declared to be moonshine. Assurance that it will not revive in some new form within a generation depends on a sensible policy now. Meanwhile we are glad to see that the doctrine we have ben pereaching since the Armistice is getting recognition in quarters from which we scarcely expected to have it endorsed.

THE HUMOR OF IT.

(Chicago News.)

Lloyd George may or may not be a reader of this column, but he, too, sees the whimsicality of the Irish secessionist appeal for aid from the United States on the score that the Irish helped "save the union" by keeping the Southern States in when they wanted to get out.

PREMATURE CRITICISM.

(Edmonton Journal.)

When the Government took over the railways at present included in the C. N. R. and when it proposed to add the Grand Trunk lines to these—a step which will not be delayed long now—it did so in the full knowledge that it would be a long time before the system as a whole could be made to pay. Eventually, by continuing the present method of operation which allows no political interference with the details of management, and by co-ordinating the various services and cutting out unnecessary duplications of these, it is hoped that the National Railways will be put on a good basis. But much patience will be required, and the situation certainly will not be improved by listening to those who try to make it appear that the present financial showing is due to the way in which problems of operation have been handled since the Government board came into control. Criticism of this kind is exceedingly unfair and cannot possibly help towards bringing about a satisfactory final solution of an exceedingly trying problem which the unwisdom of the past has thrust upon those at present in control of our affairs.

THE START OF THE OVERALLS MOVE

This now widely advertised movement started in Tampay, Florida, U. S. A. Whether the wearing of overalls and calicos instead of blue serges, native palm beaches, homespuns, voiles and other expensive clothing will bring down the high cost of dressing is an experiment first started here and now spreading through all Florida and into Alabama. The whole country now knows of it and has characterized it as "the Tampa idea."

The new style movement, its originators say, is dictated in the spirit of public duty and necessity and does not indicate any lessening of desire on the part of either men or women for good and stylish apparel. They think, however, that it is worth while to tyr to popularize overalls for men and calicoes and ginghams for women and it is no secret that the feminine experimenters are still looking for the return of silks, satins, organdies and the like to the limitations of their purses.

So it came about that Hafford Jones, secretary of an insurance company, started the Overalls' Club of Tampa. Each member pledged to wear overalls as a regular thing until clothing prices tumbled. Hundreds have jjoined and many are making good. Others say they are keeping the pledge just as faithfully by taking advantage of the clause which allows them to wear old clothes in lieu of overalls—just so they don't buy any new stuff.

When the men organized the women took up the battle, the New Thought and Unity Club, headed by Mrs. Clara Lawton Metcalf, pledging its membership to calico dresses. All of this had its first public demonstration on Easter Sunday

Men and women, correctly garbed to harmonize with the new idea, gathered in the court house square. Addresses were made, new pledges received, and petitions signed asking city, state, and national officials to take notice and give aid. Merchants looked on and frowned, and later announced that their sales had not fallen off a bit. They are not the only ones who smile knowingly at the movement and predict that just as the foregoing of the luscious porterhouse steak and choice rib roasts increased the cost of brisket, chicken and rump, the abandonment of beautiful silks and all wool garments will raise the cost of denmis and calicoes.

"This overalls business is only a fool joke," says one of the leading clothiers. "Just as long as folks who work for wages demand fifteen-dollar silk socks, they will get them. And while they're buying that sort of stuff you may lay your heaviest bet on their also buying the best suits of clothing the market affords."

The overall club, however, insists that the war has only begun and that they'll stick it out and are gaining recruits in bunches.

The movement is being taken up all over the state. Clubs have been organized at Jacksonville, Lakeland, Center Hill and other places. If carload of sabots, the folks might someone would come along with a buy and take revenge on the bootsellers

A part of the Easter Sunday program was for the denims and calicoes to pair off and go to church Only a few couples had the nerve to stick it out and they presented odd Darby and Joan contrast to besilked and befeathered women and tailor-moulded men.

WIDOWS PENSIONS FORTY PER MONTH

INCREASED COMPENSATION FOR WORKMEN UNDER DRURY ADMINISTRATION

GET 75 PERCENT OF EARNINGS

PROVISION FOR ARTIFICIAL LIMBS ALSO INCLUDED IN AMENDED ACT

Compensaiton to injured workmen of 75 per cent. of the average wage with minimum of $12.50 per week

Pensions for widows of $40 per month with an additional $10 per month for each child.

Increased burial epenser.

Provision for supplying artificial limbs and eyes to disabled workmen.

The foregoing are some of the important changes to be covered in the amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act, to be brought before the House within the next few days by Hon. Waltter Rollo, Minister of Labor. The bill, which was considered by the Government members in caucus last evening is practically ready for introduction.

The raising of the rate of compensation is the outstanding feature of the bill. At the present time the workman who is disabled received but 55 per cent of his average weekly wage while away from work, and the labor men have for years been strongly advocating an increase. At present the scale of benefits under the Ontario Act is considered to be more generous than those of most states where workmen's compensation is in effect, and the new scale will make the Act o fthis province the most advanced on the continent.

With the increase in the compensation rate, the Government is dealing more generously with widows and dependents of men who lose their lives in industrial employement. At the outset widows received $20 per month, with $5 per month more for each child. Last session this was increased to $30 and $7.50 for each child. The increase, however, was only paid to those whose pensions were fixed after the change went into force. Now all widows drawing pensions under the Act will receive $40 per month, with an additional $10 for each child. Further, the widow will receive a lump sum of $100 at the time of her husband's death in addition to burial expenses of $125. At present only $75 is allowed for burial.

Two new features are incorporated in the bill. A minimum compensation of $12.50 per week is to be fixed, and injured workmen are to receive, free of cost, artificial arms or eyes.

AN AFTERMATH OF GREAT WORLD-WAR

LETTER FROM BELGIUM VIVIDLY DESCRIBES SCENES IN AIR BATTLES

Winnipeg, Man., April 21.— There is a stirring of the imagination in a letter that has come to Winnipeg from the battlefields of Belgium. Last September, C. H. Wilson, of this city inserted an advertisement in the local paper of Roulers, Belgium asking for information of the grave of his son, Lieut. C. M. Wilson, who met his death while serving with the British Air Force, and whose grave was believed to be located in that district. Mr. Wilson has received a long letter from a Belgian citizen, giving details of the fight in which Lieut Wilson lost his life. An eye-witness supplied the information that Lieut. Wilson had been killed in an air battle with the Germans on October 7 or 8, 1918, Just before the big German retreat. He was buried where his machine fell on a farm near the little town of Rumbeke.

The eye-witness, the letter states, saw the fight open between three British and four German machines. One of the British machines was surrounded by four Germans, yet he kept up the fight. Two of the Germans were shot down and the British continued battle against the other two, the two other British machines out of the battle. While engaged in a machine-gun fight the lone British machine must have been damaged or the aviator wounded and the aviator commenced to descend. About 1,000 yards from the earth the machine took fire, but the man apparently kept it under control. This was verified by the eye-witness and he came across the machine, which was not badly damaged. The dead airman was still strapped in his seat with his hands on the control wheel. Apparently he had been shot but lived long enough to bring the plane to earth.

There is a rock there about a mile above sea level called Easter Rock where Easter services were held. Mr. Lowery is looking fine and his friends were all glad to see him home again.

A Musical Evening.

On Monday evening a very pleasant time was spent by those who attende dthe Epworth League meeting in the league room of the Millbrook Methodist Church. It was somewhat different from the regular session, being "a musical evening" in charge of Mrs. G. W. Sayles, superintendent of the Missionary Department. The program was really excellent. The meeting opened with singing and prayer, after which a piano duet, by Miss Stella Hetherington and Miss Ella Elson, was skillfully rendered. A vocal duet, by Misses May Byam and Phyllis Richards, was also well received. Miss Hampton then favored the audience with two splendid readings. A solo by Miss Kathleen Lancashire was given in her usual sweet voice. Mr. Ben Newman gave two violin solos with piano accompaniment by Miss Fanny Newman, which also delighted all. Miss Stella Hetherington followed with a piano instrumental. Mrs. Sayles sang two solos in her pleasing voice. Announcements were made by Miss Hetherington and the singing of the National Anthem closed a really delightfull program.

Mrs. Sayles, who is superintendent of the Missionary Department, is to be congratulated on the success of the evening and it is hoped that others will follow.

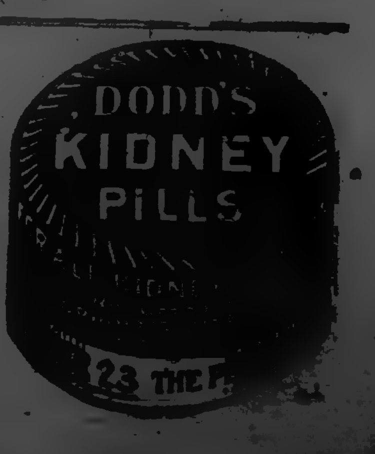
An Unique Birthday Party.

Yes, it was, and that in more ways than one as we shall see. Mrs. Thos. Gillott had reached the good age of eighty-five and never having a birthday party before, a number of her friends decided that it was about time she should have one, and so it was arranged for Saturday evening last in her home, which was festive for the occasion. Unique then it was because it was her first and eighty-fifth. Further it was unique because of those that were present. It is a perilous thing! at times to allude to a lady's age, but it may honorably be said that the majority of those present were giving Mrs. Gillott a close race in this regard. And they all looked so well for age does not necessarily impair good looks, and as for the guest of honor, she was alert, animated and attractive as of yore, and received a multitude of congratulations, good wishes and affectionate remembrances.

And further, the supper was unique. The h. c. of l. was not strictly observed, rather the impossible task of doing full justice to the good things provided was sincerely felt by all and at the close everyone had their say or tried to—some spoke, others nodded, one sang very sweetly—and when all was over, in the gathering twilight, the guests arose and sang solemnly and hopefully the sweet hymn, "Shall We Gather at the River." Yes, again we say, as we began, and report it was unique. To balance things somewhat it may be added that Capt. Spencer and Dr. Lee were present, but this must not be regarded as unique—it was only appropriate.

MOTOR MOVEMENT YOUNG

Motor cars and all motorized vehicles are declared by an English authority to be yet in their infancy. Talking on this subject he says that in England alone there are roughly 350,000 cars in use at the present time and 150,000 motorcycles and 50,000 military, public service, and commercial vehicles. At 15-h.p. per car, the total would be 5,250,000-h.p.; at 3-h.p. for the cycles, 450,000-h.p.; and 25-h.p. for the rest, 1,250,000-h.p., an aggregate of 6,700,000-h.p., without counting aeroplanes, airships, stationary engines, tractors, etc. During the final phase of the war the aggregate aero engine-power must have been in the neighbourhood of 6,000,000-h.p. Germany's horse-power aggregate in 1918 for cars and lorries alone must have been not less than 5,000,000-h.p., and, roughly, five million each in respect of France and Italy. About 2,000,000-h.p. would suffice for the remaining European states, so, without counting the power of aircraft, the aggregate transport power of Europe would be about 23,000,000-h.p. Add America's six million vehicles to this at 20-h.p. per vehicle, and you have another 120,000,000-h.p., which gives some idea of the immensity of the world's motor movement. All the other items included would probably raise the total to 200,000,000-h.p. Is it any wonder that the price of fuel is inordinately high, or that the movement should be threatened by a famine, especially in view of the fact that the production of petroleum has not increased beyond a paltry 8 per cent.? This year America expects to produce another two and a half million vehicles, which will add another 50,000,000-h.p. mouths to feed. Then there is the vastly increasing output of the British and Continental factories, and the large number of machines in use in the Colonies. The result is really very wonderful, but it is a little fearful all the same. What the fuel situation will be like by the time America gets her extra vehicles on the road I would not like to speculate. We are apparently only at the beginning of a universal change in our methods of transport.



CHINA IS CHANGING

MANY OF THEIR ANCIENT CUSTOMS HAVE ALTERED.

People Are Still Very Illiterate and Only a Very Small Percentage of Chinese Can Read and Write—Educated Men Have Nearly All Cut Off Their Queues and Adopted Western Ways.

THE hot water bottle has gained quite a vogue in China. In some cities it is the latest fad. In one centre of missionary influence well-to-do Christian Chinese now come to church with a filled bottle clasped cosily against the "tummy."

In another city where a missionary university is the centre of culture a teacher recently gave a suit of underwear to a Chinese friend. To his astonishment the next Sunday the Chinese marched proudly into the university church with this suit outside his own Chinese costume.

Awakening China is much interested in Occidental customs, and it is becoming quite the thing to substitute minor details of these for some of their own. The result is not always what they suppose. For instance, Chinese custom requires the sending of scrolls of congratulation and good wishes to the principals in a wedding. Chinese affected by foreign influence have learned that we send flowers instead of scrolls, and that we send flowers for funerals also. Often they get the selection mixed and send sombre funeral wreaths for a wedding.

White is the color of mourning in China, and brides wear costumes of vermilion red, known as Chinese red. It is about the reddest thing there is. But Chinese girls educated in the mission schools falling under the influence of those so educated know that in America and Europe brides wear white; so they are compromising on pink.

In Canada we have an idea that foot-binding is a thing of the past, that it and the queue went out with the Manchu dynasty and that both are unknown under the republic. Foot-binding has practically ceased in the ports and regions most directly influenced by foreigners, and especially missionaries. But back in the interior only a little way the cruel practice is still inflicted upon the little girls of the well-to-do classes, and sometimes even on girls of the coolie class, who will have to toddle about at hard work on diminutive feet.

As to the queue, many Chinese are wearing it still, though few of the educated Chinese cling to it. Probably half of the coolies still wear it. It is a common practice for a ricksha coolie wearing a dilapidated foreign style straw or felt hat to bring his queue up across the top and thus tie it on securely.

Chinese coolies in controversy never come to blows, though they quarrel vociferously and gesticulate to use the fists and only claw at each other or strike out with the open hand if the quarrel becomes very serious. Sometimes one will grasp the other firmly by the queue, close to the head, and lead his whining victim away to where there is room for a good swift kick.

In our sympathy for the Chinese and our desire to see China protected against foreign aggression we are inclined to think of the Chinese republic in terms of our own. Our sympathy will be more wisely directed and more helpful if we keep in mind the vast differences.

No one knows whether China has 300,000,000 people or 400,000,000. That is to say, census returns have been so inaccurate that no one can guess within a hundred million—which is approximately the total population of China.

But it is fairly well known that of this vast total, whatever it is, only about two million persons can read or write. Four hundred million is commonly accepted as the population; if that figure be accepted, then there are about 398,000,000 who can neither read nor write. Many, many years will be required to extend education little by little to this great mass of illiterates.

China is not much governed by laws. Customs generally control. Though these customs, when bound up with superstitions and religious practices, are often hampering and prevent progress, in the main they are based on fundamental justice and the rights of the individual. The family is the outstanding institution, and customs are most generally enforced by the family, and after the family, by the guild. In the family the father is the head, with undisputed authority over children and grandchildren and attached relations. But if the wife survives him, a venerable wise old lady, she wields like undisputed authority, strange to say, in this land where in other relations woman counts for so little.

Raymond Collishaw Has Seen Most of the World During Adventurous Career

COL. RAYMOND COLLISHAW is a young Canadian whose adventures on land, on the sea, and in the air would pretty well rival anything in biography or fiction.

Before the war he had sailed on a South Pole expedition, and had been second officer on a vessel on the Alaskan run. In the war he flew as a pilot in the R.N.A.S. over the North Sea, and the Channel, and in the R.A.F. everywhere on the Belgian and French fronts. He brought down sixty-seven enemy planes and won practically every decoration except the V.C., and many Canadians in the air force have not yet got over their surprise that he did not receive that highest of awards. He proved himself not only one of the greatest of "aces," but an inspiring leader of men. He was expert at ground-strafing the enemy lines.

After the armistice he visited his home in Vancouver, but returned to England for the purpose of bringing out a Handley-Page machine to fly the Atlantic, and in England he was offered command of an air squadron in the Russian expedition, and accepted this. He went to Russia about a year ago, and since then has had, one would think, adventures enough for one life-time, but when last heard from was still going strong. The Russian forces with which he was serving were forever getting worsted and falling back—in all he was through ten evacuations and a total retiring movement covering two thousand miles. Col. Collishaw had signed up for a year, and along with the other Canadians with him will see the year through. As he has joined the British Air Service there is no telling to what part of the world he will next be sent.

From the South Pole to Alaska, from Ypres to Odessa, from underground dug-outs to regions far above the clouds, Collishaw has sought and found adventure and met it with a laugh. He is a youth still in his twenties. He and thousands more or less like him, scattered through the once home-staying and prosaic population of Canada, are bound in a few years to infuse new ginger into the national character.

The Soap Bubble.

The soap bubble is a simple thing, yet it has always been more or less a mystery to scientists. They consider it perhaps the best phenomenon existing for the study of the habits and idiosyncrasies of the molecule. Scientists now claim, on the strength of the experiment made by Sir John Dewar, wherein he succeeded in keeping a bubble intact for over a year, that when a soap bubble becomes very old, say in three or four days, it offers the only possible example of the molecule visible to the naked eye. Most parts of the bubble are estimated to consist of about one hundred layers of molecules. But by various methods of treatment the bubble is induced to perform "stunts" until in black spots which appear, it represents only a single layer of molecules. This layer is so thin that Sir James estimates it would take one and one-third million like it, superimposed, to make an inch. Yet, when the soap bubble is permitted to mature in air that has been freed from its natural enemies, it is so strong that it will support drops of water many times its own weight before breaking. Sometimes a bubble is torn from its [illegible] the weight before [illegible] builder.

Curing a Superstition.

Comte de Lesseps disliked to have any of his family entertain silly superstitions. One morning at breakfast a beautiful Dresden teacup was broken. The countess was greatly distressed and she said, "Now two more of the set will be broken; it always happens so." "Are you so [illegible]," said the count, "as really to believe that two more will be broken?" "I know it." "Then let us get it off our minds," he said. And taking two of the cups by the handles he dashed them together. The anger and dismay of the countess proved that she had not seriously held to her superstition.

MONTMARTRE.

Windmills Disappear From Picturesque Parisian District.

The present would certainly seem to be a difficult time for windmills. Not long ago many Londoners, and many people who were not Londoners, were much concerned at learning that it had been found necessary to take down the four great sails which, literally for centuries, had spread themselves above the famous old windmill on the high ground of Wimbledon Common. And now comes the news from Paris that a still more historic windmill, none other than the Moulin Radet on the heights of Montmartre, is shortly to be, not only dismantled, but razed to the ground, in order to make room for the construction of some new houses. A very great army of people will surely regret that such a thing should be found necessary, the casual tourist, who remembers the Moulin Radet as one of the "sights," the artist, the real lover of old Paris, the antiquarian, the historian, and many others.

Montmartre, it is true, is not what it was. It has lost much of its spontaneity. It is far too apt to "dress for the part," and the hand of the speculative builder has lain heavily upon it. And yet, in spite of everything, Montmartre in the early morning, Montmartre when the sun is just rising over Paris below, deepening the shadows in her narrow winding streets, and lighting up with sudden brightness her strange, piled-up roof—Montmartre then is still very much its old self. The days when its cafes were the inevitable meeting place of some "great circle" may be passed or be passing, but there is always the terrace and the view of the centuries over the city. Is it not Carlyle who says, somewhere, that from the terrace on the heights of Montmartre "one may drop a stone into Paris"? Anyway, the description is strangely apt. It is not like the view of London from Highgate Hill, for instance, where the city rolls away immensely in the middle distance and beyond. On Montmartre, one is looking over the edge of a bastion into the city beneath.

But to get back to the windmills. Two or three hundred years ago, Montmartre was a veritable gathering ground for windmills. Thirty or more of them, at one time, climbed its steep sides, or crowned its summit, towering above the green vines which spread themselves over the spaces in between. Here Paris was wont to store her grain, and it was from the mills of Montmartre that Paris was wont to gauge, in a large measure, the extent of her provision. None realized this better than did the Government of Louis XVI. when bread was running short, and the murmur of the people was every day growing louder. In those days, it was a common thing for grain to be taken away secretly from the mills of Montmartre, and carried as secretly to Havre, thence to return very openly by boat to Paris as grain newly arrived from America, the earnest of a great plenty which was to follow.

All through the nineteenth century the mills were steadily disappearing, as the vines had disappeared years before. For a long time now, there have been only two, the Moulin Radet and its more notorious colleague the Moulin de la Galette; and now the Moulin Radet is threatened with demolition. A movement is on foot, however, to have the old mill removed to another site instead of being demolished. That would be something, even if it would not be quite the same thing.

Mosque of Pigeons.

Constantinople has no mosque more attractive to natives and strangers alike than that of Bajazet II. Bajazet, one-time sultan of an empire, known as the dreamer, raised this graceful monument and sleeps peacefully in its shelter. It is not, however, in reverence to the memory of Bajazet that so many Turks sit languidly in the corners of the mosque court, says the Detroit News. They are there to profit by the visits of strangers in the city, to tempt them with real Turkish tobacco, Oriental perfumes, amber and jewelry. In short, they have set up shop in the very shadow of the mosque, and that shadow being insufficient strips of awnings have been rigged up as further protection from the glaring sun.

Pigeons too, in distracting numbers, whirling, cooing, always fluttering from one spot to another, save the mosque courtyard from the solemn silence of the thousand and one other temples of Constantinople. Bajazet's approval of the pigeons' presence is recorded from the time when only two frequented his court. By his order they and their successors have been always fed and regarded as sacred. The feathered inhabitants have become so numerous and so much at home that the mosque has come to be popularly called the "Mosque of Pigeons." Their cooing softens the sound of bargaining from the corners of the court and blends with the splash of the fountain.

By CECILLE LANGDON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

The well-dressed, smiling-faced young man who alighted from the train at Ferndell, brisk, bright-eyed, magnetic, seemed to diffuse sunshine in every direction. To the most unobservant of mortals Alvin Ritter would have suggested a being in love with the world and everybody in it. It was three months since he had been in the quaint little village. A traveling salesman, about a year previously he had made Ferndell his headquarters for the district and for a week had roomed and boarded with a Mrs. Alma Warner, who had three little children and with whom there lived a young girl just budding into perfect womanhood—Myra Worth. Twice since then Alvin had visited Ferndell. The last time he had left deeply in love with Myra, and she knew it, and with a determination to place himself in a position where he felt sure of an income sufficient to support a wife.

And now he had returned, successful and buoyant. He sang and whistled as he made his way in the direction of the humble little home that had been a lode star in view for so many weeks. Then as he reached the rustic gate a chill permeated his veins.

"Vacant!" he breathed with a quick tremor in his voice. "What does it mean?" and after trying the front door and peering in at the window Alvin crossed the yard to that of the next neighbor. The woman there nodded to him in quite a friendly way, evidently remembering him.

"The Warners—Miss Worth?" spoke Alvin in an anxious tone.

"Mrs. Warner died two months ago and the young lady moved away. Poor, dear thing! She saw no hope of getting a living here, with the three little tots on her hands."

"But—you don't know where they have gone?" interrogated Alvin.

"I don't sir, but the man who runs the garage here can tell you. It seems that Miss Worth, looking for work, went to him. He has several gasoline stations along the Western highway, and she is so spry and willing to work that he made an arrangement to employ her."

"They—she left no word?" pressed Alvin.

"No, sir, but I guess she would have wished to have seen you, in her deep trouble. I only think that because from what I saw when you used to come here; it seemed to brighten her up a great deal. She is a good girl, sir. An orphan and no relation to Mrs. Warner; that lady took her in and they become like sisters born. She stayed two weeks after Mrs. Warner died. It appears that on her death bed Mrs. Warner told her that she had a sister, a teacher in a school at Cincinnati, who would surely provide for the children if appealed to. Miss Worth wrote to the school, but she got a letter back telling how Hilda Warner had married a rich gentleman named Despres two years before, but where they lived was not known."

Alvin went at once to the town garage and its proprietor told him of the station where Miss Worth was working for him.

"There's a little house there," he explained to Alvin, "and what Miss Worth does is to supply passing automobiles with gas, oil and air. I saw her last week and she and the little ones are getting along nicely. A fine young lady, that! She seems to think it her duty to care for the children after the kindness of their mother, and is happy to have found a position where she can keep them with her."

It was late in the afternoon of the next day that Alvin left a train some forty miles from Ferndell and started down the broad highway on a three-mile tramp for the station to which the garage man had directed him. Many automobiles dashed by him, and Alvin had covered about half the distance in view when he discerned a dark object lying at the side of the road. It proved to be a fur collar, accidentally fallen from some speeding car, he decided. He examined it closely. A little pocket on the inside of the collar held a card that read: "Mrs. Hilda Despres, Arlington, Ohio."

"Why, this is a queer coincidence," he soliloquized. "Hilda is the name of Mrs. Warner's sister, and Despres that of the man she married. Perhaps they will miss the wrap and come back this way to look for it," and starting on again Alvin carried the collar conspicuously on one arm.

He proved to be a cogent reasoner, for shortly thereafter a machine facing him halted, its driver stepped out, explained that the collar belonged to his wife in the rear seat of the auto, and Alvin carried it to her.

Myra Worth's eyes bore a glad, welcoming light as the Despres automobile drove up to the little station with Alvin a passenger. Mrs. Despres insisted on being taken to her sister's children at once after Alvin's story. She had never been able to locate her sister, and now with wealth at her command she promised to tenderly care for the little waifs.

Another story, that of love and devotion, Alvin Ritter told to Myra Worth that evening. And the noble girl who had been willing to sacrifice herself to care for the little waifs of her benefactress, blushing and happy, hailed with joy the prospect of a home with the man she loved.

Jacob Kaufman, one of the most prominent manufacturers of Kitchener, died in his seventy-third year.

"It's a hard world for proofreaders."

Abe's Faith.

Abe Carter was a pious, hard-working old darky, much respected by the white people of the community. But evil days fell upon Abe. The boll weevil destroyed his cotton; his adopted baby died of the whooping cough; his wife died of a fever, his horse was killed by lightning and a cyclone demolished his cabin. The Episcopalian minister, hearing of Abe's extraordinary misfortunes, called to see him. "Abe," said the minister, "you have been sorely afflicted, but you must trust in the Lord; you must believe it is all for the best." "Yass, sir, boss," said Abe, "yass, suh, I does. I feels I is in de hands ob a all wise an' unscrupulous Providence."

Sea Serpents.

There are plenty of real sea serpents, and of all snakes they are the most venomous.

In tropical waters they are vastly numerous, especially in the Indian Ocean, where they are often seen literally by hundreds, swimming at the surface of the water. They are six to eight feet long, very fierce and will commonly attack human beings. Their bodies are flat and almost wholly filled by the lungs.

LABOR MEMBERS OF

was prevented by disability from continuing at his former occupation would be able to learn a new trade that would make him independent. The Labor movement had been called a Bolshevik movement, but the legislation which had been enacted at the present session did not look like it. Even men of the other political parties had come to him and said, "you men are on the right track."

The Housing Question

Housing was really the great problem today and yet in Northern Ontario there was enough timber rotting to build whole towns. New Zealand had the right housing system. Men there loaned money to build houses for renting purposes, and the Government supervised the building. They were divided into different classes, such as a house at $18 a month for a man with not more than $2,000 per annum income and a house at $25 a month for a man with a $3,000 a year income.

He was sure that all the remedies necessary could be effected along constitutional lines, and that in twenty-five years we would have the finest land the sun shines on. The Labor party would one day be called the saviours of the country. In conclusion he urged the preaching of the doctrine of independent political action in every field. He congratulated the city of Peterborough in having built so fine a hall for their veterans, and thought every city and town in Canada ought to do the same.

Mrs. Hector Prenter

Mrs. Prenter objected to the term "New Woman." There was no such a thing. Some women had different opinions than others and it was a good job, but nevertheless there was no such a thing as the so called "new woman." It was a great comfort for a woman to be able to come on to the platform now without having to offer apologies for being a female person. The Labor party was the party of hope for women, because it was the only party which had ever said that every mother's son had a right to sit in Parliament, rich or poor. In her opinion it did not matter whether the country was ruled by a King, Kaiser or President, as long as the people left their affairs in the hands of the few just so long would the few rob them. They should learn not to be afraid of words. A great American writer had said that we capitulated so easily before words and things. "Say a word often and you'll scare the life out of us."

Attacks Overall Fad

The latest word intended to scare was Bolshevism. That was playing to the gallery to catch the foolish people. They were trying to cure the unrest in the world in the most foolish ways. For instance we read that in Montreal the suggestion had been made that Sunday vaudeville would cure the unrest, as though that would prevent them from being hungry. The latest cry was wear overalls to reduce the high cost of living. If one wanted to see how ridiculous this was they had only to look to what the society ladies did during the war. They agreed to wear gingham instead of silk, and in a short space of time the price of gingham was higher than the price of silk. Already we hear of overalls with gold buckles and other frills on them.

The only party which was seriously attempting to get at the root of the unrest was the Labor party. The Labor party and the U. F. O. needed everyone's help badly, and they were more worthy of the people's respect than the people generally knew. In the two days that she had spent at the session of the Legislature she had listened to more human legislation than she had heard in thirty years before. Circumstances had compelled her to delve into these matters even when she was a child, and before she was eighteen years old she had discovered that protection only protected the manufacturer and not those who worked. Since that time her view in this matter had been strengthened.

Women should join the Independent Labor party because it was the only party where women were admitted on equal rights. It was the only party where they were allowed to attend to their own business. They talked of making the world safe for democracy. That was supposed to have been done in the war, but what was needed was to make Canada safe for the people who live here.

Prejudice of Race and Creed

One of the great things to be combated in the Labor party was prejudice and hatred. At the London convention of the Labor party the tariff question had been brought up. One argument against passing a resolution either way on it was that it would divide the workers in an election. Prejudice of creed and of race would be brought up, and they must be careful not to be divided by such things. She hoped that the day would come when the word foreigner would be eliminated from the dictionary.

Politics today concerned every woman. It was the science of government and in these days when rings and mergers controlled the food we ate, it was every woman's duty to be interested in politics. Man and woman were driven from the garden of Eden together. They were driven off the land and into the factories together, and they should come back into their own together. Constitutional means only were necessary in the British Empire. Brains and the ballot would do the trick. At a recent meeting at which she had spoken, some absurd woman got up and said "who will do the menial work when your ideals are realized." People should know that any work which is necessary is not menial.

Because they had reached victory in Ontario they must not be satisfied but must sail on to Ottawa. Much talk was heard nowadays about getting the people back to the land, but the real remedy was to get the land back to the people.

Attacks Mrs. Pankhurst

Mrs. Prenter made a slashing attack on Mrs. Pankhurst for her recent utterances in Toronto, and accused her of having sold herself, body and soul to the big interests. Touching on the gratuity question, she stated that there was enough wealth in Northern Ontario to pay the entire gratuity asked if taxed adequately. In conclusion she urged her hearers to be careful of the wave of insiduous propaganda which was sweeping the country. They should aim to eliminate the sixth greatest business from the world, and that was charity.

Charges Intimidation

The newspapers and the Board of Trade also came in for some slashing remarks from Mrs. Prenter. The newspapers she said distorted the truth and conducted propaganda in the interests of the manufacturers. She charged that in the day before the last election the Manufacturers' Association of Ontario sent a circular letter to the newspapers threatening that all advertising would be withdrawn unless they vigorously attacked the labor candidates.

Did Not Get Justice

In moving a vote of thanks to the speakers, President Peter McArthur of the Peterborough Independent Labor party declared that the Labor party did not get justice from the papers and in connection with this mentioned that only the other day a local paper had published in large headlines that Mr. Tooms was absent from the House when the Temperance Bill came up. The object was to turn the temperance people against him. Mr. Tooms was absent but the reason was that he was on four different committees, and at the time in question was fighting for Sunday street cars for Peterborough.

ATTAR OF ROSES

Tobacco Growing Preferred to Production of Famous Perfume.

During the war, owing to the fact that Bulgaria was cut off from the principal markets—New York, London and Paris—the stocks of attar of roses remaining unsold in Bulgaria increased until they reached a total of about 275,000 ounces. About one-third of this total available stock was sent to the United States early in 1919 in part payment for flour; also some 17,000 ounces were shipped to the United States during the last quarter of the year. It is estimated that the present available stock in Bulgaria hardly exceeds 50,000 ounces, worth about $500,000.

It is stated by one of the best-known producers that under existing conditions the production of attar of roses is not a paying industry. Owing to the high prices for other farm products, at least 5,000 acres of rose gardens have been abandoned and the land planted to more remunerative crops, especially tobacco.

FREIGHT MOVING AGAIN

Sarnia, April 21.—Last night cars of freight entered Sarnia from Port Huron and Chicago on through freight trains, for the first time since opening day of the outlaw strike. It is expected that unless something unforeseen happens, many cars on the crowded sidings here will be moved across the River St. Clair to Port Huron, as shipments have been held on this side of the border.

SPENT A FORTUNE IN SEARCH FOR HEALTH

PROMINENT LOS ANGLES HOTEL MAN SAYS HE TRIED EVERY TREATMENT MONEY COULD BUY WITHOUT GETTING RELIEF.

"In 1900 I suffered a general break-down and during these 20 years I spent a small fortune searching for health," said Harry McAvoy, with the Alexandria Hotel of Los Angeles, one of the largest and finest hotels in Southern California.

"I went to the best specialists in New York, Chicago, New Orleans and Seattle. I tried every medicine and treatment money could buy, but the best I could do was to get a little temporary relief. Finally I gave out completely under the strain and had to quit work altogether. I was terribly discouraged over my condition and felt that I would be an invalid for the rest of my days.

"I had indigestion in its very worst form. In fact, I was a confirmed dyspeptic; nothing agreed with me and I suffered from all the terrible symptoms of indigestion. My heart palpitated so badly I thought I had heart trouble and I would get so weak and faint at times I would stagger and several times I fell flat in my tracks before I could support myself.

"I was absolutely afraid to eat, for it meant nothing but suffering afterward and I would have awful pains and burnings in the stomach and chest. Sleep! Why, I didn't know what it was to get a night's sleep! I would lie in bed a while and then get so restless I would have to get up and walk the floor. I was almost a nervous wreck and couldn't even sit still and write a letter. I lost so much weight and strength I was almost too weak to walk, and I honestly believe no man in this world suffered any more than I did.

"Last September I realized I could hold out no longer, and as I had read a great deal about Tanlac, I made up my mind to give it a trial. Well, sir, it was the greatest and happiest surprise of my life, for I began to feel better right away. My appetite improved, I began to sleep better and my strength gradually returned. So I kept right on taking the medicine and in only a few weeks' time my troubles had all left me and I found I had gained 15 pounds in weight.

"From that day to this I have positively been in the best health I ever enjoyed in all my life. I never have an ache or pain. I eat anything I want and don't suffer any bad after effects at all; in fact I feel just like a new man and have plenty of strength and energy. My nerves are steady and strong, I never have a dizzy spell and my sleep is restful and refreshing.

"Tanlac has been worth its weight in gold to me and all the money on earth could not buy the good it has done me."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

FATE OF CHURCH IN HANDS OF JANITOR

Controls Size of Congregation, Says Kansas Preacher

Topeka, Kan., April 21. — "The fate of the people is in the hand of God," says a Topeka preacher, "but the fate of the church is in the hand of the janitor. A thoroughly clean church, with good ventilation, plenty of heat in winter and cool breezes in the summer will attract the crowds no matter how good or poor the minister, nor how angelic or dreadful the singing."

Topeka janitors keep a first class set of churches. The dust chasers like the jobs and they like their bosses.

"Topeka has a fine bunch of preachers," says George Richardson, colored, dean of janitors. Mr. Richardson has worked around Topeka churches for more than thirty-five years."

Half Topeka's janitors are white, the other half colored.

A few janitors are janitresses.

A janitor is not always an old, crippled person whom the church takes pity on and hires to do the dusting and sweeping in return for a mere pittance.

The janitor at the Potwin Presbyterian Church is a high school boy. The young fellow believes the janitor profession should be operated on a businesslike scale and is putting into practice his ideas. He is a football and dramatic club star and is earning money to put him through college.

Topeka janitors are considering going into the department store business or opening a museum. Enough "lost articles" are found each week to maintain a storeroom.

"We'd like to give a handkerchief bazaar," says one old janitor, "but we hate to put the downtown stores out of business. The women carry their best handkerchiefs to church, and generally lose them. No, we wouldn't have a sport department, although we have found a few dice."

CATTLE STARVE.

Large Number Die for Lack of Feed in Saskatchewan.

Regina, Sask., April 22. — Large numbers of cattle in the northern part of Saskatchewan have died from starvation owing to the shortage of feed which was brought about by the long winter and the heavy snowfall, according to a report presented at a meeting of creamery men at Saskatoon to discuss dairy matters in the province. Hay has been selling at $100 a ton, and the dairymen have eagerly bought it up in order to provide feed for their stock.

Welland Council decided to have daylight saving go into effect on the 30th instant. Thorold will start it May 1.

BIG TOURIST TRADE FOR KAWARTHA LAKES

GRAND TRUNK RAILWAY TO GIVE THIS REGION WIDE PUBLICITY

The Grand Trunk Railway is to issue next month a special tourist publication dealing with the Kawartha Lakes region, it was learned today, when Mr. W. S. Thompson, editor of the press bureau of the railway, called upon the Board of Trade here. Mr. Thompson, who is representing the genral advertising agent, Mr. R. H. Charlton, is visiting Peterborough and vicinity to gather data for the booklet. After calls in Peterborough, he left in the afternoon for Lakefield, accompanied by Mr. L. Fraser, secretary of the Board of Trade, to confer with Capt. Young, of the Stoney Lake Navigation Co.

Further evidence of the interest which the railway is displaying in the development of tourist traffic to the Kawartha district was seen in the fact that Mr. Thompson's visit coincided with that of Mr. C. E. Horning, district passenger agent of the Grand Trunk at Toronto, and Mr. L. L. Grabill, general baggage agent of the system, who are in town in connection with passenger traffic matters affecting the district.

"There is every indication," said Mr. Thompson, "that the tourist season of 1920 will be a record one in the Ontario resorts. Reports show that the hotels are already well booked up, the advance reservations being ahead even of last year, when the resorts wer taxed to the limit to take care of the business offering."

JOURNALISTIC CHANGE

Editor of Farmers' Advocate Resigns Owing to Ill-Health.

Winnipeg, April 22.—In agricultural circles in Western Canada there will be much interest in the change that has taken place in the editorial staff of the Farmers' Advocate and Home Journal of Winnipeg. R. G. Thomson, B.S.A., who has been editor in chief for the past seven years, has been forced by the condition of his health to give up continuous office work, and he is taking up practical farming near Indian Head, Sask. His successor will be J. H. McCulloch, B.S.A., who has been for the past three years associate editor and live stock specialist with the Farmers' Advocate. Mr. McCulloch is well known throughout the West, having been superintendent of the dry farming station in British Columbia nd associate editor of the Farm and Ranch Review of Calgary.

OVERALL FAD FOR MA AND DAD

INVADES HOME, BUSINESS, PULPITS, SCHOOLS AND SNAPPY DRESSERS

MAY CLOTHE WHOLE NATION

MOVEMENT SPREADS IN U. S. INTO ALL WALKS OF DAILY LIFE

New York, April 22.— Having invaded several days ago the sacred precincts of the pulpit, the bench and the journalistic sanctum, the blue jeans fad now is becoming more popular in the schools than are quadratic equations. Prof. Walter Arnold one of the Latin instructors in the Central High School, of Newark, N. J., who has been considered by the co-eds quite a snappy dresser, was the cynosure of all feminine eyes yesterday when he appeared ready for his daily duties attired in a neat but not gaudy suit of blue denims. While the students were in assembly in the morning, Prof. Weiner, principal of the students, spoke publicly in favor of the movement as a protest against the inordinate extravagance of the times.

The young men and boys of the senior class, eighty in all, voted to come to school this morning in overalls, and the entire school attendance of 1,500 stands unofficially pledged to follow suit before the end of the week. The Pivot, the school-paper, most of the editors of which are girls is committed to the reform

The boys of the Morris High Shcool of this city to the number of 700 have applied for permission to take part actively in the economy procession to be staged in Manhattan next Saturday, preparations for which are assuming the proportions of a political demonstration in the last week before election.

Judge in Gray Denim.

Across the East River, in Queen's County, Judge Burt J. Humphrey established a color precedent. He appeared on the bench wearing denim, but instead of being of the prevalent wash boiler blue, it was of the modest dark gray. After court had adjourned the Judge was surrounded by jurors, litigants and court attendants who overwhelmed him with congratulations and compliments. "If the custom of wearing overalls or other cheaper material is generally observed," said the Judge, "it will give the dealers a chance to readjust prices of woolens, which I believe to be too high If there has been profiteering they can lower their prices."

Charles Schneller calendar clerk of the Supreme Court said he was going to start a "patch wearing brigade" He believed in cherishing one's old clothes rather in investing in new overalls and thus jacking up for the workingman the price of those utilitarian togs.

Borough President Maurice Connolly explained his failure to reflect the latest masculine mode by saying he had not been able to find any jeans that fit him. He added that he had commissioned Camuel Brock of the Queen's Auditing Bureau to make a survey on the subject for him. Mr. Connolly has something of a borough reputation as a Beau Brummel

In Passaic, N.J., members of the editorial and mechanical forces of a daily newspaper all worked in overalls, and Passaic municipal officials including Commissioner William A. Read, announced that they would conform to the new fashion beginning today. The junior class of the Passaic High School adopted overalls and calico as official garb for the annual junior "prom" on May 4.

Boston still is the cradle of Liberty. After the Rev. Louis I. Dunnington, pastor of the Orient Heights Methodist Episcopal Church, had appeared in his pulpit Sunday evening wearing overalls and jumper instead of clerical coat and neckstock more than 200 of his congregation eager to follow where the shepherd led, signed his "overalls pledge." In the neighbouring community of Medford, Mass., the Rev. Rollin S. Tuttle wore into his pulpit a creation of white denim which looked like a hesitation between a pair if pyjamas and a bleached Palm Beach suit. After having preached his first sermon as pastor of the Hillside church he began the organizing of an overalls and old clothes club.

TWENTY DAYS HIS CHOICE.

Tom Knight took a load of horses from Toronto to Montreal. While in the "wet" city he squandered all his money and attempted to return to Toronto via the bumpers. All went well until he reached Havelock, when the C. P. R. men corraled him, and he appeared this morning in the local police court to answer a charge of vagrancy. He was assessed $8.10 with the option of twenty days in jail. Not having the required cash he took the twenty days.

Ingersoll district Farmers' Clubs and the Machinists' Union are joining to start a co-operative store.

GRAND PAGEANT ON THE RED RIVER

SIR ROBERT KINDERSLEY COMING FROM ENGLAND TO ATTEND CELEBRATION

Winnipeg, Man., April 21.— Sir Robert Kindersley, G. B. E., Governor of the Hudson's Bay Company, is on his way from England to Western Canada to be present at the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Company in May. He will land in New York and reach Winnipeg May 2, by way of Montreal. Beginning May 3, the celebration wil be held in successive order in Winnipeg, Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria.

A reception to Sir Robert will inaugurate the celebration in Winnipeg and will be followed by an historical pageant on Red River which will start from the site of old Fort Garry and end at Lower Fort Garry, eighteen miles down stream. Governor Kindersley will ride in old-time "North Canoe" in the procession in which the romance of the pioneer fur trade will be pictured by Indians, trappers and voyageurs in a flotilla of York boats and canoes. At Lower Fort Garry, Governor Kindersley will renew the ties of ancient friendship between the Hudson's Bay Company and the Indians by smoking the pipe of peace with the tribesmen and conferring upon them medals struck in honor of the anniversary. Speeches will be made by the Governor and Indian orators.

On the second day, the Governor will attend a banquet given by the Old Timers' Association and on the third, he will be the guest of honor at a staff dinner to the employees of the company.

After the festivities at Winnipeg are over, Sir Robert will attend the celebrations in the other four cities, in each of which elaborate street pageants wil be held He will be in Edmonton from May 6 to 8; in Calgary from May 11 to 13, in Vancouver from May 15 to 19 and in Victoria from May 21 to 24.

During his stay in Canada, Sir Robert, who is a director of the Bank of England and regarded as one of Great Britain's ablest financiers, will meet the leading men in business and industry in the West. Many social functions have been planned for him in the western cities which will afford him this opportunity.

FOUND WHISKEY STILL.

Officers of Lindsay and Peterborough Trape the Goods.

(Lindsay Post.

While in Kinmount on business a few days ago, License Inspector Thornbury accompanied Inland Revenue Officer Buller of Peterborough into the wilds on a still hunt. Nearing a ranch owned by a Lindsay man, and which is situated on the shore of Salmon Lake, in Cavendish township, Peterborough, they met the rancher, a Kinmount resident, on his way to the village. He declined a pressing invitation to accompany them back to the house, on a plea of approaching meal time, but told the men that all was open and waiting for them to inspect.

On arriving at the ranch boast they found, contrary to his advice, that all was locked up. Having gained admittance they proceeded to search the house and soon came across a good-sized whiskey still, which was not then but had recently been in operation. Several large and small barrels were found about the place. Although none of the moonshine was found, according to the inspector, a sniff of the atmosphere was as good as a drink. Later the man, when found in Kinmount, denied nothing, and evinced a desire to have the affair settled quietly if possible. The accused has a reputation in the district.

It is reported in diplomatic circles in London that serious trouble is again threatening Cilicia.

WILL PRESENT A STRONG FRONT

VETS FOOTBALL CLUB PREPARE FOR GOING OVER THE TOP

At a meeting of the Great War Veterans' Football Club held in the Veterans' Home last night, final arrangements were made in preparation for the opening game next Saturday. It was realized that in this game the Vets would come up against what was probably the strongest team in the league, and that if they expected to win they would have to put up a hard fight. Therefore every effort was made last night to secure a lineup which would present a strong front to the enemy. For this purpose the following committee was appointed to select the players: F. McKinley, G. R. Coleman, H. Gamble.

After seriously considering the matter the selection committee announced that the following team would represent the G. W. V. A. on Saturday next: Goal, E. Whatley; backs, Gamble and Bishop; half-backs, Hawthorne, Ryan, Edwards; forwards, Curtis, Burrows, Norman, Sharman and Piggott; reserves, Evans, Jones, Griffin, and Mallinson. Captain, Gamble; vice-captain, Bishop.

The Senate by a vote of 43 to 14 gave second reading to the bill to promote uniformity in divorce proceedings in Provincial courts.

The German Government reports that there is no danger of a revolt in Pomerania.

SIR A. C. GEDDES BRITISH AMBASSADOR IN AN INTERVIEW SEES HOPE FOR ERIN

Also Expresses Views on Big Problems Facing British Empire To-day.

Sir Auckland Campbell Geddes, the new British ambassador at Washington, U.S.A., on his arrival at New York, Monday afternoon, gave out the following interview to the gentlemen of the press awaiting him:

"On arrival I wish first to say that I look on my appointment as British Ambassador at Washington as the highest honor and privilege which could possibly have been granted to me. I believe that the main hope of world peace rests on the existence of mutual respect and understanding between the people of the United States and the British Community of Nations. It is my ambition to help to develop such respect and understanding.

"I do not suggest that even if there were complete understanding of the difficulties of the one nation by the other there would be, in either country, complete agreement in detail with the method of solution which may have received the support of the majority in the other, but at least we should have got rid of suspicion breeding misconceptions.

"For generations England has given sanctuary to representatives of the discontended and the unhappy, the oppressed and the downtrodden. We have listened to harrowing tales of great wrongs and we have been moved to action time and yet time again. We have learned how difficult it is to right a small wrong or even a great and bitter wrong without creating a new, a greater and a still more bitter sense of wrong elsewhere.

Improving the Oppressed.

"We have learned that to keep peace for that quarter of the human race which owes allegiance to the British Crown imposes a heavy strain upon the material and moral resources of our peoples. To avoid worse evils than those we seek to remedy it is often necessary to move with slowness, always with caution, but one thing I can say positively and without fear of informed contradiction, the inspiration of British policy during the period I have known it has been, if possible, to bring order out of chaos, to extend the boundaries of freedom, to improve the lot of the oppressed, to increase the material prosperity of the world.

"We are trying now as always to meet the legitimate aspirations of the dependent peoples, such as those in India and Egypt, so far as in our judgment is possible without working a mischief where we seek to do good. Similarly in Ireland we are trying to provide political machinery whereby the antagonised sections of the Irish peoples can work out their own ineconomic ruin to Irish interests. If it ternal political salvation without be true that it takes two to make a quarrel there is in this generation no quarrel between England and Ireland, for the present generation of Englishmen has steadfastly refused to quarrel with Ireland. The British Government after careful study of the Irish question is convinced that now the only hope of ending that centuries old distemper is to place fairly and squarely on the shoulders of Irishmen in Ireland the constitutional responsibility of finding for themselves within the framework of the British Empire the solution for their political differences.

"The new home rule bill which passed its second reading in the British House of Commons by a great majority on March 31 is designed with intention to secure that end. When it becomes operative it will be the duty of all British subjects who are not domiciled in Ireland to stand aside and leave those who live there to solve their problem. I venture to add that it will also be helpful if the many in all parts of the world who are not British subjects but are interested in Ireland, likewise stand aside and leave the Irish in Ireland to grapple with their own political difficulties.

Secession Proposals Rejected.

"It should, I think, be known that proposals for the secession of Ireland from the British Empire have been submitted to the British Cabinet, but, as announced by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons, have been rejected. A sufficient reason, though only one of many, is that strategically the British Isles form one unit for purposes of defence.

"I have seen it stated that the British Government is pursuing a Pro-Bolshevik policy dictated by purely selfish British ends with regard to trade with Russia. That really is not so. The British Government has frankly expressed the belief that until Russia comes once more into the circle of the producing and trading nations the economic conditions of the world and the cost of living cannot be placed upon a normal footing anywhere. I am glad to be able to say that the American and British Governments have been in cordial consultation on this matter and are together considering what steps should be taken, or can usefully be taken, to secure a reopening of trade with that great country, not in the interests of the traders of any single nation, but of the economic conditions of the world.

"May I in conclusion strike a personal note? I am glad to be back in America, where I have in the past found so many friends. I sincerely admire the great qualities of the American people. I know well of what idealism they are capable. I am of course British, and am here not to ask for favors but to represent the interests of the many nationed British Empire. Still I hope that that will not prevent the American people regarding me, when they know me, as a friend, who, when his duty to his own peoples is done, will esteem it a rare privilege if he is able in any way whatever to serve the interests of the great nation among whom it is his lot to find for a time, and I hope it may be for a long time, a home."

EXPLORE THE DEPTHS.

Salvagers Will Delve in Unknown Waters for Hidden Treasure.

Vancouver, B. C., April 21. — To delve into the unknown depths of the sea off the west coast of Vancouver Island and wrest therefrom treasures hidden for many years is the object of S. Maddison and his party of salvagers, who will begin operations early in May. Last autumn Mr. Maddison made submarine cruises among the crags which line the coast of the island and located four large wrecks besides a number of smaller ones. Two of the larger he identified as the Pass-of-Melford and the Valencia, and one of the others be thinks is the long lost H.M.S. Condor, whih disappeared in 1907 and has never since been heard of. Some of the numerous boats which met their fate on the perilous west coast carried cargoes which at the time of sinking did not make it worth while salvaging; but under present day conditions there 's freight aboard those boats which must be worth almost its weight in gold.

COMING HERE TO BUILD HOUSES

SCOTCH BUILDER DISGUSTED WITH CONDITIONS AT HOME WILL EMIGRATE

While complaints are general as to housing conditions in Peterborough, it may be interesting to know that a Scotchman is coming to Canada to take up building operations because of unfavorable conditions in the old land.

This builder, W. B. Christie, of Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy, Scotland, says:

Further evidence of the grave situation which has arisen in the building trade, so far as the housing question is concerned, was supplied by Mr. W. B. Christie, of Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy who claims to have erected in recent years most of the cottage property in those two places.

"I built the last houses that were put up in Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy in 1914," he said. Before the war the normal needs of these two towns, with a population of 40,000 each, required that at least fifty new houses should be built each year. There is a loss of 300 houses to be made good, therefore; and the position as to Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy is indicative of what is taking place all over Scotland."

"I am going to Winnipeg," he said, "to take up building operations, as I find it impossible to continue my work in Scotland. In Canada, there are no rent restrictions; the houses are let on an economic basis, and the municipality of Winnipeg just now is financing a scheme for the erection of small houses to be owned by the occupier, under which three-fourths of the purchase-price will be advanced to the buyer, repayable by monthly instalments. Other builders are following my lead

"In Scotland, houses that formerly cost £250 each are now being erected by the municipality for between £800 and £1,000. The houses will be let at about one-fourth of the economic rent; and the rest of the money will be provided by local taxation. Very little headway will be made in this manner to reduce the shortage of houses, and already trouble has arisen in selecting the occupiers. In some cases people are offering very large premiums for possession; and it is no uncommon thing for the owner to be offered two years' rent in advance, so long as the house can be secured. I am prepared to admit that the restrictions now existing as to rent and mortgage cannot altogether be removed; but I suggest, in common with the majority of the builders in Scotland, that permission should be given to advance this year, and by further annual increases of 25 per cent. until the economic level is reached, and the house yields between 5 per cent. and 6 per cent. as an investment.

"If the Rent Restriction Act in any form is to remain in force, it should not apply to houses from £30 to £60 per annum rental. It is bad enough that the Act should apply to working-class property, but we recognize that the security of the State must be the first consideration."

Mr. Christie said it was a common error to suppose that builders erected houses as an investment. "As a matter of fact," he said, "we are speculative builders. We have to induce people to put their money in bricks and mortar as an investment and we have been driven out of work because it is no longer possible for us to do so. Who is going to pay £1000 and upwards for a house that cannot be let for more than say, £34 per annum in England, and for a good deal less in Scotland? As matters now stand, the better-class houses of Scotland do not yield more than 2 per cent. per annum as an investment; and on lower-class property the maximum net profit to the investor is 3 per cent. per annum

"The situation in Scotland at the moment is certainly remarkable. For the three-roomed stone houses in Dunfermline and Kirkaldy the rent is no more than £9 per annum. I actually built eight of them before the war for £1,000 or £125 apiece Some of the tenants, meanwhile, have had their wages raised from 34s. a week to 80s. The stonemasons want 2s. an hour or £4 16s. a week, before they will lift trowel or mallet; and they are paying no more than 3s. 6d. per week in rent, thanks to the provisions of the Act! My firm conviction is that, before money can again be attracted to house-building operations the property thus created will have to be restored to its former position as a gilt-edged security."

Must Make Return When Requested

INCOME TAX RETURN MUST BE MADE IF REQUESTED WHETHER LIABLE TO TAX OR NOT

To make clear the distinction between persons making Income Tax returns who are liable and those who are not liable, the following two stated points not perfectly understood by all:

Persons Liable to Tax.

A person liable to tax shall make Return of Income for 1918 by the 30th day of April. If he fails to do, when Return is secured 25 per cent. of assessment will be added as penalty for not having made Return.

Persons Not Liable to Tax.

A person not liable to tax is not obliged to make Return unless requested to do so, but if requested and he does not reply, he is liable to a penalty of $100 a day for each day in which delinquency continues

A great many persons not liable to the tax will receive requests, as from experience it has been found that the only possible way of getting correct returns is to get returns from all persons for two or three years until a perfect record is had of everyone's income. The carrying out of this system has proved productive of a very large increase in income tax, and therefore much fairer to all concerned.

Famous Hudson River.

The entire length of the Hudson river is 300 miles. From Troy to the mouth of the river in New York bay a distance of 160 miles, the river is tidal, owing to the low grade of its bed, by which the ocean tide is able to back up. It is this lower tidal navigable portion of the Hudson that is of so much importance, and, of course, the water is salt. It is regarded as really an estuary of the sea. Above Albany and Troy the river is a small stream, and to its source the water is fresh.

Indians Made Salt.

The Delaware Indians made salt from brine springs in New York state and sold it to settlers as early as 1670 making probably the first commercial production of salt in this country. The manufacture of salt by white people in the United States was begun near Syracuse, N. Y., about 1788. Salt is the most commonly used mineral in the world, and no useful mineral except coal, perhaps, occurs in greater abundance or is more widely distributed in the United States.

Footprints of Progress.

A good substitute for cork is obtained from certain fungi, which are dried and ground, mixed with cement and consolidated by pressure. In Norway a process has been patented to enable carbide to be used for driving motors. In Denmark a company has been floated to make briquettes from heather. These have a higher heat value than peat. Experiments are being made to use chalk marl, especially that which comes from the Limburg mines, as a fertilizer.

"Twelfth Night."

"Twelfth Day," or "Little Christmas," the Feast of the Epiphany commemorates the arrival of the Magi, or three kings of the East, who came to the crib of the Christ Child in Bethlehem to worship him as the long-promised Messiah. The old custom of merry-making in England in connection with the feast gave Shakespeare the name of one of his finest comedies, "Twelfth Night."

To Rid Piano of Moths.

When moths have got into a piano the best means of ejecting them is to make up a mixture of turpentine, benzoline and oil of lavender and squirt this inside the instrument by means of a scent spray or any small syringe. Use seven parts of benzoline to one of turpentine, and add a few drops of the lavender—one drop to each ounce will be ample.

True Forgiveness.

It is the sweet and entire forgiveness of children, who ask pity for their sorrows from those who have caused them, who do not perceive that they are wronged, who never dream that they are forgiving, and who make no bargains for apologies—it is this that men and women are urged to learn of a child.—Alice Meynell.

Inca Stonework.

That which is claimed to be the finest stonemason work in the world is to be seen in the ruins of Inca palaces in Cuzco, Peru. Not even a needle can be inserted between the great blocks. The microscope shows that these stones were wrought with tools of champi, an alloy of copper and tin.

Why They Were Scared.

A boy's composition: "Tobacco was invented by Walter Raleigh, and when the people first saw him smoking they thought it was a steamboat or locomotive, and as they had never heard of those things they were greatly frightened."—Boston Transcript.

David Hill, a prominent shorthorn breeder, died at his home in Hibbert township, aged 72 years.

A CHUNK OF SOIL LIKE OUIJA BOARD

FARMER CANNOT EXPLAIN HOW IT MOVES ABOUT IN FIELD

MYSTERY STILL UNSOLVED

WEIGHT OF ANIMATED EARTH IS TEN TONS AND OVER

Batavia, April 21.— John Weber, who has a farm near the village of South Byron, nine miles northeast of this city, found a strange earth disturbance in his wheat field while observing the condition of his crop. He found that a circular chunk of the soil thirteen to fourteen feet in diameter and twenty inches deep had been lifted out and carried to a point in the field nine feet away.

The chunk moved was for the most part intact, with the rows of wheat growing nicely on it, excepting that some small pieces had broken off One piece as large as a peck measure had been carried fifteen feet from its original location

What caused this disturbance or when it occurred is a mystery. The fact that the fall sown wheat on the chunk of earth which was moved is in the same condition as the wheat in the rest of the field indicates that the disturbance took place before the winter set in. The unbroken section of the moved ground is estimated to weigh about ten tons. The direction of the rows of growing wheat on the chunk differing from the direction of the rows in the field show show that the chunk was turned one fourth around in being moved.

The dropping down of a small area on the Dillingham farm in Byron last fall and the sinking of an area of several acres near Attica a few weeks ago were explained by the action of underground running water, but no one thus far has offered a theory or a guess as to the cause of the Weber farm happening

RELIGION IN CITY LIFE.

Interesting Revelation From Compilation of Church Census.

Winnipeg, April 22.—Figures resulting from the compilation of the recent church census of Winnipeg, while not complete, inasmuch as a large area of the city largely populated by foreigners was not included in the enumeration, throw an interesting light on the religious elements of the city's life. Owing to the lack of organization, this first census is not accepted as being exact in any sense. The total number of families enumerated was 31,628, including 76,232 adults and 16,714 children. Of this number, 1,249 families, including 2,322 adults, reported as not being allied with any church. Of those acknowledging adherence to a particular religious body, 11,002 reported that they had no preference as to which church of their faith they attended.

EXPECTED THAT TEMPERANCE REFERENDUM WILL BE ADOPTED

Division in Legislature Expected To-night—Mrs. H. McCreary, Wife of North Lanark's Member, Who Fathered the Measure Died To-day.

(By Canadian Press.)

Toronto, April 22.—Word was received at Queen's Park today of the death at Carleton Place of Mrs. H. McGreary, wife of member for North Lanark, whose referendum is now before the Legislature.

Division Tonight.

Debate on the measure will be continued in the House today, however, and it is expected that a division will be reached tonight. A small majority is anticipated for the original resolution.

R. L. Brakin's Amendment.

An amendment moved by R. L. Brakin, Liberal member for West Kent, calling for the submission of stated cases to courts, will receive support from a majority of Liberals and from several Labor men, but Farmers and Conservatives are expected to vote solidly against it.

S. P. Hill's amendment, calling on the Government to take full responsibility for temperance legislation, is likely to receive only a Conservative support.

JOSEPH CAILLAUX NOT A TRAITOR

CHARGE OF HIGH TREASON IS ELIMINATED BY HIGH COURT

(By Canadian Press)

Paris, April 22.—Charges of high treason and intelligence with the enemy against former Premier Joseph Caillaux were eliminated by the high court of the Senate today by a majority of 185. This eliminated the possibility of a death penalty being inflicted.

The Other Charge.

The court then took up the charge of correspondence, or commerce with the enemy. Conviction on this count might entail imprisonment in a fortress for not more than five years or not less than one year, or banishment.

Senators, upon taking over the case for decision early this afternoon, proceeded with it rapidly, a large number of them exvressing expressing their views briefly and in quick succession.

No Verdict Today.

It was not expected as afternoon wore on, however, that a verdict would be rendered this evening, as the brunt of discussion hinged on the irreconcilable position of two groups of Senators. One of these groups, it appeared, insisted that the court should convict M. Caillaux of the minor offense and inflict a light penalty, while the other group was equally determined upon unconditional acquittal of accused

BATTLING MURRAY WAS OUT-CLASSED

SUSTAINS A BAD DRUBBING FROM WILDE AT CAMDEN NEW JERSEY

Camden, N. J., April 22.—Jimmy Wilde, British flyweight champion, so far outclassed Battling Murray of Philadelphia in their eight-round bout her tonight that Commissioner John S. Smith of the New Jersey Boxing Commission stopped the contest in the last round.

Murray had been knocked down three times in the eighth round by short left hooks to the jaw. He was up without taking the count, but was in such a battered condition that a clean knockout defeat appeared certain when Commissioner Smith interfered thirty seconds before the end of the bout. Murray's face was covered with blood as a result of a nasty gash over the left eye, caused by a collision with Wilde's head. His nose was also bleeding freely.

Murray had the honors in the early rounds. He knocked Wilde down with a left hook to the jaw less than a minute after the bout started. Wilde outboxed Murray at long range in the opening round, while the Philadelphian was trying to slug.

Wilde began showing his true form in the third round, when he speeded up his attack, with the result that the round was even. He improved in the fourth and the fifth, and with the beginning of the sixth cut loose in championship style. Murray made a rally in the seventh, but it did not last long.

Both were below the required weight of 116 pounds.

Three Legislature bills, including that relating to the Kapuskasing settlement, are assented to by the Lieutenant-Governor.

DOTE ON BUGLERS.

Two Near-Musicians to Every Squad in Chinese Army.

The rank and file of the Chinese army can outbugle any army of the world. There are two burglers to every squad system of China's doughty fighters.

One thing the Chinese soldier does do. He bugles. The one great, insatiable, unconquerable passion of the Chinese army is bugling. I have never investigated, but I venture that one out of every three men has a bugle, that one out of every two hours he blows it, and that not one time in three thousand does he blow it to the resemblance of any recognizable call or tune.

He begins at 3.30 a.m., he being now used collectively. He plays the same note, he now being used individually, and each he playing a different note, till 6 a.m. Then he switches to another. He stops for meals and for a few hours of sleep—that is all.

When a regiment moves into a town foreigners living in it resign themselves to insomnia. The Chinese don't. Noise to them is one of the normal and pleasurable phenomena of existence, the more deafening the more pleasurable.

But don't jump to conclusions. The Chinese is no coward. He has proved again and again in his long history that he can fight, and he will so prove again. Even the professional soldiers are not cowards. They are only victimes of a rotten system, a system that has corrupted the whole army down to the lowest private, exactly as it has the rest of the Chinese Government and everything else it has touched. Of some units this is not true; these are the "show" units stationed in Pekin and other big cities where foreigners can see them.

Russia's Rye Crop.

In spite of her primitive agricultural methods Russia produces 51 per cent. of the world's rye, 25 per cent. of the world's oats, 33 per cent. of the world's barley and 22 per cent. of the world's wheat, says John Foord, in Asia Magazine. Notwithstanding the primitive character of her rural economy, Russia had in 1913, 33,863,000 horses, 51,255,000 cattle, 73,962,000 sheep, and 14,232,000 pigs. It will be perceived that she was considerably ahead of the United States both in horses and sheep and had almost as many head of cattle. Nor can there be any question about the vast possibilities of the still unexplored mineral deposits of the country. Russia is rich in coal, iron ore, manganese, copper, gold, platinum, asbestos, salt and naphtha, and that by no means exhausts the enumeration. In the thirty years between 1883 and 1913 the production of coal, iron ore and copper increased about eightfold, that of zinc threefold, while that of gold and salt nearly doubled. Russia has practically a monopoly in platinum, the most valuable of metals, and she produces about one fourth as much gold as South Africa. She is the second largest producer of mineral oil, and her production of copper would, under proper direction, easily exceed that of any other country in the world. During the last hundred years, the population of Russia has been exactly quadrupled. Should Russia's population increase in the same ratio in the next hundred years, and it may easily do so if the vast latent resources of the country are adequately utilized, the great commonwealth that will face the year 2020 would have, within the limits of the Russia of 1914 a population of more than 700,000,000. The Co-operatives are probably not dazzling their vision by any such outlook, but they are, according to the declarations of their leaders calmly awaiting the advent of internal peace in Russia, in the full consciousness that no economic future of that tremendous aggregate of material wealth and population can be conceived without assigning to them a leading role in its upbuilding.

Eastern Lamps.

There have arrived at Borstal seven lamps which are to be hung in the sanctuary in the parish church, says the London Times. They are the gift of Donald Maxwell, a former church warden, who bought the lamps in Damascus early in 1914. When the war broke out the lamps were given up for lost. Soon after the Holy Land fell into Lord Allenby's hands, Mr. Maxwell was again in Damascus and found the lamps. They had been buried by their maker, a Syrian Christian, under a heap of rubbish at the back of his shop, which the Turks turned into a munition factory.

A Wonderful Antique.

It was just before Christmas and the prepossessing young woman was investigating the furniture in one of the big stores. She wanted something new, and the clerk assured her the newest furniture was that which embodied the early period styles. So she was initiated into the mysteries of Sheritan, Jacobean, Louis XIV and other styles and had about picked out the piece which suited her fancy when they came upon another group "And this, madam, is of the Adam period," explained the clerk. "Good gracious," exclaimed the woman, "how did he ever manage, without hammers and saws!"

Brangwyn Mural for Canada.

Frank Brangwyn, of Winnipeg, has been commissioned by the Manitoba Government to paint a large interior decoration for the new capitol building. It will be a war theme, showing the shell-shattered town of Ypres with a marching column of men in the foreground.

INOCULATION OF SEED

Nitro-Cultures for Increasing Legume Production.

Friendly Bacteria Perform the Trick—Preparation and Distribution of Cultures Described—How to Procure Supplies.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

LEGUMINOUS crops, such as alfalfa, clover, peas, beans, vetches, etc., have long been known, under certain conditions, to leave the land on which they were grown in a richer condition than it was in before the crop. The necessary conditions are, in addition to the soil being in good tilth and well drained, that there should be in the so certain species of bacteria known as Legume Bacteria. These legume bacteria penetrate the young roots of the legumes where they produce little swellings or nodules, singly or in bunches. On clovers these nodules are very small but numerous, while on peas and beans they are comparatively large and few in number. The bacteria in these nodules fix the free nitrogen of the atmosphere so that the plant can use it as food. Without the aid of the bacteria the plants cannot do this and no crops other than the legumes can do it, even with the bacteria present in the soil.

On old soils, or where clovers or other legumes are successfully grown in crop rotation, the bacteria are usually present. In new soils, however, or when new legume crops, as alfalfa, are grown in old soil, the appropriate bacteria are apt not to be present and in such cases some method of inoculation should be adopted to supply the bacteria. Numerous experiments and prolonged experience have shown that the best way to do this is to inoculate the seed with the necessary bacteria.

For such seed inoculation, artificially grown cultures of the bacteria originally secured from the nodules on the roots of the same species of plant which is to be sown, are applied to the seed shortly before it is sown. By this method the bacteria are carried into the soil with the seed, and in ample numbers to practically insure infection of the roots, with consequent increased growth of the crop.

The Bacteriological Laboratory of the Ontario Agricultural College has prepared and distributed legume nitro-culture to Canadian farmers each season since 1905. For ten years blanks were sent to those farmers who received cultures, on which they reported the results of the seed inoculation as to whether it had been of benefit to the seeding. During this time 27,750 cultures were sent out, and reports received showed that 80 per cent. alfalfa and 70 per cent. red clover gave increased returns following seed inoculation.

The cultures for inoculating seed are grown in the Bacteriological Laboratory on a specially prepared "culture medium" and each one contains a sufficient number of bacteria to inoculate a bushel of seed.

For inoculating the seed, the culture is simply mixed with a little skim-milk, or whey, or whole milk, then mixed thoroughly with the seed, which is allowed to dry a few minutes and sown in the usual way.

Cultures are distributed from the Bacteriological Laboratory for inoculating seed of alfalfa, red clover, white clover, crimson clover, alsike clover, sweet clover, vetches, peas, sweet peas, cow peas, field peas and soy beans.

Each kind of seed requires a different kind of culture. The cultures are for use on seed only. There is only one size package, this being sufficient for 60 pounds of seed, though the entire culture may be used on less seed without harm. The cultures are sent by mail with complete directions for their use.

Price.—A nominal charge of 25c for each culture is made to cover expense of preparation and postage.

Application for Nitro-Cultures.—Applications for cultures should state the kind and amount of seed to be inoculated and the approximate date of seeding. Applications should be sent early, and should be accompanied with remittance to pay in full for the number of cultures desired (twenty-five cents per culture). Address as follows: Prof. D. H. Jones, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, Canada. It is important that the application should state plainly the kind and amount of seed to be treated, and the Name, Post Office, County and Province of the applicant.

Letters received from those who have received these cultures speak very highly of this method of inoculation as shown by the following:

Messrs. J. J. Murray & Co., Seed Merchants, Edmonton, Alta.: "We wish to congratulate you on your products which we have made use of many times. We made many tests in Ontario which proved to us that even alfalfa screenings would produce a greater growth the first and second year after being treated with the bacterial culture than the very best quality of alfalfa seed would without treatment."

Mr. J. B. Munro, Fort William, Ont.: "The cultures were used on peas of an early variety. The larger portion of the seed was inoculated, but part was planted in the ordinary way as a check plot. In twelve weeks the whole field had reached maturity with the exception of the uninoculated strip which was still green. I was not aware that the use of cultures hastened maturity of this legume, but it appears from this experiment that the crop was not only improved in yield, but growth and maturity were hastened. The part of the crop grown from inoculated seed gave excellent results and in future cultures will be used on all legumes grown on the home farm."—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

Boston maintained their winning gait and now lead the American League with five victories and no defeats. Their showing to date has been a surprise.

Earliest British Coin.

At a recent meeting of the British Numismatic Society Alfred Anscombe, F.R. Hist. S., dealt with the earliest English coin, the Golden Solidus of Sean Omodhu. The runic inscriptions on the coin were discussed and identified with the man's name Sean and the folk-name Amodhu.

Mr. Anscombe dated the coin about A. D. 460, and believed it to have been copied from a triumphal medal of Honorius, which he gave reasons for assigning to A. D. 421, says the London Times. The coin, he contended, was struck to commemorate the victory that the Alemannic Prince Sean, Duke of Cair Benet, or Winchester, won over the Saxon invaders of Britain in the sixteenth year after that in which the comet of A. D. 443 was seen—namely, in A. D. 459. Sean was the official chief of ten provincial kings in Southern Britain. In the "Merlin" he was called "Duke Escam." In the "Morte D'Arthur" he was called "Duke Eustace." Wolfram von Eschenbach, circa 1210, said he was slain by Orilus, Lord of Cumberland. The scribal errors in the blundered Latin inscription on the coin were explained, and the the folk-name Omodhu, genitive plural Omodhu, was identified with the Amothingas of "Widsith." Their homeland lay near Shrewsbury, and that town was called "Caer Amwyting," in Welsh, to this day.

English Banks.

There are no statistics to show which of the English banks has the most branches. Lloyds Bank advertises that it has over 1,400 "offices" in England and Wales, and Barclays Bank that it has over 1,400 "branches" in England and Wales. The London Joint City and Midland Bank claims to have over 1,450 "offices" in England and Wales. The figures that Whitaker's Almanack for 1920 gives regarding these institutions are as follows: Lloyds Bank, 700 branches, sub-branches and agencies; Barclays Bank, 897 branches, 540 sub-branches; London Joint City and Midland Bank, 1,360 branches, sub-branches and agencies. The statistics in Whitaker's were probably secured at least two months before the advertisements appeared in the London Times Annual Financial Review, Jan. 23, 1920.

Strike Breaking.

A novel method of breaking a strike is described by E. Torday, who in the National Geographic Magazine, tells about some of the curious customs of the Central African tribes in the Congo. "I crossed the river in a canoe," he says, "and then my luggage was carted to a place above the falls where another boat was waiting for me. The boat was only a dugout, but it was so large that it required a crew of forty paddlers, which was changed at every village, so that the men should not be taken from their homes. In one place the men refused to work and for a time I was unable to proceed. Leaving the women in the village, they withdrew to a distance and mocked me. I instructed my boy to put a number of paddles into the boat; then I invited the savage ladies to come aboard and sell me food. I relied upon the universal eagerness of the negroes in that region to trade, and soon thirty women were in the boat bargaining. Without attracting their attention, my boy unfastened the rope by which the boat was secured to a tree, and before the saleswomen were aware of what was happening they found themselves floating downstream. The effect of this manoeuvre was immediate. The men set out in their canoes and demanded their women. I offered to surrender one hostage for every man who would come aboard and take his place with a paddle, and in half an hour I continued my journey triumphantly. All the ladies had been redeemed from pawn."

Fire-tree.

One of the most extraordinary Australian trees is the "fire-tree," which is common in New South Wales. When in full bloom it is a mass of flame-colored flowers, and looks like a tree on fire.

Unrest.

"Hannah," said a farmer to his wife, "we may as well be prepared. The hired man says he's goin' to strike." "But he admits he has plenty to eat and wear. Nobody finds fault with him and he has a little money in the bank. What's the trouble." "I think it must be jest plain human nature. Things has been movin' along so peaceable that he's got kind o' lonesome and wants to be noticed."

His Party.

The Countess of Warwick, who has been adopted as Labor candidate for East Walthamstow, has long been noted for her practical interest in welfare work.

One of her best stories concerns an occasion when she canvassed the humble quarters of a northern town on behalf of a well-known Labor leader, and encountered at the first house he visited a matron of the most determined character. "May I see Mr. ——?" she asked. "No, you can't," answered the matron, decisively. "But I want to kow what party he belongs to," said Lady Warwick. The woman drew up her tall figure. "Well, take a good look at me" she said. "I'm the party he belongs to!"

Tactics.

A reader of Table Talk relates this: "I never saw anyone get out of a difficult situation more deftly than an expressman's helper the other day. I wanted to see his employer and he from the sidewalk called down: 'Boss, come up! There's a lady wants to see you.' From the depths below a voice called, 'Is she young, John, or old?' This, of course, was not intended for my ears, but it reached them, nevertheless, and the young fellow knew it. In the words of the old poem, 'I looked at John and John looked at me.' "You'll be satisfied, boss, when you come [illegible]."

CALVERT IS OLDEST ACTRESS.

Records of Ladies Who Helped to Make History on the Stage.

The veteran actress, Miss Dolores Drummond, who celebrated her eighty-second birthday in London recently, is not the oldest living actress. That distinction appears to belong either to Mrs. Charles Calvert or Miss Genevieve Ward, each of whom was born in 1837, and is in her eighty-third year. Miss Ward was born in March, but January is understood to be Mrs. Calvert's natal month.

Mrs. Calvert is probably the Mother of the stage in age and Mrs. Kendal in length of service. It is pertinent to remember, in this connection, that Mrs. Kendal has often been styled "the Matron of the Drama."

	Born.	Debut.	Years on the stage
Mrs. Calvert	1837	1843	48
Miss Drummond	1838	1856	53
Lady Bancroft	1839	1845	50
Miss Ellen Terry	1848	1856	64
Miss Ward	1837	1855	65
Sarah Bernhardt	1844	1862	58
Mrs. Kendal	1849	1854	66

William IV. was on the throne in the year of Miss Dolores Drummond's birth. Miss Drummond played with G. V. Brooke, Charles Kean, Barry Sullivan, Joseph Jefferson, Edwin Booth, and Henry Irving. "Mrs. Kean amazed me," she says, "by playing Portia in a crinoline."

A Business Puller

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

BEGGARS WITH RICHES.

Opulent People Who Lived in Abject Poverty.

The recent arrest in one of the large English cities of a beggar found to possess a fortune of $16,000 in his own name is a forcible reminder that there are to-day, and have been in the past, many wealthy paupers, if the paradox be permitted.

One readily recalls the case of the notorious Jean Baptiste Roateau, who died in a gypsy caravan outside of Paris not long since, and who had begged for a livelihood for twenty years or more. In Roateau's hand after his death the police found gripped tightly the key to a strong box in a Paris bank. This box was found to contain $100,000 in gold, notes and securities, all the property of the pseudo mendicant.

Then there was Thomas Cooke, known as "the Islington miser." Cooke's life was one of penury, saving and petty trickery, and when he died he left his heirs to squabble over a fortune of more than $300,000. By the old and yet ever new trick of falling in a pretended fit in front of a house at dinner-time Cooke got many meals free of cost. He would be carried into the house and then, on making his usual quick recovery, he naturally would be asked to share the meal.

Before the war there died in a Berlin garret, one Herr Schwartz, known to and pitied by his neighbors as one of the poorest of the poor. He sallied out daily into the fashionable quarters of the city garbed in filthy rags, and carrying a sack in which he collected crusts and other scraps of food. He lived and died alone, a mere bunch of bones. In his wretched quarters were found $400,000, mostly in gold concealed in jars and bottles, and in bank notes, which served as stuffing for his bed.

In a remote village in Ireland an old woman, supposed to be a pauper, was knocked down in the roadway and instantly killed. When the authorities inspected the hovel in which she lived they found it packed almost to the door with branches from trees for winter fuel, behind which they discovered two large buckets and a tin trunk filled with current coin. Searching further they came across a wooden box and some earthenware jars also containing silver and gold, so that when the money had all been collected and placed into the scales the total weight exceeded a hundred pounds.

Jeremiah Monihan died in St. Louis and was about to be buried in the potter's field when they found a key to a safety deposit box among his few effects in the hut in which he lived, apparently in the most abject poverty. The safety deposit box contained $60,000 in perfectly good, interest bearing bonds, and, strange to relate, nobody came forward to claim this wealth as the miser's next of kin.

A ragged recluse named Marshall McMurran was found in a starving condition in his tumbledown shack on the outskirts of Evansville, Ind. He was taken before a commission for examination as to his sanity, and when he was searched $2,000 was found in the lining of his coat and in his pockets.

It is related that Samuel Rogers lived the life of a tramp at Long Branch, N.J., and that he used to walk from that city to New York in order to bank his money. He left $80,000, although he always considered himself too poor to buy food and clothing. He encased his feet in old pieces of burlap and ate whatever he could find even to apple cores and crusts from the streets.

A strange character known as "the hag of Bald Hill" died at South Norwalk, Conn. Local tradition had it that in her youth the old woman was a noted New York belle, but unrequited love caused her to withdraw from the gay world and shun society. For years she lived in an old shanty, searching the woods nearby for medicinal roots and herbs, which she sold. She hoarded every cent, and had it not been from the gleam of bank notes through holes eaten by moths $3,000 would have been burned in the shabby garments she left. It is believed a considerable sum in her old clothes went up in smoke before discovery of the greenbacks was made.

Protected From Witches.

A bride and bridegroom in olden days used to be protected from the evil influence of warlocks and witches by using gray horses to pull the bridal carriage. To be lucky, they should not be married in a month the name of which contains the letter "A." Further, none of the wedding guests should be dressed in black or green. They will be unfortunate if the engagement ring has contained either opals or emeralds.

Will Be Aged Liquor Then.

A jug of Jamaica rum left at a Pennsylvania farmhouse by some British officers in 1778 came into the possession of the Wistar institute, University of Pennsylvania, and after being tipped and the contents "tested" by the members of the board of managers in 1892 when the building was dedicated, was sealed, and will not be opened again until the centenary [illegible]

AUSTRIA PESSIMISTIC.

Business Men Fear Complete Breakdown of Nation.

A wave of pessimism has swept over Austria since Baron Koranyi, Minister of Finance, and the Food Controller returned from Paris with empty hands except for some small food credits. Newspapers express regret at the delay of the hope for American loan and publish warnings of approaching exhaustion of food supplies and of another crisis.

Depression prevails in business circles. Manufacturers declare that these driblets of loans for food purchase are futile and that only credits sufficiently large to enable business to get on its feet by the purchase of coal and raw materials will postpone the complete breakdown of Austria.

One of the basic causes of the country's paralysis is lack of coal due to failure of the coal supplying countries to live up to their agreements. For this reason industries lie idle.

Austria's natural and logical coal supply lies in Bohemia and Prussia, or Upper Silesia. Under the present arrangements coal is secured, what there is of it, under agreements between state governments and upon arrival in Austria is distributed by Government officials. The supply is so small that virtually all of it is needed for limited railway operation, the gas and electric plants and limited private domestic use.

None remains for industries and no factories except those producing the necessities of life are in constant operation. For instance, the great Floridsdorf locomotive works, with a capacity of 150 locomotives a year have been idle for four weeks while all Europe is crying for railway motive power. The demand for freight cars is insistent and yet the Graz car factory with a potential capacity of 300 cars a month produces less than fifty because coal is not to be had and consequently they cannot secure wheels, axles and structural iron for bodies.

Vienna is surrounded with a forest of factory stacks but smoke issues from few of them. This has been true ever since the revolution fifteen months ago. Manufacturers say that if coal can be assured in sufficient quantities, they will manage to find raw materials enough to start with and slowly build up credits for more.

Commission after commission has vainly tried to obtain delivery of the coal for which contracts were made with Czecho-Slovakia. The reason for this failure is unknown. One expert says that unless Austria is allowed to get coal from the Upper Silesian fields, whence has always come the bulk of Austria's supply, her population must be deported or the country will perish under starvation and anarchy. This solution, he says, lies in the hands of the powers.

Trade Revival In Timur.

The wave of reviving and expanding international trade in the Pacific area has broken upon the shores of Timur Island, one of the Sunda group, in the Dutch East Indies, according to Manuel Gentil, Governor of the Portuguese settlement on that island. American machinery for the development of gold, silver, copper, and manganese mines, and also facilities for the improvement of oil and agricultural lands, are among the products of western civilization that will be set up in this corner of the Orient for the purpose of performing their constructive functions in making natural resources available for human use. Plans are under way for the building of a powerful wireless station on the island for the purpose of communication with the Philippines and Australia, thus overcoming in a degree the isolation of the million inhabitants of the settlement, and incidentally opening an avenue whereby the flavor of Anglo-Saxon civilization may be added to that of the Latin, the Malay, and the Papuan. A good roads program is also under way on the island.

Common Superstitions.

Most people are superstitious. With some the breaking of a looking glass means a gloomy foreboding. Peacock feathers were formerly considered bearers of sickness. The Greeks and Romans of ancient times put implicit trust in omens and never undertook enterprises of any moment without consulting the oracle.

What's Art to This Senator?

Art received a terrible walloping at the national capitol when a senator decided he wanted a private door into his office so that folks could not break in on him unannounced. Summoning workmen, he caused to be torn out some of the finest art work on the walls of the senate side and then had a door installed.

"Hail, Columbia!"

"Hail, Columbia," was written by Joseph Hopkinson, April, 29, 1798, when the United States was threatened with a war with France. It was composed to the air of the "President's March," for a young actor and singer in the Philadelphia theater, and became at once highly popular.

THE LATEST PHONOGRAPH.

Volume of Sound Produced Equals That of Reed Orchestra.

A British engineer, with more application than mercy, has invented a phonograph the volume of sound of which, it is asserted, will equal that of Sousa's orchestra the night the States went dry; reproduce a lifelike impression of a modern battle or make possible an Ulsterman's speech at a Sinn Fein meeting.

This latest and loudest form of musical horror is the invention of H. A. Gaydon, a member of the staff of the Creed Cable Company. A fortnight ago he tried it out on his surprised and delighted neighbors in a London suburb. The tune played was recognized more than two miles away.

Complaints came showering in from the same distance. The objectors begged to have Gaydon removed from the neighborhood. So a well-known theatrical manager decided to take the machine for his vaudeville houses as a popular form of amusement.

The instrument is known as the "Stentorphone" — after Stentor, the Greek herald, who had a voice like thunder—and as the volume of sound produced equals that of an ordinary orchestra, it may quite possibly effect a mild revolution in the average dancing hall and movie show.

Compressed air and a patent soundbox are the secrets of the new invention. The air is supplied by an electric motor, and when it passes through a small valve controlled by the gramophone needle—ordinary records and needles are used — it expands and creates a burst of noise that in the case of vocal selections far surpasses the original.

Standing about thirty yards from the instrument the illusion of a band playing selections at about an equal distance is almost complete, but the most entertaining result is obtained when a vocal record is turned on. The artist was Sir Harry Lauder and the song "We Parted on the Shore" —and it sounded like the monster voice of the biggest giant who ever walked in the fairy tales.

It is contended, indeed, that the machine can be used as a drill sergeant, giving the words of command before playing the marching accompaniment, or that if necessary it can deliver the speeches of famous statesmen in a way that will baffle the obstructive methods of the loudest voiced heckler.

Salt and Electricity for Cancer.

Instead of cutting out a cancer of the mouth or throat, Dr. Norman Patterson, of London Hospital, burns it out by the process called diathermy, which is the application of a high frequency electric current, which reverses its direction at the rate of about a million times a second. One electrode is placed over the chest or abdomen with layers of lint saturated in saline solution between it and the skin. The other electrode, in the form of a needle, spatula or button is applied to the tissues around the part to be excised. Owing to the resistance offered to the passage of the current, heat is produced and the albumin in the tissues is coagulated.

The advantages of this method are that there is no bleeding, the wound is absolutely sterilized, the tissues in the neighborhood of the cancer are totally destroyed so that implantation of cancer cells in healthy tissue is impossible, all vascular tissues are sealed up, there is scarcely any shock; if the tumor reappears the diathermy can easily be applied again, the scar-tissue is denser and spreads further than when the knife is used. Tumors can be reached directly, with which the knife could only be reached after extensive dissection.

After the tumor has been removed Dr. Patterson runs his instrument all over the surface of the cavity, thus scarring the whole surface like a burn.

He warns that diathermy is rarely successful in the larynx as it is likely to cause swelling that is obstructive to breathing or a possible abscess in the neck; but it is highly successful in the pharynx and on the tongue.

A Mine Shaft.

The sinking of a mine shaft 21.5 feet in diameter is no small undertaking, and its accomplishment is considered the record for the world in such work. If one visualizes what a hole in the ground over twenty feet across means and 279 feet deep, its magnitude commences to be appreciated. The feat was accomplished in South Africa. The sinking of the shaft was accomplished in thirty-one days. The average tons of earth and rock hoisted at a blast was ninety, making 8,100 tons for thirty days of sinking, three blasts a day. The total explosives used amounted to fifteen pounds a foot sunk.

Travel Records of Londoners.

It is estimated by a statistician that the total number of passenger journeys made in London trams, omnibuses and local railways during last year was 2,900,000,000, of which the underground group of companies, over which Lord Ashfield presides, carried 1,200,000,000. The estimated population of London and Greater London is 7,400,000. Taking this figure as a basis of estimation, each person travels some 388 times a year.

ERUDITE SHOPKEEPERS.

Not Much a Rarity as Some People Think.

Erudite shopmen are not such a rarity as a writer in the Westminster Gazette would seem to infer, judging from his delighted astonishment at encountering a second-hand shopkeeper who was also an Egyptologist. Within 100 yards of each other, two shops could be visited a few years ago, whose owners were as well informed globe-trotters and curio hunters as one would wish to find. One was a retired merchant service man, a musician, with a fine knowledge of old Worcester, Crown Derby, Nankin, and most of the world's china. The other was a silversmith and picker-up of second-hand clocks, cutlery, and some odd bits of jewelry, with a varied experience of the "Wild West," and other foreign part knowledgeableness. Both communicative, both with musty, attractive wares, what wonder that the neighborhood should wander in and lean, chin in hand, over the counter, wasting time egregiously and unconcernedly.

But probably the man whom Borrow would have hailed as brother, and who gave the writer in the Westminster so delectable an half hour, was something superior to these other two. For he was an Egyptologist, and had been called in on one occasion for expert advice by the authorities of the British Museum. In the window of his shop, where "antiques" of various kinds, so runs the Westminster's story, "from old china and glass to second-hand sewing-machines and bicycles, were exposed for sale, a pair of wooden figures, undoubtedly old and probably of Egyptian origin, caught my eye. The proprietor, seeing that I was interested, much to my surprise, commenced, without any sort of preface, a scholarly lecture on the figures, and on Egyptology in general, which lasted, with no sort of remonstrance on my part, for the space of half-an-hour by the clock.

"This most erudite of shopkeepers also told me that he had once been called in by the authorities of the British Museum to decide upon the age of the mummies in the gallery which is, or was, a fascinating place to visit. Altogether I left the place feeling, not humiliated, but rather bewildered, and yet glad to know that there was even now a shop in London, there may be others for aught I know, where the proprietor is an expert authority on an admittedly abstruse and disputatious subject. Borrow, I think, would have had more than half-an-hour's enjoyment out of an adventure so much after his own heart."

Molasses as Auto Fuel.

The West Indian molasses that used to be turned into rum will have to be utilized in some other way, now that the United States is no longer a legitimate buyer of alcoholic drinks. Dr Walter Baunard, writing in Sugar, thinks that it will be used to drive automobiles and for the general development of power for traction and other purposes. Not that it will ever be substituted for gasoline, in its crude form. It must first be turned into alcohol; but after this transformation its value will be greatly enhanced. Investigation carried out recently under the auspices of the British Government indicates that the use of alcohol as a motor fuel has great possibilities and the committee in charge suggests not only that the by-products of sugar-production be used in this way, but that many other products yielding sugar, starch, or cellulose may be similarly utilized.

A Retort.

At a political meeting held in a provincial town in England a crowded audience had assembled to support a parliamentary candidate. During the speech of the candidate a man put his head in at the door and shouted in a stentorian voice. "Can anyone here sell me six pennyworth of sense?" The speaker halted, evidently quite dumbfounded; but the chairman of the meeting immediately silenced the intruder by retorting: "Yes, but you have nothing to put it in."

Some Blow!

Following a fight at Llanbradach, near Cardiff, John Charles Herbert, 17, a collier, has been arrested on a charge of causing the death of Edward Jesse Payne, 16, also a collier. The lads are said to have disagreed, and decided to have a fight. They went to a field, each accompanied by seconds and a small band of supporters. The fight had lasted about six minutes when Payne, it is said, received a blow under the heart. He fell and died almost immediately.

Oriental English.

The English in the following speech quoted by the Writer from an unnamed Oriental paper, would seem to do more than halt: "The news of English we tell the latest. Writ in perfectly style and most earliest. Do a murder commit, we hear of and tell it. Do a mighty chief die, we publish it and in borders somber. Staff has each one been colleged and write like the Kipling and the Dickens. We circle every town and extortionate not for advertisements."

MAN'S WORST ENEMIES.

Insects Cause More Trouble Than Wars Do.

According to P. L. Simmond, a great authority on the subject, there are 35,000 different sorts of insects in Europe, of which 3,500 kinds are rather noxious to mankind or actively destructive.

The papers are always full of instructions to "swat the fly," but while the house-fly and blue-bottle certainly do spread typhoid and similar diseases, there are other insects who bleed our pockets to the tune of millions of pounds yearly, according to an exchange.

The common codlin moth costs English apple-growers at least £100,000 a year, and the damage done by the green fly is greater.

The flea beetle destroys whole fields of turnips, rape and cabbage every summer, while as for the wireworm, this pest alone eats up every year the roots of enough wheat and other food plants to feed half a million people. There are only two plants the roots of which the wireworm will not attack. These are woad and mustard.

There is only one way of clearing land of wireworm, that is by using bisulphide of carbon; but the poison is too expensive for ordinary field use.

Wood borers are everywhere. The worst is the goat moth which tunnels into the solid wood of pear, apple, walnut and other trees. There is only one remedy—namely to cut down an infested tree and burn it.

The pine beetle is only one-fifth of an inch in length, yet is responsible for the destruction of acres upon acres of valuable forests.

Sometimes we get an invasion of horrors like the Colorado beetle or the Hessian fly. The Colorado beetle destroyed half the American potato crop in 1858, and so dreaded is it that, by an order-in-council, it is a serious offence for anyone, even a scientist, to keep one alive in the United States.

As for the Hessian fly, it would be impossible to calculate the millions of bushels of wheat and rye which it has destroyed.

Insects are man's worst enemies. Some scientists believe that in the end they may destroy mankind.

Kolchak's White Army.

The same day that I discovered the cathedral I found also the train from Ishim, and from that time my life was divided into two chapters, gray and white, says an article by Olive Gilbreath in Asia. Night opened the gray chapter. As soon as the light began to lessen, every evening, with a stalwart American guard, I used to pick my way across the tracks, peering down the interminable dark aisles of trains, until we came to one with a box-car showing two tiny lighted windows at the top. When the door at the top of the ladder had opened to my knocking, the guard retired and I found myself in the gray world—a big car, ill-lighted with smoky kerosene lamps hung against the sides of the car, banded lengthwise by narrow board tables and crude benches and heated by a rusty stove on which boiled water for the endless glasses of tea drunk there under the dim lights. But it was not the drabness of the car that pierced one's heart. It was the gray wrecks of humanity who stumbled in out of the bitter nights and slipped down, ill and exhausted, on the crude benches; such pitiable figures, boys with the youth not out of their eyes when despair had entered, gaunt, threadbare in clothes, arms hanging useless and legs twisted—the backwash of war, broken fragments of Kolchak's army. Cold and wretched as were the soldiers who found their way into the car, heroically kept by the "angel little sisters" from Ishim, one sensed always beyond them a bitterer background of suffering there in the mountains, the front, where wounds were stuffed with newspapers and where to fall in the snow was, within a few hours, to be frozen stark. A heavy fight for youth, alone and against dreadful odds; the fight for the world, abandoned by the world.

Turks Fear Liquor.

Though the laws of Mahomet forbid their consumption, it seems that alcoholic drinks—especially raki—are by no means unpopular among the Turkish working classes.

They have long been in favor with the upper classes, even in the days when prohibition laws were so strong in Turkey that the Grand Vizier tried to stop foreign diplomats from importing wine for their own consumption, says an exchange.

Aug. de Busbecq, the French Ambassador, successfully resisted this infringement of their rights, but the authorities stipulated that the wine should be carted through the streets at dead of night, lest the sight of the casks should corrupt the faithful.

However when the wine reached its destination the Turkish Ministers enjoyed it as much as anybody.

Busbecq relates that one of them when tackling a bottle of champagne, gave a great shout before each drink. This warned his soul to hide itself in a remote part of his body, for fear it should be defiled by the wine and have to answer hereafter for the sin.

Many Accidental Drownings.

Accidental drowning caused 5,550 deaths, or 7.4 per 100,000, in this country last year. This rate is considerably less than that for any preceding year since 1910, and is also decidedly below the average for the decade 1901-1910.

Kindhearted Farmers.

One day a city cousin came to the farm and when she saw the windmill said: "Oh, see how good the farmers are to the pigs; they have electric fans to keep them cool."

Object of Public School.

The public school is wrongly organized when its main object is to fit for college. It should benefit the many rather than the few.—Phillips.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WOOD—ROY.

On Tuesday morning, April 20, at St. James Methodist parsonage, the marriage was solemnized of Miss Zella Roy and Mr. Clarence Wood, both of Peterborough. Rev. James Chapman, B.A., officiated. The young couple left on the noon train for a two weeks' honeymoon, after which they will take up their residence in Peterborough.

PERKS—BRIDGMAN.

The marriage took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. W. Bridgman, Port Arthur, of their youngest daughter, Lorna Campbell, to Arthur Johnston Perks, second son of Mrs. L. R. Perks, Peterborough, Ontario. Rev. Norman McLeod of Knox Presbyterian Church, conducting the ceremony. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a wedding gown of pearl white taffeta with veil of tulle and orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of white bridal roses and wore the groom's gift, a gold hat pin set with pearls. Prof. J. B. Nield played the wedding march from Lohengrin. The bride and groom were unattended, with the exception of Mrs. Garnet McKee of Rockford, Ills., sister of the bride, who acted as matron of honor. Mrs. McKee wore a gown of apricot georgette crepe embroidered with white beads. Mrs. Bridgman, mother of the bride, wore blue silk poplin, with American Beauty roses. Following the ceremony there was a buffet luncheon, and later Mr. and Mrs. Perks left for a short honeymoon in Toronto and Peterborough. The bride's going-away suit was of navy blue tricotine, embroidered heavily in black silk, the coat opening over a hand-embroidered blouse of navy silk. With this she wore a corsage bouquet of American Beauty roses and a smart hat of navy blue silk and straw with French flowers. On their return to Port Arthur they will make their home on Pearl street. During the war the groom served four years with the Royal Highlanders of Montreal, being promoted from private to captain.—Toronto Globe.

MARK STREET CHURCH NOTES.

"Hello, stranger! Can you tell me the location of Mark Street Methodist Church?" "Do you live in the city and ask such a question as that? Why, everybody knows Mark Street Church." "Well, I've only been in the city for a week, but every person I meet is talking about a concert to be held there on Friday night, and I feel like going, but I am a stranger." "Well, my friend, you had better take in that entertainment. If there is anything that will cure the 'spring fever' or homesickness, the coming concert will do the business. Just you hear the boys and girls of that church in the coming entertainment, and it will knock out all your loneliness, homesickness, nervousness and blues, take my word for that." "Well, how am I to know the way?" "Now, look, there's a company of Boy Scouts, and they are going to march to the concert. You follow them, and you'll be all O.K. Remember, it's the church of the straight message and the big welcome, so you will enjoy the evening." "Thank you, sir; I'll be there."

TORONTO HEBREWS COLLECT A WAR RELIEF FUND OF $132.300

Only $67,000 Remains To Reach Their Objective Contributions Generous

Toronto, April 22. — In spite of the rain, the result yesterday found the Canadian Jewish War Relief over $24,500 nearer their objective. The total stood at $132,300, with only $67,000 to be collected by midnight tonight, when the campaign closes. Everybody connected with the work is delighted, and team captains are confident now that more than the amount stipulated will be obtained. From early morning the collectors were out in raincoats and under umbrellas scouring the city and making the most of the time at their disposal.

Opening a Lad's Bank

The feature of the noon luncheon yesterday was the auctioning of the privilege to open the savings bank of little Leo Selick, who brought it to headquarters on King street. Leo, a young lad in a blue sailor suit, came all the way from 60 Bernard avenue, accompanied by his mother, with the accumulated savings of many months. Addresses were given by Sir Edmund Walker, K. J. Dunstan, of the Bell Telephone Co., Col. Noel Marshall, and Rabbi Louis Kopald of Buffalo.

Neither did the rain prevent a little girl of 12 years from bringing a backage of 75 "shin plasters" to headquarters. She was Esther Michalson, 312 Parliament street. She had been saving these precious pieces of paper for a long time, but gave up her fortune willingly to help send food for the hungry boys and girls in Central and Eastern Europe.

Little Miss Esther was given a royal reception, and no sooner had her gift been acknowledged than she was the centre of an admiring group of men and women, each tendering congratulations.

Many private subscribers are making use of the coupons which appear daily in the papers, and in this way many contributions are being received from people unable to bring their donations in themselves. Several letters were received yesterday from points out of the city containing subscriptions of various sizes.

City May Give $10,000.

A grant of $10,000 was recommended by the Board of Control towards the Jewish Relief Fund. The request was made by a deputation headed by Leo Frankel, with whom were Sir Edmund Walker, treasurer of the fund; Kenneth Dunstan, Noel Marshall, Magistrate Cohen and others.

"Every dollar will be spent on food and clothing in Canada," explained Mr. Frankel; "not a cent will be sent out of this country."

"Two ships have gone from an American point already," said Sir Edmund Walker, "with over $4,000,000 worth of food and clothing. The need is very real. It is not a case of a danger of starvation. Children are actually dying for lack of food."

The objective in Toronto is $200,000.

The Mayor: "We have no authority to make a grant, but could doubtless get legislation."

The Board then passed the grant, subject to securing legislation.

OPERA SINGER GETS DIVORCE

MRS. ALICE TRUE GENTLE WINS PLEA CHARGES OF NON-SUPPORT

Santa Cruz, Cal., April 22.—Mrs. Alice True Gentle, grand opera singer, yesterday obtained here an interlocutory decree of divorce from Robert Bruce Gentle of New York. She charged non-support. The action was uncontested.

Mrs. Gentle—Miss Alice Gentle on the stage—was born in Peoria, Ill., in 1885. She sang a few years in concert and oratorio before she made her debut in grand opera under the late Oscar Hammerstein as Lola in "Cavalleria Rusticana" in the Manhattan Opera House in 1909. She also sang in "The Tales of Hoffman," "Thais," "Louise," "Faust," "Elektra" and "Hans the Flute Player" in the Manhattan, and appeared with Mr. Hammerstein's London opera company in 1911 and 1912. Afterward she appeared in this country in light opera and musical comedy. In 1918-19 she was with the Metropolitan Opera Company.

ST. GEORGE'S DAY AND THE RED ROSE

TODAY IS ANNIVERSARY OF THE BATTLE OF ST. JULIEN

All readers know, or ought to know, that tomorrow, the 23rd day of April, is St. George's Day, the patron saint of England, it might be added of the British Empire, to display the red rose, the Empire's color, on St. George's Day, is a very old custom.

And perhaps there never has been a time when true and patriotic Canadians shoul make a more prominent display of this emblem of unity—the red rose—than the present. Today, the 22nd of April, the even of St. George's Day, should most certainly be commemorated in some way or another by our fellow citizens, for today is St. Julien Day, the anniversary of that great battle where the Canadians barred the way of the Germans to the channel porte Lord French said in his despatch of the Canadians at this battle: "The Canadians saved the day:" This battle was fought on April 22, 1915.

And tomorrow, the 23rd of April, which is St. George's Day, another great battle was fought, that of Zeebrugge where the Canadians once more showed that they were men not to be trifled with. This battle was fought in 1918.

These two great battles, where the Canadians so gloriously distinguished themselves, should be kept in memory by every true Peterborian. Perhaps the only way in which we can keep in memory the wonderful exploits of one's fellow citizens on those dates is by displaying prominently tomorrow the red rose of old England, which will be sold in the streets, as on former occasions.

The Duke of Devonshire gave the bride away and Mr. Arthur Penn was the best man. The bridesmaids were Lady Anne Cavendish, sister of the bride; Miss Diana Cavendish, and Lady Katherine Fitzmaurice, the bride's cousins; and Miss Jean MacMillan, the groom's cousin. OVERALLS WANE AT FREIGHT SHEDS

GRAND TRUNK EMPLOYEES NOW AT WORK IN JEANS

The overalls wave struck this city today, when the employes of the Grand Trunk freight sheds appeared for work wearing the jeans. In the office this morning there was a motley array of colors, some wearing black, some blue and others gray overalls. Obviously this could not be allowed to exist in such an institution as the Grand Trunk, and a consultation was held among the office employes, with the result that those who had gray overalls were able to keep them, and those whose choice had fallen on other colors were required to send them back to be exchanged for gray. It is not known yet whether or not this action by the Grand Trunk men will make gray overalls more expensive than other colors.

"What did you pay for that outfit?" a reporter asked a clerk clad in the gray jeans.

"Four dollars," he replied.

Well, they'll be six tomorrow was the rejoinder, to which he replied that they didn't care as long as they didn't have to buy any more.

Clerks at the C.P.R. sheds are inclined to ridicule the actions of their bretheren of the Grand Trunk. One or two appeared to be willing to don the overalls, but were afraid of the opinions of the girls in the office, who, it is stated, are strongly opposed to such a departure, which they would regard as lowering the dignity of the office staff.

Several people appeared on the streets this morning wearing the much-discussed apparel, but it is doubtful whether they are members of the U.F.O. in town for a holiday or of the overall club.

"Jimmy" Wilde so far outclassed Battling Murray in their eight-round bout at Camden, N.J., last night that the affair was stopped in the last round.

SENATOR HUSKEY TALKS ON DIVORCE

DELIGHTED TO SIT ON TORONTO BENCH WITH BRITISH JUDGE

THOUGHT PICKFORD A CHILD

WHEN SHE APPEARED BEFORE HIM AND APPEALED FOR DIVORCE

Toronto, April 23.—"It was certainly a great privilege to me to sit on the bench beside a judge of the British constitution and it is something I will always remember and appreciate," stated Senator H. W. Huskey, of Reno, Nevada, who occupied a seat alongside Judge Coatsworth in the County Judge's Criminal Court yesterday.

Senator Huskey, who is at present on an extensive trip to probate a will in New York City, and to conduct an argument before the Supreme Court of the United States, stayed off in Toronto for the day to meet some lawyers here with whom he had been in correspondence. He is an expert lawyer on divorce cases and is, in fact, the author of the divorce law of Nevada.

Same Law in All States.

According to Senator Huskey the great commission dealing with the uniformity of laws in the U.S. and composed of leading jurists, lawyers and moralists, have suggested the divorce law of Nevada for all states.

"Our law is just and upright," said the Senator, "but the only difficulty about it is the abuse of it. A person residing six months in the state can obtain the divorce and notice can be served on any one found in the state. In referring to the Moore-Pickford divorce case, he said that it was an unfortunate thing that Mary Pickford testified she was a bona fide resident of Nevada and then left the next day.

Great Weakness.

"This was a great weakness in the case," said the Senator, "and tends to show that the testimony as to the bona fide character of her residence was false. If the court finds that she was not a resident it loses its jurisdiction to grant the divorce, and the decree will necessarily have to be reversed. Action is now brought before the court by the Attorney-General on the allegation that a fraud was committed. Owen Moore ostensibly went to Virginia City to look over the moving picture business, but if it can be shown that he went there to be served it would show collusion and this would justify the setting aside of the decree.

"Judge Langan, who is a very fine type of man, told me that when he first had been telephoned by a lawyer to deal with a case for Mrs. Smith and her daughter. When he first saw them he did not know the daughter was Mary Pickford and only thought she was a child about 15 years of age. He was astounded when she got in the box and he learned she was the one applying for divorce. It was not till he noticed her actions that he asked her if she was a moving picture actress and she said she was. He then knew she was Mary Pickford. He said she was very nervous and high strung and wept like a child when giving her evidence."

Senator Huskey has practised law at Reno for 16 years, and is a graduate of Stanford University in California.

WOULD SUMMON HUNS TO SAN REMO

FOR THE PURPOSE OF REVISING THE TREATY PACT OF VERSAILLES

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 23.—The Times today confirms Paris reports of yesterday that Premiers Lloyd George and Nitti had urged that German representative be summoned to San Remo for the purpose of revising the Versailles Treaty, but that the proposal collapsed, owing to Belgian and French opposition.

The newspaper adds: "We understand that any attempt to revise the treaty without consulting the United States will be resented by America, who will consider England responsible for any complications that may ensue."

Guelph Council decided to sign a contract for the holding of the Winter Fair in that city for another year.

DAUGHTERS OF EMPIRE TO GIVE COMMUNITY DANCE ON STREET

Open Air Tripping of Light Fantastic Like the Daughters of Gay Paree—City Council Gives its Consent—Routine Business by Board of Aldermen.

The local Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, asked Council last night for a grant of $200 toward entertaining delegates to a convention of this order, to be held here June next.

Representation was made that from 250 to 300 delegations were expected —men who would leave considerable in and subsequently advertise the city, and that the local brethren consider the occasion worthy an equal grant allowed the Woodmen of the World—$200

Ald. Gordon suggested that as in such cases expectations of attendance usually fall short by fifty per cent, the order furnish a closer guarantee as to the number of delegates coming than offered in the term "expected," and that the grant be proportionate to the number of visitors actually coming.

Ald. Crowe said he was not in favor of either this grant or one to the Woodmen of the World. "The quicker we get away from donating such grants the better," he said

This request was sent to the Finance Committee

Later in the evening a report of the Finance Committee recommending a grant of $200 to the Woodmen of the World was adopted.

Oppose the Bell

Council agreed to in company with the union of Canadian municipalities, oppose the Bell Telephone Company's application to the Federal Government for permission to increase their authorized capital to $75,000,000. The City Solicitor will be instructed to appear at Ottawa with other representatives of municipalities in this connection.

Siding Allowed

The Canadian Packing Company requested permission to lay another siding from the C. P. R. into their premises—three tracks altogether.—This request was granted, the company to keep in repair the pavement on George street, when laid across which these tracks will run for a distance of two feet each side north and south the company also to maintain a watchman, if the Railways and Municipal Board so orders.

Cost Too Much

Ald. Gainey reported that it would cost $400 to lay pipe for properly watering Central Park, but this committee has not that amount in their appropriation for such purposes.

A resolution of condolence with the family of the late R A. Morrow in their recent bereavement carried. Deceased gentlemen was a town councillor in Peterborough's early days

Motions of Condolence

Resolutions of condolence with the families of ex-Ald. Harry Phelan and ex-Ald Archibald Weir, and expressing appreciation of their active services on the Council Board, were passed in a standing vote.

Photos in Mourning

Ald. Gainey's suggestion that the group photos containing the pictures of ex-Alderman Phelan and Weir be draped for thirty days.—Carried

Let the County Help

Ald. Gainey raised the question of a grant from the County Council toward the upkeep of Victoria Park. Up to last year, he said, they always gave $100, last year they contributed nothing, and he thought the city might reasonably expect $250 from them this year

Ald. Gainey moved that the county be asked for a grant of $250 toward the maintenance of Victoria Park. Ald. Crowe seconded the motion. which carried.

Comes Pretty High

The City Engineer reported that asphaltic concrete pavement on George street south would cost $5 a yard. He asked permission to invite prices on other kinds of pavements. This went to the Board of Works.

S. A. Tag Day

The Salvation Army asked permission to conduct a tag day in connection with Jubilee Self-Denial week on May 22nd next. This request was allowed.

IN W.H. MOORE DEATH REMOVES ONE OF THE "OLD GUARD" OF PETERBORO

For Fifty Years, Highly Esteemed and Respected, Deceased Gentleman Associated With Public Interests

This morning comes the passing of a man who has for over fifty years accepted, and taken on and discharged most consistently and thoroughly a full share of civic duty and responsibility. His death removes one of the "old guard," identified with the intimate affairs ow the town and afterwards city, a man to be referred to and consulted in implicit confidence that personal integrity and capability would indicate that which was for the civic weal. A most worthy example and representative of a passing generation that it will be difficult to replace in confidence and general respect

At the ripe age of seventy-eight years William Henry Moore has gone. It was generally known and commented on during the last few weeks that his tenure on life seemed precarious. The end is not unexpected, an attack of pneumonia with its calls on bodily vitaly proved to be more than could be overcome. He passed away this morning shortly after six o'clock.

He came of pioneer stock. His father, William Henry Moore, the senior was a native of Dublin, Ireland, and who after education entered the British Navy, and served on the outbreak of the second Anglo-American war. This closing out he acted as manager on a sugar plantation in the West Indies, and further on came to Canada and settled in the township of Smith, on lot 9, concession 3, known as a "Clergy Reserve Lot." There the late Mr. Moore was born, his mother being a daughter of Francis Page, who taught the first school in Smith, on the 4 th Line, erected about 1824 or 1825.

Mr. Moore was educated in the schools of the township and in the old union and grammar schools of the town. Further on he was articled in the profesion of law wtih Hon. Sidney Smith, writing and reading law in the office, now a part of the city building and which has given shelter to nearly all the older members of the profession. Going to Toronto he was with George Morphy, Barrister, for one year, and called to the bar in 1868. He practiced for a short time at Hamilton and at Petrolia, Ont. He removed to Peterborough in the end of 1869, and was in partnership with C. W. Sawers for four years. In recognition of abilities as a barrister, he was created a King's Counsel in 1908 He had followed the practice of the profession, alone, until in recent years he associated with him Mr. J. Wearing, under the firm title of Moore & Wearing.

His civic service speaks his wrth in that the confidence of the citizens has been expressed—a valued member of the town council for eight years—and member of the city trust commission since 1893. Elected a director of the Little Lake Cemetery Company, in 1902, he was chairman for eight years. Following the institution of the Civic Water Commission in 1092, he became a member in 1904, and remained in office during the taking over of the electrical service of the city and since being selected as Chairman of the Utilities Commission, January 1st., 1920. Truly, deceased died in the harness. He gave of service in the interests of many local activities including the Horticultural Society.

In political life he was a staunch Liberal Conservative. Honored and ent, he was the efficient president of eral-Conservative Association, for many years no political contest taking place without his wise and efficient counsel and guidance.

In addition to his activities in municeived as most valuable contributions to discussion, throughout the Dominion.

In religion he was a Presbyterian

SIR JOHN TAYLOR WILL NOW RESIGN

IS PART OF GOVERNMENT'S NEW POLICY TOWARD IRELAND

LIFE CONSTANTLY IN DANGER

WAS ALWAYS UNDER GUARD OF DETECTIVES WHILE IN OFFICE

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 23.—Sir John Taylor, Under Secretary in the Irish Administration, will resign as part of a new government policy toward Ireland, says The Daily Sketch.

"Sir John," says the newspaper, "has for years been power behind the throne at Dublin Castle, and his life has been constantly in danger. He was always guarded by detectives and it is reported that he had not left the castle in six months until he was given a month's leave of absence recently.

"This leave may be prolonged indefinitely."

LICENSE TAG FOR DRINKERS OF RUM

INVENTOR OF LIQUOR CONTROL BOARD HOPES TO REDUCE DRINK HABIT

PEOPLE DEMAND CHANGE

LOCAL OPTION IN SCOTLAND THIS YEAR, MAY COME IN ENGLAND

London, April 23— Grant Ramsey, who invented the Liquor Control Board, which limits the hours when one can get a drink, has now invented another little spur for the drinker. Mr. Ramsey, who is president of the Institute of Hygiene, thinks that the nation would be more sober if every person held a license in the shape of a liquor card.

Briefly put, the idea is nt to license the saloon, but the individual. "Put the individual on his honor and build up character by imposing self-restraint rather than try to achieve success on the new lines of prohibition," is the note that the new idea strikes, and it has received the support of a very large number of prominent men who have made a study of the question.

Sir Robert Baden-Powell asserts that "it is eminently practical" Sir Robert Murray Leslie, the eminent physician, has written in terms of high appreciation of Mr. Ramsey's idea, and one well known British brewer, Mr. Lovibond, declared that it was "the most sound and practical suggestion which had been put forward."

Every adult member of the general public would have a sort of pass licensing him or her to obtain drink under the present conditions. He would carry it with him, and have to produce it when demanded, the license being endorsed or taken away in case of misconduct or drunkeness.

Proposed Form of License

The suggested license owuld be issued by the local authorities in a form somewhat similar to this:

LIQUOR LICENSE
Westminster City Council, Licensing Authority
Jan. 1. to Dec. 31, 1920.

Henry Brown of No. 1 London street is hereby licensed to obtain intoxicating liquor for a period of 12 months from Jan 1 to Dec. 1. 1920.

JOHN BROWN
Executive Officer

Time alone will show whether Mr. Ramsey will succeed in his campaign for the reformation of the drunk

ASK FOR WARSHIPS TO PROTECT CITIZENS

(By Canadian Press.)

Washington, April 23.—The American Government representatives in Mexico have asked for the dispatch of warships to that country to protect American citizens and their property.

These requests came from Mazatland and Topolobampo on the Pacific Coast. Officials investigating state that in times of disturbances it is not unusual to receive requests for warships when there is no need of them.

PAPER MAKING DATES BACK TO NEAR FOUR THOUSAND YEARS B.C.

Instructive Address by M.P.P. Westbye, This City, at Gathering of Local Engineers—Paper Industry in Canada Annual Output and Growth, Intelligently Defined

There was a splendid attendance at the meeting of the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute held in the Board of Trade rooms last night to hear an address on "Pulp and Paper" given by Mr. P. P. Westbye, general manager of the William Hamilton Foundry. The chair was occupied by City Engineer Parsons, president of the Peterborough branch. Mr. Westbye's lecture was illustrate dthroughout by a most interesting collection of slides showing the different processes in connection with the manufacture of paper. One of the most startling of the facts brought out by him was that at the present time only one per cent. of the paper in Canada was being reclaimed, whereas it was possible to reclaim practically 100 per cent. At the conclusion of his address a short film entitled "The Story of the Paper Industry" was shown and greatly assisted the lecturer.

Great interest in the industry was evinced by the engineers, and many and varied questions concerning it were put to the speaker during the short discussional period which followed his address.

The meeting closed with a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Westbye for his instructive address. The address in part follows:

An Old Industry.

The history of paper making carries us back about 6,000 years (3966 B.C.) the time of the ancient Egyptians. The use of a material which required no special fabrication may help to constitute the primitive form of an industry which has now come to rank among the foremost in the world, and the products of which not only represent a diversity of raw materials and finished fabrics, but also call for great engineering skill, the utilization of large capital and the employment of costly and intricate machinery for their development.

The contrast between the primitive papyrus paper obtained by the expenditure of comparatively little labor, and the highly finished product of today has resulted from a series of laborious processes and probably affords one of the most conspicuous examples of industrial development which the world can show.

The papyrus was widely employed between India and Egypt as a paper until about 190 B.C., when its use was displaced by parchment. Among the islands of the Pacific interesting forms of primitive paper may also be found, as illustrated in the Tapa cloth of the Sandwich Islands, which they use for the manufacture of clothing. The material employed is a very fibrous bark of the paper mulberry. The application of the fibres of wood to manufacture paper is commonly attributed to Reaumer, who in 1719 observed wasps constructing their nests of fibres fathered from wood, which they wove into paper. The most familiar paper making wasp is the common black and white wasp, ordinarily known as the hornet. We find the wasps' nest constructed upon the identical principles which underlie our modern production, but produced by the most primitive of all paper makers whose origin antedates that of even the ancient Egyptions, and it thus becomes evident that the use of wood pulp in the manufacture of paper is a fact of great antiquity, though but recently discovered and utilized by man.

No reliable record can be established in England as to the first paper making. It is stated that in the personal expenses of Henry VII. of England in 1498 there appears the following entry:

"For reward at the paper mill, 16 shillings."

John Tate, it is said, had a paper mill in Hartford, England, in 1498. The beginning of paper making in America dates back to 1690, when a paper mill was erected by Mr. Rittenhouser, in Delaware, Penn.

Canada's First Mill

Paper was first made in Canada at St. Andrew's, Quebec, in 1803. Canada's first large paper mill was built in 1866, and produced 1½ tons of paper in 24 hours. Today a modern paper mill produces from 250 to 300 tons in 24 hours. Prior to 1800 all paper was made of rags. Since that time wood pulp has formed the basis for all the ordinary grades of paper, including that which is used for printing paper.

Canada is the second largest pulp and paer producing country in the world and is rapidly overtaking the United States, which holds the first place so far. Canada's pre-eminence as a paper producing country lies in the possession of hundreds of thousands of acres of pulp wood forests and conveniently located water powers. Canada has the largest forest area of any country in the British Empire. It embraces 350,000 square miles of pulpwood timber, estimated to yield approximately 1,050,000,000 corsd of pulpwood. There are about 95 incorporated companies

FORMER PREMIER OF FRANCE GETS BUT THREE YEARS IMPRISONMENT

Convicted of Commerce and Correspondence With Enemy First Verdict of Sort Rendered in Any Allied Court Since War Began.

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, April 23.— A sentence of three years' imprisonment was imposed today upon former Premier Caillaux, convicted by the High Court yesterday, of commerce and correspondence with the enemy. The time during which he was under arrest will be deducted, however, leaving him but one month to serve Feature of Penalty.

One feature of this penalty inflicted upon Joseph Caillaux, former Premier of France, who was convicted yesterday of commerce and correspondence with the enemy will be loss of his right to vote and eligibility to hold office. This was decided by the Senate when it resumed session this morning to discuss the text of the verdict. It was agreed he should not lose other civic rights.

First Verdict of Kind.

This is the first verdict of the sort rendered in any of the allied countries since the war began "Commerce," as interpreted by the Senators who were judges, not meaning financial trading, but commerce by means of common ideas, while "correspondence" in this particular case is employed in the sense of association.

Attorneys Disconsolate

The former Premier's attorneys were disconsolate over the verdict, and rushed in an automobile to the Neuilly Sanitarium to inform M Caillaux of the verdict The defendant had remained in the sanitarium through the day's sitting Before they started away, however, M. Moutet said to the Associated Press. "M. Caillaux was convicted not for what he has done, but for what he might do were he allowed to go free.

Prior to this M Moutet had said, in expressing his conviction that the Senate would find extenuating circumstances and that the sentence would be light: "The length of the sentence does not matter. The fact that there is a sentence at all means the defeat of Liberty of thought."

SIR H. GREENWOOD IS POPULAR MAN

ASQUITH CANDIDATE LOOKS LIKE THIRD IN ELECTION RACE

NEW SECRETARY FOR IRELAND

EXPECTED TO WIN IN HIS CAMPAIGN FOR RE-ELECTION IN SUNDERLAND

London, April 23.—Politicians who have visited Sunderland during the present election agree that Sir Hamar Greenwood, seeking re-election there on accepting the office of Irish Secretary, will probably retain the seat without difficulty. Independent Liberals admit his personal popularity and acknowle dge the support given to him by sections of every political party, including the local Irish.

Dr. Rutherford, the Laborite, will probably come next, with the Liberal candidate a poor third. Dr. Rutherford declares that Sir Hamar, is not telling the electors his Irish policy, is asking for a blank cheque, which King Carson will fill in the Prussianism and frightfulness.

Sir Hamar replies that his policy is in the Home Rule bill and that the only communication he has had from Sir Edward Carson since his appointment was when he wished him God-speed in his most difficult task. Sir Hamar added that in his opinion nobody would be more glad than Sir Edward to see his native country's difficulties settled.

TURKISH GRAND VIZIER ARRESTED

GENERAL ALIRZA PASHA AND OTHER PROMINENT TURKS INTOILS

ENTENTE OFFICIALS PROMPT

MASSACRES OF ARMENIANS IN CILICIA INCREASING— CONTINUOUS FIGHTING

(By Canadian Press.)

Constantinople, April 23.—Izzet Pasha, former Turkish Grand Vizier, was placed under arrest by Entente authorities here Wednesday. General Alirza Pasha and several other prominent Turks were also apprehended. Damad Ferid Pasha, Grand Vizier, has taken charge of the War Office because disaffection there has embarrassed the Government in sending assistance to Anzavour Pasha, chief of the Sultan's forces in Asia Minor. He discharged a number of officials who were charged with being responsible for trouble. Twelve hundred adherents of Mustapha Kemal are reported to have been arrested and many are being jailed daily.

Massacres Increasing.

Massacres of the Armenians are increasing in Cilicia. Continual fighting is raging over a wide area. The Turkish Nationalists are incensed at the employment of the Armenian Legion by the French, and make this a pretext for slaughter in the occupied villages.

MURDERED HIS WIFE, WAS HANGED TODAY

(By Canadian Press.)

Prince Albert, Sask., April 23.—John Wilson, condemned to death for the murder of his wife, Mary Wilson, was hanged this morning at Prince Albert jail.

Wilson was formerly a member of the Royal North-West Mounted Police. He took his wife driving in a motor car near Waldheim, Sask., and shot her through the head. He buried the body under a culvert, and then went on to Blain Lake, where next day he married Miss Jessie Patterson.

It seems probable that M Caillaux will be condemned to pay the costs of the trial, amounting to more than 800,000 francs.

Pay 55,000 Francs.

Paris, April 23.—The former premier was sentenced, also to pay the costs of the trial. The costs Caillaux was ordered to pay, however, was limited to court costs, which total about 55,000 francs.

The imposition of prison sentence will keep him in jail during [illegible] Labor demonstrations.

HOME MARKET DEVELOPMENT.

WAR REVELATIONS of the dangers of national economic dependence have stimulated home market development all over the world. Hardly a day passes without some report of government assistance to industry or agriculture. The Japanese Government is endeavoring to decrease the dependence of that country upon foreign sources for sugar. To this end, it has offered rewards to the farmers of Manchuria for large crops of sugar beets in lieu of the customary products. It is also endeavoring to develop a breed of sheep suitable to the climate of the country, and in this way to encourage not only the domestic supply of wool and mutton, but to stimulate the development of the leather-tanning industry.

A syndicate of textile manufacturers of Czecho-Slovakia, co-operating with its government, has arranged with a company in the United States for delivery of 300,000 bales of cotton for a period of eighteen months. An expenditure of $50,000,000 is involved.

The United States Commissioner at Melbourne, Australia, reports that the reason that jams and jellies can be more cheaply manufactured in Australia than on this continent is not, as erroneously rumored, because of a secret process, but because the Australian government is furnishing sugar to the manufacturers below cost.

The Danish Government has prohibited the importation of sugar and certain articles containing sugar, except under license.

KEATS AND SHAKESPEARE.

A WRITER in the Westminster Gazette, in dealing with the suggestion by a leading literary journal that there is an analogy between the lives of Keats and Shakespeare, points out the following respects in which they differ. It is true that both poets were the offspring of lower middle class parents, but Keats was born in London in 1795, whereas Shakespeare spent the first twenty-two years of his life (1564-86) in the remote provincial town of Stratford-on-Avon. So far as we know the latter had no literary friends or acquaintances during those twenty-two years; but Keats, as his intimate companions, had Cowden Clarke, Leigh Hunt, Reynolds (a poet of considerable merit), Hazlitt, Haydon, Godwin, and Basil Montagu; while Archdeacon aBiley and the artist Joseph Severn became his devoted friends. He was only twenty-five years of age when he died.

There is no knowledge of law in Keats' poetry; nor any acquaintance with the manners and customs of Court life. There is no indication that he had associated with noblemen, or been intimate with royalty. And he apparently had no knowledge of the untranslated works of Plautus, Plato, Celsus, Lucian, Erasmus, Aristotle, Giordano Bruno, Seneca, Cinthio, Belleforest, Pliny, and Du Bartas, with which the writer of the plays was familiar. Keats got his inspiration chiefly from Spenser's "Faery Queene" and Chapman's Homer, but he also studied Lempriere's Dictionary and Tooke's "Pantheon."

As regards Shakespeare, his contemporaries tell us that he had "no learning"; and his biographer, Halliwell-Phillips, observes that "it is difficult to believe that when he first left Stratford he was not all but destitute of polished accomplishments." He was then about two-and-twenty, and "Love's Labor Lost" was written three years later.

THE WORLD'S WHEAT MARKET.

AMERICA'S agricultural trade commissioner at London forecasts a world-wide shortage in wheat this year and he does not think Canada will contribute as heavily to foreign demands as in former years. The Sun and New York Herald is not quite so positive on this question as is the commissioner, and replies the shortage may be world-wide and it may not. That depends to a large extent on what American farmers do with their spring crop.

England already has bought up 83,000,000 bushels of Australia's wheat, and as the crop there is indifferent there may not be much more of it available for the European market. Argentina's surplus of 200,000,000 bushels also has been arranged for in Europe on a credit basis satisfactory to the European buyer as well as to the South American seller.

But in the United States, declares this journal, there is more wheat left over from the old crops than can be sold at home or abroad, than can be shipped by rail or by water, than can be taken care of in the flour mills or in the grain elevators. When new wheat, winter crop and spring crop, begins to come in there will be left on our hands from the 1919 yield a carryover of not less than 150,000,000 bushels. Because of recent railroad strikes and other causes preventing transportation and distribution the wheat carryover may run even higher than 150,000,000 bushels. This surplus stock merely of the old crops of 1919 is something of a supply, on top of the exports of Canada, Argentina and Australia, to feed Europe if Europe wants to buy it and pay for it. But there is more yet to come.

The U.S. winter crop of this season is estimated at a trifle under half a billion bushels. If farmers raise 200,000,000 bushels for the spring crop there will be from both crops—700,000,000 bushels altogether—100,000,000 more bushels than Americans can use, since their own consumption, both in bread and in seed, is about 600,000,000 bushels. If the farmers raise from both crops put together 750,000,000 bushels, as against about 900,000,000 last year, the U.S. shall have from the harvests of this season 150,000,000 more than they can use.

The carryover from 1919 and our surplus of 1920 taken together indicate as the American quantity available for export to a reasonable certainty something in the neighborhood of a round quarter of a billion of bushels. Does Europe, after contracting for the Canadian, Australian and Argentine surplus, look like a buyer of anything like as much American wheat as all that? Maybe it does to the American Agricultural Trade Commissioner at London. But not to the American farmer; else would he have been breaking his neck to plant and raise all the spring wheat he could. But he hasn't been. One reason is Mr. Herbert Hoover's warnings to him of unmarketable breadstuffs. Another is the similar warnings of Mr. Julius Barnes, Hoover's successor at the head of the Grain Administration.

But with the American farmers playing the Hoover-Barnes tips rather than the London Commissioner's, they appear to be assuring to the people an abundance of bread and also to themselves a good stiff price for their new wheat.

EGYPT'S WEALTH AND POVERTY.

THE NOTE OF Sir Paul Harvey, financial adviser to the Egyptian Government, on the Egyptian budget for the coming year sheds light upon one of the main factors in the Egyptian situation. Here we have a land bursting with wealth, but with extremes of poverty, and with the government hard pressed to find the means of carrying on. Amid all the ordinary signs of prosperity we have a population not only poor, but in danger of being starved, owing to the fact that more and more of the available land is devoted to cotton and less to food. The government is prevented from tapping the bulk of the wealth by the Capitulations which protect the foreigner from taxation, and therefore prevent the native from being taxed according to his capacity. "The practically complete exemption of foreign subjects and foreign companies from taxation of the wealth which they derive from Egypt is a serious blot on the existing system," says Sir Paul Harvey. It is more; it is a grave danger to order. Whatever may be the future arrangements for Egypt, this shackled financial situation, which allows the great wealth to escape its proper contribution, while large numbers of the population are in acute distress, cannot be allowed to continue.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

HIS RETURNING SANITY.

(Border Cities Star.)

Hon. Arthur Henderson strikes a true British note when in the name of the British Labor party he tells the European internationalists that the British party "has no belief in proletarian dictatorship as a principle of action, nor is there any desire to incorporate it in the British vocabulary as the synonym for democracy."

SOME SENSE.

(The New Democracy.)

International free trade is a beautiful ideal. The rouble is that the world doesn't want it. Under those circumstances Canada must play the game at it's played. Let the slogan be: "Reasonable protection for Canadian industry."

THE OVERALL FAD.

(Chicago News.)

Overalls are made to work in, not to play in. Let the consumer put his overalls to their logical use and work at productive labor in them and he will quickly insure himself abundance as well as annihilate the profiteers. If he merely parades in them, shouting ferocious war cries and neglecting to produce anything worth while, his revolution will not get very far.

THE AVERAGE FOOL AND HIS MONEY.

(Florida Times-Union.)

A prominent business man was heard to say that if a shoe dealer selected two pairs of shoes from stock and placed them on two separate tables and marked one pair $6 and the other pair $10, though both cost the same, many of his customers would select the $10 pair. They would do this for two reasons—because they wanted to tell their friends how much they paid for their shoes, and because they really know so little about shoe values that they would think they were getting the best pair of shoes, when in reality they were exactly alike.

WHERE THE SHOE PINCHES

(New York Times.)

This "outlaw" strike, this program of anarchs, must set the labor unions seriously to consider the deadly danger which the radical and destructive element among them is inviting. Either they must control and repress that element or they will be smashed hopelessly and relentlessly. The majority of the American people have been kind to them, sometimes through sacrifice of the general interest, but the majority of the American people won't stand the strike for destruction's sake, the building up of a proletariat autocracy. This outlaw strike is a good subject for official investigation.

WORK OR BE SHOT.

(San Francisco Chronicle.)

Credit must be given Trotsky as an organizer. He is now applying to industry the same stern methods by which he whipped his armies into shape. With the aid of a new executive department of the Soviet, the Chief Committee for General Compulsory Labor, he is conscripting the male population, organizing it on military lines into a labor army, and actually making the lazy Russians work at high speed for twelve hours a day. The discipline is said to be exactly the same as in his army; in other words, the firing squad is the magneto of his labor engine. What a joke it all is on the proletariat, that thought it was going to work how, when and as little as it pleased.

PAYING DOUBLE FOR STRIKE.

(New York World.)

The Bureau of Railroad Economics at Washington figures out that the strike is costing the roads $3,000,000 a day. This is the direct cost in loss and delay of traffic and damage to goods held up. But speaking of it as a cost to the roads we are using terms now out of date. By the Cummins-Esch Act the roads are entitled to such rates as will net 5¼ per cent. on their property valuation. Thus a railroad strike can no longer count as a strike against the loss to the roads. It must count solely as a strike against and loss to the public. It is a loss which must be made up by the people at large, including the strikers and their families. It will be taxed back to them in higher carriage rates on commodities which will be reflected in higher prices to consumers.

TWO HOMELESS MEN.

(Hamilton Herald.)

"To reorganize the Conservative party and to put it in fighting trim." That is the announced object of the Hon. Bob Rogers in calling a nation-wide conference of Conservatives for May 10. What he really means is the expulsion of the Liberal Unionists from the Unionist party. It is the disruption of that party which the Hon. Bob is after. No doubt he will be assisted in his efforts by Sir Sam Hughes. Both of these politicians were dropped from the Borden Government, and at present they have no political home. Naturally they wish to construct a shelter for themselves. But would it not be very bad economy to break up the Unionist party to provide a shelter for a couple of disgruntled Conservative politicians who cannot feel at home in that party?

PAPER MAKING DATES

and other concerns engaged in the manufacture of pulp and paper. The combined capital invested is approximately $200,000,000. This is a greater amount of capital than is invested in any other industry in the country with the exception of Hydro Electric power developments.

Our Annual Output.

The annual output of the Canadian pulp and paper industry is about $90,000,000. The industry employs about 26,000 people. Its annual payroll is about $16,000,000.

In 1890 Canada's export of pulp and paper products amounted to about $120,000. In 1910 they were worth $10,000,000. For the fiscal year ending with March, 1918, they raised a total of about $72,000,000. Canada exported last year to the value of aout $96,000,000; about $26,000,000 worth of pulp and about $8,500,000 unmanufactured pulpwood. Canada's pulp and paper exports lead all the manufacturing industries with the exception of explosives, while the bulk of Canada's pulp and paper exports go to the United States; they also send to Japan, Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, India, Cuba, Mexico and South America.

What Canada Produces.

Canada produces for sale 2,800 tons of news print paper and 2,500 tons of pulps of all kinds every day. The United States has about 2,550 daily and Sunday newspapers and 14,000 weeklies, with an approximate total circulation of 72,000,000 copies. With one-fifth of the world's population, the United States consumes one-half of the world's production of paper. Canada, in proportion of the population, is a close rival to the United States as a paper consuming country. The United States newspapers consume 2,000,000 tons of news print every year, of which Canada supplies one-fourth. Since 1912 all news paper has been admitted to the United States free of duty. Canada has 140 daily and 925 weekly newspapers. It takes the product of 20,000 acres of pulpwood forest every year to supply Canadian newspapers with white paper. Some of the largest Canadian and American newspapers consume from 50 to 100 tons of paper daily. The daily consumption of newsprint paper in Canada is approximately 160 tons; in the United States approximately 6,000 tons. Canada's daily output of paper made in a continuous strip three feet wide would be long enough to girdle the globe at the equator.

Spruce, balsam, fir, hemlock, jack pine, tamarack, poplar and basswood are used in the manufacture of pulp. It takes from one to one and a half cords of wood to make a ton of paper. Spruce trees best suited to the production of pulp require from 90 to 140 years to arrive at maturity. The average labor cost of producing a ton of paper has increased about 100 per cent. since 1912.

Tremendous Development.

When one looks back at the beginning of this industry and we see the tremendous development of the skill and study and hard work that has put the pulp and paper industry where it is today, one fully appreciates that full of dignity, significance and truth is the whole conception which finds expression in Tennyson's verse: that we are hires of the age the inheritors of all that has gone before us, and it has ben truly said that the past has made us, the results of the past are ourselves.

THIS WOMAN FOUND HEALTH

And Escaped an Operation by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Haselhurst, Ga.—"I have used your remedies for only ten months, and they saved me from an operation. Before I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was so ill from a female trouble that I was forced to stay in bed for a week at a time with weakness and pain, but your medicine has done so much for me that I am recommending it to all suffering women. It certainly is a great medicine and is a sure road to health for women. You may publish this letter if you like." Mrs. W. C. LITTLE, R.F.D. A, Haselhurst, Ga.

Women who suffer from headaches, nervousness, backache, the blues and other symptoms of a functional derangement should give this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a trial.

For forty years it has been overcoming such ailments of women after other medicines have failed.

If you want special suggestions in regard to your condition, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of long experience is at your service, and your letter will be held in strict confidence.

Y.W.C.A. AND Y.M.C.A. ATHLETES MAKE THEIR MARK IN JOINT EXCERCISES

Large and Delighted Crowd of Spectators Carried Away With Exhibitions of Unique and Arresting Young Peoples' Activities—An Entertainment of Illuminating Effect.

A notable event in athletic circles in this city was the Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. closing exhibition, which took place in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. The large crowd present were made to sit up and take notice of the fact that there is some life in such organizations as these, some of whom came away with a clearer conception of just what the spirit of the organizations stand for.

Pleasantly awoke throughout the entire program and at times keenly alert, there was no such thing as somnambulance in last night's audience, thanks to the splendid efforts of the young entertainers.

The opening number was a processional march by massed classes followed by a dumbell exercise by the Saturday juniors. Marked ability was displayed in this number in the easy grace with which the pupils handeled the bells and the perfect control of the muscles.

Next on the program was an exhibition of games by the Y.M.C.A. beginners. Keen competition and over-flowing energy on the part of the boys, shared to some extent by the spectators, spoke volumes for the future achievements of these young athletes. A wand exercise by the Thursday juniors was folowed by a single club exercise by the Athena and beginners' class.

The splendid deportment of the young girls in this number, and the clean finish with which they went through the different motions, always keeping perfect time to the music, was such as to class this number among the best on the program.

Something of a novelty was the dance of the witches by the Saturday juniors, a humorous performance of special merit, followed by nursery rhymes by the little tots class. Each little girl was dressed in a colored gingham frock with pink sunbonnet, and they looked very sweet.

"Long Horse," by the Y. M. C. A. seniors, was one of the features of the evening. The splendid agility on the part of the young men taking part, was an "eye-opener" to the crowd, and enough to shatter the belief that this generation is behind their forefathers in physical efficiency. "Sweedish Exercises," by the seniors beginners and Athena classes, was another performance in which the participants gave evidence of superior training, then the junior school girls were seen in a character dance, "Little Miss Muffet," a

DOMINION TIRES

Royal Cord

Construction

TENS OF THOUSANDS of slender cords in many compact layers, each cord and each layer laid parallel one to another, and each embedded in pure rubber so they cannot touch — each separate cord and layer bringing its individual strength to the tremendous sum total of power and resistance — so is built the tire structure of the Dominion Royal Cord Tire. The key principle is the slender cord and the many layers or plies; thus the enormous strength to the structure and the heavier side walls make practical immunity from blow-out, puncture and the bruise.

Why "Royal Cord"?

BECAUSE—"Royal Cords" make possible Lower Gas Consumption, more miles per gallon than the same car can get on fabric tires. This saving alone pays the difference in cost, within the life of an ordinary set of tires.

BECAUSE—"Royal Cords" afford More Mileage than is possible from fabric tires. The carcass of the "Royal Cord," as well as the tread, absorbs the road shocks, and the carcass, in absorbing these road shocks, relieves the tread of a portion of its strain, giving longer life to the tread than is possible in fabric tires.

BECAUSE—"Royal Cords" are Non-Skid, and are so designed to be equally desirable for all four wheels, and their construction reduces side-slipping without impairing the ease in steering.

BECAUSE—"Royal Cords" eliminate Interior Friction. There's no chance for friction in them.

In "Royal Cords," each individual cord is coated with rubber, which prevents the parallel cords from rubbing each other.

And a layer of live, stretchable rubber separates each of the transverse layers of cords, preventing any friction there. No internal friction means Longer Life to the Tire.

BECAUSE—Lower Air Pressure is possible, and this means more comfort and easier riding.

Dominion Tires, Inner Tubes and Accessories are distributed through Dominion Rubber System Branches and sold by the Best Dealers throughout Canada.

Dominion Tire Accessories

include everything you need to close a hole, plug up a bruise, or heal a cut in your tire. These helps will make your tires last longer. Carry a supply in your car.

Dominion Inner Tubes

fit all Dominion Tires and ensure perfectly balanced tires. To add comfort to your car and mileage to your tires, always insist on having Dominion Inner Tubes.

TREATMENT FOR SMUT IN GRAIN

There is a new, rapid, and convenient method of preventing oat smut which has been recently tried and recommended by several experiment stations in the United States and Canada. It has many advantages over old methods, chief among which are greater simplicity, rapidity and ease of application, which should lead to its being widely used.

Laboratory exveriments conducted b ythe Department of Agriculture showed that the vitality of oats treated by this method was not injured in any way.

Method of Treatment.

A solution consisting of one part of formaldehyde and one part of water is used as a spray. As the seed is being shovelled from one pile to another each shovel full is sprayed with the solution. It is used at the rate of one quart to 50 bus. of seed. A small quart jar sprayer is a convenient one to use for the purpose. After the oats are all treated in this way they are piled in a heap and covered with blankets, canvas or sacks to confine the vapor. At the end of 5 hours the seed may be uncovered end sown. As formaldehyde vapor acts as an irritant to the mucous membrane of the eyes, nose and throat, the sprayer should be held down close to the pile, and a circulation should be provided.

CITY ENGINEER WILL RISK PROSECUTION

DELAY IN DEFINITE ACTION RE SEWAGE SITE EMBARRASSES HIM

In regard to the Allan Wilson site of 35 acres for a sewage disposal activated sludge plant, Mr. Wilson's offer to meet Council on this question was accepted last night. Wilson is asking $19,000 for this land, which the city considers too high, and an order for expropriation proceedings has been issued by the Railways and Municipal Board. Mr. Wilson apparently wants to reach an agreement with the city for the transfer of this land without recourse to arbitration proceedings to fix the price.

City Engineer Parsons complained to council that delay in proceedings is handicapping him in finishing his plans for the disposal plant. He is under order to furnish to the Railways and Municipal Board by Friday next these plans in their completed state by Friday next. And he must have access to the land as conditions there must be taken into account before he can embody in his plans certain details. Such access is denied him by Wilson, who is really within his rights, as Council has not yet set the law in motion to expropriate the property. Unless some definite action is taken at once he'll not be able to complete the plans in time to award trouble by failing to respond to orders laid on him by the Railways and Municipal Board.

City engineer: "What shall I do? I have only six days left."

Ald. Gordon: "We'll protect you for indictment by the Board for contempt of court."

City engineer: "Well, I'm going on the land so that I can get along with my plans."

Ald. Gordon: "They can prosecute you for trespassing if you do."

City engineer: "I'm not afraid of that; its no disgrace to be prosecuted under the circumstances. The responsibility lies with the city."

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Crowe the city solicitor was instructed to prepare at once a bylaw authorizing the execution of expropriation proceedings.

When this bylaw is passed, confirming Council's intention to expropriate under the authority invested in the city by the Board of Railways and Municipalities of Ontario, the engineer will have legal access to the Wilson property.

Define the Reserve.

On motion of Ald. Turner and Whitehouse, the city engineer was authorised to employ a surveyor to define the reserve along the river from Lock to Park streets. This is in connection with the sewage disposal plant.

Joint Specifications.

The Board of Works was authorised to employ an rchitect to make joint specifications for a pump house and a compressing house in connection with the sewage disposal plant.

The British Rugby Football League of Toronto will open its season next Saturday.

LICENSE TAG FOR

traffic, but the British public is not by any means satisfied either with the present methods of vending liquor or with the methods hitherto used by the reformers

The greater number of the saloons in the country have each a small bar before which the customer stands to consume his drink. Few if any seats are provided except in those houses that possess a private or saloon bar, where a corresponding higher price is charged for more or less indifferent accommodation.

Previous to the war these bars were open as a rule from 5 a.m., to 12:30 a.m. But the coming into power of the Liquor Control Board coincided with the limitation of hours from 12.30 pm. to 2:30 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. These hours have since been lengthened by thirty minutes, afternoon and evening

The maintenace of this out-of-date system o drinking bars is largely due to the efforts of the total abstinence organizations, which have zealously fought every attempt on the part of the liquor vendor to improve either the seating accommodation of his saloon or to extend the premises for the purpose of adding a restaurant, or even to add a small space for the purpose of a garden.

Works for Prohibition, Too.

In addition, the temperance party has been strenuous in its advocation of prohibition. Its members were not content to try to obtain some modification or small reforms that the public would have assisted them to obtain, but became so insistent that their sixty years' work has largely been wasted

With campaigns in operation for prohibition, State purchase and local option, the British public is beginning to get rather tired of the subject of liquor control, and the first feeling of amusement is giving way to a sense of annoyance. Scotland tries local option this year, and on the result will depend largely how much chance the local optionists have of bringing it about in England and Wales.

At present the Labor party's demand for State control appears to have the larger following, but the real backing for this plan is likely to be much smaller than appears. The prohibitionist campaign is largely a case of talking to the converted, for after the publicity caused by the students' attack on Mr. Johnson, the American dubbed "Pussyfoot," the public appeared to lose interest.

IN MR. MOORE'S DEATH

Two brothers survive him. Mr. F. D. Moore, of Lindsay, barrister and county police magistrate, county of Victoria; Mr. J. KK. Moore, of Smith living on the old homestead farm, now in the hands of the second generation.

Of the immediate relatives that survive there is Capt. Cyril Moore, of manager Union Bank, Claresholm, Alta., Mrs. Foster Ambery, Toronto, Mrs. W. L. Allen, Cobourg, Mrs. Guy Whitaker, city. All of these were with the father before he passed away, with ahe exception of Capt. Moore, he being at considerable distance.

The deceased gentleman married Miss Emma Sawers, daughter of A. Sawers, a prominent man in the early history of the town.

The funeral is announced for Monday next, 26th. inst., and at two p.m., from the residence, 310 London st

MARRIAGE LICENSE CHANGE

Following up his notice of motion at a previous meeting, Ald. Crowe last night moved in Council that this city petition the Legislature to pass the marriage licenses bill now before that body, and which has passed its committee stage. This bill is to provide that licenses be issued in the offices of municipal clerks, and not by merchants and others as now. Dr. Stevenson, of London, whose hands the bill is, had told Ald. Crowe that its endorsation by the City Council would strength his hands.

The motion carried.

TEAM OVER CONFIDENT

Judging by the smallness of the turnout at the Caledonian practice last night the team are evidently suffering from an attack of over confidence. It remains to be seen whether or not this confidence is justified. In the meantime the Veterans, fully aware of what they are up against, are entering the field full of determination, and it is quite possible that when the game is over tomorrow the Caledonians will decide that even they can do with a little practice.

The Master Printers' and Bookbinders' Association, Toronto, offered the job printers in their employ a 10 per cent bonus over their present wages.

LOVERS OF SPORT SHOULD BE THERE

FOOTBALL MATCH TOMORROW PROMISES TO BE CONTEST WORTH WHILE

All lovers of real sport had better take this hint and be on hand at the exhibition grounds tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock when the Caledonian football team will play the Great War Veterans. The competition bids fair to be keen, and there are doubts as to which team will walk off with the laurels, though it is generally understood that the Caledonians will fleece the Vets. However, be on hand tomorrow afternoon and see. Mr. G. N. Gordon has kindly consented to dignify the occasion by kicking off the first ball so introducing a little ceremony.

The Caledonian line-up is:

Goal—Ralph Brunton.

Backs—R. Willshaw and J. Willshaw.

Half-backs—A. Hardy, McMillan and B. Frost.

Forwards — R. McDonald, B. Hardy, J. Shaw, A. Shaw and B, Hanna.

The War Veterans' line-up appeared in The Review last night.

(A woman with a past) will address the single, married and divorced ladies, those in love and those contemplating marriage, on the subject of

During her address she will endeavor to make clear the question: Whether or not it is best to tell of your past life before marriage.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE AT GRAND

A STRONG PLEA TO THE DEPRESSED AND INNOCENT

"Should a girl tell her prospective husband her past life? is a very strong point unravelled in that mysterious dramatic offering, "The Revelations of a Wife," that will be offered for public aproval for two days, starting Tuesday, April 27, at the Grand Opera House. The play makes a strong plea for the depressed and innocent and still it is filled with mysteries until the final drop of the curtain. In writing the play the author probably had in mind that the public is clamoring for something new theatrically and the tremendous success in New York of plays of the mysterious order like "The Unknown Purple," "Three Faces East," "The Invisible Foe," "The Woman in Room Thirteen," "The Crimson Alibi Nine-Forty Five," etc., no doubt prompted him to write along this line. The story it tells is of special interest to women for real life depicted in an intensely dramatic series of episodes. "The Revelations of a Wife" should meet with approval from all classes of theatre-going, amusement-seeking public. To further describe the play would probably take away some of the mysterious atmosphere that surrounds it and spoil a real evening of mystery. Daily matinees for ladies only will be played during the engagement at which a lecture will be given on marriage and divorce. The night performances are for everybody over sixteen years of age

LOVE IS BLIND

See Revelations of a Wife at Grand Next Week

"Love is blind," but none so blind as those who will not see." So, if you are in love, if you are married, if you are divorced, if you are going to get married, if you never intend to marry, see "The Revelations of a Wife," that myterious play that opens at the Grand Opera House for an engagement of two days, Tuesday April 29, starting wtih matinees daily. To describe the mysterious part of this offering would probably take away part of your evening entertainment, therefore we will leave something for you to look forward to. Suffice to say that an exceptionally strong cast and a beautiful production will be offered for your approval. Today the tired public seems to want plays of the mysterious order, for plays of this kind, like "The Unknown Purple," "Three Faces East," "The Invisible Foe," "The Woman in Room Thirteen," "The Crimson Alibi at Nine Forty-Five" etc., are tremendous successes on Broadway.

THE ONE GREAT MUSICAL SUCCESS

FI-FI OF THE TOY SHOP

AUSPICES BELMONT CLUB

GRAND THEATRE, APRIL 29-30

ALL YOUR FRIENDS WILL BE THERE

SCENE FROM "THE REVELATIONS OF A WIFE," GRAND, TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY APRIL 27, 28.

FOR FUN AND FROLIC FI-FI OF THE TOY SHOP

The gay musical fantasy which is to be given at the Grand Theatre on the evenings of April 29 and 30, seems most auspiciously progressing. Never did rehearsals seem less arduous or more enjoyable. Mr Allen has great executive ability and also the wonderful art of making drudgery agreeable. The rehearsals which have been held in the club parlors will be transferred to a real stage next week and fractional parts woven together as a whole.

Although "Fi-Fi" has been staged in many of the principal cities elsewhere, this is the first time the production will be seen in Peterborough. Two hundred stars and singers of the city will participate. The rehearsals for the entire affair are being directed by Mr. Allen.

"Fi-Fi" tells a brilliant story of the adventures of a Parisian doll (Fi-Fi) who becomes endowed with life by means of a magic smelling salts and escapes from her box in the toy shop. She proves a dreadful flirt, breaking hearts galore, and with the remainder of the toys who go in search, meet with many wonderful adventures during the course of the night. Special scenery and costumes supplied on a lavish scale will make the production one of the most brilliant ever seen in the city. Unlike most spectacular affairs, "Fi-Fi" possess a consistent plot and an interesting and complete story is told. The story is portrayed in the woods, in the Toy Shop, in the Milky Way and in a garden in Fairy Land.

One of the most attractive groups in Fi-Fi will be the bridesmaids and the dance of the paper dolls, and are ones that will appeal to many.

One of the most beautiful choruses very gracefully given and full of spirit is the Dance of the Winds.

Y.W.C.A. AND Y.M.C.A.

really beautiful interpretation of the music. Following this the senior school girls, beginners and Athena classes were seen to excellent advantage in a folk dance, "Sweedish Schottische."

Next came a club swinging exercise by the senior school girls and seniors, in which the girls did credit to themselves and their instructress.

A unique and humorous feature was the dance of the clowns by the junior school girls. Dressed in spotted and fantastic outfits, the clever acting of the girls in this number added much to the mirth of the evening.

"Marching," by the Y.M.C.A. juniors, was a feature that attracted much interest and comment on the part of the audience. This straight soldierly attitude assumed by the little fellows was something to note. Gowned in costumes of pale pink and carrying flowered baskets containing dainty pink bonnets the senior school girls were seen in a delightful character dance, "French Baby."

"In Time of Roses" was a beautiful dancing number by the advanced class, in which each girl, exquisitely gowned in pink and carrying a beflowered hoop, gave a most graceful interpretation of the musical selection.

Another classic dance, "Aubade Printaniere," by the special classes, delighted the spectators with a picture of ethereal grace and lithesomeness. The young girls in this dance were beautifully gowned in red costumes.

Undoubtedly the crowning achievement of the program and one that will be remembered long by the tense onlookers was the performance on the rings by the Y.M.C.A. seniors. The superior athletic ability of these young men, the suppleness and perfect physical efficiency was something to be admired and envied. Throughout the length of their acrobatic performance the crowd kept in a breathless state; and the silence was only broken by ringing applause. Beautiful bouquets were presented to those in charge.

The accompanists of the evening were Miss Edna Stewart and Miss Isabel Baird while the program was under the efficient direction of Miss Edith Pryce and Mr. D. A. Loomis.

SALVATION ARMY COMING JUBILEE

LIEUT.-GOVERNOR CLARKE SPEAKS VERY HIGHLY OF WORK

Toronto, April 23.—An organization meeting for the Jubilee Self-Denial Campaign of the Salvation Army was held at Government House, when Lieutenant-Governor Clarke spoke highly of the work of the Army, as did Controller Ramsden, representing the Mayor, and Sir James Wood. Sir Edmund Osler, in sending regrets at inability to attend, forwarded a cheque for $5,000.

Commissioner Richards said the Army was making no appeal on the side of evangelistic work, but for money to carry on work not done by other organizations, and to open up new work in the new countries of Europe where the need is so great and which are already opening doors and asking for help. And not only for money will this appeal be made, but for young men and women to personal service.

The Army is operating in 66 countries, in 42 languages. In Canada the Army operates 12 hospitals, 16 homes and 32 other institutions. In Java, 32,000 lepers are under Army control and in India, silk weaving has been established among criminal tribes.

The meeting pledged co-operation in the movement for the city of Toronto to raise a quota in keeping with the records of the city in other campaigns and in proportion to the other parts of the Dominion.

OLD ORIGINALS AND ST. JULIEN'S DAY

FITTING CELEBRATION OF GLORIOUS TENACITY OF CANADIAN SOLDIERS

Yesterday, St. Julian's Day, was most fittingly commemorated by the old originals, who gathered in reunion at the Empress Hotel, exactly five years after that memorable occasion when the second battalion along with the other battalion of the First Division stood fiercely at bay against hores of on-coming Germans, and the first gas attack in the history of the world. At a time when the news at headquarters that the Canadians were still holding the line seemed so incredible that it was scarcely believed. A little party of the original members of the 2nd Battalion feasted at the Empress Hotel, and formed the neuclus of a Second Battalion Social Club for Peterborough, which will admit to its numbers any ex-soldier who has at any time served in the battalion. Last night, however, it was thought that for such an occasion it should be strictly originals and the invitations were therefore extended only to those who took part in the fighting of April 22 to 29, 1915.

At the head of the tables was seated Colonel Mills, the original commanding officer of the Second Battalion, and several of the original fellows were seated with him. It was indeed a joyful gathering, proud and thankful feasting to their glorious victory of five years ago. The banquet was more or less informal, the only toasts being that to the King and to "our fallen comrades." In connection with these toasts appropriate speeches were made by Col. Mills and other speakers, but generally speaking, it was more an occasion for feasting than for speechmaking, and there was no serious attempt in this line. During the dinner music was supplied by the Hartshorn brothers in excellent style and afterwards several of those present obliged with solos.

In view of the fact that they were the nearest surviving relative of a member of the battalion who fell in the April, 1915, fighting, the following were present as invited guests: Messrs. W. Ackerman, Carpenter, Curtis, White and Hartshorn.

The original members of the battalion present last night were: Col. Mills, Captain Winterbottom and Messrs. Brooks, Garrett, Griffin, [illegible], Green, Underwood, Pellow, [illegible], Nicholls, Allen, Cole, White, Richardson, Simmonds, Moffat and Woods.

BLAMED FOR ACCIDENT.

Fined Five Dollars and Costs in the Police Court This Morning.

It was a question as to who was to blame for an automobile collision on Charlotte street near the Grand Trunk station on Wednesday evening, which was decided at the police court this morning. The police were of the opinion that W. J. Clancey was to blame, and he was consequently charged with driving recklessly, negligently and in a manner dangerous to the public.

By means of a diagram illustrating the accident, Magistrate Dumble was convinced that the police had the correct version of the affair and fined the offender $5 and costs.

DANCE WELL PATRONIZED

The installation of four sixteen-inch fans in the Veterans' Hall for the weekly dances proved to be a great improvement last night. There was the usual large attendance last night in spite of the inclement weather and the counter attractions of the evening, which were many.

The dances are becoming more and more popular every week and there is no doubt that they will be well patronized as long as the Veterans care to run them. Undoubtedly the saxaphone has a wonderful effect on the strength of the orchestra and the introduction of singing in waltzes by the saxaphone player, Harold Snelgrove, was also popular.

PAINTINGS BY PETERBORO TALENT

Miss Maimie Langley McCarthy Earns Reputation For Skill in Art Creations.

Its true, that artists, like poets, are born not made, but if we can't all be real artists we can do the next best thing and cultivate an intelligent appreciation of art, under any form. Perhaps the most keen enjoyment next to that arising from the ability to create, rests in a sympathetic understanding of the soul of art. There is no happiness like that which comes from an intimate communion with the beautiful—no balm so sweet for the tired nerves as that to be found in the harmony of artistic expression. This, provided that you bring with you a receptive soul—an intelligence that is willing to put forth an effort to grasp the message of the picture. The one message that is meant for you.

This ability of appreciation is not attained in an hour or a day but is the result of an earnest study and a certain frankness. If a painting or a piece of music doesn't appeal to your personality say so. Be frank with the goddess of art and soon she will swing ajar the golden gate and give you bright glimpses of the paradise within. But if you are otherwise, she will accept you for the sham that you are And considering the refining influence in this day of jazz-bands and fox-trots, it behooves us to encourage, the spirit of true art whenever and wherever we may meet with it.

The writer of the article was treated to a pleasant surprise the other day at the Motor Show, on being introduced into the gallery of Peterborough's talented young professional artist, Miss Mamie Langley McCarthy, and came away, I may truthfully say, with a newly-acquired respect for the students of the brush in this city.

There is about the work of this young artist, a sincerity that at once appeals. This with the ability to catch and imprison just that undefinable quality called soul, renders her pictures such as to be classed superior in any sphere. And that the talent is a natural inherited gift is evident from a glance over the annals of Miss McCarthy's ancestors. Her mother, Mrs. Langly McCarthy, an artist of recognized standing in this city and abroad, has put onto canvass a number of scenic depictions of unquestioned merit. Pictures that hold an inspiration in their depths. Two of her ancestors were quite famous artists. An uncle in Toronto, Mr. J. C. Langly is a charcoal illustrator of iminent ability and a cousin, Mr Leo Langly went overseas as an illustrator. Widely conversant along this line, Miss McCarthy has, at the request of those in charge, given some very interesting lectures on water-colors, at the teachers' convention, in recent years.

Such was the general excellence of this artist's exhibit that it would be difficult to dwell for any length upon a single production, but perhaps her finest effort is "The Death of Virginia." Taken from the old mythical poem of Paul and Virginia the picture represents the beautiful young girl where she lies in death. having been cast up by the waves. It is so like death—the sweet expression of the pallid face, the attitude of undisturbed repose, with the angry sea in the background—is a scene that will fix itself in the memory.

"The Country Doctor" is another achievement of supermerit. This is a realistic depiction of the night, the swirling snow, the hurrying doctor and the anxiety of the watching friends. Others there are equally as fine: "Spring," "Waiting," "The Sheperd and his Sheep," a delightfully natural and lifelike portrayal of a simple scene. Just here it might be said that this artist adheres to a beautiful simplicity with the most pleasing results.

To gain some knowledge of Miss McCarthy's ability as a portrait painter, one has only to glance at the likeness of His Lordship Bishop O'Brien, Rev. Father Ferguson, Mr. and Mrs. Pitchford and many others. which line the walls of her gallery. Paintings in which every natural line of expression is brought out with the utmost sincerity.

Perhaps one of the finest proofs of the artistic ability of the teacher is the work of the pupils and it can truthfully be said that this artist's pupils measure up splendidly in this regard.

"The Sick Child," by Mrs. Dr. Gallivan is a picture that would ornament the most exclusive studio Beautiful water scenes by Mrs. Russel V. Copping: "At the Seaside," and a Dutch scene, so exquisitely tinted as to delight the artistic sense and give promise of still greater things to come. Another pupil whose work drew forth much comment was Miss Beatrice Picard. A near reproduction of Jackson Park is among this pupils best efforts. A winter scene by Mabel Dorman attracted considerable attention as did "Afterglow" by Mrs. Patterson and "The Greek Girl" by Mrs. Hartley; "First Easter Morn" by Marion MacFarlane; "Waiting," by Mrs. Brown; two soldier pictures by Miss Horsfield were among others of remarkable merit.

A display of beautiful china painting by the pupils of the artist was a feature of the exhibit. A tea set by Mrs. Hartley, a water set by Mrs Webber. A set in Dutch blue by Mrs. Armstrong, a vase in peonies by Mrs R. V. Copping, a vase decorated with peacocks by Mrs. E. Conroy and a jardineer in roses by Mrs. Taylor were among the most superior exhibits of this work ever seen in this city

Truly Peterborough has just reason for pride in its talented artist, Mamie Langley McCarthy.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few intimate friends, and the couple were unattended. Rev. G. E. Ross, pastor of the bride, officiated, conducting the beautiful marriage service of the Methodist Church.

On Monday evening a very generous "shower" was given the bride at the home of Mr. W. J. Rome, Mark street, where the bride resided prior to her marriage, and which was a former home of the groom.

OBITUARY

JAMES DILLON.

Residents of Hastings and the district will learn with feelings of intense regret of the death in St. Joseph's Hospital, here, last night of a life-long and highly-respected resident of Burnley, James Dillon, following an attack of apolexy.

Mr. Dillon, who remained a bachelor during the 66 years of his life, was known throughout the district in his earlier days as a keen sportsman, taking a special interest in football. Even in his later years, although unable to take the active part that he formerly took in the games, he still retained a great deal of interest and gave them his hearty support.

His occupation in life was that of farmer and as such he was looked upon as a first-class agriculturalist. Being of an exceedingly pleasant disposition, he was extremely well liked by all who came in contact with him.

He is survived by on sister, Mrs. Fanning, of Burnley, and three brothers, Frank, of Mount Pleasant, U. S. A.; Rev. Fr. Charles Dillon, of Saginaw, Michigan, and John Dillon, of Peterborough.

The body was taken on the two o'clock G.T.R. train this afternoon to Hastings for his residence in Burnley and the funeral will take place from there at nine o'clock tomorrow morning to the cemetery, Warkworth.

AN EXPOSITION OF THE INCOME TAX

INTERESTING TALK BY MR. JOSEPH WEARING ON METHODS OF TAXATION

At a meeting of the Medical Association of Peterborough, held last night in the Public Library, an exposition of the income war tax and the Provincial Assessment Act was given by Mr. Joseph Wearing. Theoretically, he said, the income tax was not a good method of taxation for several reasons. In the first place it was extremely difficult to apply it so that everyone paid equally. There was so many ways of evading the income tax and people always did find ways of evading it. Then again it was a tax which brought on the necessity of enquiry into a person's private affairs, a thing which was naturally resented. The cost of collecting the income tax was also very high in proportion to the tax collected, the machinery used in its connection being very expensive.

Mr. Wearing pointed out that the United States adopted an income tax as a means of revenue immediately after the civil war, but that it was found advisable to drop this form of taxation there a few years later and that such a method of raising a revenue had not been used in that country since until just a few years ago.

However, Mr. Wearing held out no hope for an early relief from the tax in Canada. He thought that on account of the financial burden which had been imposed upon the country as a result of the war that there would be such a tax in Canada for many years to come. He concurred with the view of Mr. R. R. Hall expressed in the papers last week with reference to the matter of the exemption clause with regard to people having incomes received from investments.

There was a very large attendance at the meeting and a great deal of interest in the subject was shown by those present. The chair was occupied by Dr. Sutton.

CANADA NOW HAS GREAT NEED FOR IMMIGRANTS OF BETTER CLASS

Has More Advantages to Europeans Than to be Found in United States—Larger Areas of Cheap Lands and Growing Industrial Development.

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 24. — Canada's great need for immigrants of the proper class was emphasized by Col. J. S. Dennis, Chief of the Colonization and Development Department of the Canadian Pacific Railway in an address delivered before the recent conference on immigration held here under the auspices of the Inter-Racial Council. Col. Dennis, who was representative of the Canadian and British Recruiting Mission in the United States during the war, and is familiar with conditions on this side of the line, compared the problems which Canada and the United States are faced in regard to immigration and frankly told his American hearers that Canada is in a more favorable position in having better inducements to offer.

"We think that in Canada we have perhaps more to offer the European immigrant today than you have in the United States," he said. "More in the sense of larger undeveloped resources, larger areas of cheap land and a growing industrial development which provides him with employment, if he is looking for it."

Dealing with the problem as it affected Canada, Col. Dennis said:

"We have a pressing need for population because, due to our participation in the war, which we went into voluntarily, and due to the fact that we provided our own army; that we enlisted a little over ten per cent of our total population, that we equipped and paid and maintained our men; that our allowances to our men were very great—today in Canada we are faced with a very heavy debt and the interest on our war debt, today, when added to our pension bill, amounts to a sum almost three times as great as the total revenue of the Dominion in 1914, and our population has not increased very materially since that time. Therefore, we have the pressing need of getting immigrants to come in and help us carry that burden and develop our natural resources so we can pay our bill and not be ultimately found in the hands of the sheriff.

Dealing with some of the difficulties which confront Canada in regard to immigration, Col. Dennis remarked that Canada as part of the British Empire, is so situated that it is absurd for Canadians to speak of any man as a foreigner, because the Empire includes people of every race.

"The British Empire is a heterogeneous collection of peoples of the world, he said, "and we are so situated and have the peculiar condition existing that in Canada although a part of the empire, we do not allow immigration from other parts of the Empire. For instance, we do not allow the Hindus, although they are British subjects in India, to come to Canada. It is a peculiar anomaly but it shows the independent character of certain portions of the overseas dominions where we impose a tariff against the Mother Country and refuse to allow British subjects in other parts of the Empire to come to Canada."

Col. Dennis said that past experience in matters relating to immigration had convinced him that the trouble in handling immigrants was due to three things.

"First," he declared, "the immigrant is misinformed when he is solicited to move; second, he is manhandled in being moved; and third, he is turned loose without any protection or assistance when he arrives. That has been, I thing the foundation of the movement of immigrants to this continent in the past, and we must endeavor to change it if we are to get the kind of people that we need, and if we are to have greater success than we have had in the past in making them proud of the country they have come to, anxious to learn our language, to participate in our institutions, and to become good citizens.

CANADIAN EXPORTS INCREASE THIS YEAR

DUTIABLE GOODS CAME INTO COUNTRY TO AMOUNT OF $693,642,211.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 23.—Figures for the fiscal year ending March 31 show an increase in the grand total of Canadian trade amounting to $165,930,900 when compared with figures for the previous year. The total value of goods exported and imported during the year was $2,351,174,886, an increase of approximately two hundred million over previous years. Export figures show great increase during past two years in the value of agricultural food products, animal products and wood and paper products over the year 1918 and 1919. On imports its figures show that dutiable goods came into the country during the year just ended to the value of $693,642,211, an increase of more than 160 million dollars.

LIBERALS IN COMMONS AND RY. DEFICITS

ANOTHER FIGHT WHEN ESTIMATES COME BEFORE THE HOUSE

Ottawa, Ont., April 24.—While it is expected the Grand Trunk Railway bill will pass the Senate, indications are that when the estimates covering deficits on the nationally owned railways come before the House the Liberals will make every effort to show that some of the roads taken over are in anything but good shape financially.

That the names of MacKenzie and Mann will be bandied across the Chamber is provided by a notice of a question for Monday when E. W. Tobin, (Richmond and Wolfe) will ask what lands in Quebec did MacKenzie and Mann, either as a company or individually, or the Canadian Northern Railway Company, own or control at the time the Government took over the management of the Canadian Northern Railways.

BERLIN MUST OBEY OR TROOPS SENT

ENGLAND'S PREMIER CONSENTS TO SEND BRITISH FORCE TO RUHR.

SITUATION NOW EASIER

GERMAN'S MUST LINE UP TO REVISED TERMS OF TREATY

Paris, April 24. — Premier Lloyd George would approve of Anglo-French occupation of the Ruhr district of Germany in the event the Berlin Government should refuse suitably to live up to the revised terms of the Versailles Treaty, says "Pertinax," political editor of the Echo de Paris. He says intimation to this effect has come through a member of the British Premier's suits for the purpose of overcoming Premier Millerand's opposition to revision of the German treaty.

"The representative of England," asserts Pertinax, "charged a high duty of interposing questions during discussions for the purpose of giving the impression if Germany should fail to exactly execute the Treaty of Versailles, once it is revised, England would consent to sending her soldiers into the Ruhr Valley in company with those of France." The manoeuvres at San Remo to French opposition to revision of the treaty are the culmination of conversations which have been going on at Berlin between officials of the German Government and certain allied representatives. The arrival of the German note asking for a permanent army of 200,000 men is not a mere coincidence."

NEW LAW AIMED AT GERMAN DEALERS

HOUSE OF COMMONS NOT LIKELY TO ENDORSE SENATE MEASURE

Ottawa, April 24.— The fate in the Commons of certain measures initiated in the Senate is in doubt. Senator Lynch-Staunton is the father of a measure to compel dealers in German or Austrian goods to advertise the fact. The bill stands for third reading. That it will pass is fully participated, thereafter it must come to the Commons for consideration.

While there was considerable discussion on the bill in the Senate, and not a few objections, a number of members voted for it on the assumption that it was a "temporary" measure, and could be repealed later when conditions between the countries become normal. It is not believed, however, that the Government will take the responsibility of sanctioning its passage in the Commons, and as a consequence the bill in that House is almost certain of defeat.

Quebeckers to Protest

Senator Ross, of Middleton, has succeeded in piloting through the Upper Chamber his two bills of divorce, whose purpose is to provide in Ontario and Prince Edward Island for the dissolution and annulment of marriage through the courts, as in other Provinces but Quebec. There is reason to believe that the Government is favorable to the measures put forward by Senator Ross, who is very close to the Government leader in the Upper Chamber, and that the bills will have Government sanction and support. While Quebec is not affected, it is anticipated, however, that practically every Roman Catholic in the House will oppose the measures, inasmuch as divorce is absolutely contrary to their belief. Neverthless, the bills should pass by a fair majority, since there are few members in favor of the present clumsy, hit-or-miss, expensive method of granting divorce via the Senate Committee, the Senate, the Private Bills Committee, the Commons and the Governor-General.

No Damages From Me-respondent

The measures provide that the law of England shall apply to the two Provinces mentioned with this interesting exception. The law of England provides that the co-respondent in a divorce granted shall be liable for damages to the injured party. The bill of Senator Ross provides that "notwithstanding anything to the contrary no damages shall be recovered from a co-respondent in any such suit or proceedings."

BERLIN GOVERNMENT WEEDING OUT REACTIONARY ELEMENTS

Many Prussian Magnates With Historic Names are Dismissed Provincial Governors of Hanover and Koenigsberg and Half Dozen Others are Forced to Resign.

(By Associated Press)

Berlin, April 24.—The Government's process of weeding out re-actionary elements from the provincial administration of Pomerania and elsewhere so far has resulted in the dismissal of 19 district councillors, all of whom were local magnates with historic names of Prussian landed gentry.

Provincial governors of Hanover and Koenigsberg and half a dozen others, including some chiefs of departments in the Prussian Ministry of the Interior, were also dismissed. Others resigned of their own volition, and Socialist fact tons of the diet have drawn up a list containing a score whose dismissals they demand. Most of those dismissed will be prosecuted for misuse of their authority.

Complete Agreement.

San Remo, April 24.—Complete agreement with respect to the attitude the Allies shall adopt towards Germany in connection with carrying out of the Peace Treaty has been reached by Premiers Lloyd George and Millerand, it was stated here today.

Agreement was reached during the conference lasting three hours and a/half between the two Premiers. Millerand left the conference palpably delighted with the outcome. Lloyd George said: "Everything is most satisfactory. Full agreement was reached in substance."

EVIDENCE SEEN OF WORLD WIDE DOMESTIC CREDIT STRINGENCY

Jap Speculators Responsible for Financial Disaster—Corrective Measures.

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 24.—Further corrective measures invoked by the Federal Reserve Board to curtail or restrict speculative credits, gave the stock market violent set back this week, but reaction was accelerated by weakened bull position.

The action of Central Bank authorities took the form of advanced discount rates at important financial, commercial and industrial centres. This was supplemented by private banks of those sections, where additional contraction of loans was in progress. These domestic credit conditions were accompanied by evidence of world-wide stringency of same character, an echo coming from Japan, where speculation during and following the war culminated in financial disaster. Enormous liquidation of liberty bonds at declines of one to four per cent. also served to unsettle local securities market. The offering of these issues evidently came from all parts of the country, but round amounts were sold by corporations as only immediate means of new financing.

Let Up to Gold.

There was let-up to gold imports, also to exports of that metal, although further shipments to South America are under negotiation. Much of the week's set-back in foreign exchange, especially the London rate, was due to offerings of sterling bills here, for Japanese interests

TORONTO MAY HAVE HOURS DAYLIGHT SAVING

BOARD OF CONTROL RECOMMENDS MEASURE TO COUNCIL.

Toronto, April 24.—This city may have daylight saving from 2 a.m., May 2, until September 25. That is what the Board of Control will recommend to Council to Monday. If Council agrees the Mayor will issue a proclamation.

Con. Ramsden held that the board carried his motion, and Con Maguire admitted he did not vote for or against yesterday, as he wanted the subject postponed until today to bring forward letters and data, but he was unable to lay his hands on that information.

The Mayor announced that he was strongly in favor of daylight saving, and that a favorable motion had also been carried by the women's conference discussing the potato issue.

The Mayor had to remind his colleagues that the rules compelled them to vote, and I twas only then that Controllers Ramsden and Maguire came out of their shells. Con Gibbons voted alone against it. Con. Maguire reserved the right to oppose the recommendation in Council.

APPLICATIONS FOR EMPLOYMENT ON FARMS SHOW AN ENCOURAGING INCREASE

At the Government Employment Bureau this morning the encouraging announcement was made that applications for work on the farms had increased to some extent and that during the week seven such applicants had been placed. Unfortunately the great majority of these applications come from married men with families, and among the vacancies listed at the bureau there are very few who have the necessary accommodation for such class of farm help.

It was also announced that the bureau would receive applications for future consideration from women desiring farm work in the western part of the Province particularly the Niagara district on the fruit and vegetable farms. It appears that the women have firmly established themselves in this class of work during the war and there is therefore a great demand for them. Applications will be sent to the lady in charge of this department in Toronto immediately upon receipt for consideration.

During the week [illegible] men were shipped to the lumber camps in New Ontario. There were in all 52 applications and 44 were placed. There was little activity in the women's department, there being only 1 applications and three placed during the past week.

HOSPITAL TO COST AT LEAST $2,750,000

PLANS FOR NEW CIVIC INSTITUTION IN CANADA'S CAPITAL

Ottawa, April 24.—Before the snow flies the foundation of the new Ottawa Civic Hospital will be laid, Mr D. M. Finnie, chairman of the Hospital Committee, said this morning on his return from Toronto where a large delegation of civic officials, doctors and other members of the Board of Trustees succeeded in persuading the Private Bills Committee in favor of the enterprise.

Architects Coming.

Now that the city is permitted to raise another million and a quarter dollars for the hospital, which is to cost $2,750,000, Mr. Finnie said the committee hoped some actual work would be done at once. The architects are coming here for consultation next week and to talk over details with the building committee.

Permanent plans for the excavation and foundations will be prepared in about a month's time, Mr. Finnie said, and tenders called for as soon as possible afterwards.

Final Plans Not Ready.

The final plans for the buildings are not yet ready, but would be completed later. The main object of the committee now is to start actual work as soon as possible, and it was thought that the permanent plans for the buildings could be finished after the excavations and foundations were under way.

Satisfaction is generally expressed at the success of the bill in Toronto.

"Free Sultan From Allied Influence" No Longer His Slogan.

Constantiople, April 24.—Colonel Jafer Tayar, Turkish commandant at Adrianople, who last week called upon all Moslems to unite in an effort to "free the Sultan from Allied influence," appeared here today, and announced that he supported Damad Ferid Pasha, the Grand Vizier, and had abandoned the Turkish Nationalists.

He was accompanied from Adrianople to this city by three French officers. All officers have been ordered to report for service within three days under penalty of court-martial.

PETERBORO MEN, WHO MAKE GOOD

Possibly there are not many Peterborough people who are aware of the fact that the man who holds the responsible position of chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway is Morrice Fairbairn, son of Thomas an old Peterborough boy. He is John Jack Fairbairn, as he is commonly known, spent the whole of his early boyhood, receiving the thorough foundations of his elementary education in the public and high schools of the city. From his early youth he was mechanically in clined and, when he went to Toronto to attend the Toronto University, it was with the sole object of fitting himself for the position of engineer. While at the university he secured with ease the degree of graduate Faculty of Applied Science, an achievement which proved of great benefit to him in his later career.

On emerging from the college days he found no difficulty in putting his theoretical training into practice and obtained a position as assistant engineer on Surveys, C. P. R. Ontario Division, and also as engineer to the Dominion Government in the Northwest territory. These positions were held during the years 1892-4.

The "powers that be," in the Dominion Government at that time were not slow to realize the exceptional worth of the man, and it was not long before he was appointed assistant engineer of the Department of Militia and Defence Ottawa, a position which he held for two years following 1894. In 1896 he left the Department of Militia and Defence for a more lucrative position as construction engineer of the Montreal Park and Island Railway. From there he went west as assistant engineer of land survey at Kaslo, B. C., in 1897 and 1898.

At this point in his career Fairbairn decided to branch out on his own and took up a private practice as a mining engineer and land surveyor, at Kaslo and Greenwood, B. C. It is not recorded whether this venture met with much success or not but the fact remains that a short time later he was again with the Canadian Pacific Railway, this time as assistant engineer in the construction department at Winnipeg. There was much construction work being done by the C. P. R. in the west during this period and the position was therefore a most responsible one.

Later Mr. Fairbairn became assistant engineer, Department of Railways and Canals with offices at Beaverton and for the remainder of the year 1900 and 1901 he held this position. His next move was to Montreal where he took up the position of assistant engineer to the C. P. R at that city, which post he held till 1902 when he again moved to Ottawa this time to be resident engineer of the C. P. R there. This post he held for three years or more until he gave it up to be division engineer of the C. P. R at Toronto in 1905. His wide experience over the different divisions of the C. P. R which he gained during his many moves in these years well fitted him for the higher posts which came to be his in later years.

From Toronto he returned to Montreal

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1920.

THE EASE-LOVING CRAZE.

THE TENDENCY of the age seems to be drifting toward a workless day or as near that as possible, irrespective of the needs of the nation and individuals. All of us, in every class and walk of life, are more or less inebriated with an exuberance of inflated prosperity, dangerously deceptive and leading to ruinous inertia, in so far as industry is concerned. As a matter of fact, while work is plentiful, remuneration for labor high, business and trade and commerce and manufacturing apparently flourishing, the world is not prospering—it costs too much to live. And why? There is no more abstract value in what we eat, or wear, or burn, only as gauged by the cost of production; but if that production is less per man for a given number of hours than heretofore, and is to continue lessening, increases in salaries, wages and incomes cannot keep pace, and we are heading for disaster.

It is a true maxim that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy," but there is also an equally incontrovertible contention that Jack should work while he works and play while he plays. Jack today is reaching the ideal advanced by Englishmen many years ago of "Eight hours' work, eight hours' play and eight shillings a day," and now it is up to Jack to produce enough to meet the worlds' requirements. In Jack we include all sorts and conditions of men, the idle rich as well as the industrious poor, all people in the aggregate. Let us look at conditions today. We are all growing more or less indolent, prone to work as little as possible, and to look for an ever-growing income and the maximum of pleasure, with but little thought for national interests, including our own self-preservation. In 1897 coal was mined in England for a trifle les sthan a dollar a ton; in 1914 it cost $2.50, and in 1918 $5.50 to mine a ton of coal. The wages of miners have, of course, increased and the hours of labor have decreased. We find no fault with that, but cannot see any just cause why the amount of coal mined per hour per man should have also sufferein depreciation. And it is this latter condition—lessened production per man per hour—which is going to end in national calamity if followed generally in other lines. Unfortunately, there seems to be a tendency in that direction. We are all in the same boat of industrial degeneracy—business and professional men must find time during working hours for golf and curling, and most of us are looking for the biggest returns for the less labor, forgetting that each one of us, no matter in what line of occupation engaged, is a cog in that wheel of production, the reduction of whose revolutions has a limit, if we all are to live and prosper.

The high cost of living is too generally the high cost of ease, coupled with the luxury of the idle rich. Taking the hypothesis that wages, salaries, revenues, incomes are based on the cost of living, this cost becomes inflated unless every man and woman who contributes to the earning power of the world—and all should in some way or other—resists the temptation of increased remuneration to take more of the ease of life than is profitable either to themselves or the nation. The trend of the world these times is toward an eight-hour day and rightly so, but if the producing power of that day is lessened one jot or tittle there follows a reaction in increased cost of living to the producers themselves as well as to the consumers, for abnormal prices in one line affects the whole industrial fabric indirectly.

Then consider the extravagance of the idle rich, that self-indulgence, waste of commodities and reckless spending of those who give nothing and produce nothing for the world's economic needs—these people, thoughtlessly, may be, are responsible in a measure for high costs; they set the pace for profiteering, and in their example incite reckless expenditure by their brothers and sisters of lesser means. The woman who will pay $64 for a pair of shoes which an investigating committee decides is not anywhere near worth half the price is setting a value based on expenditure which is a pernicious principle far reaching in its influence. The house which supports several over-fed, flashily dressed male servants who revel in a lazy existence of indolence and ease to contribute to pompous show and envy-inciting ostentation, is robbing the State of masculine energy needed on the farms and elsewhere to produce and help meet the community's demands.

Let us reason together on this question of the high cost of living, to the end that each and every one shall do his or her part in contributing by no thought or deed to the maintenance of excessive prices. Let us all do our individual bit to combat that money-spending and ease-loving craze which is engulfing nations. Let the principle of peoples and communities be the greatest good for the greatest number, a will to produce of their resources sufficient to the demand therefore. Above all, let us all, in every class of life, take care that we are not carried off our feet by that wave of industrial indifference which treatens the world, and remember that "too little work and a super-abundance of play leaves the home exposed to a rainy day."

MEN TEACHERS AND EQUAL PAY.

BRITISH TEACHERS have developed a definite schism of their own over the question of equal pay for men and women. A lady teacher addressing a big conference advocated equal salaries in a stirring address. A body of men teachers, however, have formed a new organisation to resist the principle of equal pay, and the new association starts with an assured membership of 6,000 to 7,000. The question is one of very real difficulty. A proportion of men teachers in the schools is necessary, but if women can be obtained for less money the proportio nwill be kept as low as possible. Equal pay would seem to give the male teacher the better chance, provided that he can show that he gives the better service for the money expended. There are many other considerations to be taken into account, but the case for higher pay for men would be stronger if it were based on a general claim that the man is capable of better work. Ther is no conflict between the principle of "equal pay for equal work" and the payment of a higher rate to those who can and do give better service.

THE OLD "VICTORY."

NELSON'S FAMOUS old flagship has gone into drydock. We are glad to learn that her stout oak timbers, obtained chiefly from the Kent and Sussex Wealds, are still in good condition, and that she may still have many years afloat. One never goes aboard her without wondering what Nelson would have thought of the change could he have visited a modern battleship. From July 30, 1803, when he joined her from the "Amphion," until July 20, 1805, when he landed at Gibraltar, he never set foot ashore. Yet the height of the cabin is only five feet eleven inches—a tall man, that is, could not stand upright in it. "Always shut up in the 'Victory's' cabin," as he himself wrote, "cannot be very good for the constitution. I think you will find me grown thin, but never mind."

ABEL RAYMOND, B.S.A.

THE CIVIL SERVICE Commission announced recently that Abel Raymond, B.S.A., demonstrator in Megantic County, was the successful applicant for the position of District Poultry Promoter for Quebec. Mr. Raymond has already commenced his duties, under the direction of the Live Stock Branch of the Federal Department of Agriculture. After acquainting himself more fully with the systems of organization and methods of quality payment, followed by co-operative marketing organisations in Ontario, and, if necessary, visiting Prince Edward Island to learn full particulars of what has been achieved along co-operative marketing lines, as regards eggs and poultry, in that province, Mr. Raymond will confer with provincial officers, county demonstrators and others as to the best ways and means of developing the industry along similar lines in the Province of Quebec. In this connection, a survey of the province will be made to ascertain the principal poultry producing districts at the present time and those which give promise of ready development. The first policy followed will be to organize in conjunction with existing or prospective co-operative organizations, and to devise ways and means of reducing waste and marketing eggs of the highest possible quality.

Every means will be put forward to induce producers in Quebec to increase their production of eggs and poultry, not only to the end of supplying their own requirements, but also of contributing their share to the export business of Canada.

Having in mind Canada's tremendous financial obligations, it is of the utmost importance that the production of high grade natural products be greatly increased. Furthermore, in order to conserve quality and prevent waste, every care and precaution must be taken in the successful marketing of those products, not only at home, but abroad.

With the training along scientific agricultural lines Mr. Raymond received at Oka and the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, and his work in Megantic County in connection with the promotion of co-operative shipping associations, and with his wide knowledge of conditions in the Province of Quebec and his personal acquaintance with the demonstrators in that province, it is felt that Mr. Raymond's selection in the promotion of this work for the Province of Quebec is a particularly fortunate one in the interests of agricultural development as a whole, and eggs and poultry in particular.

DEVONSHIRE HOUSE.

THIS WEEK'S GREAT fancy dress ball at Devonshire House, England, awakened memories. It was the last of a great series, and the last act in the history of a house which has played a great part in the politics of many generations from the days of Fox and the "Devonshire House circle" down to the eighth Duke and his magnificent Duchess. There is not a brick of the dingy old house which has not its part in these memories. Generation after generation of Londoners has glanced at the place, with thoughts of the past and speculations of the present. As the eighth Duke said of Chatsworth to the too enthusiastic American: "It's a rummy old place." and it has played its part in many "rum" incidents of political history. It is almost the last of the great old political houses.

WHAT ABOUT FRANCE?

(London Advertiser.)

Some allied statesmen are vastly concerned about Bolshevism in Germany and ready to give in to violations of the treaty because of that bogey. But if the indemnities are not paid up to France, that country may itself become the scene of anarchy. As yet the French peasantry hold the wider industrials in check, but if they lose their investments they may also lose their interest in upholding the republican system as it is. Bolshevism on this side of the Rhine would be even worse than beyond it.

GOOD TIME COMING.

(Woodstock Sentinel-Review.)

The Drury Government is striking another blow at the patronage. The sale of marriage licenses is to be placed in the hands of certain municipal authorities, and the incentive of personal gain will be eliminated. Soon man will have no better reason for suporting a political party than that he believes in it.

THE WICKED CONSUMER.

(Philadelphia Record.)

Why is the price of sugar going up? Because, according to a sugar refinery official, the consumer is stocking up in excess of his requirements. And why is the consumer stocking up? Because the sugar refiners have let it be pretty generally understood that the price of sugar is going up. The consumer is clearly at fault. He should be arrested and put in jail for trying to take an unfair advantage of the people who want his money.

STUDY IN ART BY AN ART LOVER

Many people now-a-days might say to the experts:

"Tell us what we are to admire," and one expert might say.

"Admire what appeals to you yourself."

Another might say:

"Read the lives of the old masters, study their works and judge by them."

Another again might say:

"Let yourself go to the fashion in Art, away with the times, be open to every influence."

Many other replies could be invented.

Now in this short article I wish to put before those who are not themselves artists, a few non-technical ideas as to how to get the best out of any work of art. How is this possible for those who have not studied art in any particular way, who have not trained their eyes to any great critical extent, or who have not been born with any intuitive knowledge of the manner of this training?

First to speak of a subject which has surely already been spoken of in every light, namely,

"What is Art?"

To the unitiated art represents little beyond the word itself, and that word has been so misused and abused that indeed it has come very near to having no meaning, whereas it should comprise the great truths of religion and nature combined together by man's intelligence.

It is safe to say that there is scarcely a grown person who at one time or another is not conscious of the great truths of religion. There is no one who comes to man's estate that has not some answer in his heart to the great problems of religion

There is also scarcely one who is not affected in like manner by the wonders of Nature.

The wonders of nature work less consciously in us than the truths and questions of religion, but all the same in greater or less degree these religious questions and struggles and the soothing or adverse answers given by contact with nature are left by all.

There can be few of any class or estate who do not feel at times at any rate, that the trees, the seas, the seasons, the flowers, the fields, the lanes what we call the "country," or in art "landscape," have not some effect on and influence over us.

On aglorious sunny Spring morning however troubled we may be, we can get comfort from the very rays of the sun warming us.

Or if our trouble be too great for even that comfort then indeed we are out of tune with nature."

But you will say: "what has all his to do with Art?"

It has this conection To those who can get help or inspiration from the works of nature, the same aid os open from the great works of art.

For art is the power given to man to combine the spiritual world with the natural in just proportions. When you hear a person exclaim, "I like that picture, it is so simple, so direct," you may or may not know that the reason of its seeming simplicity lies in the art of the man who created it.

I use the word "create" on purpose. For nature is not naturally simple. It is very seldom indeed that a landscape presents itself as a possible picture. Go out for a walk and study the fields and the hedges, the gardens and the skies. What do you see?

Look closely and you will see so many colours, so many shades, so many lines, so many forms in cloud and tree, flowers and grass, bird and animal that you might well become dizzy.

But nature is so vast so indeed infinite that all this tremendous detail melts from your mind and you feel only the harmony, the freshness, the vigour.

Try to put even a small part of this on to a canvas or sheet a few inches square.

Your mind reels at the thought of so much colour and form compressed into such a small space. You cry for air, for depth, for freedom, for some of the infinity and reserve of nature

Then the artist tries to give you some of this consoling spirit. By following nature's lines to the comforting point, by using her colours to the tender depths, by learning of her generosity yet not getting lost in her abundance he discovers her secret for you and gives you of her life.

This is of course a very superficial explanation of art. But after the first attempt to grasp the meaning of the pictures you go to see, if you succeed you will become so held with their charm that of your own accord you will study the subject and read with digestion the many books awaiting you. Books on the lives of the artists, throwing light on their meanings, books on the history of art, on her close alliance with her better understood sisters, music and poetry, better understood in that a natural enjoyment of music is more widespread and poetry makes a fairly easy entrance into our language.

Pater says that all the arts strive to attain to the condition of music, or words to that effect. Certainly harmony and rhythm are of art's very essence and the more poetry that is caught the better

But you might ask, "how can an artist who perhaps cannot make one verse of true poetry, hope to express poetry in his pictures?"

The answer to this is, that just as you may not be able to write one verse of poetry and yet can understand and appreciate and feel the beauty and truth of the poets, so the artist who has the poetical feeling is able to put some if not all of that feeling into his work, and thus a picture is sometimes called metaphorically a "poem."

So also the music in the artist's nature finds outlet and you will discover the regular beat of rythm in his work That rhythm is to some extent what stirs your nature as it is part of our bodily movement It is the vibration that we can feel in great crowds, and it is the same vibration that we can hear through the songs of birds and the different calls of nature. Beauty, rhythm, truth, poetry—we all answer to these powers in and around us.

Truth ought to come first, but beauty is of course the very essence of art, and as truth is her very essence too we may be allowed to say that beauty and truth are one.

Perhaps a good rule for judging a picture might be.

"Is it true?" Not to nature, for nature is variable and shows so many aspects of the truth, but is it true to the standard of truth.

"What is truth" and therefore what is its standard?

As far as we have had light given to us truth is the one perfect life lived on this earth and all the lives before and after that one life that approach nearest to it, have all given proofs of what truth means

WINTER PRICE FOR MILK IN KENT THIS SUMMER

At a special meeting of the Kent Milk Producers' Association held in U. F. O. Hall at Kent Centre, near Chatham, it was decided not to reduce the price during the coming summer months. The price received by the producers during the winter months has been nine cents a quart. They claim they have been losing money at his price, and will therefore try to make up this summer for what they have been losing during the winter. The high price of feed is given as one of the causes for the action. Milk is now selling in Chatham for sixteen cents a quart. It will likely remain at that price during the summer months

JAPANESE ADOPT WRITING MACHINE

HIGH COST OF OFFICE LABOR FORCES MANY MODERN INVENTIONS

Within the last few years in the offices of Japan's leading business firms, the brush has given way to the typewriter, the soroban to the adding machnie and calculator, and Japanese travellers carry their little portable typewriters in their travels to all parts of the world.

Japan is now taking about 2,000 typewriters every year of the office type, about 500 of the portable type, some 50 adding machines and 200 calculators. More than that, Japan has developed a typewriter for the Japanese language which is a fearful and wonderful contraption, with a thousand characters and an arrangement for putting in interchangeable type so that the real capacity of the machine is three thousand characters. Needless to say not many of these Japanese typewriters are in use, for it is easier to write the language out in Roman type on an ordinary typewriter.

The advent of modern office appliances into Japan was accompanied by some very amusing incidents. One of the earliest purchasers of an American adding machine said in all frankness to the salesman from whom he made the purchase, "this is certainly a splendid device for the office but at the price we can employ two good qualified clerks for a year, so this becomes one of our luxuries, but it will attract the attention of customers, so we can use it for a decoration for the office." And that was the purpose the machine served until wages began to soar.

Three years ago the ordinary working man's wage in Japan was only one yen (50c.) a day and clerks in stores received only fifty yen a month, so that labor saving devices were not at all attractive, but now the average laboring man can earn from two yen seventy-five sen to three yen fifty sen a day and the salary of ordinary clerks is up to a hundred yen a month. These wages increases have stimulated the demand for labor saving office equipment and the constantly increasing contact with commercial interests in other countries have necessitated the securing of adequate machines. In addition the constant enlargement of old concerns and the increasing number of new ones to do business with the rest of the world have greatly enlarged the market for such specialties.

One great factor in the building of a market for such devices is the increasing high rental for business properties and the adoption of modern office furniture in modern office buildings. Rental in these buildings is costly and, as has been said before, wages are constantly increasing, so that anything which tends to accuracy, economy in space and men is becoming attractive to Japanese executives.

Women, too, are finding their way into the business world and even the Japanese Foreign Office now employs a number of them. With the Government setting the example business concerns have been quick to follow. Living expenses have now become so great that few women can afford to remain idle.

An increase in salary—
But are you better off ?

"The more I make the more I spend," has been a young man's cry for generations.

When many a man's salary is $15 a week he lives up to every cent of it, putting off the time to start a savings account until his wages are increased to $20.

But when the $5 a week increase comes, does it go into the bank? Not very often.

Make that salary increase do something for you if it is to be of any benefit. Deposit it in The Bank of Toronto each week.

With the interest it earns, you will find at the end of the year that you have a lump sum with which you can do material things.

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

Not Aspirin at All without the "Bayer Cross"

The name "Bayer" identifies the only genuine Aspirin,—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

Tin boxes of 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

RETAILERS GIVE VALUABLE TIP TO MANUFACTURER OF A NOTED BREAKFAST FOOD

' ot Re-make a Name Once Damaged," is Theor Actuating the Kellog Toasted Corn Flake Company, Which Extensively Advertises Innovation.

Such is the value of reputation that an established firm, boasting of tremendous sales, is ever trying to improve the standard of its goods. If the standard cannot be improved upon, maybe some new wrinkle may be evolved that will improve the condition in which the article may reach the consumer—which really amounts to an improved article. A striking illustration of this rule of commercial enterprise is cited concerning the Kellogg Toasted Cornflake Company in the following article by R. C. Smith of R. C. Smith & Son, Limited, General Advertising Agency, Toronto:

Few realize the service rendered to the public by those who undertake, on a big scale, the careful, scientific, economical, healthful preparation of suitable foods.

Dozens of preparations essential to life and health can be and are prepared economically, hygienically and thoroughly cooked and packed ready for delivery to the customer—nothing to do but serve and eat cold or warm.

As a result of this thousands of women have time to devote to work more important and pressing because of these valuable preparations that save time and prevent disappointing failures.

Take as an instance the preparation of Toasted Corn Flakes. The manufacturers, by using the very best raw material procurable, preparing it in the most scientific manner which investigation and experience could suggest, was able to produce a food the quality of which gained for it a nation-wide reputation and a tremendous sale.

Dealers Give the Tip.

Complaints, however, came in from dealers at a distance that when goods were delayed in transit or stood for a time on the shelves they became tough and soggy and lost their flavor.

In order to overcome this the Kellogg Toasted Corn Flake Company installed machinery that enabled it to protect each package with a paraffin cover. When calling the attention of the trade to this new innovation the following announcement, signed by W. K. Kellogg, was made:

> "There has always been a material difference between Toasted Corn Flakes as we make them and as you buy them.
> 'It has constantly been my ambition to deliver the flakes to you as fresh and crisp as they are when they come from our ovens.
>
> "By the use of new machinery we are able to offer you, at no increase of price, Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes so perfectly sealed that wherever and whenever you buy them they will be as fresh, tender and crisp as the moment they left the ovens. We call this 'Waxtite' the seal of quality.
>
> "This is the most important announcement I ever made."

Selling Arguments.

The greatest protection which was ever afforded to the dealer, wholesaler, consumer and manufacturer is combined in this "Waxtite" wrapper, which covers every package of Kellogg's Toasted Corn Flakes. Why?

(1) It protects the contents of the package from outside contamination.

(2) Keeps intact the original flavor and aroma of the goods.

(3) Brings the contents of the package to the table as fresh and cisp as the moment they leave our toasting ovens.

(4) Protects contents from odors commonly found in grocery stores such as kerosene, codfish and the like.

(5) When the consumer properly follows instructions and cuts around the top of the package, leaving a cap, the contents can be kept from outside contamination after opening.

(6) Impossible for bugs, insects or other vermin to contaminate the food before it is opened or after.

(7) Guarantees to the grocer that the contents will not grow stale and become a loss on his hands.

(8) Guarantees to the wholesaler that every package or case of "Waxtite" goods leaving his place will give perfect satisfaction to his trade.

(9) The manufacturer increases his sales, because every package is in perfect condition when it reaches the ultimate consumer.

Wipe Out Every Flaw.

In this case it was not considered enough by this firm to produce goods to the highest quality at their factory; they went further and made sure that their goods reached the consumer's table in that condition.

This important work spread over the whole country by energetic merchandising and intelligent advertising announcements, is one of the great and unappreciated economies and achievements of this industrial age.

When a concern has invested millions in plants and invests other millions in its name you have the satisfaction of knowing with absolute certainty, that that Name, the honor and reputation of the house, are its most valuable assets.

The man who has put his intelligence, his reputation and millions of dollars into advertising can no more afford to lower his quality, regardless of increased prices, than he could afford to set fire to a factory worth millions. You can make your factory over again, buy new machinery, but you cannot remake a Name once damaged.

Therefore, a name built upon costly and thorough advertising is—what is even more important—a guarantee for the public.

Radium Paint.

M. Quenisset, of the Flammarion Observatory at Juvisy, has recently pointed out that good use may be made of radium paint in astronomy, as it is found very convenient for illuminating the cross-wires of telescopes. The degree of illumination may be varied, since it is now possible to buy paints which are more or less luminous according to the amount of radium bromide they contain. Radium paints will also be found useful for illuminating the divisions of circles and verniers, details of star-maps, etc.

Famous Beauties and Their Dress

While every past age can boast its Helens, our generation is the only one among the thousands already counted, that has produced no beauties whose names will be handed down to posterity in history. There are pretty women galore but are there any professed beauties whose names shall descend imperishably to the generations yet to come?

We cannot open a page of history that does not record the fame of some beauty. The Bible has its Rachel, so lovely that twenty years of service was deemed a light fee for her affections. The world was lost of Cleopatra, while the beautiful mistresses of the French kings ruled the world through the hearts of their imperial lovers. Even down to the days of George the Fourth there has been some lady whose charms have been more powerful than monarchs and prime ministers.

But the problem may be solved, for if we were to revive the dress of bygone ages we should reveal all the beauty or ugliness of those days. There must have been a great deal of ugliness, otherwise beauty would not have been so forcibly appreciated. Had there been more pretty girls in the days of Troy, Helen would have had few suitors, and Ilium might have been standing yet. In those times people dressed so unbecomingly that, unless their features were perfect, they were literally nothing and all the mirror graces, which set off a person now, were unavailing.

For instance, Helen must have worn a loose robe, a broad girdle, with bare arms, sandals on her feet, and her hair bound back in those rich, magnificent braids termed to this day Grecian plaits.

But imagine for a moment all your acquaintances dressed in this way. Would not the majority be a sight to behold? How few faces, how few complexions could stand the banding back of the thick hair? How few figures would show well beneath the simple robe? How few feet would be endurable in sandals? How few arms would bear the noonday sun and the sharp winds?

Perhaps the Jewish costume of Rebecca and Rachel may have been a shade better, but here was the same exposure of neck and arms, with the additional disadvantage of a robe that showed a leg encased in hideous boots and hose, and that refused to sweep with Grecian amplitude round the limbs of the fair wearers.

Cleopatra is represented as being both dark and stout, and might wear only the robes of white or purple, the heavy diadem, the strings of pearls that were allotted to the garb of Egyptian princesses. How dark and how uncomely must have been the majority of her country-women may be judged by the sensation she made.

The Roman ladies were famed for their stately carriage, and somewhat large but noble features, and when to these charms are added those of delicacy and beautiful coloring, no doubt their simple style of dress was especially becoming to them. Without these latter qualifications, how gaunt and coarse they must have appeared.

We read of some ladies so strikingly lovely as to be known to all the world by the fame of their eyes only. Of these, we may name Edith of the swan neck, so called from the brilliant whiteness of a skin capable of resisting the exposure to sun and wind which tanned and freckled into frightfulness the queens and lofty ladies of those rude days. Rosamond the fair, so fair that it was said of her, "none but a jealous and exasperated woman could have harmed her." Beatrice Cenci, whose beauty makes one shudder, so mysterious seems the light in those untroubled eyes, soon about to close beneath the pressure of an awful fate. Lucrezia Borgia, an angel in face, a demon at heart. Mary, Queen of Scots, whom "no man ever beheld without love."

At a later time, when the names of some favorite beauties are again recorded, the costume, totally different, was so hideous that no one could wear it with impunity. Hence the high reputation for beauty of Pauline Bonaparte and Madame Recamier. The former is described as appearing at a party given by her mighty brother, in a tunic of white muslin, reaching a little below the knees and commencing far below the shoulders, the waist exceedingly short and bound with a narrow girdle, sandals covering the small feet, while a mantle of leopard skin hung round the form of Canova's fairest model.

Madame Recamier is reported to have appeared in the parks of London, clad in a robe, scanty and simple, her dark hair wreathed around her head and fastened with a bodkin to the summit, a scarlet mantle wrapped about her.

As we descend the stream of time, the number of celebrated beauties decreases. This may be attributed to an increasing knowledge of the art of dress. Indifferent complexion, bad figures, irregular features began to have something like fair play shown them. Exigencies met with assistance from costumers, and in the same degree that plain women were made to appear less plain, were the beauties less prominent, and the distance lessened.

Nowadays the toilette of a lady is conducted upon principles most becoming to all. Every lady is at liberty to bring out her own good points as she thinks best, and it is easy to do so, as well as to conceal her weak ones, without departing from the fashions.

A Nightmare.

Ethel—Look, there goes Fred. He called me a dream last night.
Bertha—How funny! It was only last week that Fred was telling me what awful dreams he had.

Twelve Armenians at St. Catharines volunteered to go and fight for their country, and $2,200 was raised at the meeting for Armenian sufferers.

Farmer's Hard Luck.

Earth in the upper peninsula is so kind that, tickle her with a hoe and she laughs with a harvest, but there are some drawbacks, it seems. A farmer down at An Train put out cabbage one year, and grew perfectly marvelous heads weighing, every one of them, forty pounds or less, but dog gone the luck, next year the place was just like cut-over land again, and it took the farmer all season to clean out the cabbage stumps.—Detroit News.

First Clockmaker Unknown.

It is uncertain when the first clock was constructed. Its invention is claimed by many nations. There is a tradition that the first clock was invented by the Chinese in the year 2000 B. C., and another that it was invented in Germany in the eleventh century. The first clock of which we have any description is the one which was set in the tower of the palace of Charles V of France in 1379 by a man named Henry DeVick.

Air Power.

An Italian inventor has produced a scheme by which vehicles of wheels and carriages and springs are to be propelled by air. According to the accounts, the scheme is to have huge tanks by the wayside holding vast quantities of compressed air. Locomotives and automobiles and tractors and motorcycles can run alongside and connect their tanks to the mother tank, get a lot of compressed air on board and run to the next stop.

How Seeds Are Distributed.

Among the most curious methods of seed distribution are those seeds which are carried through the air on wings, such as the maple, which has two wings, and the catalpa, the elm, the ash and the pine. These seeds do not flap their wings like birds, but depend altogether upon the force of the wind to carry them along. Other floating seeds are the milkweed, thistle and dandelion.

Shoe Shine.

A most satisfactory way to dress shoes is to rub them with a section of an orange or a lemon and then to polish with a dry cloth. It gives a brilliant luster to shoes not badly worn and does not soil the clothing. It is often a convenience in freshening up shoes at the end of a journey, for fruit is easily obtained.

Fast Colors.

"I though you said this bathing suit was in fast colors," said Binks indignantly to the hosier of whom he had bought his suit. "Yes, sir that's certainly what I said," returned the hosier, rubbing his hands suavely. "Well, every wretched stripe on the thing has come off on my back!" retorted Binks. "Ah, but wait until you try to get them off your back," said the hosier "Then you'll see."

A Little Too Much.

The high wages paid now to servant girls give point to this story: "A young flying officer met a pretty girl — er — informally at Hanlon's Point one afternoon. She was dressed awfully swell and when they separated she gave him a very fashionable address; so the next time he was in town, he wired her to meet him at the King Edward for dinner. She turned up, looking smarter than ever, and after dinner they did a theatre. A brother officer sat in a box, and the young airman waved to him, but got a rather quizzical response. 'What ails Topper?' he thought and at the end of the act his question was answered. 'Hello, there!' Topper said, coming up to him in the lobby. 'I don't mind your taking out my wife's maid, old man, but I wish to goodness you'd ask her to wear her own frocks!'"

A New Fish.

The prince of Monaco has discovered a new fish which lives at a depth of 20,000 feet under a pressure of 600 atmospheres. Although at such a depth there is practically no light, the grimaldichtys profundissimus, as this dweller of the depths has been christened, has rudimentary eyes. The fish was brought up during one of the prince's oceanographical cruises off the Cape Verdi islands. Two other species not hitherto known, were caught in the same region at a depth of over 15,000 feet.

Regency of Tunis.

The regency of Tunis, having its northern or Mediterranean limit in the same latitudinal position as the state of North Carolina and, like North Carolina, supporting an estimated population of 2,000,000 on an area of about 50,000 square miles, is essentially an agricultural country, deriving its wealth from farm and mine.

"Horse" Chestnut.

It is said that the name "horse" chestnut was derived from the fact that when the leaves of the tree fall there is a scar left on the twig in the shape of a horseshoe that bears marks resembling the nails of a shoe.

The Time For Kindness.

Better the little deed to-day
Which soothes some heart in sorrow,
Than all the splendid things you may
In kindness do to-morrow.

Who waits until his hands can bear
Rich treasures to the living,
Is apt to have dead men to wear
The roses of his giving.

To Keep Standing Cars Warm.

At London, Ont., the Public Utilities Commission has installed at the curbside on principal streets several outlets. At these outlets connections can be made for electric heaters by automobile owners to prevent freezing of radiators and water-circulating systems when cars are parked along the curb. E. V. Buchanan, general manager at London, Ont., has proposed the installation of such outlets throughout the downtown section, each outlet to be protected by a locked cabinet and key rented to automobile owners at $5 per year. A record will be kept of the owners' car numbers so that inspectors passing along the streets can detect any user of the service who has not made the required deposit.

STRIKERS WOULD RETURN TO WORK

INSIST ON FULL SENIORITY RIGHTS AND NO DIS-ULTIMATUM

RAILWAYS REJECT PROPOSALS

SAY MEN HAVE FORFEITED RIGHTS BY NOT ACCEPTING ULTINATUM

(By Canadian Press.)

New York, April 23.—Railroad managers today flatly rejected a direct appeal of strikers in New York district that they be restored to duty with full seniority rights, and that the strike be settled.

In public interest, it is announced that the railroads had taken the position that the strikers had forfeited seniority rights by failure to return to work before expiration of the roads' ultimatum. This announcement was made after a meeting of the General Managers' Association, which was attended by the presidents of a number of railroads.

Would Aid Industry.

The striking railroad workers in New York district appealed directly to the railroad managers today for restoration to duty and a settlement of the strike "in public interests." In a letter to the chairman of the General Managers' Association, Edward McHugh, strike leader, asked for immediate restoration to duty without discrimination, and with full seniority rights, in order to release the wheels of industry .

REPORT SALE OF CARS.

At [illegible] -ation yesterday attention was drawn to the fact that owners of cars who sell them are required by law to report the transaction to the Departmen of Public Highways, Toronto, giving the name of the purchaser within four days of the sale. Failure to do this will make the seller liable to a fine of $20.

There are a number of car transactions taking place in the city at the present time, and if the persons concerned will remember the above facts they will probably save themselves from a lot of future trouble It was pointed out that the information required was for assistance in tracing owners of cars in case of accidents, breaches of the law, etc.

LADIES! DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

Use Grandma's Sage Tea and Sulphur Recipe and Nobody will Know.

The use of Sage and Sulphur for restoring faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. She used it to keep her hair beautifully dark, glossy and attractive. Whenever her hair took on that dull, faded or streaked appearance, this simple mixture was applied with wonderful effect.

But brewing at home is mussy and out-of-date. Nowadays, by asking at any drug store for a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," you will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

A well-known downtown druggist says it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

DEATH TOLL NOW 283

(By Canadian Press.)

Birmingham, April 23.—Reports received directly from those portions of Albama, Mississippi and Tennessee swept by Tuesday's tornadoes brought the death list up to 283. The families made homeless were estimated in same reports at nearly five hundred, and livestock and property losses placed at two million. Canadas

RE-CONSTRUCTION

Writing in the made-in-Canada number of "The New Democracy," Mr. H. J. Halford, vice-president of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, says: "The recent decline in the value of the Canadian dollar has brought home to most of us the urgent need for patronising home industry, of developing our own resources, and finally of developing our own manufacturing processes to a point where Canada will be in future to a larger extent, self-supporting than she has been in the past." Provided that they are not used as a pretext for unduly increasing the cost of Canadian goods, Mr. Halford continues: "No patriotic citizen of this Dominion can find fault with the various campaigns which are being conducted for the purpose of inducing the rank and file of the Canadian people to purchase the products of Canadian mills. Similar campaigns have been conducted in other countries with notable success."

Opposing direct action, Mr. J. C. Watters, who was a fraternal delegate to the British Trades Union Congress from the Quebec convention in 1918, and delegate to the Paris Labor Conference, speaking at a labor mass meeting in Halifax recently, said: "There are two means of settling industrial disputes. The first of these is by ballot, and the second by direct action. The latter aims at paralyzing the nation itself, but at the last analysis it means civil war."

The Australian Government has declined to support the agrarian demand for a continuance of the compulsory wheat pool. At a conference of wheat growers, held in Melbourne in February under the auspices of the Victorian Farmers' Union, a resolution was unanimously adopted favoring continuance of the compulsory pooling arrangement. The Prime Minister of Australia, discussing the resolution, said that while the Government was ready to furnish financial aid to a voluntary wheat pool, it would not do anything to assist the compulsion of farmers who did not wish to join the pool, even if their number was small. Since the meeting a considerable number of farmers who were not represented at the conference have declared themselves against a compulsory pool, and the United States Trade Commissioner in Melbourne reports that the idea is now likely to be abandoned.

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York, in a review of the foreign trade of British India, refers to the "industrialization" of that country. The writer points out several instances of "a measurable substitution of worked-up products" for raw materials in the export trade of India. He adds: "It seems clear that the standard of living in India has slowly but surely been rising—even though the rise may seem to be of almost infinitesimal character. This will make for better markets for foreign goods. At the same time only increased productivity can bring about a permanent rise in the standard of living, and this can come only through industrial progress."

The Danish Exchange Board has recommended to the Government of Denmark that legislation be enacted at once giving the Board power to control all imports. If such power be granted, the Exchange Board will be in a position not only to stop all imports of luxuries but also to restrict the importation of necessities. The United States Commissioner at Copenhagen has reported that permission to import will likely be given only in cases where raw materials are purchased that are absolutely necessary to maintain Danish industries.

He adds that even imports of raw materials will be reduced to the smallest possible amount.

The United States Trade Commissioner at Melbourne, Australia, in a report to the Department of Commerce at Washington, says: "There is a movement on foot to boost goods manufactured in Australia especially canned fruits . . . ." The Commissioner further states that in the four months of the new fiscal year, importations into Australia of textiles and wearing apparel were less than half of those of the same months of 1918, while importations of machinery nearly doubled. This development he considers to be "an indication of the rapid growth of the movement to make Australia self-sufficient in the matter of clothing."

Speaking at a luncheon in London, England, given by the British Association of Trade and Technical Journals Sir Auckland Geddes, formerly president of the British Board of Trade and now ambassador to the United States, said in part: "'Cheap plenty' cannot be enjoyed again until the whole world is restocked with goods. . . . The Government's interest is to get prices down, and it can be relied on to play its part; but all men and women in this country have a part to play also—to cut down the consumption of goods to the lowest possible level, to avoid all extravagance, and to work their hardest at their job, so that the output of our factories and the efficiency of our commercial, financial, and general trading organisations may be brought to the highest level of efficiency of which we are capable."

Development of the British drug industry, brought about by the war, has rendered Great Britain largely independent of foreign sources of supply.

Recent despatches from Great Britain announce that steps have been taken for the formation of the most powerful banking organization in the history of peace-time finance, to aid in restoring the industrial life of Central Europe. Leaders of British finance are said to have prepared a practical and scientific scheme, involving a semi-barter principle, by which raw materials will be allowed to flow into Central Europe there to be manufactured for export to the world's markets.

LUDEC WAS FORCED TO LIVE ON MILK

COULD EAT NOTHING SOLID FOR MONTHS—TANLAC AGAIN PROVES MERIT.

"Tanlac has done for me in just a few days what I have been trying for five years to get other medicines to do," said Eugene Ludec, 1351 Logan street, Montreal, Canada, an employe of the Columbus Rubber Co. Ltd., Montreal.

"For the past five years I had been in a badly rundown, weakened condition. My appetite was very poor, and while I never dared to eat meat or any other solid food, but confined myself strictly to a milk diet, I suffered terribly from indigestion. After every meal I would bloat up with gas, my heart would palpitate dreadfully, and I had awful cramps in the pit of my stomach. I suffered nearly always with severe headaches, which at times was so bad I could scarcely see, my eyes pained me so bad. I was o extremely restless at night I do not believe I ever slept more than two hours any night. My complexion was pale and sallow, my tongue was always coated, and if I got the least bit hot I would break out all over with a rash.

"I had tried many different medicines, at nothing ever did me any good until I began taking Tanlac. It seemed to be made especially for my case, and I commenced to improve almost at once, and gained five pounds by the time I had finished the first bottle. I have only taken two bottles so far, but even now I can eat all the meat or anything else I want without having the least sign of gas, palpitation or cramps, and I have such a big appetite my meat and grocery bill has more than doubled. I sleep fine every night, and have not had a headache since I started taking Tanlack. My complexion has cleared up to a good healthy color, my tongue is no longer coated, and I never have a sign of rash. In fact, I am enjoying perfect health. I don't think there is another medicine that will compare with Tanlac, and I am glad to have the opportunity to recommend it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

INCREASE IN FINANCE.

(By Canadian Press.)

Savings deposits increased during the month by approximately ten million dollars.

ALGONQUIN PARK

In the Algonquin Park of Ontario, Canada possesses a virgin wilderness within easy striking distance of civilization and city life. Here the tired business man—and his wife and daughter, too—can get out into the big open spaces, brush away the mental cobwebs and feel the red blood course through the veins once more. When the breathless days and glaring heat of summer make life in the city a burden, Algonquin Park (only 200 miles north of Toronto and 170 miles west of Ottawa) is a place of refuge and enchantment. This great reserve of nearly three thousand square miles is on the very ridge of the "Highlands of Ontario." Its altitude above sea level averages 1,700 feet, while some of the lakes in the Park are 2,000 feet above the sea. The "Highland Inn" offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. Make your reservations early as the probabilities are that the available accommodation will be taken up early this season. Write N. T. Clarke, Manager, Highland Inn, Algonquin Park Station, Ont., or apply for information to any Grand Trunk Agent.

A COLUMN FOR VETERANS

(By Mike.)

In an editorial entitled "Who are the dangerous reds?" The Breeze, a London returned soldiers' paper, wages war on the profiteers, especially of that city, who are not only charging high prices, but also short weighting the people. The Breeze threatened to publish the names of the offenders, which had been suppressed from the other newspapers, and in the issue to hand this threat was carried out. Such action will no doubt have the effect of at least deterring others from short weighting the public.

President Harry Flynn of the U. V. L. is at it again. This time he would take the fight to the Governor-General and even to the King, and demands the resignation of the Borden Government and a vote on the gratuity question. But there is no intention on the part of the Government to resign for many months to come. As far a referendum on the question, we have in mind two particular instances of a referendum on this question, and in both cases the vote was against the returned soldier. The one was at Brantford, where the people repudiated the action of the city council in granting the G. W. V. A. $10,000 towards a home, and the other was in Paris, where similar action took place, in spite of the pleas of all the prominent men in both towns. Both places were considered to be very patriotic in sentiment, and the results were more or less of a surprise. Is it to be expected that a referendum of the whole country would bring a different result?

Comrade Rawlinson, of Toronto, the other day made an appeal to the Commission for more adequate pensions for the disabled. He is a blind soldier ,and it will be remembered that during the convention here he rose to take objection to any request for special consideration for the blind. He characterized it as class legislation. It is too bad that others are not so scrupulous about class legislation. He demands a fair and necessary increase in the pensions of al disabled soldiers, and the elimination of the necessity for permanently disabled soldiers to appear periodically before a board to decide whether or not their lost sight has returned or their limbs grown again. He feels that in cases such as his own and others where there is no possibility of their category being raised, this duty should be eliminated, and returned soldiers in general will agree with him.

The following despatch will interest all returned men who took part in the battles in the vicinity of Bourlon Wood:

London, April 16. — Sir George Perley has returned from visiting France and has brought with him the deeds of the site for the Canadian Battlefield Memorial at Bourlon Wood given by the Count de Francqueville. A special decree of the French Parliament was necessary for the transfer of this gift from a French citizen to a foreign government.

The information brought back from the Montreal Convention that the affairs of the Veterans were in a serious state and that over $4000 was unaccounted for in one month, came as a surprise to the members of the local branch at the meeting on Monday night. It has been a known fact that The Veteran was not meeting the requirements of the returned men, but it was not thought that the trouble went any deeper than that.

• • • •

In answer to the claim that Canada has treated her soldiers better than any other country in the world, The Veteran in its April issue makes the following comparison based on authentic figures received from Australia recently:

The Australian gratuity is more liberal, is fairer in application, more democratic in principle, and better than that of any of the Dominions.

It gives to the widow or mother of the man who has paid the supreme sacrifice the highest scale. It gives the fighter the thick end of the stick, it gives immediate relief to the blind, the incapacitated, the widow, the fatherless and those in necessitous circumstances, and gives generous treatment to all.

A soldier who left in November, 1914, and was killed in April (at the landing), would have paid to his dependents:

Australia	£120
Canada—about	40
New Zealand—aobut	50

• • • •

A soldier who left in November, 1914, was wounded at Gallipoli, returned, and discharged in November, 1916, would get:

Australia	£120
Canada—about	22
New Zealand	£11 5s.

Two strong arguments in favor of the increased gratuity were brought up at the open meeting this week by Dr. Stevenson of London. The first was that in Australia the entire war debt of the country could be paid off in a year by taking the difference in the price the country would receive for its wool this year over what it received last year. There, apparently, is wealth there, and there is wealth here. The other was that if properly taxed, there was sufficient revenue to be obtained from the nickel of Northern Ontario to pay the whole of the $500,0000,000 asked for gratuities. If there are any more deputations going to Ottawa it would be well for them to carry these little arguments along with them.

It would be interesting to know who was the caretaker of a church in the vicinity of the G.W.V.A. Hall who on Sunday morning last threw stones at a belated bandsman who in his hurry to be on time for the church parade accidentally cut across the corner of the church lawn. It was also noticed that in his rage the caretaker traversed the whole lawn himself. Surely his feet were no lighter than those of the veteran.

DIGESTIVE TROUBLES CAUSE DISTRESS

BUT THEY ARE NEARLY ALWAYS DUE TO THIN WATERY BLOOD.

Do not think that because your stomach is easily upset you are the victim of some serious malady. One of the most common predisposing causes of indigestion is anaemia, or thin, watery blood. In fact it has become generally recognized that healthy activity of the stomach is impossible unless the blood is rich and red.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have been found most valuable in cases of indigestion, nervous dyspepsia and stomach weakness, just because they are a blood builder and nerve tonic. The rich, red blood they make not only imparts a healthy digestion, but carries color to the cheeks and lips and gives vigor to the muscles. One important point to remember is that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills contain no harmful drugs or opiates and are thus to be preferred to preparations that merely stimulate for a time. Before you begin worrying unnecessarily about your state of health, try the tonic treatment of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You will be surprised to see how rapidly your appetite returns and your whole debilitated system revives, as the new, rich blood courses through your body. Here is the statement of one person among thousands who have used Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to their own great advantage. Mrs. A. Venlot, Homford, N.S., says: "For about two years I was a great sufferer from indigestion, which seemed to carry with it a complication of other troubles. Every meal I took brought with it misery, as it was followed by pain. and sometimes nausea and vomiting. At other times gas would form in the stomach to such an extent that my heart would palpitate at an alarming rate. These conditions brought on extreme nervousness and irritability, and I found my general health so much affected that the least exertion would tire me, and I slept but poorly. I had been doctoring for several months with no result beyond slight temporary relief, when I was advised by a friend to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I decided to follow this advice, and got a half dozen boxes. Good results soon began to show from this treatment, and the further continued use of the pills have made me a well woman. I can cheerfully recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to similar sufferers."

You can procure Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or they will be sent you by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by writing direct to The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Chats About Books and Their Authors

(F. M. D.)

It was Sir Anthony Absolute who said that "a circulating library in a town is as an evergreen tree of diabolical knowledge." Sheridan, when he put these words into the mouth of Sir Anthony, had in his mind the consuming appetite of society for the current fiction of the day. "The Reward of Constancy," "The Fatal Connexion," "The Mistakes of the Heart," "The Delicate Distress," "The Tears of Sensibility," "Humphrey Clinker"—these tell their own tale and show what society of a hundred years or more ago loved to read. If evidence were needed of the general neglect at that time of books of a religious flavor it is found a sentence or two further on in the same scene of the play, where the maid is depicted as using "The Whole Duty of Man" for the purpose of pressing some love-locks belonging to her mistress. Custom at the present time would, in certain instances, seem to be moving along parallel lines. I once visiting an acquaintance in the country. In the course of conversation he told me that his house had been burglarized a few days before my arrival, but that although the thieves had stolen some clothing and other articles, they had failed to locate his money. The reason, he said, with a chuckle, was that he always kept his bills pressed between the leaves of the family Bible, and as nobody ever opened it he found it the safest place in the house for keeping his money.

Fiction holds first place and always will in the affections of the public. It is only natural that it should do so, for, so long as the world endures men and women will find one of their chief pleasures in reading books that depict the faults, foibles or excellencies of human nature. But there is a serious side to the subject, and that is that in the rush for novels the main object of the founding of a library may be lost sight of. It may easily be forgotten that it contains many classes of literature, books for the student, books for the artist, books for the mechanic, books for the Divine Nobody connected with a library can be blamed if books are purchased which lie neglected on the shelves. The fault really lies with those who do not take the trouble to find out what a library possesses. It does not seem to enter into the minds of many of us that there is almost as great an obligation resting upon us to acquire the means of knowledge as there is that we should go to church or say our prayers. We cannot attain to a truly high plane unless we are equipped intellectually as well as spiritually. There is no royal road to knowledge. It can only be acquired by reading and by observation, and if our people would only realise this there would be a greater demand on our library resources.

A branch of literature which is not nearly as well patronized as it should be is natural science. Few people seem to be aware how much is comprised in the term. The ideas of most persons regarding it seem to centre round beetles, butterflies and wild animals. The following ranks of subjects to be found under this heading will probably surprise many: Mathematics, astronomy, physics, chemistry, geology, palaeontology, biology, botany and zoology. A great many sub-headings come under these main ones but enough is given to show the wide scope of this class of literature. Many do not understand the meaning of some of the terms given. Physics deals with certain phenomena in the material world such as glases, heat, light, sound, electricity and magnetism. Palaeontology with past geological periods in connection with the remains of mammals, birds, reptiles, fishes, etc. Biology is the science of life and discusses the natural history of man. It can plainly be seen from the foregoing how much of interest is to be gleaned in this section of the library. At this period of the year nature study is uppermost in the minds of nature-lovers. Springtide is preparing to spread its glories over hill and dale. Here are books to regale you. Thoreau and Burroughs, Gilbert White and Jefferies those wonderful writers, will explain to you many things that you have wondered at but never known the meaning of. In their company new delights will be experienced and a broader vision of life be vouchsafed to you.—F. M D.

STANDING ROOM ONLY LAST NIGHT

SCOND PERFORMANCE OF JOINT "Y'S" EXHIBITION A SUCCESS

The plan was completely sold out for the second performance of the combined Y.W.C.A. and Y.M.C.A. closing exhibition last evening, and many were unable to secure seating accommodation. Some preferred to stand rather than miss the performance, which was indeed of such a nature as to amply repay them for the inconvenience.

Great credit is reflected upon the respective physical directors for the excellent showing made by their callies on the two nights especially the "wee tots." Miss Price and Mr. Loomis are both local products and have graduated to their present positions from the gymnasiums which they now direct.

The program was of the same excellent nature as on Thursday, perhaps with the addition that stage fright, if there was any, had disappeared from the younger classes and they were shown at their best. Peterborough may well be proud of her disciples of the terpsichorean art as interpreted by the Y.W. girls and the splendid muscular development of the boys of the local Y.M.C.A. It is recommended that all who have not already done so should take the last opportunity tonight of witnessing this fine performance, which closes tonight.

It is the first time that the public have had the opportunity of witnessing the work of both institutions at the same time.

FREE PATIENTS FROM ANXIETY

TUBERCULAR SOLDIERS TO BE GENEROUSLY PROVIDED FOR

Ottawa, Ont., April 24.—Dr. C. Wace, F.R.C.S., of Vancouver, called by the Pensions Committee yesterday thought generally the B.C. men were well satisfied with orthopaedic appliances supplied them. There were few complaints. The artificial legs were very satisfactory and the Canadian artificial arms the best he had yet come across.

Dr. Wace said he was noticing a decided tendency among disabled men to gravitate toward the warmer climate of British Columbia.

Twelve per cent. of tubercular cases treated by the D.S.C.R. had been apparently arrested, while over fifty per cent. were quiescent or improved. He emphasized the fact that once a man had been treated for tuberculosis he was always subject to re-attack. He had been rather startled by the number of men who began to go down after his sanatorium treatment ended. There was need of after-care work among the men.

He saw few attractions for tubercular men in farm life, though they were urged to follow that. Men must have enough income to free them from anxiety if they were to recover after leaving the sanatorium. Dr. Wace asked, "Can we not do something to help these men besides giving them a pension?" He favored a tubercular man being returned to employment similar to that he left on enlistment.

CIVIL SERVICE BONUS LIBERAL

Ottawa, April 24.—Some dissatisfaction is being manifested in Civil Service circles at the fact that no announcement is forthcoming on the amount of the bonus for the current year.

Many rumors are afloat, and the general impression is that the bonus will be much the same as last year, except to those whose salaries are above $3,000, who have been practically promised something this year.

This extension of the bonus necessitates some changes for those whose salaries are just below $3,000. Last year these received very little extra money, the bonus being graded down to nothing at $3,000. Obviously these will receive more this year, if those over $3,000 are to participate to any extent.

The Ontario Jockey Club directors at a meeting in Toronto yesterday decided to hold their spring meeting as arranged.

real in 1907 to become division engineer of the Montreal division which is by far the most important division on the C. P. R.. After a year in this position he was promoted to be principal assistant engineer at Montreal and later, in 1910, to be engineer of the Maintenance of Way Department with offices at Montreal From 1911 till 1918 he held this position of assistant engineer at Montreal and in the year 1918 he reached the prized heights of chief engineer of the C. P. R. When one considers the magnitude of such a corporation as the C P. R. and the tremendous work it covers, the importance of the position of chief engineer to such a corporation can better be grasped. Daily decisions affecting perhaps expenditures of thousands and thousands of dollars have to be made by his department. And the direction of such work calls for the greatest possible amount of ability in a man. It is therefore of especial pride to Peterborough, the city of his birth that with the entire Dominion from the Atlantic to the Pacific to choose from a Peterborough born and educated man should be deemed best fitted for so important a position as the one which John R. Fairbairn now holds.

In the year 1898 he married Hannah Louise MacFarlane, daughter of Thomas MacFarlane, chief analyst of the Inland Revenue Department, Ottawa, and is now the proud father of one son and three daughters.

In spite of very active life in the engineering world, Jack Fairbairn has found time to belong to many clubs and to take an interest in sport of different classes but particularly of golf, at which he is a past master. He is a member of the University Club of Montreal and Toronto, the Kanawaki Golf Club, Hermitage Country Club, Magog Club, R. C. Y. C. He is also a member of many societies the majority of which are connected with his profession as an engineer. Some of the most important are: The Institution of Civil Engineers, England, Engineering Institute of Canada of which he is the vice president, American Society of Civil Engineers, and the American Railway Engineering Associaton.

In addition to these many activities Mr. Fairbairn, who is a Presbyterian by religious persuasion, has taken a great interest in all movements of a religious nature and has been an ardent supported of the various endeavors of the Presbyterian church. At present he resides on Belmont Avenue in the beautiful residential suburb of Westmount, Montreal.

Comparitively speaking Mr. Fairbairn is yet a young man and a vast field of endeavor in his profession still lays before him. While the past has produced for him a wonderful record of progress, it is safe to say that where so much has already been accomplished the future will produce much more.

NO DIVISION YET ON REFERENDUM

QUESTION DELAYED IN LEGISLATURE UNTIL TUESDAY, APRIL 27th.

TWO SURPRISES YESTERDAY

McCREARY RESOLUTION WON OVER TWO SUPPORTERS FROM CONSERVATIVES

Expectations of a division on the McCreary resolution were shattered in the Legislature last evening when the leaders of the various groups, satisfied that it would be impossible to get to the end of the list of speakers by midnight, agreed to postpone the wind-up of the debate and the voting until Tuesday, when the whips will have every member in his place. The debate was late in starting yesterday, and fewer members were heard than upon the first day.

There were two "surprises" yesterday, the McCreary resolution winning two supporters from the ranks of the Conservatives. The two Cooke, of North Hastings, and A. N. Rankin, of Frontenac, went on record in brief speeches, the former as an out and out opponent of both amendment and a supporter of the referendum resolution, the latter as a supporter of the resolution in the event of the Hill amendment, which calls for the assumption of responsibility by the Government, being defeated. The Government may be said to have gained a point also by the declaration of Dr. Forbes Godfrey that he would vote against the Brackin amendment, and it is the vote upon that amendment that the Government fears more than the [illegible] of [illegible] on the resolution itself. He will also vote against the resolution. Captain "Joe" Thompson, Conservative member for North East Toronto, went on record as favoring the Hill amendment and [illegible] that the Brackin proposal [illegible] case.

Only two Liberals spoke during the day, Capt. [illegible] [illegible] West Toronto and John O'Neill, South [illegible] Toronto. Both declared they would vote for the Brackin amendment. Mr. O'Neill introduced a refreshing note of frankness by stating that he was prepared to advocate submitting to the people a question asking for a verdict upon the sale of wine and beer.

GRATIFYING SALE

At the regular meeting of the Y. W. C. A. Auxiliary, held in the Y. W. C. A. yesterday afternoon, a very gratifying report of the sale of work and cooking, which was conducted on the market last Saturday, was presented. Plans for the future were discussed, but no definite action taken. The chair was occupied by the president, Mrs. Breyfogle.

The Labor party of Great Britain is urging Premier Lloyd George to accept for Britain a mandate for Palestine.

QUIT MEAT WHEN KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a glass of Salts if your Back hurts or Bladder troubles you.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which excites the kidneys, they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, and everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and [illegible] [illegible].

NEW MYSTERY PLAY AT GRAND THEATRE

A PRODUCTION WHICH WILL MEET WITH APPROVAL OF TIRED PUBLIC

Were the management of the Grand Opera House Theatre to describe the [illegible] points of "The Revelations of a Wife," that new mystery play that opens its engagement on Tuesday, April 27 for two days, he would undertake an almost impossible task, as the play is hard to describe, and for that reason the dramatic critics have deemed it fit to call it a play of mystery. At present, the tired public seems to want plays of the mysterious order for the unbounded success of "Three Faces East," "The Invisible Foe," "The Unknown Purple," "The Woman in Room 13," "The Crimson Alibi at Nine Forty-Five," etc., plays now running in New York and playing to capacity business proves demand. A strong capable cast has been secured, including names of very successful and popular performers. A beautiful scenic production in keeping with the strong cast guarantees a mysterious and delightful entertainment. Daily matinees for ladies only will be given, but the evening performances are for everybody over sixteen.

About 700 employes of the Dominion Sugar Refinery Co., at Chatham may be idle on account of the switchmen's strike.

THE NEWEST DRAMATIC PRODUCTION STAGED

"REVELATIONS OF A WIFE" COMES ENDORSED BY ALL LEADING CRITICS

The newest thing, dramatically, is the offering to the theatre-going public of that latest sensational mystery play "The Revelations of a Wife," which plays at the Grand Opera House for two days, starting Tuesday, April 27. Besides being mysterious until the final drop of the curtain, it contains a strong plea of sympathy for the innocent. This is an immensely powerful pay with a tear or a laugh in every line, with an exceptionally strong cast. The local management can be congratulated on being one of the first to secure this pleasing attraction before its New York engagement. Daily matinees for ladies only will be given, but the evenings are for everybody over the age of sixteen.

SCHOOL MOTION PICTURE EXHIBIT

The Ontario Provincial Motion Picture Bureau has devised a plan, with the approval of the Minister of Education and the Provincial Treasurer whereby a demonstration of motion picture films having a practical educational value will be given in each of the High Schools, Collegiate Institutes and Normal Schools throughout the Province.

One of these demonstrations will be given in the Assembly Hall of the local Collegiate Institute on Monday, April 26th, at 8 p.m. The program of films to be used will include:

"A Glimpse of Muskoka."

"Through Life's Windows" (a study of the eye).

"Successful Farm Methods."

"The Story of Paper."

"Topical Events in Ontario."

"The Gasoline Engine."

"A Cartoon Comedy."

These are representative of the films carried in the Motion Picture Bureau's library, and it is hoped that these will prove serviceable in supplementing the regular school curriculum. The exhibition will be free, and it is particularly requested that all teachers and others interested in educational work will avail themselves of the opportunity of being present.

EARLY MARRIAGES.

They Were Very Common In the Middle Ages.

In tracing your ancestry through the Dark Ages of Europe you will be benefited by always remembering the very early ages at which marriages took place. Under the feudal system the land as well as the people was the property of the king. He distributed the land among his retainers at will. No one of the nobility could marry without the consent of the overlord. Children were as pawns on the international chess board, to be used to advance the interests of the sovereign. Usually they were married in childhood. A few illustrations, where dates are given by peerages and other authorities will show the prevailing custom.

Hildegarde, third wife of Charlemagne, was married at thirteen, had nine children, and died at 22. Eleanor of Aquitaine, born 1124, married, 1137, Louis VII. of France. Isabell of Angouleme, born 1185, married, 1200, John of England. Margaret, daughter of Henry III. of England, born 1241, married 1251 Alexander of Scotland. Isabell daughter of Edward I. of England, born 1283, married, 1298, John Holland. Edward I. of England married, second, 1299, Marguerite of France, born 1283. Edward II. of England married, 1309, Isabel of France, born 1295. Edward III. of England married, 1327, Philippa of Hainault, born 1313. Richard II. of England married, second, 1396, Isabel of Valois, born 1387. Elizabeth de Bohun, born 1363, married, 1274, when 11, Thomas of Gloucester. Joan Beaufort, born 1373, married, first, 1390, Robert Ferrers by whom she had two daughters. She married, second, 1396, Ralph Neville, by whom she had thirteen children. She died 1440. By first husband Joan had Elizabeth Ferrers, born 1393, married, 1410, John, Lord Greystock, and had Anne Greystock, born 1415, who married Ralf Bigod, who died 1462. Thomas Despenser, 1373-1400, had Isabel Despenser, born 1400, posthumous, who married, 1411, Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Worcester, 1397-1421. Their daughter, Elizabeth Beauchamp, born September 16, 1415, married, before October 16, 1424, Edward Neville, Lord Bergaveny. She died June 18, 1448, aged 32. Isabel Despenser married, second, November 26, 1423, as second wife, Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, 1382-1439, cousin to her first husband, by whom she had Henry and Anne, who married Richard Neville, king maker.

The Solution.

Two boys went out to buy a pitcher of milk. The boys helped themselves to the milk freely on the way home; then at the last minute their courage failed them. "Gosh," said the first boy, "we've drunk too much of it! What shall we do, Joe?" "We'll drop the pitcher."

Salts of the Ocean.

The total amount of dissolved salts in the ocean would, it is calculated, if extracted, form a pavement 170 feet thick on the entire seabed.

Long-Standing Evil

Effective Measures Taken

Since childhood Mr. A. Cail was under the shadow of a great evil, which always menaced his comfort and safety. Read what he says:—

"I was troubled with my kidneys since childhood and spent a large amount of money trying to get cured. Instead of getting better, I kept getting worse until a friend of mine advised me to try Gin Pills. I did so, and after taking one box, I was able to get out of bed and walk around. Two more boxes relieved me completely, and since then I have had no return of the trouble."

Many people have kidney and bladder trouble without knowing it. They think nothing of the backache, the pains in the sides, the constant headaches, the rheumatic, sciatic and neuralgic pains, the floating specks before the eyes, the swollen joints, the highly-coloured urine—all signs of trouble—all signs which should receive immediate attention and treatment with Gin Pills, which are by far the most effective of all preparations, and which may help you to avoid a fatal operation. They quickly relieve pain and heal the congested tissues, bringing the organs back to normal. At druggists and dealers, 50c a box. Money back if no relief. Send for free sample.

Poincare Gives Credit to Haig

HOW Haig, by splendid self-sacrifice and patriotism, gave up any right he might have had to be supreme commander of the Allied armies, and made possible the appointment of Foch to that position, was revealed recently when Raymond Poincare, ex-President of the French Republic, delivered a remarkable address welcoming Marshal Foch into membership of the French Academy. The great soldier sat before Poincare as the latter spoke directly to him in the presence of the Assembled Academicians. Poincare was closely associated with the military leaders during the war, and no man in Europe was better qualified to tell of the generalissimo's feats.

The most thrilling part of the speech was that in which Poincare set forth the terrible situation at the time that Foch became supreme commander of the allied armies. He spoke as follows:

"During the winter (1917-18) the Germans had been engaged in transferring seventy-four new divisions from Russia, Roumania and Italy toward France, the permanent object of their covetousness and hatred.

Their general headquarters was established at Spa; Hindenburg and Ludendorff took up their post of command at Avesnes and solemnly announced to their emperor that their army would soon be completely assembled and ready to accomplish 'the greatest task of history.' To make a long story short, they wanted to finish with us before the troops of Gen. Pershing, which were beginning to land every month in important numbers, should be in condition to fight advantageously. The menace of a formidable offensive weighed upon our lines. Marshal Haig and Gen. Petain both prepared to receive the shock.

"It was on March 21, 1918, before dawn, that the blow was struck at one of the most vulnerable points of the front — from Fontaine-les-Croisilles to Fargniers, junction point of the French and British armies, where perhaps a violent and unexpected blow was all that was needed to dislocate the armies. Marwitz and Hutier launched thirty-seven divisions against the fourteen commanded by Gen. Byng and Gen. Gough. The British third army resisted, but the fifth, against which the enemy struck his principal blow, bent. In three days the zone which the Germans had abandoned the year before was again covered by a tidal wave.

"In vain did Petain, ever faithful to the fraternity of arms, gather his reserves and send precipitately to the menaced points Fayolle, Humbert, Debeney and Pelle, who, with whatever came to hand, tried to stem the flood. Ham and Peronne had fallen; Noyon was on the verge of capture; the enemy was marching on Montdidier in order to open the road to Amiens and cut the communications between the British and us.

"On the 24th the danger was so great that the commander-in-chief of the French armies, fearing that he could not longer keep contact with his allies, gave instructions to his lieutenants which showed the possibility of a mortal separation. 'Above all keep the French armies together in solid array. After that, if possible, preserve the liaison with the British forces.' Marshal Haig, on his side, wrote from Abbeville on the 25th that the disjunction of the French and British was only a question of time; that it was necessary, in order to re-establish the situation, to concentrate immediately west of Amiens on the upper course of the Somme at least twenty French divisions, with instructions to strike at the flank of the German attack; and he added that the British army would have to continue its slow retreat fighting every step of the way, to cover the ports of the Pas de Calais. Thus by lack of single command and a master will, the French army was going to be concentrated toward the south and the British army near its Channel bases. It meant catastrophe in a very short time.

"Marshal Haig took account of the peril and telegraphed to the British Chief of Staff in London to beg him to come to France with a member of the Cabinet, to ask for the institution of a single commander. In consequence Lord Milner and Gen. Wilson arrived on the 25th. The same day, M. Clemenceau, you (Foch) and I went with them to Compiegne, to Gen. Petain's headquarters, where we made an appointment for the next day at Doullens to meet Marshal Haig. We mounted to the great reception room of the town hall, and there held a meeting which showed clearly the perfect accord between the two Governments and also the patriotic disinterestedness of Marshal Haig. Charged with the task of co-ordinating the action of the allied armies on the western front, by virtue of the consent of the two commanders-in-chief, you decided immediately that the French and British troops must remain in close connection and must cover Amiens. Within a few hours you saw General Fayolle, Debeney and Gough, to all of whom you gave the same instruction: 'Hold, hold at any cost.'

"On the next day the Germans were stopped on the Oise; and they entered Montdidier, if on the day of Holy Friday, of which Paris keeps such a sad memory. Moreuil in its turn was on the point of falling; le Plemont, on the other hand resisted all assaults, and by Easter Sunday hope had come back to the hearts of the allied armies."

In Society.

"Did you have a good time at the week-end affair?" "Gracious, yes. My husband wouldn't speak to me for two weeks afterward."

The ruling by President Fults that the spitter be banned in the International League is causing dissatisfaction. It is feared that many pitchers will be forced to desert organized baseball.

PRICES FIRMER ON LOCAL MARKETS

Prices were firmer on a slightly smaller market today. Potatoes in particular continue their upward trend and have now reached the high water mark of $6 a bag, and it is more than likely that they will top this price within the next week or so. One farmer was of the opinion that the price next week would be $6.50 a bag, and he seemed to think they were worth that, too. No other reasons than the law of supply and demand were offered for such abnormal prices. Eggs also showed a slight increase in price, although they were fairly plentiful. Later in the day, however, they again dropped to the 45-cent mark of last week. A remarkable feature of the market was the fact that there was still a fairly plentiful supply of maple syrup ranging in price from 90c to $1 a quart according to the quality. Turkeys went for 55c and 60c a pound.

In the auction department cars were at a discount, there being no less than five cars offered at auction, the majority of them being Chevrolets.

The following prices were in force today:

Dairy Produce.

Eggs, 46c to 48c dozen.
Butter, 68c and 70c pound.
Chicken, 40c pound.

Meats.

Pork, 27c to 29c pound.
Beef, 20c to 22c pound.

Vegetables.

Potatoes, $5.50 to $6 a bag.
Carrots, 40c peck.
Parsnips, 40c peck.
White beans, 75c peck.
Onions, $1.25 to $1.50 peck.

THOUGHT HE SHOULD RETAIN HIS WHISKEY

COMPLAINS WET GOODS WERE MISSING WHEN RELEASED FROM JAIL.

Enos Meyette wrote to the Board of Police Commissioners making the complaint that when he was released from jail after facing a charge of a violation of the Ontario Temperance Act the sum of $3.10 and three bottles of whiskey were missing from his belongings. He evidently was under the impression that the whiskey should be carefully saved and returned to him. The communication came before the Board at their regular meeting yesterday afternoon.

Chief Thompson explained to the Board that in such cases the Police Department were now required to confiscate the liquor and forward it to the Provincial License Board, and that was what had been done in this case. As for the $3.10 mentioned that had been used at the prisoner's request while he was in the cells awaiting trial to buy meals for him.

On the motion of the Mayor, the secretary was instructed to write to Mr. Meyette informing of the explanation made by Chief Thompson.

Those present were His Honor Judge Huycke, in the chair, Magistrate Dumble, Chief Thompson and Mayor McIntyre.

On the motion of the Mayor, the following accounts were passed and ordered paid:

T. S. Parker, $7.40; Hydro Electric Commission, $1.40; Peterborough Utilities Commission, 50c; R. A. Northcott, $9.82; Hydro Electric Commission, $2.60; Fanning's Laundry, $1.41; Canadian Pacific Railway, $12.00; Roy Studio, $1.00; Grant and Thorpe, $2.25; Review Printing Co., $8.00; White Bros., $19.40; Treblicock Bros., $3.00; C. P. Telegraph, 90c.

LOCAL TELEPHONE CLUB

Some exceptionally good material was inaugurated into the field of sport, when the local telephone employees, at a meeting held on April 21st, decided upon the formation of a Telephony Club. An extensive program of sports will be carried on by the club during this season. A genuine baseball team has already been formed, which in a very short time will be ready for combatant service with the best of Peterborough's artists.

Bowling and tennis are also on the program of the Telephony Club and a first-class bowling team is now being formed.

The following officers were elected and it is evident that the success of the Telephony Club for the 1920 season is assured:

Hon. President—Alf. A. Smith.
President—R. S. Long.
Hon. Vice-President—G. O. Cameron.
1st Vice-President—T. Sproat.
2nd Vice-President—W. N. Welbourn.
Secretary-Treasurer—D. R. Morrow.
Sports Committee—H. S. Elliott (chairman), H. R. Frost, L. Bartley.
Social Committee—C. M. Thornton (chairman), E. W. Watson, H. H. Lush.

CLEANING BASEBALL SUITS

Oshawa Club has called in all last year's uniforms in order that they may be sent to the laundry and be cleaned. This is a good idea for Lindsay Club to follow. Nothing like starting the season with a brand clean suit. It should not be necessary to purchase new suits this year, when it is considered that it costs over $100 to outfit a baseball team with uniforms today.

BUILDING PERMITS

Among the building permits listed at the city hall during the past week appears one for the construction of the Peterborough Medical Clinic of Charlotte street, the announcement of which appeared in the Review some time ago. It is to cost $42,000 and is expected to be completed by November 15, although this will depend to a large extent on the labor situation during the summer months. Other permits issued during the week were:

Bell Apartments, Hunter street, reconstruction, $8,000; J. E. Haggart, 195 Lock street, alterations, $100; D. D. C. Dawes, 463 Gilmour street, alterations, $600; Wm. Mann, 162 Smith street, alterations, $500; A. J. Tredop, Burnham street, alterations, $100.

FORD CARS IN DEMAND

The demand for the new 1920 Ford Car, which was shown for the first time at the Peterborough Motor Show, meets with the approval of the general public so much that the staff of the Duffus Motor Sales has been taxed to the utmost during the past week in getting cars ready for delivery to scores of customers who have placed their orders. Several carloads have arrived and the staff has been almost doubled in order to not keep customers waiting, but at the present time orders are pouring in faster than shipments. However, the factory is doing its utmost to facilitate delivery and the local dealers hope to be able to keep customers satisfied.

G.W.V.A. TAG DAY GIVE LIBERALLY

CONTRIBUTIONS GO TO RELIEF OF SUFFERING CAUSED BY WAR

Today is the first tag day of the ladies of the G.W.V.A. That is, it is the first time that the handling of the funds so raised has rested solely with the Auxiliary, and according to the reports of the ladies on the streets this morning they are meeting with great success in spite of the fact that there have already been one or two tag days ahead of them this year.

While their numbers are not large they have made up for this fact by arranging their piquets strategically, and the Saturday shopper who manages to evade them will have accomplished quite an achievement. As is the wise custom of the taggers, they placed their piquets on the door leading into the market house. They certainly have no hopes of getting anything from those coming out. The farmers inside would see to that.

The attention of the public is drawn to the fact that the money raised in these tag days is used in the relief of the suffering and the alleviation of conditions caused by the war. There are many such cases continually coming before the ladies of the G. W. V. A. Auxiliary, and they desire to be in a position to assist every needy case.

LIFE-ROMANCE OF FAR FUR COUNTRY

BRITISH EXPERT FILMS MOST REMARKABLE MOVING PICTURE FOR CELEBRATION

Winnipeg, Man., April 23.—The most remarkable moving pictures ever taken in the Canadian North—pictures that are an epitome of the fur trade and set forth with life-like realism the romance of the far fur country—will be exhibited in Winnipeg, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria during the celebration of the 250th anniversary of the Hudson's Bay Company in May.

The pictures were filmed by H. T. Wyckoff, noted cinema expert of the British Educational Films Corporation who spent seven months in the wilderness with expeditions sent out by Hudson's Bay Company. One of these photographic exhibitions was on the company's steamer "Nascopie," under Captain Mack, and covered Labrador, Hudson's Straits and all the country about Hudson's Bay and James Bay. The other was under Captain Tom O'Kelly and travelled through a vast extent of territory in the Athabasca and Great Slave Lake region.

Mr. Wyckoff spent last summer, fall and part of the winter in his quest for photographs. He went into the wilds in June and came out in January. He suffered intensely from heat on Hudson Bay in summer. When winter came, he was in the far Northwest, facing hardships and peril in blinding bizzards and snapping his pictures in cold 65 degrees below zero.

Captain O'Kelly's party in the Athabasca country had many thrilling adventures and encountered many difficulties. They trekked on snowshoes behind dog-teams into remote fastnesses where a camera had never clicked before. They became lost in a blinding storm and dug and cut their way through ice and snow for 135 miles before reaching the shelter of a fur post. Frozen in by a blizzard, their supplies ran low and they faced starvation. Their halfbreed drivers mutinied. Wolves killed their best dogs. In these frozen solitudes, they got their pictures at the risk of their lives.

While with Captain Mack, Mr. Wyckoff took pictures at Moose Factory, Albany and Rupert House, among the oldest Hudson Bay Company posts in Canada; on the bleak Labrador coast, in far Ungava, at Wolsteinholme on the shores of Hudson's Strait and at Cape Dorset and Lake Harbor in Baffin Land north of the strait, the northermost of the company forts in the Hudson Bay region. He obtained many interesting pictures of Eskimo life.

While with Captain O'Kelly he visited the pioneer fur posts of the Northwest, including Chipewyan, Athabasca and Ile a la Crosse, which are associated with the Hudson's Bay Company's earliest trade in that region. He went far out on the far-flung trap lines of the white and Indian trappers and snapped every phase of the trapping industry—the baiting of the lures, wild animals held captive in traps, the curing of their pelts, and taking the furs to the fur posts by dog-sled and pack-train.

Arrangements have been made by the Hudson's Bay Company to exhibit these remarkable films in the five cities in theatres operated by the Allen Theatre Enterprises of Canada. The public will be invited to be the guests of the Hudson's Bay Company at continuous performances during the pageants and celebrations.

Moving pictures will be taken of the Red River pageant at Winnipeg and of the street pageants in Edmonton, Calgary, Vancouver and Victoria during the celebrations and these pictures, which will contrast western Canada's modern development with the pioneer past as represented by the old Hudson's Bay posts of the North, will be added to the film, which it is planned later on to exhibit in eastern Canada, the United States and Great Britain.

OPENING AND DEMONSTRATION OF THE WELL-BABIES' CLINIC

Monday is "wash day." Tuesday is the day we are all going to attend the opening of the Well Babies' Clinic in the G.W.V.A. Hall. There will be such a lot of interesting things to see and hear and learn, lots of lovely babies, and then, just when you are getting a wee bit tired a nice cup of tea. The exhibit will be open in the evening also.

STREET RAILWAY TROUBLE

The street railway service was handicapped yesterday by some slight trouble at the sub-station on Simcoe street, which caused the power to go off at 10.20 a.m. and remain off all day until 6.50 at night, when the cars were again in motion for a short time until 7.50. From 7.50 until 9.30 the power was again off, but complete service was restored in the city at about 9.30. There has been no trouble today and it is hoped that it will not be repeated.

The Brockville Rowing Club, at its annual meeting, decided to engage a professional coach.

HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION AT HOME TO PETERBORO TEACHERS

Members Board of Education Were Present—Very Happy Evening Furnished by the Hosts—Entertainment Numbers and Games Quite Irresistible

An informal "At Home" was given last night by the Home and School Association of the Queen Mary School to all the teachers of the city in the main hall of the Queen Mary School. The inclement weather and other causes affected the attendance in some cases, but nevertheless there was a large number of the teachers on hand to join in the merriment.

Good of Community.

In her opening address Mrs. Medd, president of the association, formally welcomed the teachers. She expressed the hope that there would be many more such occasions as tonight when the mothers and teachers gathered together for an evening's enjoyment. She thought that such affairs were for the general good of the community and in the best interests of education. The Board of Education was represented by the presence of Mrs. Morris and Mr. J. W. Worth. The schools represented were the Collegiate Institute, Queen Alexandra, Central, King George, King Edward, South Central, and the Separate schools Inspector and Mrs. Mowat were also present.

Entertaining Program.

The first part of the program included a fine solo by Mr. Barton, a reading by Mrs. Conly and a piano solo by Mr. J W Worth.

A number which was the cause of roars of laughter from the audience was a dialogue in which Mrs. Gaskell was advertising for a cook. Mrs. Langton, as her mother, was assisting in making the choice from the many and varied applicants. Among the cooks of many nationalities who applied for the position were an Irish cook, a French, a Scotch and a Cockney cook, and all of these with their different accents and expressions, were the cause of much amusement.

Fun Galore.

From this point the gathering became more informal and games were introduced. The most outstanding of these was a rabbit party in which hares and rabbits of many more varieties than were ever heard of before took part in different competitions and task of a more or less ridiculous nature. Some of these tasks were, pinning the donkey's tail blindfolded, blowing a feather across the room and back without letting it touch the ground, and acting nursery rhymes. It is fortunate both for the teachers and for the pupils that the day which followed happened to be Saturday, for it is safe to say that there could have been little teaching done the next day.

To Mrs. Barnes fell the task of imposing the different duties of the various species of rabbits, and she accomplished this with a skill which was to be admired.

It was lucky for some of the teachers that their pupils were not present last night to watch the spelling match conducted under the direction of School Inspector Mowat. They would have discovered that even the teachers were not infallible and that some of them had the misfortune to fall down on more or less simple words. Of course, the exictement of the occasion had much to do with this, but nevertheless it was the cause of much laughter to see a teacher taking her seat after having fallen down in a spelling competition. Without a doubt htis was one of the most amusing incidents of the evening.

And Refreshments, Too.

Liberal refreshments were served by the hostesses for the evening and the merry party dispersed about 11 o'clock after having spent a most enjoyable social evening. The hope was expressed that his would not be the last of such occasions and that the other schools would not be slow to follow the excellent example of the ladies of the Queen Mary School.

Salvation Army a Strong Force

MAKES FOR CONTENTED MEN AND WOMEN AND FOR HAPPY HOMES

The appeal of the Salvation Army for half a million dollars with which to carry on its peculiar and particular work brings again to notice a strong force, not merely in the spiritual realm, but in the cause of order and reconstruction.

When war called every class of the Empire into special service, the Salvation Army was about the only religious force really prepared to take up the burden. In writing this we ignore neither the Y.M.C.A. nor any other organization. They had great efforts to make before their organization could expand to the new task, and frequently found themselves at a loss with a new difficulty. According to the men who have served, the Salvation Army never failed—and it did not matter, at either rest camp or base, whether the soldier came in drunk or sober, whether he had money or had squandered every penny on unworthy objects. The first principles of William Booth were to get the man up from the gutter—and his apostolate carried out the old injunction with new strength and vigor.

The normal work of the Salvation Army makes for contented men and women, for happy homes, for a strong desire to improve the surroundings, for a mighty pity for the unsuccessful and those unfitted for the hard service of life. The fund which the country is asked to give in "Self-Denial" will be devoted to rebuilding the edifice of social and religious work which has been largely neglected during the war period, and to making foundations for further developments.

Capt. J. W. Steinhoff, ex-Mayor of Wallaceburg, has presented the town with a fine memorial park and athletic grounds, some ten acres in extent.

STIR Your Tea

One minute before your tea is steeped, stir it.

This liberates the valuable tea essence that would otherwise remain in the leaves at the bottom of the pot and be wasted.

When you use a higher price tea—a tea of the fine quality of Red Rose Orange Pekoe—it is doubly important to stir it and get the full benefit of the rich flavor and strength from every choice young mountain grown leaf.

Red Rose Orange Pekoe is a tea of extra quality at a little extra price.

To Last One Day.

Work in most lines will be resumed after twenty-four hours. Teachers will remain on duty and food stores will be open at least part of the day.

ODDFELLOWS' CHURCH PARADE TO KNOX CHURCH YESTERDAY IMPRESSIVE EVENT

Sacred Edifice Crowded to its Doors—Ladies Organization I.O.O.F. Also Present in Body—Mail Quartette of Visiting Order Heard to Splendid Effect.

The annual church parade of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, which took place last evening to Knox Church, was a very impressive event. Some three hundred members of Mount Hebron and Hiawatha Encampments, Lodge 13, Otonabee, and Lodge 111, Peterborough, met in their lodge rooms, corner of Hunter and George streets, and marched in a body to the church to take part in the evening service. At the church they were joined by members of the Rebekah Lodge, which is a ladies' organization entirely. The ladies gathered in the church parlor and filed into the auditorium immediately upon the arrival at the church doors of the men's lodges.

Large Congregation.

The church was crowded for the occasion, and many were compelled to stand, and preferred to do this rather than miss the service. In place of the regular choir the Oddfellows' male choir sang several hymns, and a quartete was rendered by Messrs. Lee, Turner, Hartshorn and Baldry. The anthem was sung in a beautiful tenor voice by Mr Lee. Rev. H. Keith read the lesson and led in prayer.

At the commencement of his sermon, Rev. James McKenzie, pastor of the church, extended a cordial welcome to the Oddfellows, many of whom, he said were not strangers to the church, and all of whom, he felt represented the Christian activities of every Protestant church in the city. It was also a fortunate coincidence that Rev. Mr. Keith, the former pastor of the church, should be present on such an occasion, but he felt that as Mr. Keith would be leaving Peterborough on the early train in the morning it would not be fair to ask him to give the sermon. The sermon which he would give he believed would be appreciated by an audience the most of which belonged to an organization which had benevolent objects in view. It was the teaching of our Lord that the strong should render assistance to the weak.

Mr. McKenzie took as his text the message of St. Paul to Timothy, urging him to seek first the approval of God. There were a few monstrosities who would say that they had no desire for the approval of a Higher Being, but he was happy to say that there were only a few. On the other hand, the great majority sought some approval which stimulated them to deeds of sacrifice. Right from the cradle there was the desire of winning the approval of someone. It was evidenced in the child by the wish to please the father or mother. It grew stronger with age. As such this was neither good nor bad. It only became one or the other when the aim in view was considered. If a man desired that which was poor and miserable he reaped results which were inimical to his best welfare. If he desired that which was righteous and good, he would be abundantly blessed. The object of a true life was the approval of God. St. Paul, who was old and tried, said to Timothy, who was much younger, "Seek first the approval of God. Study to show thyself approved of God." In these few words was summed up the whole object of life.

Room for Improvement.

In the matter of seeking approval there was much room for improvement in the world. There were many who sought the approval of an individual or of a group of individuals, and allowed God to take second, third or even tenth place. There were those who sought the approval of persons above them socially, and who sidetracked Christian duties and privileges for the more trivial things. The man who desired power in finance or political influence sought the arpproval of a group of influential men, and had less time and opportunity for seeking the approval of the Heavenly Father. Wherever these conditions existed, they were making a miserable failure and were being condemned by a prime mistake. The approval of God should be sought first, last and always, and Divine blessings would result. They should seek first the kingdom of God and His righteous-

SUPREME COUNCIL WILL SEND ALLIED TROOPS INTO GERMANY IF NECCESSARY

Will Occupy Additionul Territory Unless Treaty of Versailles is Executed by Germans—Russian Soviet Commercial Delegation to be Received by Council—Dr. Coeppert Declares all German Troops Have Avacuated Ruhr District

(By Canadian Press.)

San Remo, April 26.—The Supreme Council today adopted a Franco-British declaration with regard to Germany, after inserting a clause declaring its readiness to take Allied measurers even to the occupation of additional German territory, if necessary to assure carrying out of the Versailles Treaty.

The adoption of this clause gave rise to some discussion. Premier Nitti, Italy, opposing military measures, but French, French, Belgian and Japanese representatives pointed out the necessity of considering such an eventuality.

Hearing for Russians.

London, April 26.—A decision to give hearing to members of Russian Bolshevik commercial delegation has been reached by the Supreme Allied Council, according to a semi-official announcement, says a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co.

This delegation is headed by Maxim Lietvinoff, but Great Britain objects to receiving him on the ground that he had taken advantage of diplomatic privelege and engaged in political propaganda while in England. On that occasion he issued an appeal to British Labor.

Settle it Themselves.

San Remo, April 26.—The Council of Premiers, at request of Premier Nitti of Italy and Foreign Minister Trumbitch of Jugo-Slavia, will allow the Adriatic question to remain in negotiation between Italian and Jugo-Slav Governments, it was stated today.

Evacuated Ruhr.

Paris, April 26.—Dr. Goeppert, head of a German delegation in Paris, today handed the Foreign Office a note addressed to Premier Millerand, stating that the additional troops which entered Ruhr district had all evacuated that district on April 21.

CHILD OF SIX FOUND IN SERIOUS CONDITION

ALLEGED THAT OLDER COMPANION ASSAULTED HIM, INFLICTING INJURIES

Complaint is made that a boy's deviltry in Warsaw on Friday evening last had serious results for his victim, and is likely to lead to serious consequences for the perpetrator. Little Willie Myles, aged six, in company with Dr. Munro's little daughter, Jean and Kenneth Choates, was sitting on some commercial trunks which were standing upright outside Choate's general store, when a young lad by the name of Moore, aged about fourteen years came down the street and, it is alleged, seized Willie Myles and threw him on the ground striking his head aganst the cement sidewalk. Not content with this, it is said, he continued to bump his head against the walk and then turned him over and did the same with his stomach, and then he kicked him in the side. When the child was found by neighbours he was in a serious condition, and was rushed to his home and Dr. Munro was called. Such is the story told by Willie Myles' father. Willie is now lying at his home in Warsaw in a serous condtion suffering from concussion of the brain and other effects of the rough handling, it is declared, he received at the hands of much bigger boy. No reasons can be ascribed for this brutal treatment, and there is no reason to believe that there was any cause for bad feeling between the two boys. It is contended that the act was done more in a spirit of fun than anything else, and that the Moore boy did not realize what a serious act he was committing at the time. However, the father of the injured boy was in town today and communicated with Crown Attorney Hatton, and it is likely that prosecution will follow.

$10,000 IN JEWELS STOLEN FROM HOME

SERVANT SUSPECTED OF BEING NOTORIOUS EX-CONVICT AND THE THIEF

New York, April 26.—Jewels and valuable trinkets, many of them heirlooms from her former husband, the late Gustave Amsinck, were stolen from the home of Mrs. Hamilton Fish, 810 Fifth avenue, it became known yesterday. The stolen articles are said to be worth at least $10,000.

A house man employed by Mrs. Fish five months ago after carefully verifying three references the man presented, is suspected of the theft. Detectives from Police Headquarters and from the East Sixty-seventh street station are looking for the man and for the missing articles, as he did not appear for work since the robbery was committed. According to the police the servant is a notorious convict, who already has served seven terms. The last term, they say, was seven years in Sing Sing.

Mrs. Fish was at home yesterday, but was too busy entertaining guests to discuss the robbery. Mr. Fish, banker and former Representative, could not be reached.

TWO DRY AGENTS ON WET SPREE

STAGE ROUGH HOUSE POLICE SAY, AND LAND IN CELLS

CAUGHT IN TAXI CHASE

PISTOLS AND A BROWN BOTTLE EVIDENCE AGAINST THE PAIR

New York, April 26.—James Muck of 37 Catharine street, an internal revenue agent, and Michael Grisi of 177 Cherry street, a prohibition enforcement agent, were arrested and locked up in the West Forty-seventh street station about 6 o'clock after they had invaded the cafeteria of Reisenweber's restaurant at Eighth avenue and Fifty-eight street, flourished revolvers and, the police charge, tried to whip all the waiters and customers in the place. They were charged by Patrolman Patrick Leddy with "using obscene and abusive language" and with being "drunk and disorderly." When they were searched at the police station the police found that each of them had a revolver, and that Muck had in his pockets a brown bottle filled with whiskey.

The police say that Muck and Grisi, under the influence of the brown bottle, went into the cafeteria and became involved in an argument with John Walsh, manager of the place. Angelo Jatron of 343 West Fifty-sixth street, a waiter, said he saw Muck reach toward his hip pocket and that he saw the flash of a revolver. He grabbed Muck by the arms, and Thomas King, another waiter, also grabbed the revenue agent. While they were struggling, King said, Grisi drew a revolver from his pocket and cried:

"Take your hands off that man! He is a Federal agent and can do anything he wants to-"

Grisi is alleged to have threatened the waiters and the crowd which quickly gathered, and while he and Mack flourished their revolvers some of the customers ran outside and shouted for police. This drew an enormous crowd from the throng of homeward bound persons about Columbus Circle, and there were several hundred persons crowded around the doors of the restaurant when Muck and Grisi, still flourishing their guns, left the place. King, the waiter, meanwhile had slipped out by another door and hurried over to Columbus Circle where he informed Patrolman Leddy that two Government agents were trying to kill everybody in Reisenweber's.

Leddy abandoned traffic in the circle and ran over to the restaurant, just in time to see a taxicab go careening down the street amid the shouts of the crowd, with Grisi and Muck hanging out of the windows. Leddy commandeered another taxicab and gave chase, and the crowd of excited citizens pounded along on foot, so that traffic in Eighth avenue had to come to a standstill. Leddy finally caught up with the fleeing taxicab at Eighth avenue and Forty-sixth street and ordered the chauffeur to halt. He ordered Muck and Grisi to go back to the restaurant. They laughed at hime, the policeman said, and flashed their Government badges.

"Don't interfere with us in the performance of our duty," Leddy said Muck replied haughtily.

"You've got to come back where you raised this rough house," said Leddy.

"We refuse to go!" declared Muck and Grisi, according to the policeman.

"I'm going to take you back," said Leddy. "Now what do you think of that?"

The prohibition and revenue agents didn't think much of it, but there was nothing they could do. Their chauffeur turned his cab and drove back, surrounded by a curious crowd which had no idea what was happening, but which was determined to miss nothing. Leddy half dragged and half carried his prisoners into the restaurant where Charles W. [illegible], chief manager of Reisenweber's, insisted that they be locked up. Patrolman Robert Enright came along about that time and he and Leddy took the Government agents

TURKISH NATIONALISTS HAVE OVERTHOWN ALBANIAN GOVMT.

Defeated Forces of Albania Were Compelled to Abandon Their Munitions—Javaia Occupied by Esaad Pasha's Supporters—Considerable Fighting Two Hundred Casualties

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 26.—Supporters of Essad Pasha, Turkish Nationalist leader and former provisional president of Albania, have occupied Tirana, Albania, and overthrown the Albanian government, according to a message from Florina, transmitted to an Exchange Telegraph correspondent at Athens. Members of the overthrown government have been dispersed, the message adds.

Abandoned Munitions.

The Albanian government forces were compelled to abandon their munitions. The rifles they left have been taken over by the Italians, the message states.

After considerable fighting between the forces of Essad Pasha and those of the government, the former occupied Javaia, southwest of Durazzo. Durazzo is regarded as the objective of the anti-government forces. It is reported there were two hundred casualties in the fighting.

HON. A.G. MACKAY DIED YESTERDAY

WAS MINISTER OF MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS IN ALBERTA PROVINCE

LIBERAL LEADER IN ONTARIO

LED AN ACTIVE LIFE, ASSOCIATED WITH MANY BUSINESS CONCERNS

Toronto, April 26.— Hon. Alexander Grant MacKay, M. A., K. C., M. P.P., Minister of Municipal Affairs in the Alberta Provincial Government, and former member and leader of the Liberal Oposition of the Ontario Legislature, died yesterday morning from pneumonia at Edmonton, a despatch recieved from that city last night states. Hon. A. G. MacKay was a native of Grey County, having been born of Scottish parents in the Township of Sydenham on March 7, 1860. He was elected to represent the north riding of Grey in the Ontario House in 1902, and continued as member for that constituency until 1913. He held the portfolio of Minister of Crown Lands in 1904-5 in the Ross administration and was leader of the Liberal Opposition from 1907 until the selection of Hon. N. W. Rowell for that office in 1911. In 1913 he removed to the West, and in the same year was elected to represent the Athabasca District in the Alberta Government, holding his seat continuously until his death.

Hon. Mr. MacKay was widely known throughout Ontario and Alberta as well as other provinces of the Dominion, and was generally regarded as an outstanding member of the legal profession, a distinguished legislator and an able leader of the Liberal party in this province. During his leadership he enunciated in 1908 a new policy for the party in Ontario, and in 1909 was complimented in the House by the Premier, the late Sir James P. Whitney, for his attention to the business of the Legislature and his careful guardianship of other public interests entrusted to his charge as a member of that body. He was a strong supporter of the Laurier proposals for reciprocity with the United States, and when that was an issue in the 1911 Federal campaign, made several brilliant speeches in its favor.

The son of the late Hugh and Catherine MacKay, he was educated in the public schools of his native township, in Owen Sound Collegiate Institute and at Toronto University, obtaining his M. A. degree from the latter in 1885.

Called to Bar in 1891.

Taking up the study of law on his graduation, he was called to the Bar in 1891 and was made a King's Cousellor in 1902. He received appointment of Crown Attorney for Grey County in 1894 and held that position until his resignation in 1901. In 1906 he was appointed a commisioner for the revision of the Statutes of Ontario.

Mr. MacKay took a keen interest in matters of education, due probably to the fact that he was a graduate from the ranks of the teaching profession, having been principal of the Port Rowan High School for four years. He held office for several years as a member of the Owen Sound School Board.

He was actively associated with many businesses, being secretary and a director of the Owen Sound and Meaford Railway Company; a director of the late Farmers' Bank of the Bothwell Locomotive Company, the Imperial Cement Company, the Owen Sound Dredging and Construction Company, and the Supreme Heating Company.

Mr. MacKey's connection with political activities began early in his life and from 1880 to 1894 he was president of the Young Men's Liberal Association. From 1888 to 1894 he held the office of secretary of the North Grey Reform Association.

In spite of his many other activities, he found time to become interested in the militia, holding a captaincy in the 31st. (Grey) Regiment. He was an ardent devotee of bowling and was elected president of the Western Ontario Bowling Association in 1909. He was a member of the Sydenham Club, of Owen Sound, Ontario, and the [illegible] Club, of Toronto.

THE HIGH SCHOOL CADET INCIDENT

PHYSICAL INSTRUCTOR JAMIESON AND COLONEL OF CORPS GIVE VIEWS

When seen this morning in reference to the reported outbreak among the local High School cadets, Mr. Jamieson, physical instructor at the Collegiate Institute, was inclined to belittle the whole affair and consign it as being merely a boyish dispute and not at all worthy of the newspaper prominence which it was given. The whole thing was started in the first instance in a spirit of fun, and it was only a few of the more foolish and more reckless who carried the affair to extremes. The serious part of the affair was the publicity which had been given to it, and Mr Jamieson intimated that serious action would be taken against the parties in the school responsible for this part of the affair. Much unwelcome publicity has been given to the colonel of the cadets, and even the cadet officers who have resigned are incensed over the fact of such an incident being heralded all over the Province and giving a bad name for discipline at the Peterborough Collegiate Institute.

In view of the fact that one side of the story only has appeared in the press up to the present, R. Allen Lewis, colonel of the corps, has issued the following statement of his version of the trouble:

"After reading the item on the resignation of the officers of the 13th Cadet Battalion I felt that it was only in fairness to my school, my cadet corps and myself that the true state of affairs be placed before the public. I considered, and still consider, that the matter was one which affected the Collegiate only, and as such should not have been made public. With reference to those cadets or officers upon whom the responsibility of this most undesirable publicity rests, I wish only to say that 'It's a dirty bird that can't keep its own nest clean.' I should advise these fellows to forever obliterate from their vocabularies the phrases 'school spirit,' 'loyalty' and 'esprit de corps.'

"As to the lamentable state of disorganization at present existing in the battalion, I wish to distinctly state that until within about fifteen minutes of receiving the petition from the officers of the battalion I was utterly unconscious of any dissatisfaction in any quarter.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, APRIL 26, 1920.

THE HOUSE FAMINE.

PETERBOROUGH IS but one of Canadian cities and towns suffering from house famine, and where the housing problem grows more vexed day by day. In London for instance, there are 6,500 vacant lots and a paucity of houses to rent, and E. R. Dennis, chairman of that city's housing commission, advises the organization of a housing company to build cheap houses for either sale or rent under the old Ontario Housing Accommodation Act, by which such a company's borrowing bonds up to 85 per cent. of the capital required could be guaranteed by the municipality. Mr. Dennis is strongly supported by London's city clerk, and it is interesting to note that this plan was greatly emphasized at a joint meeting of this city's City Council, Board of Trade and the citizens by our own city clerk.

In Peterborough ex-Ald. Frank Dobbin has suffered a shock at the estimated cost to build here a house which would appeal to the average mechanic as a home worth while investing in on a lien plan under a housing commission, and he also agrees with Mr. Dennis, London's housing commission chairman, that his commission is helpless in regard to offering any relief to the man who can afford to pay only $18 or $20 a month either in rent or purchase installments.

It is the probability of a slump in values which is the discouraging factor in any building scheme proposed, whether it be either by municipal commission or a housing company, and unless the visualization of prominent financiers is at fault, considerable depreciation may be anticipated. But in spite of such visualization which is more or less world-wide, the housing problem is being attacked vigorously in other lands—England is erecting one million new houses, Ireland has appropriated $75,000,000 for that purpose, and India is constructing model homes for her people. And this question must not be downed in Peterborough, where the situation is alramingly acute.

The policy adopted here is that it is in the interest of the community generally that new industries shall be encouraged at the cost to that community of free sites and the exemption of a certain amount of taxation on a fixed assessment plan; but that policy will have little of the desired effect unless houses are available. The first question asked by industrial heads looking for a location is, "What about houses at present and for the future?" and unless a promising reply is forthcoming we need look for no industrial expansion. Then it is up to our City Council to definitely decide whether they would be equally justified in entailing a community loss of say $50,000 in depreciation by building houses this year, as they are in foregoing a certain amount of taxation revenue and donating sites, all of which comes out of the community's pocket indirectly in furtherance of community growth. And this decision must be reached quickly, if at all, and no more procrastinating like last year, by which Peterborough lost the opportunity of borrowing Government money at five per cent. to help solve the housing question.

One cannot foresee with certainty the future as to property values, but we can within a few degrees visualize coming Canadian winters, which allow of no gambling with the housing problem. The situation is acute today, and the public so anxious that some who have recently sold houses are offering premiums to buy them back again. If the blinds are down off the window of any one dwelling, that house immediately becomes the gathering place of the house-hunting clan. In London, a man, wife and child are living in a bathroom with a gase plate for a kitchen. Peterborough has not yet reached that stage of shelter-economy, but we are walking on its narrow edge. Let our powers-that-be get busier than they apparently are, and either borrow the $200,000 resolved on by Council for that purpose or encourage a housing company by guaranteeing its bonds up to 85 per cent. Should there be danger of Council taking cold feet in the borrowing-housing commission plan for fear of abnormal depreciation, let them comfort themselves with the reflection that subsequent losses in value could be charged up to the city's promotion account.

GRADUAL DEFLATION.

THAT WE ARE ENJOYING a period of inflated prosperity is quite evident, and the question arises, will there be a sudden collapse, or can co-operative action be taken to assure a process of gradual deflation? In this connection the Hamilton Herald has a timely article in which it reads between the lines of reports of bank presidents and general managers that those financiers are preparing for financial breakers ahead of them. Such breakers threaten a crisis which may cause widespread disaster, and our esteemed contemporary goes on to point out the desirability of every effort being put forth to avert such danger by creating a process of deflation that shall be gradual. The Herald says:

"If deflation be sudden, it will resemble the deflation of a toy balloon when it bursts—a case of deflation by destruction.

"How can the danger be averted? There must be some way. Most economists agree that the real remedy is the speeding up of production, accompanied by general practice of thrift and economy in personal expenditure. How best can this remedy be applied, and how it can be supplemented with other remedies, are questions which ought to be considered by representative citizens qualified by experience and responsibilities to speak with authority on the subject.

"To this end the Herald takes leave to urge the advisability of holding a conference representing labor interests, the manufacturing, agricultural and professional interests. We believe that such a conference might result in great practical benefit. Perhaps the best way to start such a movement is to arrange for a local conference. That having been held, provincial and national conferences might be arranged.

"If anything of value is to be done along these lines some organized interest will have to take the initiative. Who shall have the honor of making the first move in this plan for the public welfare."

OLD ENGLISH MUSIC.

A WRITER in an English contemporary says it is interesting to notice, in connection with the spreading interest in old English church music, that the revivals which are always a feature of Holy Week at Westminster Cathedral include this year masses and motets by Henry Norman, Richard Dering, William Mundy, William Blythman and Robert Whyte. In addition, the fine old masses written on the tune "The Western Wynde," by Christopher Tye, hon Shepherd and John Taverner, are repeated this year by request, with works of Tallis and Byrd, and the usual sixteenth century Italian music. Sir Edward Elgar, Sir Charles Stanford, Dr. Terry, Dr. Charles Wood, Dr. Ralph Dunstan and Mr. Herbert Howells are the only moderns represented.

"We can imagine nothing more thrilling to a musician than the moment when he gazes, with a wild surmise, on some old and forgotten score unearthed by his own research. As the voice parts of the sixteenth century works are almost invariably written in separate books, we are told that it sometimes happens that a missing tenor or bass has to be reconstructed. Sir Frederick Bridge, we believe, once rewrote a lost part of an Elizabethan song so accurately that when the part was at last discovered it was found that Sir Frederick was only one note out."

SEWAGE DISPOSAL SITE.

COUNCIL and the Wilson Bros. have got together in conference and reached a conclusion which eliminates the need of resorting to expropriation proceedings to acquire that portion of the Wilson property selected for a sewage disposal site. While the agreement arrived at was in Committee of the Whole, six of the ten members of Council were present, and the decision arrived at may consequently be taken as one which will pass the Board in Council session. The Wilsons have always held that the installation of our sewage plant on the thirty-eight acres of their farm would depreciate the value of its remaining one hundred acres, which in the natural course of this city's growth would be available for residential purposes. Although a visit to an activated sludge disposal plant in Milwaukee, such as will be installed on the Wilson property, impelled our city engineer to bring back a report that such a plant is absolutely odorless, the name "sewage does and perhaps always will convey a certain amount of objectionable sentiment. "Give a dog a bad name," you know, is an everyday axiom which reflects on character and quality, and "sewage" is an objectionably suggestive name which will always carry with it incitation to opposition, no matter how treated. A name has much influence on the sale of a book, and in this case of the Wilson property, a name, if nothing else, has engendered some vexation of spirit in putting through a real estate deal. And it is a source of some satisfaction that the incident is disposed of by mutual agreement.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

THE IRON HAND.

(London Daily Mail.)

For Germany the only sane thing is to stop this ruinous fighting and settle down to peace and hard work. For the Allies the right course is clear. Having made their decision to cut off supplies, they must stick to it until Germany gives convincing guarantees that a stable, constitutional government has the country in hand.

TOO MUCH RED.

(Baltimore American.)

The De Valera movement is tinctured too much with red to commend it to the hundreds of thousands of men of Irish descent, the real friends of Ireland, who are insistent upon home rule as much as the De Valera following is for independence. It is to the interest of human society that Ireland should not be converted into a seething mass of Bolshevism under the guise of independence.

IN PRAISE OF BOY SCOUTS.

(Manchester Guardian.)

Boy Scouting will not, as a few of its most ardent eulogists suggests, solve all our moral and social difficulties. But it is one of the few great original social inventions of our time. It rests on real insight into the mind and soul of boyhood, and the training that it gives is attended by the delight that fuses a new piece of knowledge right into the character and makes it a treasure for life.

SCHOOL LIFE OF INDIA.

(Times of India.)

Many small playgrounds are more useful than larger areas at a considerable distance from the childrens' homes. Far more ordinary school work might be done in the open air. Every school should start in the open air, next acquire a covered playground, lastly a school building. Physical development must be really as well as nominally an integral part of education, if India is to compete with Japan, and if city children are to fight successfully against the enervation which comes from life divorced from physical labor.

FRANCE NEEDS PEACE.

(St. Louis Globe-Democrat.)

No nation needs peace, prolonged peace, more than France, and no nation, we may add, is more richly entitled to peace. But, whatever confidence it may have in the great army that it still maintains, it cannot conserve peace by separating itself from the other nations that saved it from destruction at such great sacrifice to themselves and adopting an individual and aggressive policy of its own. France called upon the world for aid and the aid came. France can do no less than to cooperate with the world for the maintenance of the peace so dearly bought.

HERE TO STAY FOR THE PRESENT.

(Manchester Guardian.)

The submarine will remain for the present a terrible but, as things are, a legitimate weapon of warfare, yet capable always of horrible abuse. A world which is not sufficiently civilised to abolish it completely, along with all other means of warfare, must seek to establish a moral restraint by which it will be limited to the task of killing only those whose function it is to kill.

STUDY IN ART BY AN ART LOVER

Thus Moses, David Buddha among others have given us examples of men striving after truth and of those who have lived after the perfect life there are so many who have witnessed to the truth that no special example need be given.

Thus as the quality of truth is held so high in life that an untrue man may be said to be one to whom the great principles of right and wrong have no meaning and the word duty no force, to the same extent is truth, the touchstone of art.

Even the smallest grain of truth can redeem an otherwise bad picture. True drawing, true color, true handling, true feeling above all, awaken a response in our natures. There is not one of us who does not abhor "sham." The age of sham is we hope an age of the past.

Indeed no age can be altogether condemned as a sham age for there have been witnesses to the truth in each and all. But artificially is closely allied to sham and carried one hair's breadth too far becomes sham.

The best example I can think of as the very converse of sham is the carving of the unseen inner sides of the pillars in Lincoln Minster.

All copying is to a certain extent sham. Not the copying that is done to improve the style or in a spirit of humility, but the copying that is done to hide the defects in the one who copies; the copying to avoid trouble, or by using the talents of another man, to gain praise from an ignorant public.

Indeed the motive of the gaining of praise is one very easily to be detected. The bizarre, the sensational, the impossible straining after originality, the rapid striving at effect, hurried work in which no joy or pleasure has been felt, all these are the outcome either of a wish for attention or the "pot-boiling" for money and all these are an insult to the taste of the public, though the public may be scarcely aware that it has a taste.

The National Gallery holds quite a good enough collection of pictures to form the taste of our British public. There is no need to rush abroad "to enjoy pictures." How many of those who think it their duty to go to the galleries in Rome, Florence, Paris, Dresden, Brussels, if they happen to be in those places, ever find it their duty to go to our own National Gallery?

One day you may find that you are very tired, wearied out with work perhaps, still more tired with a grave trouble or sadness.

Music, which is so often a rest, may only enhance this weariness, for the gay music is pain at times and the sad too sad, whilst plays may stir you to too much thought.

Try the pictures in any national gallery. You probably have tried them and know of their comfort or maybe you will honestly confess "picture galleries tire me so."

Picture galleries tire people because they do not know how to visit them. They do not make friends with the pictures nor ask them for sympathy. God and stand, go and sit, before the portraits of men and women and women who have known sorrow, who have faced loss, who have been tired with care, and you will find their histories in their faces, written for you clearly as in words by the brush and spirit of the great artists.

You will find Rembrandt's old lady looking at you out of wise old eyes, wrinkled with laughter, wrinkled with sadness, and not only her own laughter and sadness, but with the artist's own experiences.

For the spirit of Rembrandt has gone into his sitter until you will find each line on her old face, each shade in her ruff, speaks to you of that philosopher artist who never allowed any trouble or disappointment, and he had many, to interfere with his work, so divine to him and surely to us too.

So with only a study of the one old face you can come out of the National Gallery into the busy world, refreshed and ready for your own special work, for you have unconsciously forgotten yourself and your troubles in the vast spirit of Rembrandt.

Or you may go in a happy mood and then you will find humor, beauty, grace, color all waiting for you.

"Humor?" You may wonder to find humor in art outside a comic paper.

But the quaint humor of ancient mythology, the stiff humor of early religious art, the humor indeed of every civilized nation is there represented.

You will find little angels in the early Italian pictures with the most laughing and laughable and lovable faces and you will see fans and satyrs with all the grotesqueness of real originality.

Each to his own humor and you will of course find your own.

"Every civilized nation," I have said. It is wonderful to think how the curse of the Tower of Babel has been made of naught by the healing languages of music and art.

As you look at these pictures you will remember that in the same way they speak to you they can speak to the Frenchman, the German, the Russian, the Greek. Without effort on your part you are reading a book also understandable to the foreigner. It is therefore almost your duty to read this open book, this link between you and those from whom you are severed, in mind, by language.

Then again in true art, religion has such away that all diversities and heresies, all schisms and sores brought into religion by man, have no place.

When truth is supreme all wranglings as to truth are forgotten. If you can stand in front of a picture of a sacred subject and forget there are divisions in the churches, then you may be sure you are looking at the real spirit in religion.

For art heals and does not fight she creates truth and does not therefore try to destroy it.

Of course each person must find out for himself the message of the pictures. Artists have been granted the quality of generosity by the world at large. If an artist is not generous he can scarcely be an artist—so the world thinks and the world is generally right on these points. An ungenerous artist would be like a cowardly soldier.

The artists then have tried to give, not only to their own acquaintance of their own generation but to the world and to the future ages.

"Give and it shall be given unto you" has been altogether justified in art. Poor they may have been in their life-times, without fame also but if they gave truly of themselves whole-heartedly, largely, freely, then they have had the promise fulfilled. But you will say: "What good is their fame to them after their death?" They knew during their lives that the time would come when their work would shine clear to the eyes of the world. They knew that true work can never die for it must justify its truth.

So true artists have always worked with the knowledge that the more they put into their work the more the world would receive. And the tired, busy world needs much.

Imagine to yourself how we should feel without music, without poetry, without art—a material world, a body without a soul. The more you learn to love the soul in art the more she will answer to you and make you answer and find response in you to her finest lines and colors, until in the language of poetry art—like music "vibrates in the memory."

PROSPECTS BRIGHT FOR FALL WHEAT

CONDITIONS GENERALLY IN COUNTRY PROMISE ABUNDANT CROPS THIS YEAR

On motoring through the country yesterday it was noticed that conditions, while not perhaps as promising as in other years, are quite satisfactory. A fairly large proportion of acreage is devoted to fall wheat and rye and these crops are in the pink of condition and promise an abundant yield, especially in Northumberland county. Meadows and pasture lands are sprouting fast, there being no spring frosts of any account to set them back. Herds of cattle are seen grazing in the fields on an over supply of fall grass mixed with spring herbage. Springs and streams are running low and there is not much surplus water, and the wells have not risen to any extent. This is on account of the drouth last fall and the hard frost during the winter having prevented the moisture from penetrating far into the earth.

The country roads are in fair condition, especially those that have been gravelled.

Spring seeding is in full swing, even the low lands being in splendid condition. It is reported that the maple syrup yield was not so great as in former years, and while the price was $1 per quart, it was hard to secure a supply even at that. Generally, prospects are bright for an abundant harvest, providing weather conditions do not fail.

FARMERS UNDERTAKE BIG CHEESE BUSINESS

The movement which has been under way for some months in this district among the farmers to undertake the co-operative sale of their cheese this year in Montreal took definite form on Friday in Madoc, where the formation of the company which is to handle the work was completed. The Provincial Secretary's department sent word from Toronto that the charter for the company had been issued Friday. The company will be capitalized at $250,000. The provisional directors decided to proceed with the sale of their cheese in Montreal as soon as the necessary organization to handle the work could be completed.

Officers Elected.

The following officers were elected:

President—R. W. Ireland, president of Wellington Cheese Factory, Wellington, Ont.

Vice-President — Hugh Maloney, president of Cook's Factory, Marmora, Ont.

Secretary-Treasurer—H. B. Cowan, of Farm and Dairy, Peterborough.

Members of Executive—John McCaffery, president of the Alexandria Cheese Factory, Madoc, and J. E. Galvin, Lakefield.

Directors — W. H. Crough, Ennismore; T. J. Thompson, Springbrook, and J. J. Morrison, Toronto. Mr. Morrison is the secretary of the United Farmers of Ontario.

Already a considerable number of cheese factories have agreed to consign their cheese to the company for sale in Montreal, and an active campaign is to be commenced immediately to line up more factories. It is expected that before long a very large proportion of the cheese in the province will be sold through this company. Bylaws were adopted Friday making it possible for locals of the company to be established in every riding where a sufficient number of farmers subscribe for stock to form a local.

MULAI IN DISGRACE WITH HIS LADIES

Mulai Hafid was an excelent host and was never happier than when entertaining. His dinners were well served and always amusing, and his guests, European and native, suitably chosen. On one ocasion some charming and aristocratic French ladies were visiting Morocco. Amongst a series of fetes given by the diplomatic corps and others for their entertainment was a banquet at the residence of the Moorish ex-minister of war, Sir Medhi el Menebhi, C. C. M. G. At this banquet the ex-sultan precided. The distinguished lady guests had been purchasing Moorish costumes, and it was arranged that they should come to this feast arrayed in all their recently acquired magnificence. The result was charming—so charming that it was decided to send for a photographer anr have the group photographed. On his arrival the guests were posed—Mulai Hafid seated on a cushioned divan surrounded by the ladies in their Moorish dresses. The men stood behind.

The photograph was a great success, but its indirect results almost a tragedy, for Mulai Hafid placed a large copy of the group on the mantelpiece of the drawing room of his villa. The ladies of his household never left the Kabash, but on one occasion he sent the old Berber lady and the aged slave who had been his nurse to visit the villa, and the eagle eyes of the venerable dame discovered the photograph. In their minds no clearer evidence of Mulai Hafid's wickedness could be imagined, for here was the ex-sultan seated in a bevy of apparently very attractive native ladies surrounded by European men. No combination of facts could to their eyes be more shocking. So the photograph, concealed in their voluminous raiment, was taken to the Kasbah, where it was presented to the gae of the sultan's outraged wives.

Fiume is again under severe blockade by land and sea, following a raid by d'Annunzio's soldiers in Abbizia when 45 horses were stolen from regular troops.

Automobile bandits are again active in and about Detroit. Two men and a woman were slugged in a restaurant on Saturday night in an attempt at robbery.

The police say that when they got there Muck was so drunk he was unable to give his pedigree, and was locked up for an hour while he sobered up. Finally they were searched and the whiskey bottle and the revolvers found, as well as credentials proving they were revenue and prohibition enforcement agents.

The pair were released on $500 bail pending trial.

Why Man First Searched for Gold

The story of what the Lancet (London, Eng.) calls "an ethnological discovery of revolutionary import" was told by Prof. G. Elliot Smith in a lecture at the Royal Institution recently. Briefly, this was of a pre-historic race of nomadic men whose remains have been found in Europe, Asia, Africa, America and the islands of the Pacific.

The strangest fact about this is that wherever this race of wanderers left traces of its culture there might also be found natural deposits of gold. This race of gold-seekers flourished before the earliest pyramids were built: about 2600 B.C. they were digging gold in Turkestan and Persia. They were allured to the American side of the Pacific by pearl beds.

Prof. Smith went on to tell how gold came to acquire so great an influence in the world. The earliest evidence of its use comes from Egypt and dates from about 4000 B.C. In those days, however, gold was not money; it was not used in coinage, it was not a precious metal in the sense of making its possessor wealthy.

"The ancient Egyptian symbol for gold is a conventional girdle of cowries. It was endowed in their belief with the virtue of vitality. It increased fertility, preserved youth and was given to those who died in the belief that death was a sign of diminished rather than absent vitality, and that with this additional source of vigor the dead might carry on some sort of life beyond the grave. After a time the demand for cowries must have exceeded the supply, for models were made in imitation of the real shells from the clay of the river bed. Then gold, also found in the river beds, was used to make model cowries. The beauty and lustre must have confirmed their beliefs, till presently the substance rather than the form acquired a magical significance."

A Warning.

No electric appliances should ever be placed where a person in a bathtub can reach them. Such is the assertion of Dr. A. Zimmern in the Presse Medicale (Paris) in commenting on the death of a colleague. Electrocution has taken place with a current of only 110 volts under such circumstances.

The reason is that the water on the hands and body provides exceptionally favorable conditions for conduction of the current. It is not safe to touch even an electric light, heater or bell when in the bath. Dr. Zimmern cites recent cases as follows:

"A woman killed by holding an electric light in one wet hand while turning a water faucet with the other; a woman killed by wiping with a wet cloth the current distributing apparatus for an electric heater; a man receiving a severe shock by taking hold of a chandelier while holding an electric light suspended by a wire.

It is very dangerous to change an electric bulb when the hands are wet or the floor is wet; a slight defect in the insulation may cause a severe shock or even death.

Earth Still Growing.

In the early days of its history the earth grew rapidly by the addition of meteoric matter. It is still growing in the same manner, though scarcely to an appreciable extent, for the mass of meteoric matter added yearly is reckoned to be only 20,000 tons.

Why Dogs' Noses Are Cold.

When your faithful old dog pokes his nose into your hand, even your affection cannot prevent a little shiver, because the nose is so cold. Why is it? When the body of a dog is so warm, why should this one spot be different from all the rest of him?

The old fable tells us when Noah tried to get all the animals into the ark some of them were troublesome, and he had to get a dog to help him drive them in. Because of this the dog was the last to enter the ark. There was no room left, so he had to stand in the doorway with his nose outside in the wet, and it has never been warm since.

Science gives quite another explanation of the matter. The coldness of a dog's nose is due to the fact that it must be kept moist all the time in order to sharpen his sense of smell. And, of course, as the moisture is evaporating all the time, it keeps his nose cold.

A dog depends a great deal on his powers of smell, especially in the wild state, and it is because of his keenness of scent that he is valuable to man for hunting purposes. In addition to the olfactory or smelling nerves inside a dog's nostrils, the whole black membrane around the nose is very sensitive, but this sensitiveness can only be retained by moisture. Thus it is when a dog's nose is dry and warm he is ill and needs doctoring.

"And Daughter."

It is a welcome sight to see the words "and daughter" as the suffix to the name over a shop. It is a sign of the times of women's interest in business and their recognition as responsible helpmates. In the West End there is more than one emporium of feminine attire under the ownership of So-and-So and Daughter—or daughters, and I know of another which belongs officially to father and daughter; but I have never yet come across a shop under the joint ownership of husband and wife, yet we all know of countless small businesses in which the wife of the owner does a goodly share of the work.—London News.

Tablets From Babylon.

A group of valuable historic tablets from the excavations of the city of Babylon, bearing dates as far back as three and a half centuries before the Christian era, was recently secured by Stanford University. Several of the pieces carry the distinct prints of the fingers which moulded them over 4,000 years ago. One sun-dried contract bears the name of Darius, the Persian King of Babylon, and is dated in the second year of his reign. The system of characters on the tablets is composed of horizontal, vertical or oblique tri-angular strokes. The cuneiform writing, it is said, was first adopted by the Babylonians after its invention by a people called Sumerians, and was used by them from about 4500 B.C. It passed from them to the Assyrians, who used it with some changes, notably in recording the life and deeds of the kings on the surface of terra cotta bricks.

The Letter R

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

Rudd Block was fast going to decay and its owner deplored the fact, but he was engaged in costly litigation and had decided to let repair and general renovation of the old downtown building wait until he was in less straitened circumstances.

Bartley Duane was a wanderer, almost a tramp. Drink had been his failing and he had got so far down life's ladder that if he had not taken a new grip on its worn rungs he would have fallen off entirely. He had decided he would try to reform. He was given a position in the core making department of Burge & Co. He was to go to work the following Monday, and the firm, in accordance with its regular custom with all employes, had insured life and limb under the employer's liability act, as also as to sick benefits.

Bartley was putting in Saturday strolling about, when he halted in front of the Rudd building to glance into a window.

"Hi, there; look out!" suddenly startled him.

The man at the curb who uttered the warning was pointing upwards. Bartley glanced in that direction to discern a dark object hurtling downwards. It was the letter "R" of the building name, loosened by time. It was formed of metal; the screws that held it in place had rusted away, and as it weighed nearly four pounds it drove Bartley senseless to the pavement as it struck his head, rebounded to his arm, shattered the wrist, and an ambulance was summoned and the victim of the accident was rushed away.

For a full month Bartley lay on a hospital cot. When he was discharged the ward surgeon informed him that his head wound would heal in time, but that he would never have the full use of his injured forearm as formerly. The rest, care and attention had done much to reinvigorate the former inebriate. Bartley went at once to Burge & Co. They could not employ a crippled man, but under the terms of his accident policy Bartley was given four hundred dollars and a hint that the owner of Rudd Block might indemnify him handsomely for his permanent injury. The latter could not afford another suit. He gave Bartley one thousand dollars for a final settlement of all claims.

Bartley bought a new suit and was a very presentable person, clean shaven and in his right mind, and vaguely wondering if there was some chance in life for him after all.

"That letter 'R,'" he mused. "It's been a fateful one to me. Somehow I can't get it out of my mind. Hello!"

He was passing a small curio store when he noticed the sign in its window, "Fortunes told for fifty cents." The whim seized him to enter. He found a shrewd eyed, gipsy-attired woman who motioned him to a seat before a great crystal ball.

"I've come to see if you can give me an occult augury as to some possible mysticism in my being hit by a big iron 'R,'" he prefaced, and told his story.

"Um-um!" murmured the fortune teller. "A strange story, 'Rs.' It is cryptic. Could it refer," and she studied the lines of dissipation in Bartley's face, "to Rum"?

"That's right enough."

"And—Reform?" vaguely intimated the seeress.

"I'm on the road to it," vouchsafed Bartley. "But that's all clear to me."

"Ah, then! by the way, has there been some woman in your life?"

Bartley started. His brow furrowed. Thought, memory sent a vivid pang through his frame.

"Yes," he acceded with set lips.

"You are thinking of a mother?"

"She died long since."

"A sister, then?"

"I never had one."

"'R,' 'R,' and a woman. Could it be Ruth; no, Ruby?" with a crafty look of guessing. "Ah, I have it—Rachael!"

Bartley's face writhed. He silently placed the fee upon the stand and with set lips and a far-away expression upon his face left the place.

Rachael! He had not dared to think of the wife he had deserted after two years of neglect and destitution. He had always felt that he deserved the harsh, but just words with which she had bade him leave her and never return. But now fate seemed to point the way back to his lost love. He had given up the cruel drink, he had money, he wondered if the change in his nature would not appeal to the woman whose life he had clouded.

Two days later Bartley reached his old home town to learn that his wife with her little child was supporting both by operating a confectionery store, making a bare living. His heart beat fast as he located the place and entered it. He was hopeful, for his informant had told him that Mrs. Duane was a fine business woman and with capital could greatly increase her trade. Capital? Had he not over a thousand dollars!

A sweet-faced little girl called her mother as Bartley stood at the counter. Comely, clear eyed, Mrs. Duane greeted the customer with a nod. Then with a scream. The pair faced one another after the lapse of five years.

"You have come back!" she gasped.

"A repentant husband and father," he supplemented fervently. "Is there a place here for the new Bartley Duane?"

There was. Restoration, reformation—expressive Rs—and to these, as time wore on, there was added—Riches!

A meeting of the local job printers voted against acceptance of the offer of a ten per cent increase in their wages.

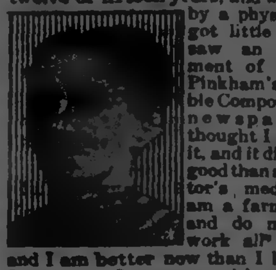
WOMAN SUFFERED 12 YEARS

Finally Made Well by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Emmitsburg, Md.—"I suffered for twelve or fifteen years, and was treated by a physician, but got little relief. I saw an advertisement of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in my newspaper, so thought I would try it, and it did me more good than all the doctor's medicine. I am a farmer's wife and do my housework all the time, and I am better now than I have been for years. I am never without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in the house and have recommended it to several of my friends. You are perfectly welcome to publish my letter for the good it may do other women."—Mrs. ETTIE WARREN, Emmitsburg, Md.

Backache and nervousness are symptoms or nature's warnings, which indicate a functional disturbance or an unhealthy condition which often develops into a more serious ailment.

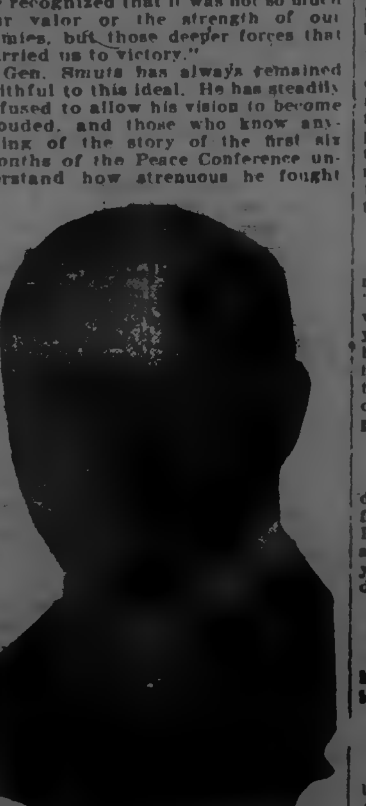
Women in this condition should not continue to drag along without help, but profit by Mrs. Warren's experience, and try this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—and for special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Med. Co., Lynn, Mass.



General Smuts Has Been One Consistent Idealist Among Many Politicians

By the appeal which he made recently in the Union Parliament in Cape Town, for racial unity throughout South Africa, Gen. Smuts added considerably to his reputation as a statesman and a leader, says the Christian Science Monitor. It is a reputation which already stands very high. For, during the past five years, the South African Premier has carved out for himself, in the regard of many people of many nations, a position curiously unique. Again and again, during the difficult days of the war, and during the even more difficult days which have followed the signing of the armistice, Gen. Smuts has come to the rescue of idealism. He has never changed. In the dark days of 1917, when men and women of the allied nations were perhaps more willing than at any other time during the struggle to comfort and strengthen themselves with the ideal for which they were fighting, Gen. Smuts always showed himself well in the van of thought. It was he who, in a memorable speech in London, shortly after the Americans entered the war, sought to renew the faith of the Allies, not in their own growing battalions, but, as he put it simply, "in those great, silent invisible forces" which were fighting on their side. "In the end," he added, "it will be recognized that it was not so much our valor or the strength of our armies, but those deeper forces that carried us to victory."

Gen. Smuts has always remained faithful to this ideal. He has steadily refused to allow his vision to become clouded, and those who know anything of the story of the first six months of the Peace Conference understand how strenuous he fought against that reinstatement of the old diplomatic methods which, to-day, seems so complete. It was this faithfulness which caused him to sign the Peace Treaty with Germany under protest, and yet enabled him to retain his hope of the future undimmed. The Peace Treaty, he declared frankly in his farewell address to the British people, as he was leaving for South Africa last summer, could not bring about "the lasting appeasement of the nations." And yet, it was their duty to go forward as those who had a great hope, for they had still the assurance of the grand fundamental gain of the war, "the victory of the spirit, of the moral over the material factors of life."



GEN. SMUTS.

It is this high, and yet eminently practical, idealism which Gen. Smuts is to-day bringing to bear with such energy on the problems of South Africa, one of the greatest of which is undoubtedly racial antagonism. Gen. Smuts does not attempt the impossible. He does not ask either the Dutch element or the British element to renounce their identity. He asks them to find it. He does not ask the Dutch to become British, nor the British to become Dutch, but he points the way by which both may become South Africans. In his speech at Cape Town, he asked for the recognition of "three fundamental positions." He asked that the people of South Africa should unite in recognizing the British connection, and that they should question it no longer; that they should accept as fundamental "the principle of frank, honest, whole-hearted co-operation between the white races"; and that they should recognize that the great task before them was no longer racial, but industrial.

As to the British connection, Gen. Smuts was nothing if not practical. His appeal was entirely for the present. The British League of Nations, to which they already belonged, and the new world system to which they would soon belong, he said, gave them ample scope as a free nation in their day and generation, when they would be occupied with other gigantic tasks. Let that be enough for them. If this were done, and if the second "fundamental position," that of whole-hearted co-operation, were recognized, Gen. Smuts saw quite clearly how the racial question would already be in a fair way to solution, through the gradual evolution of what he went on to describe as "a powerful sentiment of distinct South African nationhood." The growth of this great national sentiment and bond of union was, he insisted, what above all was required to insure the future stable progress of South Africa as a free nation.

Trade Secrets.

There are at least two trade secrets which have been so jealously guarded that they have remained close secrets for hundred of years, and may never be known to the world at large. One is the Chinese method of making the bright and brilliant color known as vermilion, or Chinese red, and the other is a Turkish secret—the inlaying of the hardest steel with gold or silver. Among the Chinese and Turks these two secrets are guarded well. Apprentices before they are taken for either trade, are compelled to swear an iron-clad oath to reveal nothing of what passes in the workshop. They must also belong to families of high standing, must pay a large sum of money as a guarantee, and must furnish certificates of good character and honesty. These secrets have been handed down faithfully from one generation to another for hundreds of years.

Birds That Dig.

We are not accustomed to think of birds as burrowing animals, but the puffin answers to that description.

It is a chunky little fowl, less than a foot high, with a large and powerful beak. For a home, it scratches a hole in the ground sometimes as much as four feet deep.

To capture a puffin one must go digging. It is rather a job, and, inasmuch as the bird bites and claws fiercely, one is likely to suffer in the process. Thus the creature has maintained its numbers on many a lonely rookery, where other species of wild fowl have been killed off and exterminated.

Jipway's Memory.

"I'm afraid there isn't much sentiment in Jibway's soul." "No?" "Someone was playing a celebrated waltz of a decade ago, and how do you suppose Jibway remembered that he had heard it before?" "I can't imagine." "He said, 'By jiminy, that's the tune the orchestra was playing one night in a restaurant where I got ptomaine poisoning!'"

The Reason.

Mrs. Johnson—How does yo' feel dis mawnin', Joe? Mr. Johnson—I feels bad—mighty bad! I wish dat Providence would babe missy on me an' take me. Mrs. Johnson—How can you expec' it to ef you won't take de doctor's medicine?

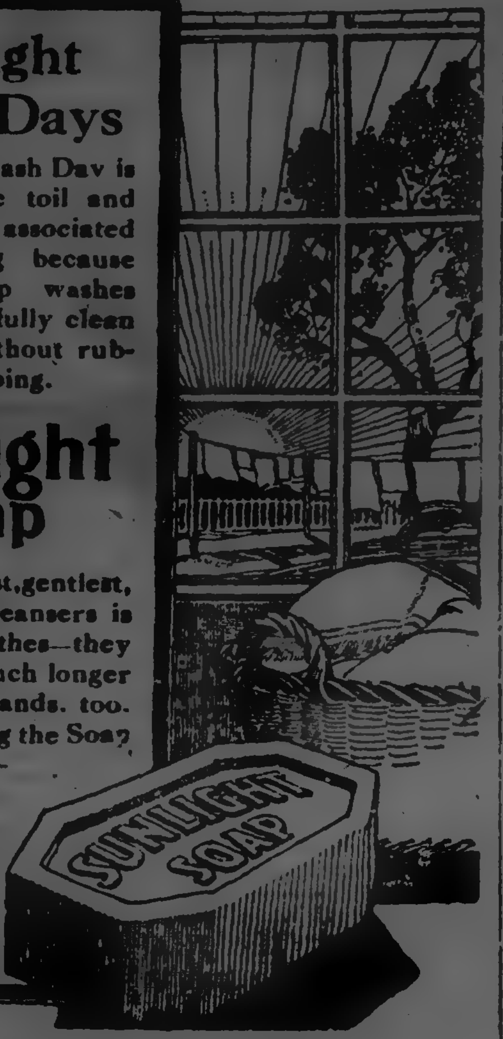
LEVER BROTHERS LIMITED, Toronto



WARD PATTERSON IS ELECTED FIRST VICE-PRESIDENT O.B.A.A.

Commercial Clubs Allowed in Association—No Players to be Signed After July 15.

Toronto, April 26.—There was a large gathering of delegates on hand Saturday afternoon at the annual meeting of the Ontario Baseball Amateur Association in Foresters' Hall.

Annual Meeting in March.

The amendment to create the office of third vice-president was defeated. It was suggested that the sub-committee of four shall be made up of members, but there shall not be more than one elected from any association, league, city or town. It was defeated. The Hamilton association withdrew their amendment, taking the power to vote away from the secretary-treasurer. An amendment was proposed that the annual meeting be held in October instead of April and that a semi-annual meeting be held in April. Arguments were heard both for and against the proposition. The date of the annual meeting was set for the last Saturday in March and was passed unanimously. An amendment was passed that two weeks previous to the annual meeting the secretary shall send to each association a copy of the amendments. It passed.

The amendment to bar commercial or public utility league brought up much discussion. It was generally felt that the move was a good one, but that it could hardly be done this year. It was pointed out that many outside leagues had already been formed with commercial teams and it would mean the breaking up of these leagues this year. It was withdrawn by the Toronto delegates who stated that they were pleased with the discussion.

Plenty of Discussion.

An amendment was proposed that no player shall sign a certificate in any association or league after August 1st, and must have taken part in at least three games for the champion club in order to be eligible for the Ontario championship. It was also proposed that no club shall have more than fifteen players under contract at any time. The August 1 feature was eliminated and the old date of July 15 was left. The question of fifteen players being signed was defeated, it being the opinion that it was a local league affair. In future, teams shall be allowed fifteen cents a mile one way for fifteen men and seven and one-half cents for the second trip in case of postponement. In future the executive shall be known as sub-committee. No player shall compete in the semi-finals or final unless he has in good faith registered with a club that was nearest to his home town prior to the organization of any new association or league that might affiliate, then in such case such player is privileged to complete the season with the club holding his certificate in good faith. It was passed after much discussion.

All champions must be declared for each league by August 15, was the last amendment, but it was finally left to the new executive. The plan of central registration was passed, but it does not become active until next year. The matter of securing cups was left to the new executive. Secretary Walked was voted an honorarium of $25. Under the head of general business it was proposed that the executive consist of five members to be elected instead of each league naming a representative. This was left over until next year. The O.B.A.A. approved of the formation of a Canadian amateur baseball association and stated that the membership be paid.

The New Officers.

The new officers for 1920: Hon. president, Jas. Norris; past president, W. J. Smith; president, Frank Robbins, Hamilton; first vice-president, Ward Pattison, Peterborough; second vice-president, M. Dulmage, Guelph (acclamation); George Walker, Hamilton (acclamation). Auditors—left over to executive. The president to appoint an assistant to the secretary.

FALCONS SHUT OUT THE YANKEES

TWO-NOTHING IN FAVOR OF CANADIAN TEAM AT ANTWERP

Antwerp, April 26.—The Falcons of Winnipeg carried the Maple Leaf to victory for the second time in the Olympic hockey series by eliminating the United States seven in the semi-finals yesterday by a score of 2 goals to 0. They will meet Sweden in the final contest to-morrow, and by their exceptionally brilliant performances against Czecho-Slovakia and the United States are strong favorites for world's honors.

Yesterday's contest with the Americans—two of whom are Canadian born—presented the most exciting battle of the series. Both teams were on their mettle, and at half time neither had succeeded in tallying. The Icelanders' star forward, Frederickson, penetrated the American defence ten minutes after the resumption of play with one of his famous corkscrew rushes, and shot past Bonney for the first counter of the game. This was the signal for a tremendous ovation from the crowd of British Tommies and supporters who had attended the game to root their colonial representatives to victory.

Five minutes after Frederickson's one-man feat, Johanneson took the puck and tallied the second goal for the Westerners. From then on the Americans made several futile efforts to break the stonewall defence of Benson and Johanneson, who proved infallible. Wally Byron gave a wonderful exhibition of goal-tending, and was responsible for turning off many likely looking shots. Both the Canadian goals were the outcome of scrimmages and after hard fighting.

Wrangle Over Referee.

The beginning of the game was considerably delayed because of a dispute over the referee. Garon, a native Canadian but an officer of the American Red Cross, who refereed the afternoon game, originally was selected to act as referee last night. The Canadians agreed to accept him only on condition that he could be removed during the game if his work was considered unsatisfactory. Garon refused to serve under the conditions imposed by the Canadians, and finally a Frenchman, de Ranch, was agreed on as a compromise.

The teams lined up as follows:

Canada—Goal, Byron; defence, Benson and Johanneson; rover, Woodman; forwards, Halderson, Frederickson and Goodman.

United States — Goal, Bonney, Pittsburg; defence, Tuck, Boston, and Fitzgerald, Pittsburg; rover, Goheen, Pittsburg; forwards, Drury, Pittsburg (formerly Midland, Ont.), Conroy, St. Paul, and J. McCormick, Pittsburg (formerly Buckingham, Que.).

The losers of yesterday's game between the Falcons and the United States will not entirely be eliminated from the tournament, but will have a chance to compete for third prize.

Won Saturday by 15 to 0.

By a score of 15 goals to 0, the Falcons easily disposed of the Czecho-Slovakia aggregation of puck chasers on Saturday and won the right to compete in the semi-finals.

EXTRA TIME NEEDED IN THE CUP FINAL

ASTON VILLA ARE VICTORIOUS, ONE GOAL TO NOTHING

London, April 25. — Aston Villa yesterday won the English Football Cup from Huddersfield at the Chelsea Club grounds by a score of 1-0. Extra time had to be played. The winning score was made by Kirton. The attendance was put at 50,108, and receipts at £50,077.

Missed opportunities caused Huddersfield's downfall. Swann and Taylor, forwards of the Yorkshire team, were the culprits. The Huddersfield right wing was good, especially Richardson.

Aston Villa, playing with the sun behind them, were slightly superior in the first half, and Huddersfield's goal had two very narrow escapes. Bullock, a back, was once called upon to stop the ball right on the goal-line, when Mutch, the goal-tender, had been beaten. For Aston Villa, Wallace played will in the first half. The half-time whistle blew with neither team having scored.

In the second half the play was even, fast and exciting. Huddersfield were weak in front of the goal, but managed to hold out, without a goal being scored, to the end of the ninety minutes of play.

After playing eight minutes of extra time, Kirton headed through from a corner.

Hull won the Northern Union Rugby football final from Huddersfield by 3 points to 2.

The results of the football games played Saturday follow:

LACROSSE PRACTICE.

Quite a number turned out to the lacrosse practice at the Exhibition grounds on Saturday and there were quite a number of interested spectators in spite of the fact that two important football games were in progress at the same time. The indications are, both from the interest and keenness shown by the players of the game and by the attention which the spectators took on Saturday, that the chances are the best ever for a revival of the national game in Peterborough.

SUSPICION NOW IN WORKERS' RANKS

He served notice to the delegates that unless decisions of the conference were to be supplemented by some form of legislation they might all go home and save their time. BOY SCOUTS FLAGS WERE DEDICATED

CEREMONY PERFORMED BY ARCHDEACON WARREN IN ST. GEORGE'S CHURCH

An interesting ceremony took place during the morning service at St. George's Church yesterday when Archdeacon Warren dedicated the flags of St. George's and All Saints' troops of Boy Scouts. The boys attended service in a body in the Scout uniforms and presented a very striking appearance. That the people of the south end take an interest in the Boy Scout movement was shown by the fact that the church was filled for the occasion.

The archdeacon gave a very telling address to the Scouts, in which he dwelt strongly on the point of forming good characters in their young days, a point that the heads of the Boy Scout movement insist on. The boys took a great interest in the address and seemed to be greatly impressed by it.

MORE CONSTABLES ARE MURDERED

Belfast, April 26.—Sergt. Cornelius Crane and Constable McGoldrick, both of whom are reported to have belonged to the Belfast force, were shot and killed Saturday night near Bandon, County Cork. A man named Behan, keeper of a tavern, was shot late Saturday night and seriously wounded as he was leaving his place of business.

His assailants escaped. The motive for the attempt on Behan's life is not known.

Constable Swenton was wounded by a revolver shot at Ennis, County Clare, Saturday. Three suspects were arrested.

ness and leave all other things for secondary consideration.

A World of Suggestion.

In asking this, he was not asking that they should give less consideration to each other because they gave more to God. In order to obtain this approval it was necessary to apply oneself to the task of discovering that approval. St. Paul did not say, "Accept or wait for the approval of God." He said, "Study, apply yourself, seek and ye shall find, ask and ye shall receive, knock and ye shall enter." There was a world of suggestion and truth for us.

It might then be asked, "How am I to obtain the approval of God?" God had given His word, which had been passed down from century to century and preserved by the faithful in every generation. This was a miracle which should impress every one greatly. The Ten Commandments had also been given to us. Some would say that the Ten Commandments did not teach a positive religion. It may never have been intended that they should, but they could not on that account be dispensed with. Many men boasted of seeking the Divine approval, and yet were whittling away one or other of the Ten Commandments. God could never be pleased by any side-stepping of the commandments.

Issue of Religion.

If tonight their life was swayed by the desire to win His approval, they should set themselves to think seriously, to pray and make sacrifices for it. Then only would God be pleased to place His crown of highest honor. The greatest reward they would receive in this life was self-respecting workmanship. The whole issue of religion, to his mind, was manifested in the work they did every day. The life in which the Christian spirit dwelt was a life which would put the opportunities presented to use, and at the end of the journey there would then be no need to be ashamed. They did not need to be experts at their vocation or task, but as Christians they must be the best possible. Nothing else would satisfy. Many emphasized one phase of Christianity at the expense of the other. Some looked so much to the Deity of God that they overlooked His humanity. Others looked so much to His humanity that they overlooked His Deity. There should be a place for all phases of Christian work. They could not afford to be narrow. If they would be perfect in the approval of the Lord it was necessary to be uniform in all good works. If these principles were followed, at the end of the journey God would welcome them to His kingdom with the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

SERVICES FITTINGLY COMMEMORATIVE OF ST. GEORGE, ENGLAND'S PATRON SAINT

Evensong Was Fully Choral—ArchDeacon Warren of Toronto Delivered Eloquent Sermons—Mayor McIntyre and Aldermen Joined in This Great Religious Festival

Both services at St. eGorge's church yesterday were commemorative of St. George, Old England's patron Saint, and both events were commendably in keeping with the occasion. The chancel aisle was flanked with a Union Jack and a St. George's flag—one on each side of its entrance—and the little church presented a bright, welcoming appearance. The service at night was of a festival character, and fully choral. The choir was augmented by members of other city heurches of the same denomination; the Mayor and some of his Aldermen colleagues responded to the rector's invitation to be present; Mr. Thomas Tooms, M. L. A. for West Peterborough, read the second lesson, and citizens were present from parts of the city quite distant from the church to unite in commemoration of the Saint, after whom this sacred building is named. This evensong service was of an exceedingly cheerful and reverend nature, and heartily joined in by the whole congregation, members and visitors alike. The rector, Rev. James Price, is to be congratulated on the success of his efforts to make this religious festival one worthy of the name of St. eGorge worthy of the growing little church, and inspiring to all present.

The occasion was graced by the presence of Archdeacon Warren, who assisted in the service and preached a forceful sermon, peculiarly applicable to the spirit of the age. Preceding this discourse, Rev. Mr. Price took occasion to extend thanks on behalf of the congregation to his worship the mayor and members of the council for their presence, and also to Archdeacon Warren, who in spite of his duties entailing the covering of a very large field of work, had so generously made time to come to the little church of St. George's and take part in what was really a celebration of St. George's Day, a day and a saint which and who stands for so much in the lives all loyal churchmen.

"A Sacrifice For Sin."

These were the words on which the distinguished visitor built up a discourse which carried with it a full measure of conviction that his theory as to what is lacking in the world today to solve the problem of existing unrest is generally speaking correct. Sacrifice for sin, he said, is not simply a Christian doctrine, for it represents a conviction in the minds of men all through the know ages, an idea which has dominated the minds of the human race thousands of years before Christ, as far back as it is posible to trace the existence of man on earth. Before and up to a hundred or two years after Christ, the religions of the world consisted of animal and sometimes human sacrifices—the shedding of blood—regarded then by people as a sacrifice for sin. Read and study history and historians, the revelations of old heathen temples, and you will find this great principle of sacrifice underlying the religions of the ancient world. And he continued there was good as well as bad in all heathen religion—even in idolatory—the worshippers of which not always grasping after shadows, but were seeking the conviction that there should be a sacrifice for sin. Coming down to our own day, the Archdeacon asserted this principle of atonement by animal sacrifice, had given place to prayer, but for all that the conviction that there should be sacrifice for sin has not passed away. In Christian churches that fundamental idea of sacrifice remains as embodied in heathenism; in the Roman Catholic church we have the sacrfice of the mass, in the Church of England sacrifice is represented in the holy communion—and here we see the same conviction that there is and must be a sacrifice for sin as obtained in heathen religions. It is, he said, the same conviction which had dominated the mind of man since his first inception to consciousness, and that movement in the minds of men is a movement of the living God.

What is Needed

Turning to conditions to day the reverend gentleman declared that a larger and more comprehensive vision of sin is needed, a recognition that sin is encompasing all conditions of everyday life, which needs adjustment. Why, he asked, if the world is not involved in some great trouble or difficulty do one group of nations plot and plan and fight to destroy other nations? Is this not evidence that human life is not properly adjusted, and that in attempting such adjustment calamities and mistakes are made. Then in the world today groups of men and women live finding fault with social condtons, conclusve evidence that sin is rampant, that something is wrong or the attempts at social adjustment we see today would not be made. Here the speaker referred to the high cost of living, which impels the cry of "profiteering" and to striking for higher wages, both of which he declared to be confessions of sin and admissions that the world is not by any means adjusted on right lines. Dissatisfaction with one's own life and position attained is also a confession that through sin we have missed our mark and not accomplished that adjustment in life we think in our innermost soul we need and must have. Sin is not theological, he said; it affects individual life, political lfe; national life, and the history of the past six years teaches us that there is something in the ancient idea of sacrifice as a propitation for sin.

Money Not the Remedy

More money for the class and the other, Archdeacon Warren continued, is not the solution of the difficulties of life. Such has been the agitation the past few years, and things are of anything worse. Frist one group attains its "more money" object and another group suffers; then conditions are reversed and that sort of see-sawing goes on to the benefit of none eventually. And no government can manage the affairs of human life, the problem is too complex. Of course we must have governments, that governments today must create officials and every official becomes a master not of free men, but of slaves, governments must be supported, and the more the nation increases expenditure in that connection, the greater the burden on men who work. Such governments as we see them today are broken reeds to trust in for solving world difficulties of this age.

Strange Convictions

The speaker here, in support of his conviction that sacrifice is the only means for world adjustment drew a vivid picture of ancient days 2.000 years back when, he said, a strange conviction in the minds of man began to operate. These early Christians were filled with a strange peace and satisfaction, and when we turn to the new testament, we find in this conection these words: "There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus."

The message of the gospel in Christ's age was one of peace said the eminent divine, and with peace followed satisfaction, together with the solution of life's difficulties; and those early Chrstians thereby attained what we are seeking for today—a solving of world unrest and difficulties. This peace, however, declared Mr. Warren, was ascertained with sacrifce—sacrifce of individual selfishness in furtherance of duty and mercy and fidelity to that truth and generosity which was manifested in Christ when he died on the cross. That sprit of sacrifice is inherent in the mother for her offsprng, in the father for his family; it was demonstrated in those soldiers who gave and risked their lives for home and country, and offers a soluton of the complex social and national problems of today. Spiritual power is necessary to adjust world difficulties; if that is adopted generally we shall be relieved from all corroding cares of life, and filed with God's power to serve, sacrifice and rejoice. There is, he said, no force in any institutions man can create where there is not the guiding power of the Lord Jesus Christ, and until that power is obtained, our life's diffficulties will remoin unsolved

Old Age Passing Away

In conclusion the reverend speaker said the old age was passing away; those old world principles in an experience of 2,000 years have been fully tested and found wanting, but Christianity will not really have been tried as a solution for general unrest until it has premeated every human institution from top to bottom, every business, church, government and social class.

THEATRICALS

Scene from "The Revelations of a Wife," at the Grand Theatre, April 27-28.

NOT A DRAMATIC SERMON

It must not be imagined that "The Revelations of a Wife," that comes to the Grand Opera House for two days, starting Friday, April 27, starting with daily matinees for ladies only, is a dry peachment, a dramatized sermon or prosy succession of platitudinous speeches. It is a drama that throbs with life, that is instinct with power and dramatic force. It is a play of modern mystery, away from the so-called badly written and badly produced plays. That it is instinct with power and dramatic force; and it is acted by one of the most remarkable companies recently seen on the American stage; a company that includes among its numbers many recognized Broadway stars.

A POWERFUL MYSTERY DRAMATIC OFFERING

CLUB WOMEN ALL OVER COUNTRY ARE INTERESTING THEMSELVES

It is a pleasure to announce that the theatre goers of this city will be given an opportunity of witnessing a production of one of the most powerful mystery dramatic offerings of the season, "The Revelations of a Wife," which opens its engagement at the Grand Opera House, starting Tuesday, April 27, with daily matinees for ladies only. Club women from all parts of the country are interesting themselves on the very subject that forms part of the plot of this very successful play, "Marriage and Divorce." In writing the play the author evidently had in mind the masses, for the play is filled with pathos, tears, and a bright vein of comedy. The play might be mentioned from an educational standpoint for it will no doubt show or put at rest the minds of a great many girls contemplating matrimony. It will probably show a great many married women the way to happiness. It will no doubt help a great many men to have more confidence in their better halves. It will show that a child in the house is a great doctor for broken hearts. Therefore it is a very beneficial play, as well as a play of mystery. The mysterious part cannot be explained and it will keep you guessing until the final drop of the curtain. It will no doubt prove a wonderful Broadway success and New York managers are sending out their representatives with a New York showing in view.

POLLYANNA DAY AT GRAND THEATRE

YOU'LL MEET THERE ALL WHO SEEK FOR LIFE'S BETTER THINGS

Next Saturday is Pollyanna Day at the Grand Theatre. You will meet there all who have a feeling for the better things of character and life. The principle of happiness which does not eat itself away in selfishness will glow like a wild flower, and none will be so poor in spirit that he shall not leave the scene of gladness with a feeling that his hard literal world is no longer a thorn. All the bands and trappings of toil will be loosened for the evening by the hands of imaginative sympathy. The spirit of play will lead the way, and curling and snapping with the joy of living not even a shadow of care can get by the gates of your heart. It will be a night at the theatre that will cling to memory like ivy and harvest thoughts that will put a tonic quality into living. The essence of happiness will be yours by bringing others to enjoy the red letter night, and learn "the glad game." Get your seats early, and be glad. The appeal of Pollyanna is so absorbingly human and refreshing no one can afford to miss it.

In the cast that will present the glad play for the second time in Peterborough, Pollyana Producing Co. are sending players that are known here.

Miss Lolita Westman, the youngest leading lady on the American stage, will play the leading part, that of Pollyanna Whittier, and prominent in her support will be Pacie Ripple, Peter W. Maguire, Wallace Roberts, Augusta Durgeon, Earla Elverson and others.

YOU CAN CAPTURE RATS WITH VARNISH

A varnished board as an effective rat trap is a method recommended recently by Dr. Howarth, medical officer in London. A strong lithographic varnish should be warmed in boiling water and spread one-sixteenth to one-eighteenth of an inch thick cardboard. A bait is placed in the centre of the board, and the rats attempting to reach the bait are caught on the sticky surface in the same manner that flies are trapped on flypaper. The varnish should be effective for four days, when a fresh coat must be placed on the board.

The varnish is not poisonous, and a coroner's jury would probab'y ascribe death to natural causes following a shock, said Dr. Howarth I thing that the rats die of fright Once their tails stick their d[illegible] sealed. They never get near thte bait. They get their feet in the varnish, and the more they struggle the faster they stick.

Rats caught during the night are always dead in the morning, and it is a very remarkable thing that f two rates get on the varnish together one of them kills the othter. Evidently each thinks that the other is holding him. Then there is a battle royal, and we find one with its neck bitten through. As to the cruelty of this method, We cannot afford to waste sentiment, and it is certainly not as cruel as phosphorous poison. which takes about four hours to kill.

SEAT SALE FOR FI-FI OPENS WEDNESDAY

ONE OF THE BIGGEST SOCIAL EVENTS OF THE SEASON IS COMING

The sale of seats for "Fi-Fi" opens Wednesday morning at 9 a.m.

One of the greatest social events of the season in Peterborough will be the musical extravaganza, "Fi-Fi," to be given under the auspices of the Belmont Club, at the Grand Opera House, on the evenings of Thursday and Friday, April 29 and 30.

Two hundred children are to take part, supported by many prominent young men and women. The title role, "Fi-Fi," a French doll, is to be taken by Miss Helen McLaren. The story runs that the toymaker's daughter, Bonnie, who will be impersonated by Miss Hazel Davidson, falls asleep in the midst of all the toys in her father's top shop and has the most marvelous dream. Everything comes to life about her, and there is a revel in which all take a lively part. There is the most entrancing music, and many sweet voices join in the beautiful songs. There are the bewildering dances of the Bridesmaids, the paper dolls, the China dolls, the Noah's ark people, the jumping jacks, the tin soldiers, and the letter blocks. There are the dance of the winds and the Christmas fairies interspersed with solo dances by skilled artists. The dream goes on in a beautiful whirl in which a love story unwinds, and concludes in the happiest manner for all concerned.

No efforts will be spared to present this entertainment with every possible advantage. The seat sale opens Wednesday, April 28th, at 9 a.m., at the Grand Opera House. It is a matter of regret that the presentation must be limited to the two performances, but the wise will provide themselves with tickets at the earliest possible opportunly.

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:

Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS WITH BRASS BAND AND PIPES MUSIC

Local Sport Reaches Commendable Position—Caledonians Won From Veterans With a Score of 5-0—C.G.E. Team Also Victorious Over Canadian Woollens.

The opening football games on Saturday resulted in a victory of 5-0 for the Caledonians against the War Veterans and 5-0 for the C. G. E. against the Canadian Woollens. A strong cross wind affected the judgment of the players to some extent and the class of football showed room for much improvement.

Local sport reached a position which it has never attained since 1914 on Saturday afternoon in the opening of the City League Football schedule. As was to be expected there was a large and enthusiastic crowd of spectators on hand bright and early to witness the ceremony of opening. These ceremonies were divided into two parts, both taking place at the same time. On the eastern pitch of the Exhibition grounds, where the C. G. E. faced the Canadian Woollens, the players were played into the field by the band of the Great War Veterans augmented by the best musicians from the C. G. E., and at intervals during the game the players were cheered to their task by selections from this band. The first ball was kicked off by Mr. E. G. Patterson, the local head of the C. G. E. and then the game commenced in earnest both sides keen to draw first blood.

On the western pitch, where the Caledonians met the War Veterans, piper Thoms a recent arrival from the old land, played the players from the dressing rooms to the grounds with Scotch airs. It was easy to see that the Scotsmen went there confident of victory, for Scotland's standard was unfurled on the flag-staff, hurling defiance to all opponents.

While the weather was perhaps better than the earlier days of the week seemed to auger, yet there was a nasty cold north wind blowing right across the field, keeping the spectators in an unpleasantly cold mood and seriously affecting the judgment of the players which was naturally a faulty point in the opening game. Given perfect conditions it is thought that both games might have resulted in a closer contest.

It is to be regretted that the drawing resulted in the existing fixtures for the opening games on Saturday. From the kick off it could easily be seen that the opposing teams in both games were badly matched, and if the Caledonians had opposed the C. G. E. and the Canadian Woollens the Great War Veterans, a far better opening game would have resulted from a spectator's standpoint, besides giving all teams a better chance for the start of the season. It is a known fact that the Caledonians had no fears for the War Veterans, but were anxious to clash with the C. G. E., which team they regarded as the only real opposition in the league.

C. G. E. vs. Canadian Woollens

It could not be said from the showing made in the first game that either the C. G. E. or the Canadian Woollens had very much to boast about. Both teams showed a sad need of practice and considerable lack of judgment. It was the combination playing of the C. G. E. which won the game for them. They have played together several times this year already and have developed combination playing to a fairly high standard and this fact stood them in good stead on Saturday. The fault was that they could not top this with accurate shooting. Time and time again they carried the ball down to the Canadian Woollen's goal only to lose the opportunity thus presented by missing a straight shot. This fact far more than anything else prevented a far higher score from being registered against the Canadian Woollens.

While the Canadian Woollens showed a lack of form to some extent they have no reason to be disheartened by the results of Saturday's game. All points considered they put up a good fight and there is every reason to hope that with a little more practice together they will develop into formidable opponents. Their backs at time showed great style in defence and there is every reason to believe that great improvement will be shown in the next few games. The Canadian Woollens goalkeeper showed signs of nervousness but nevertheless accomplished some good work in that position and was largely responsible for the fact that the score was not much higher against them.

The five pointers secured by the C. G. E. were obtained at various periods of the game. Four of them were counted during the first half but in the second half their opponents settled down to a strong defensive game in an endeavor to make their defeat as light as possible. They were successful to some extent in this and only one goal was counted against them in the second half.

Caledonians vs. War Veterans

The Caledonians compared with the War Veterans in about the same way as the C. G. E. did to the Canadian Woollens. Much had been expected by football fans from the Veterans and it was hoped that they would at least give the Scotchmen the run of their life. This anticipation was not realized. The absence of the football secretary of the War Veterans from his position in goal was undoubtedly a blow to the team and for the sake of the team and the supporters of the Veterans it is hoped that the next game will not find him "absent off parade." The practice games had shown him to be a goalkeeper of no mean reputation and he was looked upon as the strength of the team. However, Burrows, who substituted in goal earned great credit and his steady work was instrumental in keeping the odds respectably low. The War Veterans were without a doubt up against a strong team and that they held the score against them down as low as they did is evidence of the strong defence game they played. More may be expected from this team later in the season.

The Caledonians were in fine form and showed it throughout the game. They played excellent combination and can easily be prophesied to the most likely team for the league honors. There was room for much improvement in the way of judgment, which was perhaps affected slightly by the cross wind.

Young Bobbie Hanna in the forward line appeared to be a popular favorite among the Caledonian supporters of whom there were many and he seemed to be earning it all through the game. He played a very steady and sensible game and is looked upon to make his name in the league during the present season. The two Willshaw brothers played a wonderful defence game and it was due to their efforts that the War Veterans were only able to seriously attack the Caledonian goal on about two or three occasions all the way through the game. Another star in the game was Matt. [illegible], who was prominent in the forward line.

The line-ups were as follows:

War Veterans— Goal Burrows, backs, Gamble and Bishop; half-backs Hawthorne, Ryan, Edwards; forwards Curtis, Burrows, Norman, Sharman, and Giggott; reserves, Evans, Jones, Griffin and Mallinson. Captain Gamble; vice-captain, Bishop.

Caledonians— Goal, Ralph [illegible] backs, R. Willshaw and J. Willshaw; half-backs, A. Hardy, [illegible] and B. Frost; forwards, R. McDonald, E. Hardy, J. Shaw, A. Shaw and B. Hanna.

BALL TOSSERS TO MEET

(Belleville Intelligencer.)

[illegible] Peterboro' ball tossers will meet the Grand Trunk Belleville [illegible] the first league game of the season. Last year the champions of Ontario were promised a suitable ball park and diamond for this season's games, but the outlook is not promising for this being ready by May 24. Belleville citizens are proud of their baseball champions, but pride without works is poor support.

Two Indian reserves have been opened for settlement by returned soldiers at Regina.

GOOD OLD FORD STANDS RACKET

UPTURNED IN COLLISION, ENGINE OF LITTLE CAR CONTINUES TO RUN.

An amusing accident which demonstrated the durability of the Ford took place on Saturday night at about six o'clock, on the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets. A car from Millbrook was proceeding down Aylmer to Charlotte, and the little Ford was proceeding east along Charlotte street. At the corner they met and the bigger car overturned the Ford. The engine of the Ford continued to run in spite of the fact that the car was upturned. When the Ford was again righted it was able to proceed on its way slightly the worse for the encounter. Some damage was also done to the bigger car. None of the occupants were injured.

The driver of the big car stated that he was driving along Aylmer street and when he reached the corner of Charlotte street he stopped to allow a car to pass west along Charlotte street. On account of the fact that this car was passing at the time he could not see the Ford until he ran into it. After he struck the Ford his car continued on to the east sidewalk of Charlotte street striking a telegraph pole which was lying near the walk and driving it across the road. The driver of the Ford also said that it was impossible to see the other car at the time of the accident.

Eye witnesses state that neither car was travelling at a fast rate of speed and that the Ford, which was travelling east, had the right of way.

The exact amount of damage has not yet been ascertained.

WILL APPEAL JUDGMENT

DELIGHTED WITH GROWTH OF KNOX

REV. KEITH OF WINNIPEG SEES BIG FUTURE FOR PETERBOROUGH

"I am delighted to see the growth which has taken place in the church during the past few years, and to have the opportunity of meeting so many friends," stated Rev. H. Keith, pastor of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Winnipeg, and formerly pastor of Knox Church, here, when seen yesterday evening after the service. He stated that, having occasion to come down to Toronto in connection with a meeting of the Foreign Missions Board of the Presbyterian Church, he took the opportunity of continuing on to Peterborough, and of meeting some of his old friends in this city.

Describing the work of the Foreign Missions Board, Mr. Keith said that its purpose was to supervise the work of missions in the foreign fields, and that at the meeting 18 new missionaries had been apponited. Plans were made in connection with the expenditures made possible by the Forward Movement campaign, and arrangements were made for the construction of many buildings in China, Japan, India and Trinidad.

Peterborough was more like home to him than any other city, and he felt a more definite connection with his town than with any other as a result of the many years he spent here up till 1914. Mr. Keith also stated that it was a source of great pleasure to him to be able to boast about the city of Peterborough wherever he went. He felt that it was without doubt the finest little city in Ontario, and that it had a great industrial future. The cleanness of the streets and the beauty of the trees in the city suggested the general life within.

In Winnipeg he had met many Peterborough people, and they were always glad to have the opportunity to talk about the home town and the old friends they had left behind.

Mr. Keith left Knox Church to take up his present ministrations in 1914, and since that time has only preached in Peterborough twice. The first time was in 1917, when he was here for a short stay, and then yesterday morning when he took the morning service at Knox Church. He left for the West on the early train this morning.

MINISTERIAL ASSN. AND FENCE POSTERS

RESOLVE AGAINST MEANS OF ADVERTISING THEY HOPE MAY BE MISLEADING

The local Ministerial Association met especially this morning to discuss certain fence advertising, and unanimously resolved:

1. That we feel it our duty to protest against the offence done to the people of Peterborough in the suggestions of the fence posters and hand bills circulated in connection with a showing proposed for Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

2. That we would rather believe that such advertising is a plan to secure audiences rather than this company will portray anything that would gratify such as might seek to see and hear the indecent.

3. That we express our confidence that the people of nobler sentiments in our city will not leave themselves liable to the interpretation either that they are attracted by the kind of an entertainment which the advertisements would suggest or that on the other hand they are susceptible to appeals for an audience for something that may itself be very different to what his kind of advertising insinuates.

4. In any case, that we make it clear that whatever the play may reveal in our opinion violence has been done to this community by a kind of advertising that Peterborough people do not enjoy and will not respond to.

REV. S.H. SOPER AT GEORGE ST. CHURCH

MISSIONARY FROM WEST CHINA HODLS ATTENTION OF LARGE CONGREGATION

Sunday was a special missionary day in George Street. Rev. S. H. Soper, who is a missionary on furlough from West China, preached at both services, the pastor being absent, conducting anniversary services at his previous pastorate in London. Mr. Soper's visit and messages were of special interest to the congregation of George Street owing to the fact that he occupied this pulpit for three months about 12 years ago, before going to the foreign field.

Mr. Soper's messages were inspiring and helpful, as he told of the wonderful work that is being accomplished in China through Canadian Methodism. There are a number of schools in China which have been founded by Methodism where Chinese boys are taught the Christian faith and where they are trained to become ministers of the gospel. About seven years ago, however, when Mr. Soper went to China, a need was felt for Christian schools where boys would be trained to become leaders in other professions, such as dentists, lawyers, doctors, scientists, etc. Mr. Soper discovered a plot of four acres in the city where he labors. This plot was not under cultivation, which is an unusual occurrence in China. He learned that his land was owned by the Methodist Church. Through Mr. Soper's instrumentality an industrial school was erected there and the Chinese boys who attend this school are trained in agriculture as well as other lines of endeavor. The boys do the agricultural work in part payment for their tuition.

Mr. Soper's whole soul is in the work of this industrial school. While he did not know much about farming when he took up this work, he has been successful in teaching the boys along agricultural lines with splendid results.

At the Sunday School session, Mr. Soper showed some lantern slides of scenes taken around the industrial school with his own camera. These proved to be very interesting and instructive.

When Mr. Soper left China on furlough over a year ago there were 8,000 adherents of Canadian Methodism in China and 8,000 Methodist Sunday school scholars. "In spite of our industrial turmoil in the world," said Mr. Soper, "the spirit of the living God is gaining access into the hearts of men as it never did before."

In making an appeal for the support by our churches of the missionary cause, Mr. Soper pointed out that in 1914 a Canadian dollar could be exchanged for two silver Chinese dollars. Now, however, a Canadian dollar is only worth one Chinese silver dollar. Owing to this fact our missionaries are faced with the high cost of living problem as we are in this country.

FUNERAL OF LATE W. H. MOORE TO-DAY

MAYOR AND CITY COUNCIL AND REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS ATTEND

A large and representative crowd of citizens attended the funeral of the late W. H. Moore, which took place from his residence, 310 London street, this afternoon to Little Lake Cemetery. Represented at the service were members of the legal fraternity, leading manufacturers, business men and professional men. The Mayor and City Council attended to pay their last respects to an old councillor. Today the Utilities Commission offices were closed out of respect to the late Mr. Moore and generally speaking it was a day of mourning in all public departments. There were also many out-of-town mourners present, including Messrs. F. D. Moore, K.C., of Lindsay; T. F. Matthews, Toronto; Rev. F. Sawers, Cobourg; W. T. Moore, Claresholm; W. L. Allen, Cobourg; Major G. S. Whitaker, of Toronto; Mr. Ambery, Toronto, and Mrs. Fairbanks, of Cobourg.

Flowers and cards of sympathy were very numerous and gave evidence of the high esteem in the community in which the late Mr. Moore was held. Services at the house and grave were very impressive and were conducted by Rev. Robert Pogue, pastor of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, which church the deceased had long been a faithful member.

The pall-bearers who carried the remains to the last resting place were all from the same profession as the deceased, being Judge Huycke and Messrs. E. A. Peck, F. D. Kerr, E. A. D. Hall, J. Wearing and W. F. Johnson.

MARK STREET CHURCH NOTES

Again yesterday the congregations were large, and the effort on the part of Mr. Quinn to make the music contribute largely to the success of the services was highly appreciated. The after-meeting in the morning was also well attended and a splendid fellowship meeting.

The morning subject was based on Ps. XC. 9, "We spend our years as a tale that is told." The following were the points of the sermon:

1.—There is no division of literature more remunerative to the writer, or more interesting and widely read, than the "Short Story." Is it like the story of our life? How? Why?

2.—Like a short story our life is brief, for it is soon told. The material is condensed, and all counts for good or bad. The story of our life is read by young and old and it will bless or curse, blight or blast, cheer or chill, lift up or crush down.

3.—Human life is the story of wealth or poverty, health or sickness, joy or sorrow, vice or virtue, philantrophy or selfishness, the service of God or the service of the devil.

4.—It is a solemn thing to write a book or a poem, and it is more solemn still to live a life. It is a pity of a man whose whole life is only a piece of fiction, and many lives are simply a pretence. There are books which are false and there are lives which, like the fig-tree that Jesus caused, only a living, leafy lie.

5.—Many books are without purpose, object or moral, so are many lives. Do not worry about your funeral sermon or your obituary; your are writing your own every day.

6.—Like a story, our lives will end. Do you remember the first chapter you wrote? How does it compare with the last? Do we enjoy reading our own life story? Would we wish to write it again? Are we willing for others to read what we have written? No matter how much we desire to revise our life's story, it is impossible. We must say with Pilate, "What I have written I have written."

The evening subject was "The Price of Religious Liberty." Text. "Buy the truth and sell it not." Prov. XXIII., 23rd. Points of the sermon as follows:

1.—Pilate said to Jesus: "What is truth," but he did not wait for Christ's answer. What a pity he did not learn from Jesus the cost of truth.

2.—Men in all ages have bought the truth at the cost of life itself. Abel buys truth with his blood. The love of truth sends Daniel to the lions, Joseph to the jail, the Hebrews to the furnace, Latimer, Cranmer and Ridley to the stake; yes, and every many that buys truth pays its price.

3.—We may sell truth or religious liberty, and the world, flesh, devil, position, political pull, social distinction and wicked pleasure are all offered as a price.

4.—But truth is fire-proof, like character. As the Marturs, in chariots of fire, swept to glory, they carried the truth with them.

"Buy the truth and sell it not."

intelligence (before receiving the 'round robin'), I went to Mr. C. E. Jamieson, B.A., LL.B., our cadet instructor, and placed myself entirely under his direction, especially pointing out to him that my resignation would be tendered then or at any other time he thought it in the best interests of the battalion.

"During the two days of the Bolshevikism (as the mutineers themselves termed it) I several times repeated this offer, in some cases in the presence of witnesses. In each case his reply was, 'Hold your office.'

"As late as Friday afternoon Mr. Jamieson told me in the presence of four officers (including the O. C. the Peterborough Cadet Brigade) that 'we must not let them put one over on us,' and that it might be well to drop out gracefully after law and order had been restored, but not to do so before. Later developments the same day led me to send in my resignation, which I did feeling sure (as in fact I have been assured by leaders among both officers and cadets) that now that my position is made clear to the officers, N.C.O.'s and cadets of No. 13 Battalion they will understand that I have been the victim of circumstances of a very unpleasant nature.

"The report that I sought my promotion to the rank of O. C. is also false, which, I am sure, Mr. Jamieson would willingly certify."

All girls who expect to have a holiday this summer should come to the camp meeting Wednesday night, not only to hear all about the camp for this summer, but to see lantern views of it.

Good times are coming for the girls who love the out-of-doors. The first will be a hike next Saturday afternoon, starting from the association at 2.30. All girls are invited to come.

The following are the activities for the week:

BANK DEPOSITS DROP A BILLION

DECLINE IN AMERICAN EARNINGS AND SLACKENING OF BUSINESS AND STRIKES BLAMED BY SOME

PUTS A BRAKE ON CREDIT

COMPTROLLER LAYS TWO MONTHS SHOWING TO SHRINK OF DEPOSITS

Washington, April 27.—A shrinkage of almost $1,000,000,000 in the bank deposits of the country, with a commensurate shrinkage in the total resources of the national banks is noted in a compilation by Controller of the Currency Williams of the reports of the national banks on the call of February 28.

Total deposits in the national banks February 28 were $16,965,122,000, a reduction in just two months from December 31 of $901,291,000. The December 31 deposits, however, were slightly under the highest ever recorded, and the deposits for February 28 were $1,800,000,000 greater than for approximately the same date a year ago.

Government experts here see a deep significance in the figures as reflecting the financial and economic trend of the nation. After increasing in great jumps from the very beginning of the European war and practically doubling in six years, bank deposits began to decrease at the end of last year. In the first two months of 1920 the decrease was rapid and if maintained will bring the 1920 figures below those of 1919.

Loss in deposits is ascribed to many shrinkage of earnings by the people economic causes, but primarily to a and a decrease in the total volume of business of the country. Labor unrest, strikes and other disturbances were no doubt large contributing factors.

Lessened deposits with lessened resources means a natural curtailment of the credit resources of the country, an end for which the Federal Reserve Board has strived through artificial means by the increase of rediscount rates at the Federal Reserve banks. With the lending power of the Allies Place Responsibility Squarely on Netherlands Government—Ex-Emperor is Potential Centre of Reactionary Programme in Germany—Note by Lloyd George

(By Canadian Press.)

The Hague, April 27.—Responsibility for the continued residence in Holland of former Emperor Wilhelm was placed squarely and exclusively on the Netherlands government in a note sent by Premier Lloyd George on March 24th and published today for the first time.

The note points out that the Allies have learned of Utrecht as the ex-kaiser's definite place of internment, and says that Wilhelm, in spite of precautions, is in very serious danger so long as left within forty kilometres of the German frontier, and is the potential centre of reactionary propaganda and a constant menace to the peace of Europe.

MILK PRICES REACH THEIR PEAK HOME MARKETS NOT DEVELOPED

E. H. Stonehouse Addresses Local Producers—Says People Do Not Realize Full Value of Milk as a Food and Suggests Vigorous Advertising Campaign—Summer Prices

At a meeting of the Milk Producers Association of Peterborough held last night in the Board of Trade rooms, Mr. E. H. Stonehouse, president of the Ontario Milk Producers' Association, and recognized as an authority on questions of milk production and distribution, gave an address explaining the work accomplished by his association during the past, the present market situation and the future prospects of the milk producing industry. The chair was taken by Mr. R. B. Rogers, president of the Peterborough Association.

Difficult Times

"These are difficult times for men in my position,' Mr. Stonehouse declared at the commencement of his address. As long as we were gaining ground in the matter of obtaining increased prices for the producer it was not hard to satisfy our members, but now a situation has been relaxed where although feed was scarce and high in price yet there was an abundant supply of milk on the market, and prices that would be justified by the cost of feed could not be obtained. He never saw a bunch of men who were so exasperated at conditions and prospect as the producers were at recent meetings in Hamilton and Toronto, which he attended. At Toronto over 500 men were ready to mob the executive because they had not been able to do impossible things, and in Hamilton the producers were pretty much of the same mind. The same situation existed all over the country.

Market Flooded

Apparently the peak had been reached in milk prices for the time being. At the present time productive conditons were more difficult than at any time since he had been in the dairy business. It was not a question of paying high prices for feeds, but of obtaining feeds at all. In some parts of the country there was practically no feed at all, and the people were already turning their cattle out to graze and pick up what they could. In Hamilton and Toronto the situation was such that they could not consider a reduction in prices, and yet never since the war had there been such a supply of milk on the market as at the present time. It was a siutation which, although he had been in the business for a life time, he was not able to understand. All winter the market had been filled with milk, and it was now very plentiful and hard to dispose of.

A Losing Game

He thought that the trouble with the system under which the milk producers worked was that it was not elastic enough. Prices were fixed twice yearly. They always tried to get as near the actual selling value of the milk as possible. Once the price was set they stuck to it in spite of the fact that in the meantime the price of feeds and other things connected with the business went up. The result of this system was that all through the years of the war they had been playing a losing game. However, it was to be hoped that when conditions began to return to normal these same facts would be working in their favor.

Conditions Critical

Mr. Stonehouse particularly emphasized the fact that never in the history of the Dominion had conditions been as critical as they were at the present time and never before had the country been so dependent upon a bumper crop throughout the length and breadth of the Dominion. In the West men were sacrificing their cattle and slaughtering them through a lack of feed. He hoped that these conditions were extreme, but he found that all through Ontario the

PROFITEERING IN HAY AT EDMONTON

CLEAR EVIDENCE OF SELLING AT EXORBITANT PRICES SAY POLICE

(By Canadian Press.)

Edmonton, Alta., April 27.—Police reports reveal profiteering in hay sales in Edmonton, according to Mayor Clarke. There was clear evident that hay had been sold here at exorbitant prices, he declared, in speaking of the report. Instances were recorded where one firm on an investment of $720 had made a profit of $244. The police discovered that another firm made a profit of $27 a ton on hay brought in from British Columbia, while another netted $22 a ton on an inferior grade. It is also reported that the police discoverd that hay had been bought from Calgary at $52 and $56 a ton and turned over here for from $70 to $85.

SAYS EUROPE IN DANGER FROM REDS

EDITOR DR. KEY SEES GERMANY AS SOLUTION OF PROBLEM

NO SIGN OF DRY SWEDEN

VISITOR SAYS PRESENT LAWS GOVERNING LIQUOR ARE SATISFACTORY

New York, April 27.—Europe and the entire fabric of civilization is threatened with "grave danger of collapse" through the spread of Bolshevism, in the opinion of Dr. Helmer Key, chief editor of the Swenska Dagbladet of Stockholm, one of the largest dailies in Sweden, who is at the Harvard Club, about to start on a month's tour of the United States.

"Germany is the hub of the situation," said Dr. Key yesterday. "There is no immediate danger from Bolshevism in the Scandinavian countries, but everything depends upon what happens in Germany. If the Germans can get on their feet again; economically, the danger will be over. The fate of all Europe depends upon how quickly this can be accomplished. If Germany goes down France and the other countries will face chaos and Great Britain and America would also be affected.

"It seems to me that the United States has a great interest at stake. I do not think there is any present danger of the return of the militarists to power in Germany, but one cannot tell what will happen ten years hence."

Dr. Key, who formerly was professor of the history of literature at Upsala University, which was founded in 1480 and claims to be the oldest institution of learning in the world, said that food was getting somewhat cheaper in Sweden but that houses were scarce and rents high. There is little danger, he thinks, that "Pussyfoot" Johnson or any one else can make his country dry, as labor and the Socialists are almost solidly against prohibition.

Dr. Key said that the system of restricting the consumption of strong drink in Sweden was fairly satisfactory, although much illicit distilling was being done. Persons who desire to purchase spirits by the bottle receive a card called a "motbook," which is stamped every time they make a purchase. The possession of a "motbok" entitles the holder to be served with beer and light wines in restaurants, but the card is promptly taken away in the event that its holder is arrested for intoxication, or if complaints are received from members of his family.

Although Finland is nominally dry there are much drunkenness there according to Dr. Key. Iceland, he says, has been engulfed in the wave of prohibition. Norway permits the sale of liquor containing as much as twelve per cent. of alcohol, and Denmark is as wet as a saengerbund picnic.

Sweden is likely to continue to export newsprint paper to the United States and Canada, Dr. Key believes, because it can be produced there at less cost than on this side of the ocean. He said that the export trade had caused the price to go up to the Swedish papers.

Dr. Key was the instigator of the Swedish-American Foundation, which at present has twelve Swedes studying in American universities and a like number of American students in Sweden. The foundation was designed to bring about closer social and economic relations between the two countries. Before returning home Dr. Key will visit Washington, Chicago, San Francisco and other cities.

CANADIANS WIN WORLD'S HOCKEY CHAMPIONSHIP AT ANTWERP

Sweden Was Hopelessly Outclassed by Boys of Maple Leaf Land—Canucks in Carrying off Honors Have Figured in Three Games.

Antwerp, April 27.— The Falcons, of Winnipeg, last night defeated the Swedish Olympic hockey team by a score of 12 to 1. Winnipeg therefore winning the Olympic championship.

Last night's victory of the Canadian team was fully expected, it being regarded largely as a question of the size of the score the Icelanders would run up against their sturdy but less experienced opponents.

The real test of the series came Sunday night, when the Falcons, after a fast game defeated by a score of 2 to 0, the team representing the United States. That what looked upon generally, as the deciding factor of the championship test. The Swedish team, which won handily from Belgium in the preliminary canter, was composed of star skaters who lacked however, the long and arduous training in the game that would fit them to cope with a first class team.

Hopelessly Outclassed

The Swedes played desperately from first to last, working heroically to score, and despite the fact that they were hopelessly outclassed, their stubborn defensive work kept the tally away below what the balance of play indicated.

It is a noteworthy fact that the result of every contest in the Olympic hockey series to date, except last night's has been a "whitewash" for

1500 DOG TEAM USED IN WINTER

MAIN TRAIL TO FLIN-FLAN MINES MUCH TRAVELLED

(By Canadian Press.)

The Pas, Man., April 27.—Sixteen hundred freight teams and 1,500 dog teams passed a stopping place at Rocky Lake during the winter, according to the landlord of the stopping place. This is the main trail to Flin-Flon mine. The landlord, Sam Cook, an Indian war veteran, adds that 932 men stopped with him overnight. He collects 25 cents for each team that puts up there and 25 cents from each traveller that eats there. Sam furnishes the dishes, water and fire only, and his wife looks after these items while Samuel garners in the fees. If there is any grub left the mushers usually leave it for their host, and in this way his expenses for feeding himself, wife, two children and a tribe of relations are kept down materially.

ELEVEN MILLIONS OFFERED PRINCE

BUT HAND OF AMERICAN WOMAN WENT WITH THE "PROPOSAL"

(By Canadian Press.)

Regina, Sask., April 27.—"Before I had been six weeks in America I had received an offer of marriage from a woman reputed to be worth eleven million dollars," said Prince Ion Paleologue, Roumanian commissioner for Canada, a recent visitor here. "This is a peculiar country," continued the prince. "I had not been long in America when I attended a social function in New York. During the evening a lady approached me, and, much to my astonishment, told me that I had not only made an impression on her sister, but that I could have her hand in marriage and all her wealth for the mere asking. I may be a prince—that is purely an accident—but I am the most democratic prince in the world. If I had been offered eleven million dollars, I might have considered the matter. But they don't do things that way. When a European prince marries an American girl of wealth he simply becomes an ornament in the family. He is no more wealthy than he was before," he declared. "I was not having any, and as an actual matter of fact I married a girl who had not a cent."

WILL NEVER PASS OUT OF BRITISH CONTROL

GOVERNMENT LIKELY TO SECURE MAJORITY INTEREST IN SHELL OIL

London, April 27.—Negotiations are in progress between the Government and the Shell Transport and Trading Company with a view to some form of Government control over this big oil firm, according to the Daily Mail. The newspaper says there is reason to believe that as a result of Great Britain's war experiences and the present feverish activity by American oil interests, the Government has resolved that the vast interests of the Shell Company will never pass out of British control. The negotiations involve a plan for exchanging Government stock for Shell Company shares.

Elaborating its reference to the activities of American oil men and the vew that "their oil fields are showing sins of exhaustion," the Daily Mail intimates tht the Government's action has as its motive a desire to prevent Americans from absorbing companies controlling actual or potential sources of Great Britain's oil supply.

Plans were for the Prince to start his rounds of New Zealand during the day. It was discovered, says the despatch, that the engine of the train of the Governor-General, Earl of Liverpool, had been tampered with.

SIDELIGHTS ON U. S. HIGH LIFE

MRS. FRANK J. GOULD SEEKING DIVORCE FROM HER HUSBAND

CHARGES HARD DRINKING

DISSOLUTE LIFE IN PARIS AND PERSONAL VIOLENCE ALLEGED

New New, April 27.—Frank Jay Gould, youngest son of Jay Gould and one of the heirs to his $80,000,000 fortune, is named defendant in two Supreme Court actions. In one complaint, Mrs. Edith Kelly Gould, his second wife, whom he divorced under French laws in November, sues for a decree of separation, and in the other action she sues for absolute divorce.

In her separation complaint she charges habitual intoxication, cruelty which culminated in dragging her out of bed by the hair and striking her in the face, constant association with other women, alleged to be his mistresses, and final abandonment on May 24, 1918.

In Paris in November Mr. Gould charged his wife with having improper relations with Mario Casassus, a Mexican. In the Correctional Court she and the Mexican were each fined 50 francs. Later Mr. Gould sued for divorce and won a decree. She is said to have contended that the French courts had no power to divorce her from her husband, as they were residents of New York sojourning abroad. This is the theory on which the separation and divorce actions have been instituted here. Mr. Gould is said to be domiciled at Tarrytown, N.Y.

Charges Daily Intoxication.

The separation complaint contains the following allegations: "That immediately after the time of said marriage, October 29, 1910, and continuously up to the time when plaintiff (Mrs. Gould) was compelled to and did leave the defendant, on or about May 24, 1918, the defendant was habitually intoxicated, becoming so practically daily; that during all of said time he was frequently brought home in an unconscious condition from liquor, after which he would remain in bed for a period of about a week.

CANADIAN ARTIFICIAL LIMBS EQUAL TO ANY IN THE WORLD

Every Country Finds Difficul in Securing Mechanical Hands to Satisfy.

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 27.—That the artificial limbs turned out in the Government factories are the equal of any in the world, was the statement of Col. Hiram Starr, orthopedic specialist, to a special committee on pensions this morning.

The Canadian artificial leg, he thought, was giving general satisfaction. It was difficult, however, to give a satisfactory arm, and every country was experiencing difficulty in securing a mechanical hand that would satisfy. Col. Starr said that every effort was made to fit patients, and men who had come here from England and discarded artificial limbs which they were allowed to choose in England, had adopted Canadian limbs, which they found to be satisfactory.

There were very few amputation cases, said Col. Starr, who could not wear an artificial limb.

OUR LOCAL MEMBER.

THE TEMPERANCE PARTY in West Peterborough, according to all accounts, are not very well pleased with Mr. Tooms' attitude, or perhaps lack of pronouncement, on prohibition and the latest referendum which has been agitating this Province of late. They take the position that as prohibition so emphatically carried the day at the last provincial elections, and especially so in this riding, our M.L.A. is, morally speaking, in duty bound to support that expression of public opinion at the polls as occasion arises. Mr. Tooms may not see it that way, for he is a Labor representative, and did not embody, so far as we are aware or gathered from his stump speeches, the prohibition plank in his platform. In fact, he was, if anything, far from being committal on that point. But the peculiar feature of that last election was that, while the referendum carried overwhelmingly in favor of a dry Province, many wet candidates were elected. Another extraordinary outstanding fact was that West Peterborough had two well-known prohibition candidates—one a Conservtaive, the other a Liberal—in the field, and both were retired in favor of Mr. Tooms, at that time practically an unknown quantity to a large section of the riding. Since Mr. Tooms' election we have learned to know the man, and believe him to be actuated with an earnest desire to promote as far as lies in his power the weal of his own constituency and that of the Province, from a viewpoint of the best interests of the whole. He certainly does not lack courage in his convictions, and will unquestionably be prepared to present an account of his stewardship as occasion arises. That was one plank in his election platform.

BAND GRANTS.

IS IT NOT TIME that some decision was reached by the City Council as to band grants for this year? The Salvation Army having gracefully withdrawn and asked that its band be not considered in the distributions of money for music in our parks, surely the way is now open for the settlement of a vexed question. This leaves Council's appropriation for band purposes with but two claimants, the G. W. V. A. and the Peterborough Rangers. Each of these organizations are asking $600 which sum, it appears, would be equivalent to union wages for each man during the season, although the grant might not be applied in exactly that way. And of that amount, Council is now but $100 for each organization short. Citizens are enquiring, 'What about band grants?" and are looking forward to concerts in the parks this summer in accord with a long-established precedent. Such open-air musical evenings are customary in all Canadian cities and towns, and Peterborough does not want to degenerate in regard to this custom because of disagreements either in Council or between bands as amalgamation into one citizens' band. Council were waiting till nearer June to see what money could be saved out of committee appropriations in a lively hope of finding another $500 to allow of a $500 grant going to each of the three bands in question. Well, one organization has withdrawn its application for a grant, and that withdrawal leaves Council now with that proposed $500 for each of the other two. Why not settle the matter now on that basis,, or, better still, start at once on a voyage of discovery for another $200 from some other source and give the bands remaining in the field the $600 each they applied for? In any event, a conclusion should be reached without delay, for if we are going to have concerts in the park this summer by either one or two bands, as the case may be, time should be given the band or bands in which to secure concert music and prepare suitable programs.

THE SOUTH AFRICANS IN FRANCE.

A NEW BOOK published in England and which is enjoying a large sale is "The South Africans in France," by John Buchan. These colonials, like our own Canadians, were hardy volunteers who heard the call of the Mother Country and were prompt in responding. "The loyal body of Britain's sons," says a reviewer of the volume, "after the cleaning-up in Southwest Africa left the Cape, first of all for Egypt, and then sailed for France, and well deserve the public tribute paid to them in these pages. Lieutenant-Colonel Buchan, it appears, has written his record at the instance of the South African Union Government. His work has, as might be expected, the hallmark of distinction. It is terse and clear; correct without being unduly technical, military knowledge being, as it should be, woven into the texture of the story, while official proofs are added as appendices. Not a little of the material has been gathered from personal narratives. The material has been used with skill, and the result is a happy combination of vividness and brevity. Before everything, the South African Division were expert riflemen, and in the campaign against the Grand Senussi of Sollum their aptitude for desert warfare and their value as shots rapid greatly to shorten a difficult conflict. In France they met with totally contrasted experience. Arriving not long before the first battle of the Somme, they were employed according to the method of mass attack. In capturing Delville Wood they had achieved what had been judged the impossible. But more extraordinary than the capture was the defence, maintained for six days and five nights of, to all intents, unceasing battle. To relieve them was out of the question. In the meantime, in the intervals between a focussed artillery fire of unheard-of intensity, they beat off the assaults of three crack German divisions, each times over their own strength. As Lieutenant-Colonel Buchan states, the flower of the German army was pitted against them. When at last relieved, the assault having for the moment had the wind knocked out of it, 750 unwounded survivors were all that remained of the original muster of 3,032. But the real proof of resolution and unerring aim is this. Five hours after the division had been withdrawn from Delville Wood the relieving troops were ousted out of the position.

"Refilled from fresh drafts,, the division showed the same toughness and hardihood. Not by any means enough is known of that defence of Gauche Wood in the disaster of March, 1918, which, holding up the German advance from Gouzeaucourt, went to spoil, and eventually to bring to naught, Ludendorff's great plan. The tale, with the final surrender of the last remnant—less than 100 unwounded men—at Marrieres Wood, is her told fully for the first time. No episode of the war surpasses it. A second division took the place of the first, and that second division went through the campaign to the end. Lieutenant-Colonel Buchan has drawn his picture with Meissonier-like fidelity."

INFERIORITY OF THE MALE.

AN AMERICAN EXCHANGE picks out Chicago as offering to the world proof that woman's moral courage is superior to that of man, in the fact that a number of women in America's western metropolis have undertaken to labor in gardens in order to reduce their avoirdupois. The story reads that "In Chicago the Commissioner called for fifty men and women, too fat for comfort, whom he promised to teach to reduce in weight and girth within six weeks by the faithful practice of a few simple and healthful exercises and regulated diet. Twenty women—twelve housewives, two typists, a stenographer, two clerks, a mercantile buyer, an office manager and a nurse—have responded. Their weight averages 220.6 pounds. They will spade gardens, walk and shun sundaes. Courage and confidence were required to start them on the course of treatment; courage to acknowledge their obesity, confidence in their power of endurance to see the thing through.

Only one man showed up at the first roll call, and when he saw how hopelessly in the minority he was he backed out. The reporter says he "fled." Here was the inferiority of the male amply demonstrated. Had conditions been reversed and one woman found herself with twenty men, she would not have quit. Instead she would have stuck to the end and set an example to the men from which all of them might have derived profit.

"This she would have done because, humiliating though the admission may be to the male sex, woman is more courageous than man. She proves it every day. A man who wipes his damp brow in a public place does it with shame, sneakingly, apologetically. A woman will set up a pocket mirror in a street car, use a powder puff, a chamois and a stick of lip rouge without thought of the surrounding multitude.

"Undoubtedly soda water and candy shops are jammed with fat men who ought to be reducing their waist lines for their own welfare and to ease conditions in the clothing market. Probaly most of them fill up on sweets and then go home to dose themselves with somebody's flesh remover. They ought to watch the twenty women who have the grit to go at excess adipose tissue in the only safe and sane way."

OVERALLS AND OLD CLOTHES.

(London Free Press.)

Premier Drury is to be congratulated upon refusing to be a party to the overall campaign. Dignity in the State is not safely to be trifled with. Let those whose tasks call for overalls wear them. As for the rest, there is still a goodly supply of old clothes.

SAVING SOME.

(Collingwood Bulletin.)

One of the best evidences of the present prosperity of Canada is found in the circumstance that notwithstanding the purchase by the people of Canada of $699,-391,005 worth, or 77 per cent. of all the securities issued in the Dominion last year, the bank deposits showed a remarkable increase. In January, 1919, demand and savings deposits were $1,613,316,496, and by the end of November they had increased to $1,866,515,866. This represents $233 per head of Canada's population of 8,000,000 as compared with $124 per head of population in the national banks of the United States.

DECLINING EFFICIENCY.

(Cleveland Plain Dealer.)

Practically every community is short of homes. Material for industrial expansion is hard to obtain. Building projects are held in check by conditions familiar enough to everyone. The abnormal cost of living lays a heavy hand on every household, and conditions are not such as to promise any early and adequate relief. Part of these closely related conditions are due to labor shortage, but no small portion of it is caused by individual unwillingness to deliver a dollar's worth of work for each dollar the pay envelope contains.

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

The following is a summary of reports made by agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

The very broken weather of the first half of April checked growth and greatly hindered field work. The warm days of the week-end have been welcomed, and seeding operations are now being hurried.

Fall wheat and clover are about "as you were," but are expected to rush forward with the recent rains and warmer weather.

Lambton reports that more pruning and spraying is being done to neglected orchards.

Lincoln states that market gardeners have already planted cabbages in the open.

Kent predicts a larger area of tobacco, and Elgin reports that some farmers in that county are going into the industry extensively. Haldimand is also increasing acreage. Norfolk says that one greenhouse in that county is making preparations for growing 200,000 plants.

Brantford reports that $4 a bag was paid for a carload of potatoes shipped out last week, and that New Brunswick seed potatoes are costing farmers $5 a bag, while ordinary stock is selling on the market at from $4 to $4.50 a bag.

Peterborough claims that about 10,000 bushels of oats were sold in Norwood for seed during the winter and spring.

Hay is in demand. While a few reports state that it may be had in the barns loose at $20 a ton, general quotations for market prices run all the way from $25 to $35 a ton.

Middlesex observes tha drovers do no seem anxious to purchase stockers for putting on the grass. At a sale in Frontenac last week young milch cows sold at from $120 to $180, averaging about $140.

Bacon hogs have been selling at from $18.25 to $19.50 during the week. The decrease in brood sows during the past six months is telling upon the supply of hogs being prepared for market. The Kent representative declares that he heard some farmers say that they would have been better off had they knocked their young pigs on the head when they were worth $10 apiece. Brant quotes the price of little pigs at from $10 to $15 a pair, but some are reported to be selling on the St. Catharines market at $18 a pair. The Lennox and Addington representative states that three hundred young pigs varying in age from four to six weeks were sold on the Napanee market at prices ranging from $10 to $12 a pair.

The horse industry has been attracting more attention than usual. Huron records considerable activity in sales after a very dull period. Prices have ranged all the way from $175 to $300, depending upon size and quality. Bruce reports that a carload of horses was shipped to Montreal during the week, and that several other carloads of horses had been sent out of the country during the last three weeks. Durham also notes that a number of horses have been picked up by buyers, and adds that there will likely be a local shortage in the near future.

The winter was trying to apiaries. Peel puts the losses at about 20 per cent., and remarks that most of the bees were found dead on the comb and not at the bottom of the hive.

Oxford reports that maple sap seemed to flow better during the past week than earlier in the season. Prices for syrup, taking the Province over, have ranged from $2.50 to $3.50 a gallon where sold at first hand, and pure maple sugar at 40 cents a pound.

Labor is scarce. A representative states that there appears to be considerable unrest among the workers and that some men do not remain long at the job, even when they get the wages they asked for.

BROOM CORN

Broom corn is an annual plant and is grown on this continent mainly in the State of Oklahoma and neighboring States. It requires a warm sunny climate and is more resistant to drought than ordinary corn, from which it is entirely different botanically. The flowers are produced in a branching tuft at the top of the stem, and it is from this part known as the "brush" that brooms are made. The brush is enclosed when young in a sheath, and in moister climates when the brush does not emerge wholly from the sheath it is liable to be discolored by damp or attacked by plant lice.

Being an annual plant and liable to be injured by frost, it is likely to succeed only where there is a long growing season. The most suitable parts of Canada for its culture would appear to be the dry belt of British Columbia and the southern part of the Province of Ontario. There does not appear to be any record of its cultivation having been attempted in the former region. In the year 1911, a plot was grown on the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa, but the brush obtained does not appear to have been long enough for manufacturing into brooms. For this purpose, the brush requires to be from 18 to 24 inches long.

In the year 1916, a plot on the Central Experimental Farm measuring 34 by 27 feet was sown with seed obtained from Washington, D. C. The seed was sown on 27th May in rows 3 feet apart. The first flowers opened on 6th September. The average height of the whole plot on 25th September was 7 feet, while the tallest plants were about 10 feet high. The growth was terminated by frost on 1st October, and the crop was cut on 8th October and dried. It was sent to the Parker Broom Co., Ottawa, for report, but that firm stated that no part of it was sufficiently good to be put on the outside of a broom. None of this crop ripened any seeds.

During the year 1919, a small sample of seed of broom corn was obtained from a farmer in Quebec, who stated that it ripened seed every year when sown on his farm. This was sown on 27th May and yielded a good crop of seed. The brush was of a fair length, though not long enough to manufacture brooms, but it is possible that the quality could be improved by careful selection of seed.

The United States Department of Agriculture at Washington, D.C., has published two farmers' bulletins on this subject. Number 768, entitled "Dwarf Broom Corns," was published in 1916, while number 958 on "Standard Broom Corn" was published in 1918. They are probably still obtainable for 5 cents each.

HOW JEWS REGARD SALVATION ARMY

With the religious teachings of the Salvation Army we Jews, of course, can have no sympathy. But I would venture to say this: that the Christianity which the Salvation Army preaches and the Christianity that it practises has always seemed to me to be nearest to the true ideals of that great faith, and to accord most with the teachings of the great Founder of the Christian creed anywher to be found. Indeed, I would go further and say I do not know any other organization in which the doctrine of religion, in the best sense of the term, is more beautifully conceived or more faithfully acted upon than in this Army. The Salvation Army does not hang upon the skirts of the rich. It does not worship in the temples of Rimmon, or bow the knee to the Baal of fashion and influence. It has almost exclusive regard for the most lowly and the most rejected of men and women. It strives and succeeds wonderfully in bringing them back from the abyss-depths of vice and crime, of misery and destitution, in which their under-world lives are cast.

I can speak with some confidence about the work of the Salvation Army, because I have seen it in operation with my own eyes. I have seen the little children snatched from some moral inferno and placed amid conditions that brought them happiness and health by the Salvation Army. And there is one thing more that I have noted in my somewhat intimate experience of this Army's remarkable labours, and it is a matter that specially affects our people. The Army frequently comes into contact with the poor of our people, and our desolate ones sometimes come within its ken.

We Jews may be sure that in helping the Salvation Army, Christian institution though it is, we are not helping an organization which ever seeks to destroy the Jewish faith of Jews. And we may be sure, too, that we are helping a great and mighty, never-ceasing effort, which is doing a big, human work, than which none could be more in accord with the very best aspirations ever nurtured by Jews.

A boy was killed and two men injured at Sallisaw, Okla. yesterday, when an airplane driven by Bob Fogg a former army aviator, fell 40 feet and plowed its way through a crowd of 2,000 persons.

UNCLE SAM'S LAMENT

WRITTEN EXPRESSLY FOR THE MADE-IN-CANADA DRIVE IN LONDON

(London Free Press.)

We're sorry that Canada's waking,
She's seeing things now in her dreams;
She thinks our ways are so taking
As her wheat comes to our mills in streams.
We have noticed, quite lately, her slumber
Has been badly disturbed by the roars
Of the logbooms and rafts without number
We've been hauling away from her shores.

We have tip-toed so softly around her,
Honeyed words in her ears we have poured
To soothe her and make her sleep sounder
While her larder we fully explored.
We discovered her soil was just teeming
With every conceivable wealth,
And her lakes, woods and mountains are gleaming
With sights—well, they've injured our health.

Some goods in the raw we have gotten
Away with, and finished at home,
Which we've sent back, along with our cotton,
Reaping profits that's fractured our dome.
But she's getting real hot 'round the collar,
And our actions she deeply resents,
For we've humbled proud Canada's dollar
With a rating of—eighty-three cents.

My! she's haughty, ill-tempered and cranky
When she meets Uncle Sam anywhere
She has banned every "blooming" think "Yankee"
With a vengeance that really might wear.
Oh, yes, we are sorry she's waking,
And we're wondering what Samuel will do
When she puts off the pulp wood we're taking
While we leave her with all residue.

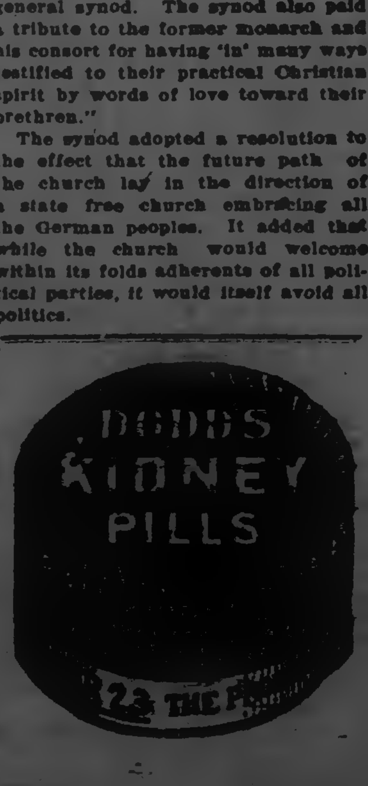
EX-KAISER THANKED BY GERMAN SYNOD

IT ALSO ADVOCATES NON-PARTISAN STATE FREE CHURCH

Berlin, April 26.—A vote of thanks to former Emperor Williams as the "last temporal head of the Protestant State Church," was given at the closing session of the annual general synod. The synod also paid a tribute to the former monarch and his consort for having 'in' many ways testified to their practical Christian spirit by words of love toward their brethren."

The synod adopted a resolution to the effect that the future path of the church lay in the direction of a state free church embracing all the German peoples. It added that while the church would welcome within its folds adherents of all political parties, it would itself avoid all politics.



PEKIN IS MYSTIFIED BY RUSSIAN BURIALS

FOUR BODIES SAID TO BE THOSE OF ROMANOFF FAMILY

Pekin, April 27.— Seven bodies, four of them said to be those of members of the Russian Imperial family, arrived in Pekin from Harbin yesterday and were buried in the Russian Cemetery, outside the city wall. The whole proceeding was surrounded with the greatest secrecy, even the Russian Legation receiving scant information of the circumstances.

The bodies were declared to be those of Grand Duke Serge Michaelovitch, Prince Ivan, husband of Princess Helene, daughter of King Peter of Serbia; Prince Igor, brother of Prince Ivan; Grand Duchess Elizabeth a sister of the late Empress, and three servants who shared the fate of these members of the Imperial family when, it is alleged, they were killed and their bodies thrown into a coal mine near Perm. The discovery of their whereabouts was said to have been made by a commision appointed by Admiral Kolchak last summer.

It is believed the transfer was brought about by Gen. Dietrichs, the Kolchak commander, it being hinted that King Peter cooperated in the arrangements.

Howard Williams, son of the General Manager of the London and Northwestern Railway, has been appointed General Manager of Central Railway of Argentine.

American Woman Now a Princess

IT is rather tough luck that at a time when blood royal is in a slump as a result of the war an American woman should be the first of her sisterhood to become a real princess. There have been American and even Canadian princesses before, but usually of an Austrian or Hungarian strain, and in those countries a prince may turn out to be a grade lower than a baron. This time there is no question about the rank, and Miss Nonnie May Stewart becomes a member of the royal family of Greece, her husband being Prince Christopher, brother of the deposed Constantine and uncle of the reigning monarch, Alexander. One determined to marry into a royal family might have made a better selection than that of Greece. Of course, the Windsors would be the great catch, but so far as we are aware, and to say it in all kindness, the former Cleveland girl would be more suitable as a mother than as a wife for any available British prince. In fact, this is her third matrimonial experiment; and it may be that it was the second that made the third possible.

The laws of Greece concerning royalty are more democratic than those of most countries. Morganatic marriages are not recognized. The American girl, who was, is no third rate princess. Her rank is that of royalty. She becomes thus a cousin of King George, and of Queen Victoria of Spain, and even a sister-in-law of the former Kaiser, and through her husband's mother a relation of the Romanoffs. Before her marriage, the bride, then Mrs. Leeds, entered the Greek church and was welcomed as Princess Anastasia. But it is as Mrs. Leeds that she will likely be remembered, for she is a woman of strong character and has made much newspaper copy in the past. Before her marriage to William Bateman Leeds, called the "Tin Plate King" of the United States, she had been married to George H. Worthington, of Cleveland. When Mr. Leeds died his widow was left a very rich woman, and her fortune to-day is estimated at $14,000,000. She has seen much of European society, and from time to time her name has been coupled with the name of many a titled fortune hunter, none of them, of course, having the rank of her new husband. To recall them now would be ungenerous.

In 1911 Mrs. Leeds burst into front page newspaper celebrity when from her apartments in a New York hotel she announced that she was about to follow the example of William Waldorf Astor and shake the dust of her native land from her feet. She had one son, William Leeds, and she said that she was about to take up her residence in England so that the boy could be properly educated. "William will grow up rich," she said. "I don't think wealthy young American men are precisely a credit to society. Their idleness makes them dissipated. Young Englishmen are different. They have a lot of healthy amusement and grow up clean, healthy and strong. Then, too, at an English school, no one will toady to William because he is wealthy. It will make no difference to them. They will respect him for what he is, not for what his father earned for him. He will learn that over-drinking is not tolerated in good society, as I fear it sometimes is here." Mrs. Leeds' other reason for going abroad was not more flattering to American pride. She said that conversation in the United States was just one scandal after another. In England people talked of things that could better stand talking about—art, music, literature.

So Mrs. Leeds departed to England and her son William was sent to an English public school with what results it is too early to say. She visited Paris each year and there her gowns and jewels created a sensation. It is none too early to remark that Mrs. Leeds was famous for her beauty, and that, according to the French painter, Helleu, she had 98 points out of the hundred constituting feminine perfection. What two points she was shy on were not mentioned. In 1912 she gave a ball that caused a tremendous sensation. There were 150 guests. The cotillion favors were, for the women, hats by the leading Paris milliners, and for the men specially prepared cameras and gold match boxes. Even Paris gasped, for at no private ball had such costly souvenirs previously been distributed. At the ball itself there was an even greater sensation when Mrs. Leeds entered, her gown covered by a million dollars' worth of emeralds. It seems probable that she is the only woman who ever wore a million dollars' worth of emeralds at one time.

Once before her jewels had brought her into prominence. The occasion was in 180 when a Paris jeweler arrived in New York with a bag of pearls for Mrs. Leeds, invoiced at $220,000. He was about to pay the ten per cent. duty when some official said that Mrs. Leeds had agreed to purchase the pearls for $340,000, and that a duty of $110,000 should therefore be paid. The jeweler paid under protest, but entered action to recover, and after several years of litigation, the excess was refunded. In 1910 Mrs. Leeds, then living in the United States, had a quarrel with her stepmother and her stepsister, which resulted in Mrs. Stewart being forcibly ejected by a constable from the Leeds home in Montclair. Mrs. Leeds said that the extravagance of her stepmother had reduced her father to penury. Mrs. Stewart retorted that Mrs. Leeds' father had treated her cruelly. The incident proved that Mrs. Leeds was a woman of strong personality when she had a duty to perform, as was proved later on when she wore a million dollars' worth of emeralds.

Early-Day Buttons.

The ancients lacked buttons—one wonders, indeed, how they got along without them, but evidently they possessed studs of modern pattern, such as those with which we fasten our cuffs and collars. And, in truth, they did even have a kind of button (though not sewn on), which fastened garments with a pin and hook exactly in the way our brooches and clasp pins operate.

Showing Value of Fertilization.

The value of fertilization is shown by some results obtained by the Ohio experiment station. There was secured from the fertilized soil an average yield per acre of 61 bushels of corn, 23½ bushels of wheat and 3,926 pounds of clover hay. Unfertilized land adjoining has yielded 46½ bushels of corn, 11 bushels of wheat and 2,517 pounds of hay per acre.

The Crow's Nest

By FREDERICK CLARK

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

John Burt, a lonely man, except for the company of an aged mother, came down the spiral staircase at the top story of the city hall and started for home. As he took one elevator down another reached the top floor and a young woman left it. She was far more lonely than he. Wretchedness showed in her face and her eyes roved about her like those of a hunted being seeking a refuge.

She was Lucy Newton, and ever since she could remember until recently she had lived in a lonely old house in a dead country town, a drudge to a cross grained exacting relative. When the latter had died Lucy had come to the city. For days she had walked the streets, seeking work but finding none. Footsore, weary, hungry, despairing, she had been told to present her case to the free employment bureau at the city hall, to find the offices closed. It was chill outside and the building was a warm welcome shelter.

"I must rest for a little time," she murmured brokenly, came to the spiral staircase, noticed a landing half way up, sat down on its broad surface, drooped utterly exhausted, and was soon fast asleep.

"Why! What is this?" came to her confused hearing twelve hours later, and she sat up and blinked at the light of a new morning. John Burt, a small parcel under his arm, stared down strangely at the haggard, frightened refugee.

"I—I was very tired," stammered Lucy. "I had no place to go. It was warm here—I meant no harm."

"You have done none," Burt quickly answered her in the kindliest of tones. "Wait until I unlock the door," and he stepped past her. "Come in and rest a bit."

Lucy stared vaguely. Her host had opened the door of a queer turret shaped room, the entire upper half of which was framed in glass. Over a hundred feet below was the street. Afar in every direction the city spread out. She could not surmise the object or utility of this narrow apartment.

"This is the Crow's Nest, as it is called," explained Burt, "and I am its keeper, employed by the city to note smoke violations, watch, specify and report the same. There is a comfortable arm chair."

Burt went over to a bench on which was a small oil stove. He lit it and took down a coffee pot from a shelf, opened the parcel he had carried and as his guest sat staring dreamily from the lofty eerie, placed on a stand at her elbow a steaming cup of coffee and his noonday lunch.

He left his guest to herself as he set about his usual duties. With a telescope he swung the circle of his tower room. When he noted some factory chimney pouring out smoke he would consult a chart, a clock, and finally write upon a tab such records as: "Brown and Company, plant smoked for seventeen minutes. Apparently use low grade fuel, with no smoke consumer." Glancing toward the girl he noted that she had fallen asleep in her chair. She awoke about noon, all embarrassment over a sense of intrusion upon the time and attention of a perfect stranger. She arose, words of gratitude upon her lips, and tears came, she broke down utterly, and then, as Burt gently questioned her, all the somber story of her lonely life came out.

"Poor child!" he commented, and his hand rested like benison upon her bowed head. "You indeed need a friend, and I know where to find you one. I have an old mother who will be glad as myself to shelter you as a welcome visitor, until you are more able to cope with a cold, heartless world."

The aged mother of John Burt welcomed Lucy Newton as only a kind-hearted woman could do. It was well that Lucy had fallen into such friendly hands, for she had an attack of fever lasting for over two weeks. One evening during her convalescence she heard mother and son discussing their affairs.

"Yes, I feel I shall have to give up my position," Burt was saying. "The doctor directs that I must rest my eyes completely for six months. It has got so that I cannot locate the smoke, not even with the telescope."

A wave of infinite love swept over the mind of Lucy as she realized how much she owed to these good kind people. She glided into the adjoining room and approached the grave-faced Burt and his anxious mother.

"Oh, Mr. Burt!" she pleaded, "let me be your eyes until you are all well again—let me labor for you day and night, if it is necessary, to show you how my soul prizes your helpfulness, your kindness, and that of your mother for a homeless, friendless orphan girl!"

Lucy was duly installed in the Crow's Nest, directed by Burt, but quickly becoming expert in her task. It was like a new dream-life to the poor waif—the glory of far vision over the world below, the peace of those beautiful evenings in the little home. She had never had a love experience until now. Burt had long since settled down into the conviction that he was destined to remain a bachelor. What could come about, save that these two so strangely drifted together should unite their longing souls in a mutual love so sweet, so precious, that life became to them a real paradise!

Gift to Albert Museum

Of Rare Old Porcelain

Has an Historic Value

A PORCELAIN bequest of unusual interest has recently been received by the Victoria and Albert Museum, London, England, which goes far to fill a serious gap in the museum collections. Though interesting specimens of Chelsea, Frankenthal, Ludwigsburg, Vienna, and Hochst are included, by far the greater part of the bequest consists of choice examples of the porcelain modeled by Johann Joachim Kaendler and his pupils, some of the more important examples being worthy of detailed description.

The interest in oriental dress and manners characteristic of the eighteenth century and illustrated by the "Turkish habits" dear to Defoe and Lady Mary Wortley Montagu is shown by two excellently modeled figures a la Turque and a la Chinoise. The first is a man in loose blue trousers, a white turban, a white coat over a sleeved waistcoat of primrose brocade embroidered with flowers, a gold sash with heavy tassels, pink shoes, a guitar slung from his shoulders with a scarlet riband, and his attitude that of a lover singing to his lady. Finer still is the Chinese, in soft robes of blue and pink with loose cap gathered into a tassel, dancing and yet statuesque, a combination of rare charm. Near these fantasies are figures from daily life, a scarcely tinted player on the hurdy-gurdy, peasants dancing, or ladies and gentleman a la Watteau; but it is harder to place two strange groups of ladies with curled and powdered hair and dainty ribbons riding on goats and carrying each a tiny baby. Their faces are Madonna-like, sweet and serious, their dress those of their time and class; only their settings are fantastic. An obvious pendant to these groups is the parody beside them, a tailor riding on a goat, brandishing a great pair of scissors, his bolsters filled not with pistols but with buttons, thread, and patterns.

Here stands the eternal type of youth and affection, Harlequin and Columbine, he in white dress and black scarf-hood hanging from his forehead, she in dainty dress, strangely unstagelike, holding the dove, her namesake, in a cage; a harmony in black and white, with rare touches of primrose, blue and red to enhance its effect. The same coloring is used upon a dainty figure of a youth in winter dress, bearing his sledge upon his shoulders, and, though the color here is richer, upon the charming little figure of Barbara Uttmann, who is traditionally said to have introduced this form of industry into sixteenth century Westphalia, bending over her lace pillow.

The Court Arcadia could hardly be absent from an art so courtly; here is a dainty shepherd with his tiers of powdered curls bending over a lady en bergere, singing to her lute beneath an oak tree, her lamb at her feet. The Carnival Mask again—that aspect of courtly life appears in a figure which might have stepped out of a canvas by Longhi, with his loose white robe with pink and yellow bows, his black three-cornered hat and his white mask with the false nose. Here is Cupid a la Pompadour, being dressed by fair attendants, one of whom crowns him with flowers. An epitome of Belinda's toilet this, which to imagine is but to take up "The Rape of the Lock": mirror, essences, the open patch-box, all the dainty scene is here to view.

Children indeed, cupids, seasons, and little laughing mortals aping their elders, or engaged in childish play, are all here; a rosy Pierrot with mask and high pink hat; a Cupid and Psyche among flowers; a delicious group of children round an apple tree, one urchin in its boughs throwing the ruddy prizes down to his brother and sister, who gather them in basket and apron. Much more successful these than the mythological figures, Diane Chasseresse riding in spangled robes, Mars in the high boots and falsely made cuirass of the eighteenth century stage, or Venus and Cupid, the latter woefully tubby and Teutonic. With these must be ranked the lamentable Virgin, standing on a blue globe and supported by cherubs, gilt rays of a painful solidity streaming from her head. Truly Meissen was not a medium for religious art; and the figure is more irreverent than any attempt at serious description can convey.

There is a charming series of French criers, taken, improved even, from prints; and, most remarkable of all, two figures from Chardin translated into china. Of these delightful renderings of the Amusements de la Vie Privee one shows a lady in full dress, pausing from the toy spinning wheel on the table beside her to read, but forgetting her book as her eyes gaze into space and she dreams of the absent. The other, a bourgeoise, is making up her books for the day; at her feet lie parcels tied up in blue paper and string, a sugar loaf prominent among them, and her table is of white and gold, a Louis XV. that many a connoisseur would prize. These groups, like others among those already mentioned, will open the eyes of the student to the field of beauty and of interest not only to the collector, but to the lover of life and manners, that lies open in the delicate though often frivolous work of the courtly potters of the eighteenth century.

Late King Edward's Dog.

Edward VII.'s famous dog Caesar, which followed immediately behind the coffin at the royal funeral, is immortalized in the new tomb in St. George's Chapel, Windsor, which is about to be unveiled.

COMPOSITION OF EGGS.

Chemistry Has Made Table of Contents.

Very few of the millions of people who eat eggs daily are familiar with and in most cases never concern themselves with, the chemical or physiological properties of this form of food. The daily consumption of eggs throughout the world is truly enormous in spite of high prices.

A chemical analysis of an egg shows that it contains a relatively large proportion of proteid and mineral matter which is used to furnish the salts of the bones, especially calcium phosphate, and also fat, and is one of the most concentrated forms of nutriment.

Proteids serve as a fuel for the body and also provide the important element nitrogen, which is needed in the case of children for growth, and in the case of both children and grown people, to keep the body in repair.

The average weight of a hen's egg is sixty grams, of which the shell weighs about six grams, the white 36 grams and the yolk 18 grams. Roughly it contains 70 per cent. of water, 12 per cent. of albumen and 12 per cent. of fat.

The substance known as "white of egg" or egg albumin, when separated from the yolk, membrane and shell is a colorless, transparent, thick, sticky fluid, soluble in or mixible with water and is composed almost entirely of albumin, partially dissolved in water.

When the white of an egg is put into boiling water it undergoes a remarkable change, and is said to have coagulated. In this state it is insoluble in water and opaque and forms a solid mass, which, however, still contains a large proportion of water. During coagulation it is probable that chemical as well as physical changes have occurred. Thus from the foregoing it is seen that the white of egg is an extremely unstable and complex substance, its physical properties being so indefinite that it is almost impossible to say that it was or it was not a definite chemical compound.

White of egg or egg albumin may, however, be taken as the representative of a group of substances which are classified together as the proteids, or albuminoids. They contain the five elements, carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen and sulphur.

Egg yolk is composed of albumin, fat and a phosphorus bearing material of high nutritive value known as lecithin. Food experts say that the yolk of an egg is a much richer food product than the white, containing in addition to the nitrogenous element the fat and mineral bodies necessary to nutrition.

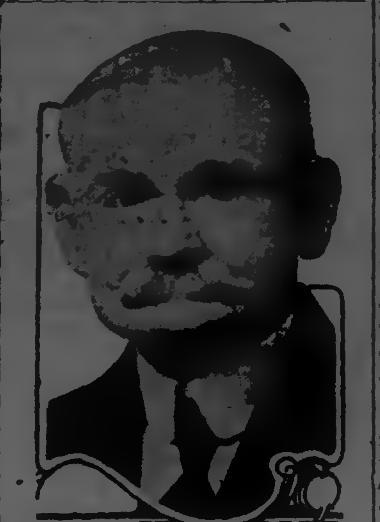
CAN NOW EAT THREE SQUARE MEALS A DAY

WELL KNOWN BUSINESS MAN SAYS HE HAS GAINED SIXTEEN POUNDS ON FOUR BOTTLES OF TANLAC AND FEELS MANY YEARS YOUNGER.

"I am now able to eat three square meals a day for the first time in two years," was the emphatic statement made recently by Joseph A. York, well-known business man and highly respected citizen of Portland, Maine.

"I am now sixty-nine years of age, and in all my life I have never run across a medicine that I consider in a class with Tanlac. I have just finished my fourth bottle and this medicine has benefited me even beyond my greatest hopes. Besides gaining sixteen pounds in weight, I have been built up and strengthened until I feel all of twenty years younger.

"For the past two years I have been in a miserably run-down condition, and was compelled a short time ago to give up all idea of business as I was too weak to look after anything. I was nervous, worn-out, had no appetite, and suffered most all the time with indigestion. Some days I would eat scarcely anything; in fact I was afraid to eat because I knew I would suffer afterward. Sometimes I had such severe cramping pains after eating that I would almost die. My nerves were all unstrung and the least thing would worry me and I never could get a good night's sound sleep. In fact I just lost interest in everything and was greatly discouraged over my condition.



JOSEPH A. YORK,
Well-Known Portland, Maine,
Business Man.

"The ordinary treatment failed to do me any good; and as I had read so many statements from people I know here in Portland who had been benefited by Tanlac, I decided to give it a trial. And now I know for myself what it will do, for I have simply taken a new lease on life. I am now able to look after my work as usual, and never felt better in my life. I am able to eat three hearty meals a day and everything agrees with me perfectly. I eat anything I want and never feel a touch of indigestion. I never thought there was a medicine that could do me so much good, and I am only too glad to have the facts about my case given to the people."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

EGG PRESERVATION

Experiments in egg preservation were begun at the Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in 1906, and have been continued every season since that date. In the course of these experiments trials have been made with more than twenty-five different fluids and preparations that have been proposed or sold as egg preservatives. The work of these fifteen years have shown the superiority of lime-water over all other preservatives which we have tested. Closely following lime-wtaer is the so-called "water-glass" or Sodium Silicate. Both, according to our results, have proven effective preservatives, but it may be remarked that it is useless to expect that either can entirely arrest that "stale" flavor commonly found in all but strictly fresh laid eggs.

Lime-Water

The solubility of lime at ordinary temperatures is one part in 700 parts of water. Such a solution would be termed saturated lime-water. Translated into pounds and gallons, this means one pound of lime is sufficient to saturate 80 gallons of water. However, owing to impurities in commercial lime, it is well to use more than is called for in this statement. It may not, however, be necessary, if good, freshly burnt quicklime can be obtained, to employ as much as was at first recommended, namely, two to three pounds to five gallons of water. With such lime as is here referred to one could rest assured that one pound to five gallons (50 pounds) would be ample, that the resulting lime-water would be thoroughly saturated.

Its Preparation

The method of preparation is simply to Slake the lime with a small quantity of water and then stir the milk of lime so formed into five gallons of water. After the mixture has been kept well stirred for a few hours, it is allowed to settle. The supernatant liquid, which is now "saturated" lime-water, is drawn off and poured over the eggs, previously placed in a crock or water-tight barrel.

As exposure to the air tends to precipitate the lime (as carbonate) and thus to weaken the solution, the vessel containing the eggs should be kept covered. The air may be excluded by a covering of sweet oil or by sacking, upon which a paste of lime is spread. If after a time there is any noticeable precipitation of the lime, the lime-water should be drawn or siphoned off and replaced with a further quantity of newly prepared.

General Precautions

It is essential that attention be paid to the following points.

1. That perfectly fresh eggs only be used.

2. That the eggs, throughout the whole period of preservation should be completely immersed

Although not necessary, to the preservation of the eggs in a sound condition, a temperature of 40 deg. F. to 45 deg. F. will no doubt materially assist toward retaining good flavor, or rather in arresting that "stale" flavor so often characteristic of packed eggs.

Respecting the addition of salt it must be stated that our experiments—conducted now throughout 15 season—do not show any benefit to be derived therefrom; indeed, salt frequently imparts lime flavor to the eggs, probably by inducing an interchange of the fluids within and without the egg. Our advice is, do not add salt to the lime-water.

Contest Notes.

Weather conditions are again responsible for much lack of activity on the part of our feathered frends and as a result the production has been lower than has been recorded for the past weeks, 403 birds laying as against 415 the previous week.

Mr. J. R. McMullen's Barred Rocks in Pen 15 for the first time gain the weekly lead with 47 eggs, the second place is attained by Mr. S. E. Smith's White Leghorns in Pen 12, which has hitherto failed to distinguish itself with 45 eggs, and Mr. Gooderham's White Leghorns in Pen 47, and the O'Brien Farm's Barred Rocks in Pen 13 tie for the third position. As previous comments have pointed out, thus, five strangers come to the fore, adding considerable interest to the contest.

Six pens have made good totals of 42 and amongst these also may be noticed those which have to date not received special mention.

Mr. Coldham's Barred Rock No. 1 (who by the way has to be persuasively invited to leave the nest) continues to lead as best bird. She now possesses a lead of 7 eggs over Mr. Johnson's Barred Rock No. 9.

During the last few days evidence of broodiness is very apparent and some offenders have had to pay the penalty of their natural tendencies by way of making the close acquaintance of the "broody coop", which in due time asserts its influence and reduces its prisoner to submission.

The few sicks birds are well on the way to complete recovery.

BANK DEPOSITS

national banks decreased nearly a billion dollars there is still a great demand on every hand for credit that is responsible for high money rates and a pinch on the business community.

In face of the financial situation experts here look for a slowing up in purchasing by the general public and a levelling of prices. The cost of living, it is said, has reached its peak and is on a slow but sure decline through inability of the public to extend further individual credits and keep up what the Federal Reserve Board has characterized as a mad spree of spending.

Mr. Williams states, however, that the shrinkage in deposits on February 28 compared with December 31 is due mainly to the loss in the United States Government deposits, which declined from $448,863,000 December 31 to only $67,914,000 on February 28. Just before the payment of the first installment of 1920 taxes Government balances were at their lowest ebb in years.

FISTS USED OVER RELIGIOUS SLUR

TO FIGHT WHEN ATTACKS ARE RESENTED — TWO ARRESTED

New York, April 27.—Hundreds of persons promenading Sunday afternoon in Central Park West and in Broadway near Sixty-third street, flocked to the Sixty-third street Music Hall, near by, when shrieking police whistles and other calls for help notified the neighborhood that a religious meeting had been transformed almost into a riot. The Sunday afternoon throng reached the entrance of the hall in time to see 350 men and women fleet to the street a few yards ahead of a fighting, struggling group of twenty men.

A few minutes later Sixty-third between the two thoroughfares was invaded by reserves from the West Sixty-eighth street station and the crowd was being dispersed. Meanwhile two prisoners, accompanied by a policeman and a ministerial looking complainant, were disappearing in a taxicab.

That was the end of a meeting conducted by a man who said he was Jay W. Forrest of Albany. As the head of the Sons and Daughters of Washington, he said, he was directing "a great Protestant rally."

Speaks on "Wake Up, America!"

Forrest spoke on "Wake Up, America." The first part of his talk persons in the audience said, was devoted to generalities of religion but later he attacked the Catholic Church, its Irish element and the Knights of Columbus.

He then called for questions and they came rapidly—so rapidly that Forrest, according to witnesses, became careless and said things that were resented.

"Lay off that stuff'" some one shouted.

Vincent Delany, aged 18, of 167 West Seventy-fifth street, made a protest.He was booed down, but refused to stop. Thereupon he told the police later, a dozen men leaped at him and punched him. He shook them off and started toward the door, James Lyscht, aged 42, of 44 Twelfth street, Long Island City, joining him and offering his assistance. Both men were badly beaten when they reached the street.

Crowd Gathers to See Fight.

A big crowd collected when the fight was continued in Sixty-third street. From twenty to forty persons were engaged in the contest when Policeman Frank Murphy appeared. Bystanders helped him to separate the group, and on the complaint of James Rourke, a friend of Forrest, Delany and Lyscht were arrested for disorderly conduct. Neither was able to walk and a taxicab was called to take them to the West Sixty-eighth street station. Later they were bailed out.

There Rourke gave his address as the Pennsylvania Hotel. He said Forrest is Supreme Grand Master of the society that held the rally and at present a resident of the Hotel Commodore.

Forrest hurried away in a taxicab as the fight progressed.

WEDDED IN LODGE.

Orangemen Present in Full Regalia —First of Kind in History.

(By Canadian Press.)

Winnipeg, Man., April 27. —A wedding, said to be the first one ever held in a lodge in Canada, was solemnised here recently when Miss Nellie L. T. Brown, a True Blue, and H. J. before purchasing a baking powder that may possibly contain injurious ingredients. Many food scientists claim that baking powder containing alum is unsafe for use in food. The mere fact that some brands of baking powder have the words "No Alum" on the label is not sufficient proof that they are what they are represented to be. Our chemists find a good many have "No Alum" on the outside but large quantities of it inside.

AFTER 20 YEARS BODY IS FOUND

MYSTERY WHICH BAFFLED AUTHORITIES MANY YEARS IS CLEARED

Indianapolis, April 27. — A mystery of twenty years' standing was cleared up here yesterday when the skeleton of Miss Harriet Selvage, who disappeared while an inmate of an Indianapolis hospital on March 1, 1900, was found in the attic of the building that had been formerly occupied by the hospital.

The skeleton was identified by the woman's two brothers through the clothing draped about it, a dark blue flannelette wrapper and black felt house slippers.

The woman's remains were found in a second attic, a small corner about three by four feet. The Selvage brothers said that when their sister disappeared they searched the building thoroughly and did not learn of the existence of the second attic. The coroner declared it would be impossible to determine whether the woman hid herself in the place and starved to death or was carried there by someone. She was under treatment at the time for a nervous breakdown.

On the day of her disappearance Miss Selvage had returned to her room after a walk with her nurse. She asked the nurse to go to the kitchen and get her some milk, and when the attendant returned the patient had vanished. A country-wide search followed.

The discovery was made yesterday when the building was being altered to convert it into a garage.

CANADIAN DIPLOMAT LOOKS ASSURED NOW

EARLY DECISION AS TO EXACT STATUS IS HOPED FOR

New York, April 27.—A despatch to the Evening Sun, from Washington, says: "Discussions are in progress between the United States and Great Britain which give substantial promise of ending in an agreement to have Canada represented in Washington by a diplomatic agent of high rank. Such representation is understood to be desired keenly both by Canada and the United States and be unopposed by Great Britain. The conversations on the subject are described as being actuated by the wish of all concerned to facilitate negotiations between Canada and the United States on questions in which Great Britain is interested only by the fact that Canada is one of her dominions. So far as can be learned, the only difficulty that has been encountered to date is in fixing the exact status and rank that the diplomat would have, and in determining in advance so as to avoid any chance of friction the relation that he would bear to the British Ambassador in Washington. The prospects are that the Canadian representative would have wide freedom of action in matters directly affecting the Dominion. A decision on this point may be expected soon.

Subjects of interest common to the United States and Canada, whether commercial or political, at present frequently meet with long delays in settlement because of the circuitous route they have to follow in the process of negotiating through the British Embassy. If a direct exchange of views might be arranged, it is thought by many officials that much benefit would be derived by the United States and Canada and, indirectly, by Great Britain. The duties would correspond in large part with those of a High Commissioner, and this is the title that may be given the new representative. During the war, Sir Richard Crawford, as a commercial attache of the British Embassy, had Canadian questions under his supervision, and was able to render an important service in the returns between the United States and Canada. It was partly because attention was called to the great advantage of close relations between the two countries that the proposal for an exchange of high-ranking diplomacy representatives is now being urged.

CANADIANS WIN

the losing team. The Canadians, in carrying off the worlds championship have figured in three games.

On Saturday, the Falcons easily disposed if the Czecho-Slovaks by a score of 15-0. In the semi finals yesday, they eliminated the speedy American team 2 to 0. Under the Olympic rules, all teams directly beaten by the chamuion team must compete for second place. Thus the American Czecho-Slovak and Swedish teams will now play off.

The American team will play Sweden Tuesday night and the victor in that match will play the Czechs, who have drawn a bye, on Wednesday. The Americans are easy favorites in this series.

First Honors

To the land of the Maple Leaf goes the honor of winning the first Olympic championship at Antwerp, and it is likely that when the next Olympiad is held the six-man game will be in vogue. Had it been in order this year, instead of the ancient seven man style, the Falcons would have shown to better advantage. However they did all that was asked of them and what more could be desired.

Here's the record for the hockey tourney:

MUST STAY IN JAIL UNTIL READY TO ANSWER QUESTIONS IN COURT

Story of Alexander Howat's Contempt of Court Which Keeps Him a Prisoner

Pittsburg, April 27.—When Governor Henry J. Allen entered the coal fields of the Pittsburg district last November to ask the idle miners to work for the State under the receivership which the Governor had instituted, the question asked on every hand was:

"What will Alexander Howat say about it?".

The Governor was told frankly that Howat, district president of the United Mine Workers, would reject the plan. Howat was in Washington attending the negotiations in progress for the settlement of the nation-wide strike of bituminous miners. A close friend of Howat's volunteered to go to Washington to seek his consent for the men to return to work. Not only did Howat reject the offer, but he issued a statement in which he bitterly condemned the plan as an "invasion of the Governor in an attempt to disrupt the union."

The campaign to work the mines under a State receivership, however, continued. A call then went out for volunteers. Scores of husky young Kansans, many of them war veterans, answered the appeal. They started to work in the face of a blizzard, but they turned out coal. State troops were brought into the district to guard the workers, with Federal troops at hand for reserve duty.

The Kansas Governor organized a temporary executive office in Pittsburg, and while here formed a tentative plan for a Court of Industrial Relations. W. L. Huggins, then chairman of the Kansas State Public Utilities Commission, and Judge F. C. Price, a leader in the State Senate and chairman of the judiciary committee, were called into conference. A day or two later the Governor issued a call for an extraordinary session of the State Legislature, and in January the law creating the Court of Industrial Relations was enacted. Howat, meanwhile, at meetings of the miners in Indiana, Ohio and Illinois, declared the law was designed "to enslave the working people of Kansas." He threatened a fresh strike of the Kansas miners.

After the new industrial court had begun functioning it was announced that an investigation of the coal mining industry of the State would be held here. The court assembled and Howat and other officials of the mine workers were summoned to appear as witnesses. The order was ignored.

The presiding judge then applied to Judge A. J. Curran of the Crawfort County district court to order Howat to apepar before the industrial court. When Howat and the other officials did not appear Judge Curran found them in contempt and issued an order committing them to jail "until such time as they consent to appear before the Kansas industrial relations court and answer all questions asked them."

Howat is serving his nineteenth year as an official of the United Mine Workers. He was born in Scotland and came to the United States when three years old. At ten he went to work in a coal mine. A foe to compromise, when the nation-wide bituminous strike was settled in November, 1919, Howat denounced some phases of the settlement. On December 22, 1919, he was sent to jail in Indianapolis for contempt because a strike in the mines of the Central Coal and Coke Co. in Kansas, called the previous July, was still in progress after the nation-wide settlement. Howat was released the next day upon his promise, it was said, that he would endeavor to induce the miners to return to work.

The Court of Industrial Relations which launched into an entirely new field of legislative endeavor, was attacked before the Kansas Legislature by representatives of capital and labor. Ample times was given both sides to present arguments, and the bill was condemned as inimical to the interests of capital and labor alike. Mr. Huggins presented the views of the public. Both Houses of the Legislature adopted the measure by overwhelming majorities.

The new law has been in operation only a few months, but petitions have been filed under its provisions by local, State and national labor union organizations, as well as by groups of workers and by individuals. It not only prohibits strikes and lockouts in essential industries, but it requires essential industries to operate with "a reasonable continuity necessary for the protection of the public."

The court which it created is empowered to regulate wages, hours and working conditions, pending an agreement between employer and employe. Labor officials or employers violating provisions of the law may be charged with a felony, subject to penalties reaching a maximum of $5000 fine and two years' imprisonment. Maximum penalties for employes who violate the law are $1000 fine or a year's imprisonment in a county jail.

The court is composed of George H. Wark, a lawyer, Clyde M. Reed, a newspaper publisher, and Mr. Huggins, the "father of the new law."

STOCKHOLM CHOICE OF HOCKEY ENTHUSIASTS

MATCHES IN FEBRUARY OR MARCH—AMERICANS AND CANUCKS INTERESTED

Antwerp, April 27. — Stockholm was chosen for the 1921 European and international championship matches at a meeting of the hockey enthusiasts who are here for the Olympic hockey games. The matches are to be played in February or March with Canadians and Americans participating. Canadian rules were chosen to govern the play.

Max Sillig of Switzerland was chosen president of the International Hockey Association.

Relative to the foregoing, it is difficult to understand how a Canadian champion team could make the trip to Stockholm in February or March. The Canadian title was not decided this season until March 29.

MILK PRICES REACH

reserve stocks of feeds were exhausted. Bran and shorts and also gluten feed, were scarce, and prohibitive in price. It was these conditons that made the farmer ask why it was tee prices must be reduced and the farmer made to foot the bill. Every time that the price of milk went up a cent frantic cries were heard that the farmer was enhancing the cost of living, and yet today when the food value of milk was taken into consideration, it was the cheapest form of nourishment.

Food Value of Milk

Misunderstanding on the question was due to the fact that people in the cities, towns and villages were not made acquainted with the food value of milk. True it was that now farmers' papers were emphasizing this fact, but they only reached the farmer, and stated a fact which only intensified conditions because when these facts were put before him he wanted to know why he could not get a price which the milk was worth, according to its food value. There was need of propaganda by the Producers' Association themselves carried out intelligently and thoroughly. This proposition has already been discussed by the association, but at the present time they were hampered through lack of funds. Farmers seemed quite willing to reap hunderds of dollars benefit from the work of the association, and yet they objected to paying in a dollar or two to its support.

Not Fully Developed

Home markets were not yet fully developed, said Mr. Stonehouse in explanation of the apparent glut of milk on the market. At the present time the average consumption of milk in Canada was only one pint a day per capita, and this was not nearly what an average human being required to keep him in health. He felt sure that given proper publicity they could double the consumption of milk in the country and take in any surplus that existed at present. There was also other markets for milk which were only beginning to be properly developed, for example the condensed milk industry and the powdered milk. It was quite possible that in the future considerable demand for this product would be received.

Advertising Campaign

In conclusion, Mr. Stonehouse again urged upon those present the absolute necesity of an effective advertising campaign. The producers took a great interest in the address, and asked many questions with reference to conditions elsewhere, which were all answered in a manner which showed Mr. Stonehouse to be thoroughly conversant with every phase of the milk producing industry.

After some discussion it was decided to hold the annual meeting on next Monday night. After the meeting the manufacturers and distributers of the city would be ivited to negotiate for the fixing of the summer price of milk in Peterborough. Mr. Stonehouse was invited and agreed to be present at this meeting.

SIDELIGHTS ON

"That frequently he would remain away entirely from home sometimes as long as two weeks without communicating with the plaintiff. On these occasions he would always be brought home in an intoxicated condition; that almost daily he would become intoxicated early in the morning, after drinking as much as a quart of gin or whiskey before 8 o'clock in the morning, after which he would sleep until afternoon and then resume drinking.

"That, at Robillard, France, in 1914 and 1915, the defendant was drinking more heavily than usual; that the defendant kept a sideboard at his home filled with a large assortment of liquors and would go from bottle to bottle, drinking a little out of each until he became practically unconscious and he would then go to bed.

"During such times the defendant could not be induced to and did not take a bath more than once a month. On one occasion he did not change his clothes for six weks. He used to wash his underclothes in cold water without soap, stating that it was the economy.

"During this time he was of the practically insane and up bits of string until he got sobe it out. About Christmas time, 1915, he had an attack of delirium tremens at Maisons Laffitte, Paris, and was taken to a sanitarium for two weeks.

Dragged by the Hair, She Says.

"In March, 1918, at the Maisons Laffitte, plaintiff had to leave the defendant. The defendant broke down the plaintiff's bedroom door and forcibly dragged the plaintiff from bed by her hair and forcibly struck her in the face with his hand. Later on the same night defendant threatened to kill plaintiff and tried to force her to drink a liquor which he said was poison. Failing in his attempt, defendant threw water over the plaintiff.

"On April 1, 1918, at Maisons Laffitte, the defendant ordered all of the fourteen household servants not to take orders from the plaintiff and told his two chauffeurs not to take her out driving, and told tradespeople not to extend credit to her.

"From 1913 to the time of their separation the defendant was habitually unfaithful to the plaintiff. The first time was in New York city, after dining with some men friends, when he remained away till 7 o'clock in the morning. On that occasion he was guilty of misconduct with a woman unknown to the plaintiff.

"From 1914 to the time of their separation the defendant repeatedly visited disorderly houses in Paris, where he was well known to all."

Frank Jay Gould's first wife was Helen Margaret Kelly, daughter of the late Edward Kelly. After six years of married life and the birth of two children she divorced him in this city. Since that time the first Mrs. Gould has been married twice. She married Ralph T. Thomas for her second husband. After his death she became the wife of Prince Nourredin Vlora, an Albanian nobleman, and has since lived abroad. Her two daughters by her first marriage live with their aunt, Mrs. Finley J. Shepard.

After his divorce from his first wife Mr. Gould married Edith Kelly, a stage beauty. She was playing in "In Havana" just before their wedding. They have lived abroad practically all of the time, their chateau being in the suburbs of Paris.

THEATRICAL

THE MYSTERY PLAY AT GRAND TONIGHT

In the 24th chapter of Deuteronomy it states: "When a man hath taken a wife and married her, and it come to pass the she find no favor in his eyes, then let him write her a bill of divorcement," even though in the 19th chapter of St. Matthew it does state: "What, therefore, God hath joined together let no man put asunder." In the mystery play, "The Revelations of a Wife," Grant Sterling, a lawyer, would have had little trouble in divorcing his wife for she was a woman with a past and it was found that she had formerly been married to her husband's private secretary, bringing about a confusing, startling condition which Sterling discovered by intercepting code messages passed between his wife and secretary right under his nose. The working out of this exceptionaly dramatic plot furnishes one of the most unique and startling stories ever written. We will see this drama at the Grand Theatre tonight and tomorrow.

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE TONIGHT

The exceptional mystic drama, "The Revelations of a Wife," recently produced with fine success, is in line with the trend of the times, is scenically well planned, and a splendid production with a strong cast. It will interest and instruct you, and while intense is not over drawn. It is blunt, forceful, mysterious and direct. It strikes the sentimental note with an unabashed belief in its power. In Alice Sterling, the beautiful woman with a past, the author selected a character that always wins the hearts of the lovers of true romance. In Grant Sterling, the lawyer-husband, you find the sort of a man you wish you might meet more often in everyday life. In fact, all of the characters are true to nature and perfectly human. "The Revelations of a Wife" comes to the Grand tonight and tomorrow matinee and evening.

AN ORIGINAL AND PLAUSIBLE FILM STORY

"Room 13," a photo drama starring Pauline Fredericks, which is showing at the Allen tonight, is one of the most interesting, original and plausible stories that has ever come to a local theatre. The sequence of events portrayed in the picture are all so exciting and yet all so simple and natural that one can readily conceive of such evnts being quite possible in real life. It is a story [illegible] great sacrifice which a wom[illegible] ed upon and is willi[illegible] save the man she [illegible] convicted of [illegible] woven roun[illegible] which is [illegible] murder [illegible] States [illegible] vict[illegible]

His wife must either declare that her conduct was such that would lead her husband to desire the life of his employer, or else prevent him making his only plea, the "unwritten law." She decides to make this sacrifice in order to save him, and is successful. At the close of the trial her husband ignores her. But all ends well, however, and the picture is well worth seeing.

On Wednesday Jack Pickford will be starring in Mark Twain's world famous story of "Huckleberry Fin." This will be of particular interest to the children, and on this account the manager of the Allen Theatre has arranged for a special matinee for children at four-thirty Wednesday afternoon and with specially reduced prices. Teachers are to be admitted with the children free. There are few who have not read Mark Twain's book, and it is promised that the picture, with the added attraction of a star of the calibre of Jack Pickford, will be equally interesting.

Knife Pickwick Handled.

There is a first-rate anecdote in Mr. J. J. Hissey's book, "Gossip of the Road," concerning the popularity of Dickens—or Pickwick. One of the two, but which one? Mr. Hissey was staying at the Angel, in Bury St. Edmunds, and was reflecting aloud on the fact that Mr. Pickwick was supposed to have stayed there, when his host indignantly exclaimed: "Supposed! This, sir, is the very inn where he stopped. I've the very carving knife that Mr. Pickwick used when he was here."—Christian Science Monitor.

Phrenological.

An odd reminder, says the Independent, of the days when phrenology was popular as a means of "reading character," with a sly dig at the tendency of its professors to give complimentary explanations of the "bumps," is found in a letter from Elizabeth Barrett Browning advertised for sale in a London bookseller's catalogue. It reads in part: "Do you believe in phrenology? Did you ever consult a phrenological oracle? and did it answer, 'My son, thou art invincible?'"

Help for Italy's Fourth Estate.

On January 4 a decree was promulgated that will have a marked effect in Italian journalism. In Italy, as in most of the continental countries, a newspaper has its Sunday issue as regularly as its weekly, in fact, both are part of the same seven-day issue. Though various attempts have been made from time to time to do away with the seven-day issue so as to assure a day off for writers and printers, hitherto they have failed. Now that this decree has entered into action the newspapers will be published somewhat as follows: Morning papers will come out Sunday and Tuesday mornings and the evening papers will come out Saturday and begin again on Monday. No newspapers can be sold Sunday afternoon, the sale beginning again on Monday morning, but no newspaper may be published from Sunday morn[illegible] the p[illegible] afternoon. INDIAN TRIBES HAVE GRIEVANCE

DECLARE DOMINION GOVERNMENT BILL MEANS SURRENDER OF RIGHTS

The following statement by delegates of allied tribes of British Columbia has been issued for the press and is published by the Ottawa Journal:

"In yesterday's issue of your paper was printed the resolution passed by a large number of the principal Indian tribes of Canada condemning the injustice towards the Indian tribes of British Columbia concurred in by the Dominion Government, in the form of Bill 13 now before Parliament. Bill 13 has been given its third reading in the House of Commons and is now before the Senate.

"For the information of the public we desire to tell something of this injustice. In 1912 a new policy was adopted by the Government of Canada which, it appears, was entirely in accord with the policy of the British Columbia Government then in power, and a complete departure from the policy of former Governments of Canada. This policy was practically based on the assumption that the Indians had no rights. In this same year the Dominion Government and the British Columbia Government entered into a compact, generally known as the McKenna-McBride agreement, to deal with the Indian reserves in the province of British Columbia. The only safeguard for the Indians in this agreement is the provision that no reserves will be reduced or cut off without the consent of the Indians. As a result of this agreement the Royal Commission set to work.

What is Now Asked.

"In 1914 the Dominion Government passed an order-in-council which in effect asks the Indians to surrender all the rights they claim and accept the findings of the Royal Commission as a final settlement of all lands to be reserved and other Indian affairs. If the Indians agree to these terms then the Dominion Government promises to submit to the courts the question as to whether the Indians ever had any rights.

"The Royal Commission finished its work in 1916 and accomplished little or nothing of value to the Indians. Its dealing with reserves is utterly inadequate and unsatisfactory to the Indians. The commission did not deal with the matters of Indian fishing rights, hunting rights, foreshore rights, water rights and compensation for lands taken by the Governments without treaty or surrender, all of which require settlement as well as the matter of reserves.

What New Bill Does.

"Now the Dominion Government brings down Bill 13 for the purpose of obtaining power to force upon us the unjust, un-Canadian, and un-British settlement via the order-in-council Royal Commission on reserves route spoken of above, with the added injustice of taking away the necessity of our consent to reductions and cut-offs of reserves, provided for by the McKenna-McBride agreement. Now we have been practically told by the Government — this so-called British Columbia Government is taking a much more favorable attitude and desires to enter into negotiation with the Indians for an equitable settlement out of court, if a basis for such negotiation can be agreed on.

"Why should the Dominion Government act in a contrary way and try to force a settlement upon us without negotiation and in reversal of all past policy of Canada in dealing with Indians?"

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by talking, by window dressing, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by the cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:

Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

A TALK ON HARD WALLOPS

Veteran Prize-Ring Enthusiasts Describes a Few Sensational Knockouts

New York, April 16.— Talking of hard wallops, a veteran ring follower recently said that the hardest blow he ever saw was the one with which Jack Dempsey scored the first knockdown over Willard at Toledo. It was delivered with so much force that Willard's face was black and swollen before Dempsey's glove bounced off.

One of the hardest blows delivered in a local ring during the life of the Frawley law, came from Willard's fist. It was a straight right and it landed on the jaw of the husky Soldier Kearns. Kearns who was built along the lines of a professional strong man, was not much of a fighter, but he was extremely rugged and he could take all kinds of punishment until Willard landed on his chin. The blow made a gass jawed fighter out of one of the toughest men in the ring.

Landing that punch ruined Kearns and made Willard. In previous bouts the big fellow had stalled along with a grin on his face and the fans concluded that he was too good natured to be a success in the ring. Until Willard got sore about something he was slow and lazy in his actions, but when he lost his temper he could display a brand of speed that was astonishing.

The blow that finished Kearns came like a bolt from the blue. Willard had been stalling and grinning for six or seven rounds when Kearns slammed one home on the ribs that sounded like the beat of a drum. Instantly the grin on Willard's face gave place to a scowl. He tightened every muscle in his giant body and sprang. As he came in Willard drove his right straight to the jaw. The blow lifted Kearns in the air and he almost turned a complete somersault, landing on his neck and shoulders on the opposite side of the ring.

Patsy Kline, the Newark featherweight, landed the hardest left delivered by a little man when he put Joe Coster to help him in a bout that took place in a Bowery club several years ago. Kline's left was his better hand. He could hit harder with it than his right, although he stood wth it extended, unlike most left-handers Coster was a fast, clever little fellow and he was having the better of it on points when he grew reckless and was drawn into a mixup. Kline let fly his left hook and it landed squarely on the angle of the jaw. Coster was knocked so cold that he fell flat on his face without breaking the fall in any way, and the contact with the canvas almost broke his nose. It was several minutes before his seconds could restore him to life. As soon as he came to he began to swing his arms, thinking that he was still mixing t up wth Kline, who had long since left the ring.

The upward swinging left with which Al McCoy knocked out George Chip and won the middleweight championship was a terrific wallop. McCoy was not a noted hitter by any means, but this time he happened to time the blow just right. It caught Chip under the chin as he was coming in, and it spun him around in the air uintl the first thing that hit the canvas was the back of hs head.

This was the most unexpected knockout that ever ended a chanpionship bout. A moment before he landed the winning blow McCoy was running for his life, his face pale from fright. Chip was the picture of confidence, and he was so sure of himself that he never took the slightest trouble to protect himself. McCoy let the wallop fly in sheer desperation. He had no idea that the result would be so startling. In fact, Cc-Coy was the most surprised man in the house when he saw his opponent on the floor taking the count. He could not make himself believe it was true.

Jack Dillon, thte "giant killer," landed a mighty wallop in the same ring where McCoy won the middle-wegiht title. Big Tom Cowler was the victim. Cowler had an advantage of a foot or so in height and many pounds of weight in his favor. Tom had a fairly good straight left, and he was landing it with marked success when Dillon suddenly crossed him with a right. Cowler collapsed like a load of snow falling off a roof

WHO'S BOSS OF THIS BALL TEAM

Daniel, in the Sun and New York Herald says.

"No major league cub is stronger than the authority of its manager. The expenditure of even $500,000 for star players will avail a team little unless the manager is in absolute command of the situation and every player under him and enjoys the respect of his team both as a man and as a baseball executive and strategist. We are sorry to say that these lines are written apropos of the situation among the Yankees. Miller Huggins knows far more baseball than any man on his squad, yet some of his misguided players take it upon themselves to attempt to dictate matters o fplay and policy. Last Thursday afternoon in Philadelphia Huggins sent Sam Vick to bat for Jack Quinn. Various disturbers sought to send in Frank O'Doul. Vick finally went to the plate, but the incident created a poor impression and indicated the presence of an evil influence. The incident was nothing new. It came up time and again last season. The spirit in back of it threatened to break the club into two factions at Jacksonville last month, when one division wanted Pratt to play second base, contrary to the apparent desires of Huggins, and another section favored Ward. It was Huggins' intention to open the season with Ward, but injuries suffered by that player forced him to call on Pratt."

If Huggins is going to make a success of his job this year he will have to eradicate the tendency to dictate to him. The players who put themselves in an unfavorable situation when tehy went on a short strike for a matter of $35 each, will get into absolutely bad order if they complicate Huggins' already difficult task with questions of favoritism and jealousies and petty bickering. Col. Ruppert and Col. Huston have not spared money in their endeavor to give New York a winer in the American league. The fans are behind them in their every baseball move. If certain players prove that their presence on the club is inimical to the welfare of the team it would be best to read the riot act to them right now before any damage is done. And if the reading is insufficient more drastic acton should be a order.

TROUBLE IN PORT HOPE BASEBALL CLUB

All is not well in the Port Hope Baseball Club, according to reports, and some of last year's players have signified their willingness to play with other teams in the Central Ontario League, providing they can secure positions at their own trade.

It is stated that Flanegan Hills, the popular twirler of 1919, will not mount the slab this year, and may drift to Peterborough, while his brother at first base (who was no slouch on the initial sack, and a fair hitter) may line up with Cobourg.

The residence of Judge of F. G Forbes at Liverpool, N. S., with all its contents, was completely destroyed by fire early today. The loss is estimated at $35,000. There was $7,000 insurance on the building, $1,000 on the furnishings, and $1,000 on the library.

CAN. WOOLLENS ARE CANDID LOT

ARE IN NO WAY DOWNHEARTED AT DEFEAT SATURDAY LAST

What ever may be the merits of demerits of the Canadian Woollens football team they are at least a candid lot and have plenty of spirit. The following statement was handed to The Review after the opening game, in which they were defeated by a score of 5-0:

"The Canadian Woollens A.F.C. met defeat on Saturday against the C.G.E. As this was the first time they had played together, they are in no way down hearted. They admit that they were overplayed and being the weaker team from the commencement of the game. With a little more combination in their forward line, they have no doubt that before the season closes they will still be able to give a good account of themselves."

PETERBORO BOYS RANK FOURTH

MADE CREDITABLE SHOWING IN ANNUAL HEXATHLON CONTEST

In the annual Hexathlon contects of the Y.M.C.A.S. of Canada the Peterborough Y.M.C.A. made a very creditable showing, ranking fourth place in Canada and being only just nosed out of third place by Ottawa. These contests were run off some weeks ago and the results have just been announced for publication.

Peterborough boys were winners of third place in the eighty-pound class, ninety-five-pound class, 100-pound class and the unlimited class, but fell away in the 125-pound class and gave third place to Ottawa on total points. This is indeed a record of which Peterborough may be proud. In each of the classes Peterborough Y.M.C.A. ranks were well up to the fore. In the eight-pound class Wilson Dunlop stands in eighth place for Canada, with a total of 546 points. In the ninety-five-pound class Howard Young stands in eighth place for Canada, with a total of 476 points. In the 110-pound Eric Roberts, tenth place for Canada, with 504 points, and in the 125-pound class Ernest Legon stands tenth place, 528 points, and in the unlimited class Donald Carmichael stands sixth place, a total of 512 points.

Indoor Game.

The national Hexathlon is an indoor athletic contest for junior and senior members of the Y.M.C.A. and has created more interest this year than ever before, 3872 men and boys competing. This contest was started in 1904 and has grown in popularity.

Canadians Won.

In 1915 the United States decided to conduct the Hexathlon for their Y.M.C.A.'s and they adopted the Canadian program of events. Both United States and Canada hold the contests on the same dates, which means the Canadian associations take part in both contests at the same time. The returns for the international senior contests showing a Toronto Central not only winning the Canadian championship, but the United States championship as well as the Toronto west-end second, due to the greater number of the associations participating in the junior event. Only the returns for Canada are available at the present time Peterborough did not compete in the senior Hexathlon international contests.

In so much as it would hardly be fair to group Peterborough with its somewhat smaller boy's department along with Toronto, Montreal, etc. The associations are divided into classes per ratio of members. Peterborough in the junior Hexathlon contests grouped in class "B" and this year stands in fourth place with class "B" associations in Canada, being just nosed out by Ottawa from third place with Lou and Halifax first and second respectively.

Senators View Great C.P.R. Works

Among the Machines at the Angus Shops.

The Hon. Smeaton White was the host of an interesting party to the C.P.R. Angus Shops at Montreal recently. In the party were Hon. Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor; Hon. Hewitt Bostock, leader of the Opposition in the Senate; and Senators Willoughby, Turriff, Schaffner, Fowler, Bennett, Murphy, Fisher, Blain, McMeans, Watson and Proudfoot, and Major John Bassett and Mr. Arthur Hines. The object of the visit was to further acquaint the Senators with the great industrial development in the Province of Quebec. They were met at the shops by the officials in charge of these great works.

The party were escorted through the works, spending over two hours to inspect only a portion of this great plant. First they visited the immense locomotive works and the organization and details were explained. Then they saw the salvage plant that turns what was formerly wasted and lost material into a valuable asset. They also inspected the passenger and freight car works, the offices, ambulance and dining halls. It was a splendid education in Canadian industrial development, and the Senators expressed their astonishment at the size of the works and their efficient organizaton. They all agreed that our legislators should seize every opportunity to familiarize themselves with Canada's industrial life.

The party was present when the great works closed for noon and it was a wonderful sight to see the thousands of employees streaming out of the works. Some conception of the immensity of this enterprise can be grasped from the statistics furnished. The area of the works is 190 acres, and number of employees 9,200 with an annual pay-roll of $12,780,000. As distinctive railway shops the Angus Works are the largest in North America, in fact, in the world.

Wonderful Efficiency.

Senator Gideon Robertson, Minister of Labor, was deeply interested. He said of the visit: "It is eleven years since I have been here and the development is simply amazing. I am glad I came. I had no appreciation of the immensity of the enterprise. What most impressed me was the wonderful efficiency of the employees. I never saw an idle man and I believe each was striving to give a fair day's work. I am glad the relationship between the company and its employees is of such a cordial character."

Hon. Hewitt Bostock also was deeply interested and appreciative of this industrial development and said:

"One thinks of the Canadian Pacific Railway as a great transportation company with representatives in all the important centres of the world, but cannot realise until they visit the Angus shops, the amount of co-ordination and management required to keep the rolling stock, and the system generally, up to date and in an efficient state of repair. Whilst these shops are the principal shops of the railway they are by no means the only shops where repairs are made. On entering the locomotive building the first thing to attract the attention of the party was the big crane of 60 tons transporting the completed boiler of an engine to its place, to be placed into the bogey carriage. We realised that every effort had been made to instal the last machines for handling the material quickly and economically. The cutting of the metal is done by acetylene gas jets, the welding by electricity. All through the shops the machines are worked by compressed air wherever feasible, and the noise in the locomotive shop is deafening.

Salvage System.

"One of the most noticeable things is the way in which the scrap is worked up into something useful. In one case the wheel of the hand brake of a freight car was being made up as the wheel of a wheelbarrow. Old pipe is made into the framework of farm gates, showing the close and careful management which looks into every detail, and which has been successful in finding places not only for all the [illegible] men who worked in the shops before serving at the front, but for many others who had not worked for the company before, the policy of the management being to give a preference to the returned soldier.

"At the commencement of the war some of the shops were given up to making ammunition and were the first to turn out brass shell cases for the Imperial Munitions Board, a number of women being employed for this work, but as soon as it was possible to get the supply of ammunition elsewhere the transfer to repair work was made as quickly as possible, as large arrears of work had to be overtaken.

"The whole tone of the shops and the way that the work was being carried on bespoke a good understanding and co-operation between the men and the management. One would go a long way before seeing a more active body of men than those who came off work at noon, largely due, no doubt, to the provision of ample athletic grounds and good ventilation throughout the works."

Elimination of Waste.

Senator George Fowler, of New Brunswick, said:

"Personally, I had no idea of the magnitude of the shops nor of their perfection from the industrial standpoint. The pride which I, as an intense Canadian, have always taken in having in our country the greatest transportation system in the world was considerably increased when this visit convinced me that its organization was about as near perfection as the inherent shortcomings of frail humanity can reach. The most modern machinery, the most expert mechanics, with superb organization can accomplish wonders, a statement proved by the work performed at the Angus Shops. We saw under the same roof the repairs to an insignificant car hinge, and the building of a magnificent engine such as Stephenson in his greatest visions never dreamed of, an engine weighing one hundred and seventy-five tons and capable of hauling a train of loaded cars over a mile in length. So perfectly has the automatic principle been developed in many of the machines in the works that they almost seem to be sentient things and capable of the expression of more intelligent thought than that sometimes exhibited by even a judge upon the bench.

"Another feature that struck me was the almost perfect elimination of waste. The C.P.R. management is evidently a strong believer in the old adage that, a penny saved is a penny earned. For nothing of the least value is allowed to be wasted. The shareholders of the great Canadian railway may rest content that their money is in safe hands and that if the present reasonable return upon their investment is not maintained in the future it will not be through any fault of the present management.

"You cannot, however, perfect your machinery, fail to reckon with the human element and in that regard what most roused my admiration was the splendid spirit of loyalty shown by all officials of whatever grade towards the company. With such a spirit emanating with such a magnificent organization, and with the driving force possessed by the young and vigorous president, the continued progress of the company is assured and the glories of its past will be far outshone by the magnificent triumphs of the future."

Impressed by Employees.

Senator W. H. Bennett, Ontario, was astonished at the great industry built up, and said;

"The visit of the party was most interesting and profitable. That the company was building such mammoth locomotives was the most impressive recollection of the trip, while in quite another direction the evidences of thorough and business acumen, in economic management, were manifest in the utilization of what would be considered as scrap by converting the same into useful parts for new work. The employment of the great force of 9,000 men, at the Angus Shops was an evidence of the most striking kind of the part played by the company, not only in the transportation interests of Canada, but in its industrial life. The party are under deep obligations for Senator White's kindness in giving them the trip."

Senator Turriff, Saskatchewan, said: "I thought I had some conception of the C.P.R. efficiency and magnitude, but no one can properly understand it until he sees these works. What impressed me was the fine appearance of the employees. I never saw a more intelligent body of men."

Senator John Fisher was equally appreciative. He was much impressed with the salvage department. "I now know," he said, "why the C. P. R. is a success. There is no waste on the system."

Mr. W. F. Wanklyn, representing President Beatty, met the party at the works and on their return to the Windsor Street Station, Mr. Grant Hall conveyed to the party the appreciation of the company for their visit.

REPORTS ARMENIANS WERE TREACHEROUS

LED FRENCH FORCES INTO AMBUSH—HAD UNDERSTANDING WITH TURKS

(By Canadian Press.)

Paris, April 27.—Latest information received at the Foreign Office from Asia Minor indicates that losses to the French troops at Urfa, northwest of Mesopotamia, were less serious than at first supposed. A large detachment is thought to have got back into the town, while others escaped in other directions.

The official version attributes the French reverse to treachery.

A Mixed Force.

The force occupying Urfa comprised seven hundred men, of whom two companies were white French troops and the rest Senegalese riflemen.

The report to the War Office indicates that the total loss was two hundred killed. Reports are in circulation in Paris that the French were led into ambush by Armenians chosen from the population of Urfa as guides, but there is no official confirmation of this report. These reports seem to have developed from an allegation in despatches to the War Office that the Armenian population in Urfa had an understanding with Turkish rebels, and withheld supplies from the French garrison, thus necessitating its evacuation.

(By Canadian Press.)

SINN FEINERS KIDNAP SIX PROMINENT MEN

RAID IRISH TOWN IN MOTOR CARS AND CUT WIRES

London, April 27.—Two hundred men of the Irish Republican army arrived at Mill Street, County of Cork, in motor cars early Sunday and took up positions in various parts of the town. They cut the telegraph wires before seizing and carrying off six people who are suspected of implication in the hold up of several bank officials last November, when £18,000 were stolen. It is the announced intention of republicans to hold the men until they disclose where the money is secreted.

Civilians and soldiers came into collision last night in Connell street, Limerick near new barracks. Stones were thrown and some of the soldiers were injured, one of them seriously. It is said that some shots were fired, but nobody was wounded. It is reported that the trouble arose over a petty incident. Quiet was restored after two hours.

DIVORCE IS PLAGUE WORSE THAN BOOZE

REMEDY IN AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT URGED

Washington, April 27.—More than fifty per cent of the divorces granted in this country are based on "thumped up charges" resulting from the fascination of the husband or wife for some one else, Francis Minor Moody of Chicago, executive secretary of the International Committee on Marriage and Divorce, declared today before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Appearing in support of a joint resolution proposing a constitutional amendment for providing for uniform Federal marriage and divorce laws Mr. Moody charged that the newspapers refused to print articles dealing with the seriousness of the divorce situation because many of the men connected with the newspapers "are of that kind."

The witness declared that the divorce evil was a "worse plague than the saloon ever was," and that the remedy was in Federal legislation. He told the committee that in 1916 the divorce rate in the United States was 136 per 100,000, exceeding that of Japan, where he said, the divorce situation always had been recognized as serious.

GIRL'S LEGS CUT OFF IN N. Y. SUBWAY RUSH

Pushed Off Platform in Front of Train

New York, April 28.—The rush of a crowd in the Canal street station of the B. R. T. Broadway subway as a northbound train pulled in carried Miss Jennie Goldstein, 27 years old, of 2834 Thirtieth street, Coney Island, over the edge of the platform, directly in the path of the train.

The motorman, Carl Smith, of 723 Prospect place, Brooklyn, pulled the train up rocking with emergency brakes, but the wheels had passed over the young woman. She was lifted out unconscious after an emergency crew had raised the trucks, with both legs cut off between the knee and ankle.

The Canal street station is one of the most crowded during rush hours of any in the city and regarded as dangerous for that reason. At St. Vincent's Hospital last night Miss Goldstein regained consciousness for a time and stated she lost her balance as the crowd pushed forward at the north end of the platform. It was said there is slight hope for her recovery.

Lindsay, April 27.— Carl Henry, a son of Mr. Victor Henry of Peterboro, has been visiting at his grandmother's, Mrs. Robert Henry's, 87 St. Patrick st., for the past two or three weeks. To the excited and anxious grandmother, Mr. Jas. Workman stated that he had seen alittle fellow answering the description, walking down St. Patrick street, near Queen street.

Master Carl is only three years old, but is a bright young fellow and talks well.

He had been dressed and made ready for the trip to the station and to Peterboro, and was to have been accompanied by Mrs. Henry's son. He was hardly missing five minutes when it was discovered that he was lost. Different people were called up, and the police notified, but at the time of going to press the youngster had not been found.

A Description

Master Henry was dressed in black and white checked coat, black velvet hat, black boots with brown tops.

A TEN CENT FARE FOR WINNIPEG RY.

COMPANY INSIST ON SIX PER CENT ON THEIR INVESTMENT

Winnipeg, April 27.— The Street Railway has made a showing before the Public Utilities Commission that its plant on a physical valuation is worth $29,000,000 and is asking for fares that will pay six per cent on the investment. The employes' union demand nine-five cents an hour, an incrase of nearly double the present wage scale, and the company says if it is allowed a ten-cent fare must be charged. The men threaten to strike if refused, and if the fare increase is allowed the congestion in downtown districts, now of panic proportions, will increase as a result of people moving in to reduce car fares. The situatio nis more menacing than just before the great strike of last year in this direction, but labor union circles generally are more quiet.

GIRLS' HIGH SCHOOL CUTS OUT COLOR LINE

NEGRO STUDENTS WELCOME AT SENIOR PROM IN BROOKLYN

Brooklyn, April 27.— Sixteen negroes attended the senior prom given by the Brooklyn Girls' High School at the Hotel Margaret. There were eight couples in the group. Six of the girls were seniors, one having won a prize for a class poem. They had invited two other negro girls and each each of the eight had an escort.

The negro clasmates and their escorts were greeted at the entrance to the ballroom by the members of the reception committee. They kept to themselves in one corner of the ballroom and danced only with their own party. There had been some doubt whether they would be invited.

The race question had been brought up by the parents of Yolande Du Bois When put to a vote, the class favored including their negro classmates. Dr. William Pelter, principal said that it had been decded oficially by the City Superintendent of Svchools that a vote should settle the question, and suggested that, as it was a school affair, there shoul dbe no color discrimination.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE VOTES IN FAVOR OF ANOTHER REFERENDUM

Only Twelve Votes Recorded Against the Resolution Tha People Shall Vote on Question of Prohibition of Importationo f Liquor Into Ontario.

Toronto, April 28.—By a majority of 73 the Legislature last night decided that the people of Ontario shall have opportunity for voting on the question of prohibiting the importation of liquor into this Province.

The necessary resolution of the Legislature asking the Dominion Government for the submission of the referendum was passed in the House late last night by a majority of 73, only 12 members scattered among the Liberal, Conservative and Labor groups voting against it. The storm that threatened the McCreary resolution in he early days of its appearance before the House had drifted away last night long before the vote was taken and the action of the Liberals in voting solidly against the Conservative amendment, calling upon the Government to assume responsibility in connection with the referendum resolution ensured the rejection of the Liberal amendment calling for a stated case, the Conservatives with a few exceptions voting solidly with the Government against the Liberal delaying proposition.

When it came to a vote on the main resolution, the opposition practically disappeared, both Liberals, Conservatives and Labor men who were against the U. F. O. on the earlier amendments, swinging to the support of the referendum proposal. Even the Labor men, who were expected to make a finish fight of it, were not in evidence when the nays on the resolution were called for, only two toeing the line.

The first division which was upon the Hill amendment showed an adverse vote of 79 to 18, or a majority of 61. The amendment was supported by all the Conservatives in the House with the exception of J. R. Cook of North Hastings, who voted all the way through with the Government. The Liberals and Labor men voted solidly with the U.F.O.

Stated Case Rejected.

Then came what was expected to be the real test—the vote on the Brackin amendment to submit the question of the applicability of the Federal Act to the courts for a decision before proceeding to take a referendum. The vote was 75 to 22, or a majority of 53 against it.

The Liberals in the main supported the Brackin amendment, though the Conservatives with the exception of Brig.-General Ross of Kingston voted against it. The Liberals, however, did not all follow Mr. Dewart's lead. Sam Clarke of West Northumberland, Tolmie of Wind-

HAROLD JARVIS GIFTED TENOR, HEARD TO SPLENDID ADVANTAGE LAST NIGHT

Thrills Large and Enthusiastic Audience With Exceptionally Acceptable Offerings.

Detroit's eminent tenor, Harold Jarvis, was heard in concert at St. Paul's Church last evening by an enthusiastic and critical audience, who had assembled with the anticipation of hearing something exceptionally fine. With a pleasing voice of remarkable range, Mr. Jarvis did not fail these anticipations. His several numbers commanded wrapt attention, and encore after encore was demanded, to which the gifted vocalist responded generously. In fact, Mr. Jarvis loves his work, and wherever he goes responsive audiences love to hear him.

Th wonderful expressiveness with which he last night interpreted such numbers as "There Is No Death," "Do You Remember Long Ago, Kathleen," and "Your Eyes Have Told Me So." was not lost on the listeners, all of whom were emphatic in their approval.

The Fraser Auxiliary of St. Paul's Church are to be congratulated on securing the services of this superior entertainer.

Miss Hazel Davidson, Peterborough's clever young elocutionist, contributed largely to the enjoyment of the evening with several humorous selections of special merit. Mr. Frank Tattersall, accompanist of the evening, rendered an organ solo, "The Abbey Chimes," in the skilful manner characteristic of this musician.

BRUTE CONFESSES TO KILLING GIRL

MURDERED GLENN GILLESPIE EIGHTEEN-YEAR OLD TELEPHONE OPERATOR

BODY DISCOVERED ON PORCH

PRISONER SEEN WASHING BLOODY HANDS NEAR SCENE OF CRIME

(By Canadian Press.)

Pontiac, Mich., April 29.—Allan Best, formerly of Flint, Mich., confessed this morning, according to Prosecutor Glenn C. Gillespie, that he killed Miss Vera Schneider, an 18-year-old telephone operator, whose body was found early Sunday morning on the porch of an unoccupied dwelling.

Best, according to the prosecutor, had been questioned throughout the night, and broke down after being identified by workmen as having been seen washing his hands in the Clinton River near the scene of the crime a few minutes after the discovery of the body.

"She asked me to kill her." Best was quoted as saying. He even declared, according to the prosecutor, that he met Miss Schneider for the first time late Saturday night.

The confession, Mr. Gillespie declared, was made in the presence of a stenographer and several police officers, and gave no other reason than that Miss Schneider begged Best to end her life because she was tired of living and was "simply in the way of others." She even drew handkerchiefs from his pocket and asked him to tie them together and place them about her neck, Best was quoted as saying. Officers said that Best told them that when he complied he had at first refused to pull the handkerchiefs, but she begged him to do so, saying that she was ready to die. Continuing, the statement quotes Best as saying that he left the body and walked to the river nearby, where he washed his hands, which were slightly blood stained from blood that came from the girl's mouth.

CABLES TO CARRY TELEPHONE CALLS

GENERAL SQUIER PREDICTS AN EARLY WORLD-LINKING SYSTEM.

EXPERIMENTS FIRST MADE

PEOPLE OF ONE CONTINENT TO TALK TO THOSE OF ANOTHER.

Washington, April 28.—World-circling telephonic communication by utilizing the Atlantic and Pacific cables is not only possible, but practicable, it was learned yesterday, as proved by demonstrations in a series of experiments just completed by the United States Government.

Details of the experiments are expected to be revealed in an address tomorrow by Major-General Squier, chief signal officer of the army, who is to speak before the American Academy of Science at the Smithsonian Institute.

The Audion tube, the marvelous contrivance through the aid of which, at certain distances between the Atlantic and Pacific coasts, a watch ticking in San Francisco was heard by elephone in New York, is expected to form an important part in the equipment for the proposed, around-the-world telephone communication system. An entirely new transmitting device, said to have been developed by Major General Sqnirer, is also to figure prominently, it was said.

HAD TO BE ADJUDGED A PAUPER AND SCARECROW TO SECURE CLOTHES

Such is Declaration Laid Before Special Committee on Pensions This Morning

(By Canadian Press.)

Ottawa, April 28.—Re-establishment recommendations of tubercular patients were placed before the Special Committee on Pensions today.

Messrs. Simmonds and Pyper recalled, stated that tubercular patients had heavier expenses than other disability pensioners, and should have some consideration. Issue of free clothing to D.S.C.R. patients at present was unsatisfactory, patients objecting that a man had to be adjudged a pauper and scarecrow before clothing was issued to him.

Members of the committee argued that the fault lay with officers issuing clothing, and Mr. Pyper suggested making such issue automatic.

Should Be Clothed.

If a man was to be into a sanitorium for six months he should have clothing on going in.

Witnesses asked free medical treatment for any form of sickness for five years after discharge from a sanitorium. They also asked the same or defendents while patients are in hospital or on their total disability pension.

AMERICAN LEGION HAS INFORMATION UPRISING HERE IS IMMINENT.

64 SOVIETS ORGANIZED

MAJ. LORILLARD SPENCER SAYS MANY 'RESPECTED PERSONS" ARE IN MOVEMENT.

New York, April 28.—The New York County Committee of the American Legion has received information through various sources which indicates that there is about an even chance for serious radical demonstrations in New York on May 1. This was announced lost night by Major Lorillard Spencer, a member of the committee, who said that the probability of disorder is about fifty-fifty.

Major Spencer told the members of the committee, in session at the Hotel Pennsylvania, that he had been informed the Reds had organized sixty-four Soviet committees in Manhattan to "take over" the Government when the revolution follows the disorders, and that on the lists of these committees appeared the names of some of the most "respected citizens of the community."

"We must take some action on this," said Major Spencer, "unless we don't believe in the American form of government. If that is so we do not need the legion."

As soon as Major Spencer had told of the informotion he had received the committee adopted the report of the Committee on Americanisation recommending the enlistment of volunteers and the organization of legion members to act in cases of disorder in connection with strikes of a revolutionary nature. The legion members under the terms of the report may be called only if the emergency is caused by radicals and a strike without just cause.

The delegate of Tiger Post of the Legion announced it had prepared a list of legion volunteers for this purpose more than six months ago and submitted it to Lieut.-Gen. Bullard at Governors Island for co-operation with the army authorities in the event of trouble.

All of the speakers and members of the Americonisation committee made it plain that the men of the legion would not act as strikebreakers and would not enter into any controversy between capital and labor.

SPAIN'S KING FINED FOR TRESPASSING

PAYS TWO PESETAS FOR WALKING OVER GRASS IN GARDENS.

(By Canadian Press.)

Madrid, April 28.—King Alfonso was fined two pesetas yesterday for walking across the grass in the gardens of the Alcazar. The first intimation Alfonso had that he had committed an offence was when a guardian approached and said: "Your Majesty, walking on the grass is forbidden. I must fine you according to my instructions. At first the King was abashed, then he laughed and paid. Later the Mayor apologized to the King, but his Majesty told him the guardian had acted properly and should be rewarded.

The Maoris finally promised not to create a disturbance if permitted to welcome the royal visitors at Rotorua.

Despatches say that the railway traffic has been suspended in the northern island, but it is not expected to delay the progress of the Prince of Wales.

JUDGE TELLS COLYERS PEOPLE SEE ONLY RED NOW

Boston April 28.—The American people are seeing red these days, Judge George W. Anderson said to the United States District C[illegible] day. He was advising Mr. [illegible] William T. "It seems to me," he said, "that violent Socialistic propaganda would never be more foolish than now. To speak colloquially, I wouldn't run my head against a stone wall if I were you.

"A good share of the American people seem lacking in historical perspective and a sense of humor. It is difficult to give aliens their rights when the people see nothing but red. It is difficult to uphold the government's laws and free assemblage, but, as St. Paul said, 'Be moderate in all things.' If I were an ardent Socialist I would keep still for a few months."

CHILD-WELFARE EXHIBITION ATTRACTS MUCH WELL MERITED PUBLIC ATTENTION

Demonstration on Proper Care of Babies and Preparation of Food Illuminative.

The Child Welfare Exhibition given yesterday afternoon and evening at the Great War Veterans' Hall under the auspices of the Women's Council of Peterborough, was most successful, and attracted a considerable amount of attention among the mothers of the city who realized the value of the information which was to be obtained at such an exhibition.

In the afternoon the time was devoted to examining and weighing the babies, and a demonstration on the methods of washing and dressing babies and the preparation of food was given by the Provincial nurse, Miss Knox, who was in Peterborough for the occasion. This demonstration was most interesting and useful and some 150 mothers who were present for it appeared to be greatly impressed.

The task of weighing the babies proved to be great amusement for the spectators, but very perturbing for the little tots. Charts, diagrams and hints of valuable information were distributed round the walls. They are the property of the Provincial Government, and were loaned for the occasion. But it is understood that the Peterborough Health Association is going to purchase a few of the best for local use.

Doctors on Duty.

The doctors on duty during the afternoon were Dr. McCullough from 2 to 3, Dr. Eastwood from 3 to 4, and Drs. Hammond and Morgan from 4 to 5. They were assisted in their work by Mrs. (Dr.) Carmichael, formerly superintendent of Nicholls Hospital, and Miss Stratton. Mrs. Calbraith acted as secretary, and she was assisted in this capacity by Miss Lech.

Tea Served.

Tea was served in the afternoon by the King's Daughters, who will also serve tea at the weekly clinics which will take place every Tuesday afternoon in the Veterans' Hall.

BENEFITS OF PROHIBITION.

PROHIBITION is a measure which none of us can honestly regret, for, although its enactment may have left the door open for criticism, incalculable good has resulted. Homes have been regenerated from poverty and uplifted into a state of comfort and plenty; men and women have been reclaimed from bestial intemperance, and their feet set on the path of decency and respect; and the youth of today—the manhood of tomorrow—have had the contaminating example of over-indulgence in strong drink eliminated, excepting perhaps in those cases of a certain class of the community who, like our first parents, will have the forbidden fruit by hook or by crook. But it should be borne in mind that prohibition is not exclusively a religious measure; it is a secular one, carried by men and women, as a whole, not influenced in their vote by religion, but actuated by an earnest desire to enhance the general welfare of this Province. Medical opinion is divided as to whether there is any virtue or not in liquor in its place for certain purposes or on specific occasions, as men and women differ as to just how some passages in the Scriptures shall be interpreted. Such differences of opinion on great questions are humanely natural, and the endeavor should be not to destroy the whole objective of any reform by fanatic pressure. In religion, in any movement, fanaticism is destructive instead of uplifting, so it is up to this Province to guard against prohibition being eventually killed entirely by fanaticism. Temperance in this Province, individually and collectively, has been stupendously enhanced by the Prohibition Law as it stands. It might be dangerous to the whole cause to attempt to so legislate that liquor shall be obtainable under no circumstances, even where conceded by certain authorities that liquor has its virtue and its place. Such legislation, whether local or Dominion wide, would savor of fanaticism and might react disastrously. The time may come when we shall all see eye to eye on this question, but fanaticism will retard rather than hasten it.

THE JEWS AND PALESTINE.

ADVISEDLY WE LEARN that there is rejoicing all over the world among the Jews in that a mandate over Palestine has been awarded to Great Britain, and that the cables have been hot for the past couple of days with messages of congratulation from Hebrew to Hebrew. 'Tis passing strange indeed that Britain, whom Germany held up as a despotic monster, against whom rebellion was prepared by her colonials immediately she went to war, should have found such a warm spot in the heart of the Jewish race and be welcomed as a protectorate. But then, you know, the Jews are a shrewd far-seeing race, a people who have experienced nothing but kindly treatment and freedom under the British flag, as against abuse and oppression in most other lands, so can it be wondered at that they cast longing eyes toward their holy land's protection by a flag which is emblematic of freedom, truth, and, above all, justice?

SPEED LIMIT OF AUTOS.

TORONTO'S Board of Control recommended the city council to petition the Ontario Government that the speed at which autos may travel on city streets be reduced from twenty to fifteen miles an hour. In support of this, attention was drawn to the heavy loss of life which has occurred through auto speeding.

Peterborough's City Council have of late joined with other municipalities in several petitions to the Legislature for the enactment of measures in general municipal welfare, and had the proposition of the Toronto Board of Control not been rejected, another opportunity would have been offered to consult the public weal by uniting with Toronto for less speed on our streets by motor cars. It seems to us that fifteen miles an hour should be speedy enough to satisfy all motor travellers within the city limits, and the elimination of five miles from a legalized hour's travel would go some way in reducing the number of accidents. Motor car colliding has grown quite common in this city as elsewhere, so much so that to the reading public a newspaper seems wanting unless somewhere in its columns an accident is recorded.

To enjoy a car it is not necessary to resort to speeding, and our city limits are not so distant that any given point cannot be reached at fifteen miles an hour without either business or social disaster following. Then the question arises, can a car going at twenty miles an hour be driven under proper control—such control as allows of immediate and responsive action—by the everyday driver when dangerous contingencies are encountered? The answer, judging by the ever-increasing number of accidents, certainly seems to be in the negative. And the thrilling narrow escapes are legion in number.

While on this subject it might not be out of place to emphasize the fact that with a certain class of autoists in this city even twenty miles an hour is not satisfying—forty would come nearer the mark. Charlotte street's alluring paved roadway, for instance, from the other side of the Grand Trunk station westward, at times presents the appearance of a veritable speedway with cars travelling at a breath-holding rate. All cross streets from the station to Park street are in the main artery class, leading to and from our busy industrial centre, and the miracle is that very serious accidents do not occur in this neighborhood. This piece of road is not held up for example because we have any particular pick at that thoroughfare, but having to travel it from four to six times each business day, we see so many demonstrations of what an auto is capable of in the way of speed that we wonder "what's the good of a speed bylaw, anyhow?" However, some consolation may be reached from the axiom, "laws are made to be broken" —and probably one of these fine days some reckless driver's heart will be broken by the size of his fine. Let us hope so.

GARDENING FOR CITY SCHOOLS.

GARDENING IS systematically carried on by the Public schools of many Canadian cities as a part of the educational course. Dr. J. H. Putman, senior inspector for Ottawa Public schools, in the March number of the Agricultural Gaette, published by the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa, describes the system under which this work is done in the Capital city.

The school garden is referred to as a big class room for outdoor instruction in plants and plant life. It has many of the possibilities in miniature of an experimental farm. It has to do with the composition and fertility of soils, with drainage, with seed germination and with insect enemies of plant life. It shows in a way that cannot be questioned the effect upon plants of too much or too little sunshine or moisture and the bad effects of weeds and the necessity of giving a plant plenty of room if we wish to secure a high state of development. Dr. Putman points out that these things would mean nothing to city children if recited from books or told by teachers. These things taught through a garden where the children prepare the soil, sow the seeds and care for the plants cannot be without good results.

In addition to a central garden of one acre, the Ottawa plan involves the organization of home garden clubs, each representing a school. In the three years 1917-18-19 about one thousand pupils from second and third book classes received gardening instruction. The school board paid forty dollars to each teacher who managed a club garden. Every pupil member was required to keep an accurate record of planting, cultivating and other activities. The aim is to grow everything possible from seed. Cold frames are found to be a valuable addition to the equipment. In the central garden, instead of giving pupils very small individual plots, a plot 22 by 43 feet for vegetables and 16 by 20 feet for flowers is given to each class. This garden is having a permanent perennial border established which will give a succession of bloom as well as an opportunity to show the children what they may have in their own home gardens.

This plan might, perhaps, be adopted in Peterborough schools. It is a great advantage in adult life to "know how to garden," for the present trend of citydom is to grow up in positive ignorance of the care and treatment of even the commonest kind of vegetables necessary to assure gratifying results.

CANADIAN TRADE WITH CUBA.

THE MONTHLY Commercial Letter says: In the first ten months of the current fiscal year Cuba, largely the port of Havana, the capital of that island, forwarded to Canada exports valued at $11,413,321, and of that amount $10,572,428 was represented by 184,297,966 pounds of raw sugar. For the corresponding periods in 1918 and 1919 the quantity of sugar imported was respectively 7,514,589 and 40,264,966 pounds. The total value of our trade with Cuba for the ten months ending in January was for each of the last three years $3,812,018, $6,632,513 and $16,202,380 respectively. To

ENGLISH SPORT THREATENED.

THE ENGLISH SPORT of fox hunting, which was in full swing before the times of the Stuarts and Tudors, and which had lost none of its fascination for the country gentry when the war began, has been so hard hit by the high cost of living that its continuation as one of Britain's most poular institutions is threatened. In its review of the latest English season, The Field, "the country gentleman's newspaper," says that, with hay at $80 a ton and everything else required by the horse owner costing two and a half times as much as it did six years ago, "it is practically impossible for the poor hunting man or woman to ride to hounds. The result is that they are obliged to retire from the field."

It is not the keep of the animal alone that is so expensive; but the cost of a good hunting horse has become almost prhibitive to men of slender purses. In communities where form and style were not important considerations, this difficulty was in part overcome by army remounts. But this supply is almost entirely exhausted, and it is now impossible to pick up at a low figure any kind of horse that can gallop and jump.

There is, moreover, not only a shortage in hounds, but a decided deterioration in the hunting qualities of many of the best packs. The reasons for this are that disease took a considerable toll when the packs were smaller than ever before and that training and care of hunting dogs were neglected during the war. There are also fewer foxes now for the chase; in war time the number was kept down in the interests of the farmer, and various illegitimate means—that is "illegitimate" from a hunter's point of view—were employed to kill them, and such means of destroying them have not been abandoned. And to add to this accumulation of hunters' troubles, many great estates have been broken up and others are in process of division into small plots and farms. The new owners, frequently former tenants, are not inclined to assist in increasing the growth of foxes in the country or in turning their lands into hunting fields. As a result, they have steadfastly refused to enter into agreements with the hunt secretaries or committees.

Taking all these difficulties and obstacles into consideration, it would seem that the crimson-coated riders will in future be a decidedly dwindling minority in Great Britain.

Those celerated days of stirring contests for the fox's brush, of the great hunt balls and suppers which were written about with so much spirit and dash by the novelists of the last century, have passed except for the wealthy owners of great landed estates.

"In these democratic times it is most necessary," says The Field, "that hunting should as far as possible be made easy for those who are not overburdened with money and are yet enthusiastic where the sport is concerned." In other words, The Field counsels enthusiasm and a return to the old-time democracy of the sport. But if this should fail the Britisher at home and he should long for a free-for-all fox hunt with a fair show for fox, hound and rider, he might still find it in all its early glory and joy in the highlands of Kentucky or Missouri.

SIR WILLIAM'S CAR WAS NOT INCLUDED

DID NOT GO TO GOVERNMENT WITH C.N.R. ROLLING STOCK.

Ottawa, April 28.—In answer to a question by Pierre Casgrain, Hon Dr. Reid, Minister of Railways, stated that the private car of Sir William Mackenzie has not been included in the rolling stock of the Canadian Northern Railway taken over by the Government. Questioned as to whether Sir William held any office in the administration of the Nations, he said, "Sir Wm. Mackenzie holds no office of any kind, nor is he connected in any way with the administration of the Canadian Nation Railways. As an ex-president he is accorded transportation over the system, a privilege allowed to all ex-presidents of railways."

Hon. Jacques Bureau of Trois Rivieres enquired of Mr. Speaker as to when the "quarantine" was removed from the lobbies running along the sides of the chamber.

"At the present time," he said, "we can meet nobody. We cannot have a newspaper man or a Senator in to see us and if we want to see one we've got to trot round the halls to find him. It is very inconvenient indeed."

"The rule will be revised," said the Speaker, "just as soon as the House determines to do so. I submitted the question to the House before, and i twas the unanimous decision to enforce the rule.

"As soon as the House decides to revise the decision the rule will go. Until then it will stand."

"I'll make a motion," said Mr. Bureau.

TOTEM CRESTS ARE PRIDE OF THE INDIANS

ODD FACTS ABOUT THE TRIBES IN BRITISH COLUMBIA.

Vancouver, B.C., April 27.—Ethnologic and folklore significance, legendary symbolism and connotation of tribe and clan, family and individual, can be mastered in detail from the totem poles of the up-coast Indian tribes of British Columbia. Brightly blue, red and white upon black, their painted decoration emphasizes their imaginatively sculptured grotesques of bird, beast, fish and man.

The right to use the totemic crest always descends through the women and is acquired by marriage with them. A tribesman uses the tribal crest of his clan group so inherited or acquired, and in addition those of one or more personal guardian spirits he may have acquired. So he may set up before his house a pole with a single totem, or if he's easy in making friendships with the birds, beasts and fishes he may have a whole Noah's Ark of them on his pole. They carve the crests on canoe prows, paint them on house fronts, weave them into baskets and blankets of goat hair or cedar bark. They carve and paint them in combination of poles set up before the individual or clan house.

The poles are often memorials of individuals. You can't always tell the difference between the poles that show merely tribal alliances and guardian spirits symbolised by animals and the poles that tell the story of the clan. Then, again, there are the blanket poles. They are single poles, with a chief's personal totem on the top; often it's merely a "copper," a shield shaped piece of wood with his totem painted on it, set up as a record of the height of the pile of blankets he has given away at some potlatch or gift-giving feast.

Among the up-coast tribes is an odd reversal of ideas. A man gets reputation and standing not by what he owns but by what he is able to give away. If he wants to be regarded as a hiyu tree, a person of special consequence, he aims to do it by being able to give away more and make himself worse off than nothing by more blankets than anybody else on the coast.

Lots of women would make secret gifts to charity if they could only keep the secret.

DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS
23 THE P

Reconstructed in "The Nest"

A GLIMPSE OF ONE OF ARMY'S HAVENS FOR CHILDREN RESCUED FROM UNHAPPY AND DANGEROUS SURROUNDINGS.

Fifty-two children are at present in residence at "The Nest," a haven established by the Salvation Army eighteen years ago for little girls, rescued from unhappy and dangerous circumstances. In this Home these little ones—successors to many hundreds of similar girls—are finding comfort, protection and motherly care. From all parts of this and other lands letters are received from young women breathing out thanks for the Agency which lifted them from unmentionable circumstances, and not only taught them to forget the miseries of the past, but trained their feet in the way of righteousness and truth and sent hem out fitted for a useful career.

"The Nest" is ideally situated. The house itself is a spacious one, with large, airy bedrooms; while the large garden is a never-ending source of pleasure to them.

A one-time greenhouse has been utilized and fitted up for the use of children requiring open-air treatment; an isolation ward does away with the fear of infection in case of epidemic, and the dining-room, with its small tables, the nursery with its variety of toys, and a well-filled bookcase, makes it homelike to a fine degree.

There is also a small room set apart for the use of girls who have gone to situations but who prefer to spend their leisure hours at "The Nest."

The children come from all kinds of sad circumstances, many of them being handed over from the police courts. It seems an impossible thing that a child of five and a half can be an incorrigible, or at six and a half be a practised thief, but such are some of the "problems" being dealt with by the warden of this Home—and being dealt with effectively as results have proved.

After leaving school, which they usually do when fourteen years of age, the children receive in the Home two years' training, which includes housewifery, the making of garments — the latest branch must, indeed, be valuable, for we learn that all the clothing worn by the children is made on the premises, including even their winter coats. During the last few years two or three very young children have been admitted to "The Nest," it being felt that the baby atmosphere was good for the elder girls, and at the same time afforded an opportunity for practical training in babycraft.

While the majority of the girls go to domestic service, the Home Mother is ever in the lookout for those who are more fitted for other spheres of labor. Several of the Nestlings—or rather fledglings—are filling excellent positions in offices as private secretaries or in charge of other girls —and at the present time three are preparing to become shorthand typists. But whether they go to service or office life, they are taught to regard all work as ennobling, and that it does not so much matter what their calling is as what they themselves are in principle and character.

GOOD WORKS OF D.S.C.R. IN PLACING VETERANS

AFTER JUNE 30 RETURNED MEN WILL USE GOVERNMENT BUREAUS.

Toronto, April 28.—The local unit of the information and service branch of the D.S.C.R. received notification yesterday from Ottawa that all officers of that branch of the department will be withdrawn by June the 30th. Small branches will be closed in the immediate future, but the larger centres, such as Toronto, Hamilton and Brantford, will remain open until the last.

After the end of June returned men will use the Government employment bureaus and will take their chances along with foreigners and civilians.

The information and service branch has placed 125,000 returned men in employment, or nearly 25 per cent. of the men of the C.E.F. In addition to this it has dealt with 400,000 inquiries, adjustments and complaints.

It is understood that, while veterans will in the future be compelled to use the Government Employment Bureau, those vocationally trained will be handled by the vocational branch of the D.S.C.R.

Excessive politeness seldom has anything in common with the truth.

WHAT SHALL A BOY READ?

Every Tuxis boy or young man has at some time asked himself this question. He has had a quiet afternoon or evening and has been looking around for something to read. Of course, there are some boys who scarcely ever read anything, but these are the exception today.

What a boy reads is a very important part of his life and every boy should ask himself what is going to read the next chance he has.

In the Juvenile Court of Ottawa last month two boys were brought before the judge on the charge of stealing and house-breaking. These boys had been before the court a number of times before and all attempts to change their ways of life had failed. They will probably be sent to the Industrial School as a result of their last offences. The cause of their downfall was the reading of cheap novels of a vicous kind. The wild stories in the books made each an impression on them that in time they tried to carry ont some of the ideas of which they read.

An amusing thing happened in Toronto a few weeks ago. Five boys were brought before the magistrate for throwing snow balls at a street car full of people. This, of course, was not a terrible offence, although it was a rather thoughtless way to spend spare time. The magistrate began to question the boys to see how much they knew about the world in which they lived. He asked, "Where is St. Petersburg?" In the United States." "Where is Cairo?" "In Brazil." "Who was King Edward's father?" "King Alexandra." "What was Sir Wilfred Laurier?" "King's adviser in London." The magistrate before letting the boys go on suspended sentence said: "A very serious crime has been committed against you boys by your not getting an education in this country where it is given free."

Did you get the full meaning of what the judge said? The boys had been arrested for an offense against society, but the judge said: "A very serious crime has been committed against you boys" by society!

Read! Read! What shall I read?

BODY FOUND IN RIVER.

Mystery Surrounding the Death of Andre Nadin.

Latchford, April 27. — The body found floating in the Montreal River near here is that of Andre Nadin, about 21 years of age, a returned soldier, but whose former place of residence is unknown here. Papers found on theclothing by Dr. Kane, the coroner, establish the identity.

Deceased served with the 240th Battalion, enlisting at Renfrew. He had a certificate from the Ontario Government employment agency at Ottawa which gave his destination as Qainze Lakes, and how he came to get into the Montreal River, many miles to the west, cannot be conjectured. Apparently Nadin came to the north country in company with one Hector Brunet, of whom also nothing is known here.

WANTED: A MINISTER

WHY CANADA NEEDS REPRESENTATIVE AT WASHINGTON.

Now That the Dominion Has Taken Its Place Definitely as a Creditor Nation, New Arrangements Will Have to Be Made So That Our Rights Will Not Be Thrust Aside by Greedy and Powerful Business Interests.

FOR some time there have been discussions in Canada concerning the appointment of a Canadian Minister to co-operate with the British authorities at Washington. These discussions have gone so far as to lead the House of Commons at Ottawa to approve the scheme and to vote an appropriation of $50,000 a year. But lately nothing more has been heard of the matter. It is quite certain that there is no opposition to the scheme on the part of either the British or the American Government; on the contrary, it is believed that officials of both countries are in favor of such an appointment, while from a Canadian viewpoint it would seem very desirable.

No country has developed to the same extent as Canada during and after the war. So far as her trade was concerned, before the war Canada was a debtor nation; she emerges from it a creditor nation. So far as her financial status was concerned, before the war Canada financed herself from British sources; now she has borrowed large sums from the United States.

By far the largest of Canada's customers is, of course, Great Britain, and the bulk of her exports are sold to that country. But 80 per cent. of her imports last year came from the United States. Canada's exports in 1919 were valued at $1,294,920,372 and her imports at $941,000,700. Goods valued at $740,580,225 came from the United States, against exports to that country worth $454,686,294.

These figures explain the reason for Canada's biggest problem as related to the United States—namely, the exchange problem. However far Canada may proceed along the path of developing her own resources to the point of becoming as nearly self-supporting as possible, it will always be to the United States that the Dominion will turn to buy such commodities as she requires; however large or small the total of imports may be year by year, it will be the United States who will supply nearly 80 per cent. of them.

For instance, Canada relies largely on America for her coal supply. The recent coal crisis affords a valuable object lesson the necessity for Canadian representation. As soon as the coal strike became formidable and restrictive measures were enforced Canadian railroads and manufacturers found themselves in a very serious position. Their supply of coal was either curtailed or threatened to cease altogether. Representations were made to the British Embassy, whose staff endeavored to familiarise themselves with the standing of the firms and the urgency of the demands before presenting these demands to the State Department, which in turn handed them on to the Fuel Administration. It was indeed fortunate for Canada that at this time there was a Canadian member of the embassy staff, sole survivor of the Canadian War Mission, who was cognizant in a broad sense of Canadian conditions. Canada survived the crisis more through the generous co-operation of the Fuel Administrator than through a real representation of her claims.

Any suggestion that the appointment of a Canadian representative at Washington could be regarded as "the thin edge of the wedge" in the breaking away of Canada from the British commonwealth seems ridiculous. Canada conducted her own war, had her own representative at the Peace Conference, her own representatives signed the treaty and she has made it quite clear that she intends to take her proper place in the League of Nations. She has for a long time run her own affairs to suit her own opinions. Did this make her backward for one day in supporting the Mother Country in defence of the liberty of the world? It is but a natural and business-like corollary that she should favor a scheme to have her own representative in the foreign country with which, in the nature of things, she is doing the most business, and likely always to do the most business.

Canada's representative can surely have no less a status than Minister, ranking next to the Ambassador. Politically, however, the appointment of a Minister from Canada is of less importance. At this present time, at all events, his political activities will probably be confined to cases of deportation and extradition. But it is worth while to call attention to the fact that with Canadian representation many of the immigration difficulties at the border would be avoided. At present each case is a matter of negotiation between the State Department, representing the Bureau of Immigration, and the Canadian authorities at Ottawa, the British Embassy merely assuming the role of a clearing house.

Advantages of the presence of the Minister in connection with fishery agreements, boundaries, and the fostering of the good relations on both sides need not be argued. But when all is said and done, the real reason for the appointment is the commercial advantage to be gained by both countries, and particularly by this country. Let Canada take a leaf out of the book of her mother's experience—the oldest and youngest mother in the world.

Babies That Suck Their Thumbs

HOW is it to be explained that a baby, when still too young to imitate what is going on around it and without being taught, acquires what many doctors and dentists declare to be a very bad habit? Baby mud-wasps which hatch after their mothers and fathers are dead know how to build their complicated mud nests without being taught. Is this human habit of thumb-sucking, which has appeared successively generation after generation in very young babies of a similar instinctive or hereditary character?

"If it is hereditary," writes David Fairchild in the Journal of Heredity, "is it beyond question injurious?

"Does it produce protruding teeth and flattened thumbs, arch the roof of the mouth, or are these changes merely coincidental with the habit? Are parents confident that by employing forcible means to cure the habit they do not run the risk of affecting the child's emotional or moral nature—of making it secretive, or even untruthful? Should not the habit be cured by the ridicule of a child's peers on the playground—by its own self-control?

"If this habit is hereditary, are not others of the same nature, and should not parents in their discipline of children, differentiate between the habits of imitation and those inherited?"

This is what Dr. Alexander Graham Bell has to say about the thumb-sucking habit:

"The mere act of suction could produce no such effect as the protrusion of the teeth. On the contrary, with a partial vacuum in the mouth the atmospheric pressure from the outside would tend to push the teeth in, not out. Theory would indicate that the act of suction should actually be beneficial to the plastic growing mouth by bringing atmospheric pressure into play from outside, tending to consolidate the mouth and oppose any tendency to the spreading of the parts.

"Any spreading action could only be due to pressure applied from within. A child, for example, might press his tongue against the roof of the mouth or against the back of the front teeth and thus produce a pressure which if constantly applied would gradually result in a spreading action, but there is no evidence that a child ever does this.

"Again it is conceivable that a child in the intervals between suction might press his thumb against the back of the front teeth, but here again there is no evidence of active muscular effort. On the contrary the intervals between the acts of suction are characterized by relaxation of the whole muscular system, the child tending to fall asleep and the thumb tending to fall out of the mouth.

"Sucking the thumb is such an instinctive action with very young children that it is probable that most babies, if not all, indulge in the habit during the first year of life. Some people have protruding teeth in adult life and if you examine their past history it is probable that most of them sucked their thumbs in infancy. Hence we are apt to jump to the conclusion that the sucking of the thumb was the cause of the protrusion of the teeth, in spite of the fact that it will be at once perceived by those who know anything about atmospheric pressure that the act of suction could not possibly produce any such effect.

"The idea that suction could produce a spreading action in the mouth is as ridiculous as the very common notion that sucking the thumb causes a child to become cross-eyed."

Mr. Fairchild says that the importance of being able to make or break a habit at will was so drilled into him by one of his friends that it has come to seem one of the greatest things in life.

"I determined that my first baby should have a fair start and should not be allowed to form any undesirable habit," says Mr. Fairchild. "Almost immediately; or certainly when he was only a week or two old, he got his thumb into his mouth. Everybody admitted that this was the beginning of a bad habit. Some predicted that he would make his front teeth protrude and spoil the shape of his mouth, others knew he would ruin the looks of his thumb, and others said that thumb-sucking was connected with internal disorders of a serious character.

"We tried everything we could think of to stop him, but without avail. The second and third baby followed in their brother's footsteps. By this time we began to realize that we were confronted by something which was not so simple as one of the habits of later life and we finally gave up. There seemed to be something almost instinctive in the way this habit resisted our treatment, and we began to suspect a hereditary character in it. We afterwards discovered that the babies' mother had sucked her thumb, and the grandmother had also sucked her thumb when she was a baby.

"This evidence seems strong to his parents that it was natural for the boy to suck his thumb and did not come from sheer wilfulness on his part. If this is indeed an inherited instinct and not a personally acquired habit, the breaking of it may be a long and difficult task, and we should be very sure that it is indeed injurious before we waste our time and worry our poor little babies trying to do so.

"What a weight would be lifted from the shoulders of thousands of young parents could they with clear consciences let their babies suck their thumbs in peace."

A Worm Turns.

Eventually the worm will turn, as his advertisement in an English paper indicates: "Wanted a loud second-hand gramophone—for reprisals."

SMASHING A MONARCHY

GROWTH OF CARBONARISM IN PORTUGAL.

Organization Came Into Existence Nearly a Century Ago For the Purpose of Overthrowing the Monarchy and After Many Reverses, the Members Were Finally Successful When the Republic Was Established.

THE part played by Carbonarism in Portugal in supplanting monarchical by republican government is now no secret. The Abbe Minchini says that the society was established in the country in 1822 or 1823 by the Italian general, Pepe, and his aide-de-camp, Col. Pizza, who made the journey to Lisbon expressly for that purpose, and there is evidence from letters written by them which fell into the hands of the Government that these same officers endeavored, by means of secret societies, to bring about revolution in all the countries of middle Europe.

It has been definitely ascertained that, in 1842, Carbonarism in Portugal was under the direction of Gen. Joachim Pereira Marinho and that branches had been established at Lisbon, Coimbra, Porto, Viristo, Alijubarrota, and Pocheco, and that commissions were despatched to establish other branches in the north and south of Portugal. In 1848, after the revolution of February, which established the second republic in France, Gen. Marinho remitted his power to the Abbe Antoine, known in the order as the "Good Cousin Ganganelli," then residing at Coimbra. In October of the same year the members of the Grand Lodge met and elected Dr. Francis Fernandes Costa as Grand Master, who adopted as mottoes, in addition to the words "Equality" and "Unity" already in use, the words "fraternity" and "Liberty." Carbonarism had developed so strongly in Coimbra and neighborhood that there alone it numbered about 500 members, the majority of whom were fully armed. The movement, however, languished, and though attempts were made in 1853 and 1862 to revive it, it eventually disappeared.

At the time Marinho was in charge of the affairs of the order, a foreigner named Jefferson founded at Porto a society under the name of the Carbonari Illuminates, of which five lodges were formed. This society was a combination of Carbonarism and Illuminism. In 1896 Carbonarism reappeared in Portugal, but it bore no resemblance to the former organization, which had disappeared entirely. The constitution, ritual, and even the methods were quite different.

Toward the end of 1895 there was formed at Lisbon a Masonic Academy, composed principally of students of the higher school in that city, of which society Luz d'Almeida became the Grand Master. It was also known as the Academy Revolutionary Committee. In 1896, Luz d'Almeida, with the approval of some of the members of the Masonic Academy, initiated some of the ordinary citizens, his intention being to merge the Academy into a branch of Carbonarism, which he founded shortly afterward under the title of Vente Jeune Portugal, but the majority of the students did not favor this revolutionary movement and immediately ceased membership. The Jeune Portugal movement, however, still continued and sought to spread its republican ideas by propaganda in cafes, schools, factories, in the columns of newspapers and popular and academic magazines, as well as by meetings in the public streets, where it endeavored to imbue the people with the belief that their liberty was in danger. Luz d'Almeida also established in 1899 a Masonic lodge, which was called the Lodge Montaigne, but it was a departure from Freemasonry proper, its object being to spread republican opinions, though it used every effort to secure the election as Grand Master in 1907 of the republican, Sebastien de Maglhaes Lima.

Considerable progress was afterward made by this new Carbonari movement, and by October 5, 1910, it had 50,000 members spread throughout the country. The initiates were taken from all classes and included doctors, lawyers, professors, engineers, soldiers, naval officers of high rank, public officials, clerks, mechanics, etc. Carbonarism was to be met with everywhere—in the Government, in office, barracks, on board ship, in tramways and railways, and even in the police. It continued, even after the proclamation of the republic, its real object being the consolidation of the Portuguese Republic. Carbonarism was, as it has always been, opposed to the clerical party, and particularly to the religious orders. Several anti-Jesuit and anti-clerical demonstrations at Lisbon can be traced directly to its work and influence. In order to achieve these anti-religious ends, Carbonarism has always been ready and willing to contribue, directly or indirectly, to the cause of secular education, to the assistance of the distressed by all the means in its power, and in its collective form it undoubtedly exercised a great influence.

Luz d'Almeida, in 1908, had been arrested and put into prison, but was shortly afterward released under the amnesty granted after the elimination of King Carlos and the Crown Prince. In 1909 he was again in danger of arrest, but succeeded in escaping to Spain, but was forced to leave there for Paris, where he continued his studies, securing a doctorate, after defending his thesis in two languages—French and English. A man of remarkable scholastic attainments, the son of a professor at the Municipal College at Lisbon, he was, undoubtedly, the prime mover in effecting the transformation of Portugal from a monarchy into a republic.

HOW SPIES DIE.

"Father" Rollin Tells of His War Experiences.

"Father" Rollin, the man who tied Bolo Pasha, Mata Hari, the dancer, and twenty-five other traitors and spies to the stake on the desolate Vincennes parade grounds for execution by a French firing squad, has taken the liberty to talk out of his gruesome school, now that his business is slack.

"Pere" Rollin says his duties first nauseated him, but he got used to it. Between contemplative puffs from a stumpy clay pipe, he continued:

"I saw 27 fall under the bullets of the platoon of poilus — Greeks, Spaniards, Germans, Austrians, Italians, even French and English—and two women.

"Each victim gets a fresh stake, which is a dead tree, stump or branch, for the stake is often shot away."

One method by which Pere Rollin gauges the interest in executions is by the demand for souvenirs in the shape of pieces of rope which tied the condemned man.

"Bolo's end," he went on, "was more sensational. Every poilus of the firing squad had to get a bit of the rope, and I've only got two inches left."

Needless to say this demand for souvenirs was a regular source of income for Father Rollin.

"The man who told the Germans where the Big Bertha shells fell by sending notes to Spain in perfume bottles died in a dramatic fashion. He threw his cap in the air and shouted: "Go on! Fire right at the heart!"

Mata Hari, the Japanese dancer, once the pet of Paris drawing rooms, had been led to think hers was to be only a "make believe execution." Rollin says. That was why she seemed so full of courage, he says, adding, "but the rifles were well charged."

Asked if he kept the wooden stakes, Rollin replied disdainfully: "Keep them? What for? To open a museum? No! I burn them. I'd rather keep warm — and wood is dear."

Russia a Natural Wealth.

As the new experiment works itself out, there will emerge the larger question of the undeveloped resources of Russia, says John Foord, in Asia Magazine. The world knows more about these than it did, but the general impression is a vague conception of vastness without much detailed knowledge. Even the Russia that will emerge from the throes of civil war and the perils of foreign aggression will be the largest connected state in the world, easily fitted to become the foremost state of the world in population, in agriculture, forestal, mineral and industrial production, and therefore in wealth. In European Russia alone there are 550,000,000 acres of forests, which may easily enable her to organize the largest timber and wood-working industries in the world, and the largest paper-making industry as well. These are very largely in North Russia, and Northern Siberia, but farther south, Russia produces immense quantities of wheat, rye, oats, barley, beetroot, mangold, rape, hemp, kaa, apples, pears, plums, cherries and other orchard and garden fruits. Still farther south there is an abundance of maize, rice, cotton, jute, tobacco, tea, almonds, pistachios, pomegranates, oranges, apricots and grapes. Russia's food production per acre has been extremely low, because the great majority of the peasants merely scratch the ground and are entirely ignorant of scientific fertilization. It has been asserted that Russia's production could be doubled and trebled without extending her agricultural area, merely by improving the methods of cultivation.

Stropping Razor on the Hand.

It is claimed that the finest strop for a razor is the fleshy part of one's hand below the little finger. If it is a safety razor blade grasp it between the thumb and first finger of the right hand and strike finger nail and blade at the same time on the fleshy part of the left hand. If you will do it slowly at first the motion becomes automatic. A little vaseline on the cutting edge is said to keep the blades constantly in first-class condition.

Composition of Mica.

Mica, so named from its being easily divided into glistening scales, consists of silica and alumina, associated with magnesia, soda and lime in varying proportions. Thus there are potash mica, consisting of silica, aluminum and potash, and magnesia mica, in which the alumina is partially replaced by magnesia, passing—as the proportion of magnesia increases—into soft talc, which is chiefly composed of silica and magnesia.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Mrs. Phillips Sends an Encouraging Letter to Expectant Mothers

West Philadelphia, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for five months before my baby was born and it has made me much better in health. I was always very ill when my other children were born, but with this one I had a much easier time. He is a big healthy boy now, three years old, and I believe it was Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that made me so well. It is certainly a good medicine for every woman. I cannot say too much in its favor, and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. W. PHILLIPS, 5430 Kingsessing Avenue, West Phila., Pa.

The reason that thousands of women from all parts of the country write such letters is that this famous old root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has brought health and happiness into their lives, once burdened with pain and illness.

For special advice in regard to such ailments write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of its many years experience is at your service.

Etiquette of Fish Feast.

In the Samoan islands, when a fish feast is held, the piece de resistance must be divided up in accordance with a rigid and unvarying etiquette. The heads are assigned to the tribal orators, who are of the high nobility. The flesh just behind the gills is set apart for guests whom the host of the occasion desires to honor. The pectoral fins (a particular delicacy) go to the king. The cuts across the spine just abaft the pectorals (the very parts we should think most desirable) are distributed among the common people. For the chiefs the tail and belly parts are reserved.

Jellies Make Good Drink.

With la grippe and feverish colds, cooling drinks are in demand. Chilled fruit juices are always acceptable, whether it is the juice of raw fruits, such as lemons, limes, oranges or grape fruit or the cooled liquids around cooked dried fruit or preserves. Mix with water, sweeten slightly, and put in a teaspoonful of shaved ice. Tart jellies make a refreshing drink, especially currant jelly. A nourishing drink is made by mixing the water off boiled rice with orange juice or currant jelly and water. Lemonade is made tasty with a dash of nutmeg.

"Silencers" on Ships.

Eight ships now sailing the Pacific Ocean are equipped with great silencers, weighing 8,000 pounds each, the invention of Hiram Percy Maxim, famous as the inventor of the gun silencer bearing his name. If successful, this newest "Maxim silencer" may stimulate the tendency toward general substitution of the speedier, more economical, oil-burning vessels driven by the super-powerful engines of the Diesel type, for the present-day steamers.

"The motor-driven ship is the ship of the future," said Mr. Maxim recently. "However, in the past there has been one great disadvantage, the terrific noise of the motors. The new silencer we expect will solve that problem."

Mr. Maxim said that, inasmuch as his patents have not been issued, he cannot disclose the construction of his new invention. However, in general principles it is not unlike other Maxim silencers, depending on accomplishing its work by absorbing the recoil and hence silencing the terrific exhaust. Mr. Maxim says it is not dissimilar in design to the smaller Maxim silencers on the market for several years for use on motor and power boats.

New York's Auto Accidents.

During the year 1919, over six hundred people were killed in motor accidents in New York City; while in Chicago, the nation's second most populous centre, over four hundred lives were lost from the same cause, in the same period.

Mortality figures issued by New York State show that for 10,550 deaths resulting from automobile accidents, seven hundred were the result of reckless driving, eight hundred and fifty were due to defective mechanism, and nine thousand to the carelessness of pedestrians.

Keeping Warm in Finland.

In many ways the Finns are a very queer people. It is during the terrible cold months that the Finns revel in the mighty ovens that fill one corner of every kitchen and often loom up large and vastly impressive in the other rooms of a Finn home as well. The tops of these monster stoves are perfectly flat, and steps lead up on one side. When the weather becomes bitterly cold and bleak, the entire Finnish family will take quilts and pillows and, mounting to the top of the big heater, spread down their bedding and sleep very comfortably and contentedly on the hard hot bricks until morning.—Nevis C. Winter, in Christian Herald.

Discipline Essential.

Those who escape discipline are to be pitied, but we may be sure the escape will not be for long. The order of the world provides for this without our interference. In most cases we had much better be concerned in holding our hands off or in providing alleviations for the hours between these needful buffetings by the heavy hand of fate. The discipline of others, in other words, ordinarily is none of our business. We may safely and wisely leave it to parents, school masters, police and to the hard knocks of life.

MILLBROOK BOYS MAKE GOOD.

Put Up Remarkably Good Exhibition of Athletic Numbers at "Y."

A remarkably good showing was made at the local Y. M. C. A. last night by the Service Group of Tuxis Boys and Trail Rangers of the Millbrook Methodist Church, who came to the city on the 5:30 train to take part in the national indoor athletic contests. The party was in charge of Rev. Mr. Tucker, and another party of those who could not come by train arrived later by car in charge of Mr. L. J. Byam, mentor of the group.

Considering the absence of equipment necessary for training and preparation for such contests, the boys did well and would make a favorable showing against many boys who have a gymnasium at hand and do appreciate it as they should. The totals scored in the five events were as follows:

E. Burnham	466
L. Byam	406
R. Hutchinson	402
J. Davidson	338
B. Dawson	334
E. Tucker	322

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

MUNICIPALITIES MEET ON POWER QUESTION

American Commissioner to Proceed to Europe With This Object

A meeting of the Municipalities of Central Ontario is taking place in the Council Chambers, Peterborough, this afternoon to consider a resolution brought forward by Mr. T. H. Stinson of Lindsay, calling for the taking over of the Hydro-Electric system by the municipalities. Ald. G. N. Gordon took the chair and those representing the various municipalities were: Mayor McIntyre, Ald. Gainey, Ald. Gordon, City Clerk Armstrong and Mr. Hicks, chairman Utilities Commission, all of Peterborough; Messrs. B. Ewing, Cobourg, W. Corbett, Cobourg, F. Boyes, Napanee, Vickery, Oshawa; T. S. Stinson, Lindsay, G. Spence, Lakefield, Ferguson, Lindsay, Elliott, Kingston and Capt. Marling of Lakefield.

At the time of going to press the meeting was awaiting the arrival of the representatves of the Hydro-Electric Commission.

The Resolution

"Whereas the Government of the Province of Ontario has purchased the properties of the Electric Power Company referred to hereafter as the Central Ontario System;

"And whereas the said properties are now operated by the Hydro-electric Power Commission of Ontario on behalf of the Province of Ontario;

"And whereas the municipalities in Western Ontario and elsewhere own their power systems which are operated by the commission for them and on their behalf, and own and operate their own distributing plants;

"And whereas the commission has operated the Central Ontario System on behalf of the Government for a sufficiently long time to demonstrate that it is desirable for the municipalities to become owners of the system in the same manner as elsewhere;

"And whereas the municipalities understand that the Government is prepared to transfer the Central Ontario System to be owned and operated as in the case of the Western Ontario and other systems:

"It is therefore resolved that the municipalities comprising the Central Ontario System request, and they do hereby request, that the Government transfer, the properties known as the Central Ontario System to the municipalities, to be operated for them and on their behalf by the Hydro-electric Power Commission in the same manner as in the case of the Western Ontario and other systems;

"And it is resolved further that the Government of the Province of Ontario be requested to accept as consideration for such transfer, and in payment for the properties, 40-year bonds of the commission bearing interest at the rate of four per cent (4%) per annum.

"And it is resolved further that a representative deputation from the respective municipalities be delegated present this resolution and ask the Government to give its consent so that bylaws may be submitted to the various municipalities interested to enable them to carry out the same."

City Clerk Armstrong, Peterborough, in supporting the resolution, gave a lengthy explanation of the system. He pointed out that under the present system the municipalities were paying all the costs and would never own the systems, but that under the plan which the resolution called for the costs would be the same and that at the end of 40 years the municipalities would own their own systems.

Mr. Vickery, of Oshawa, agreed with Mr. Armstrong's views. Sir Adam Beck stated, in Oshawa, that they made $12,000 out of the town of Oshawa last year. If he made that out of one municipality what would he make out of all? said Mr. Vickery. He believed that the municipalities east of Toronto should be in the same position as the municipalities of Western Ontario. The Eastern municipalities must have been asleep. He thought that there was nothing to be lost by taking over this system. If we accepted the idea they would own the plants in 40 years, while if they did not they would be paying the same and would never own the plants. His town would be in hearty accord with the project as now present.

Mr. Boyes, of Napanee, wanted to know how the amount of bonds that each municipality should guarantee would be arrived at.

Mr. Armstrong answered that it would be according to the amount of power used.

Mr. Hicks, Peterborough, chairman of Utilities Commission, was called upon to state his views. He spoke mostly on the operation of the Peterborough distributing plan. In 1914 city took over by arbitration the Peterborough Light and Power Company's plant.

Their experience up to the present time was that the citizens were paying less than to the private company and at the end of thirty years they would own the plant. At the end of that time, according to present calculations, they would also have an amount of money sufficient to replace the entire service.

At the present time the municipalities were paying all the charges, and still would not own the plants. He felt very strongly with regard to pressing this matter and seeing it carried through.

It would be a disturbing feature at this stage if no protest was made to the attempt emanating from Niagara Falls to tax public utilities. He thought this point might well be considered at this meeting. It would simply be a matter of raising rates to meet the proposed taxation.

Capt. Mowry of Lindsay stated that Lindsay had no experience with reference to the working of hydro systems, as they were just entering into an agreement with the Hydro Commission.

Mr. Corbett of Cobourg stated that his municipality was in a similar position to Napanee. He thought the plan was good policy.

The question of gas plants entered the discussion and Mr. Hicks was called upon to give his views. He felt strongly that the Peterborough Utilities Commission should handle electric appliances to such a large extent that the gas plant would scrap itself. According to figures supplied by the engineer, it was shown that an electric stove amounted to the same as gas at 65c.

Mr. Elliott, Kingston, said that it was only out of politeness and courtesy to the kind invitation received that they came today. Kingston held a unique position re Hydro power. They had a 20-year contract with the Hydro-Electric Commission with still eighteen years to go. Under those conditions they would require to see some real financial benefit from the scheme before they would give it their support. It would be well to thoroughly grasp the situation and know first where they were going to land.

At the time of going to press, Mr. Elliott still held the floor.

In Confidence.

The ancient Greeks dedicated the rose to Harpocrates, the God of Silence, and garlands of roses were draped over the doors of rooms in which debates or conferences were taking place in token that words which were spoken "sub rosa"—under the rose—were secret and not to be repeated outside. Hence our use of the term to denote something told in confidence.

Explains Sodom and Gomorrah.

Bricks cemented together with dried petroleum have curiously enough, been found in large quantities in Nineveh and Babylon. The oil-bearing and sulphur-impregnated shales of the valley of the Dead sea, which are now being developed, supplied the "brimstone and fire" which destroyed Sodom and Gomorrah.

Family Men Favored.

In one chemical factory in Switzerland, which is representative of other chemical and dye concerns, married men receive 10 per cent more a week than single men engaged in the same occupation, and still above this married men receive 54 cents a week extra for each child under fifteen years of age.

The "Hop Scotch" Girl

By GENEVIEVE ULMAR

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

It was a pleasant, lively scene and carried Nevil Brookes back to his early youth. Seated in a comfortable lounging chair on the porch, he had a full view of half a dozen little girls engaged in the old-fashioned game of "hop scotch."

Upon the smooth cement pavement the group had drawn in chalk the conventional body of the subdivided diagram, rounding it with "the moon," to attain which, by hopping on one foot and speeding a flat pebble without resting on a line was to score a victory. Suddenly the play suspended

"Oh, there's Marty Doane—she will show us how to flip into the moon!" arose in a tumultuous shout.

Brookes leaned over toward the street to make out a girl of about seventeen, exquisitely dainty in form and feature with a wealth of sunny golden hair like an aureole, and lithe and graceful in all her movements. A rippling smile irradiated her lips and she welcomed the juvenile onslaught with caressing kindliness.

The delectable Marty's loving and accomodating nature showed fully as she took her position at "goal," set the pebble given her, and proceeded to demonstrate her capability as a hop scotch expert. Brookes watched her with profound admiration.

Just then an overdressed, slatternly woman appeared, a great, hulking young man at her side. She darted forward as she made out the girl.

"What's this?" she shouted at Marty. "Nice actions for a woman grown, and promised!"

"Promised?" cried the girl scornfully. "Who to?"

"To him, Dan Reeves," and the woman indicated her companion.

"Who promised me?" challenged Marty.

"I did; and didn't he give you a ring?"

"You mean he forced it on me," flared up the girl. "There is his cheap gift!" and tearing a tawdry circlet from her finger she flung it to the pavement, gave it a blow with her toe, and added: "If he ever tries to kiss me again I'll kill him, and if you lay your hands on me I'll run away!" and like some proud empress, the aroused girl left the spot, her head high in the air.

Nevil Brookes was recovering from a fit of sickness and had sought rest and quiet in the boarding house where he was passing his convalescence. He asked his landlady about the girl who had interested him.

"Oh, you mean Marty Doane," spoke the woman. "Poor girl! but good girl. Her father died, leaving her to the mercies of a cruel stepmother, who is anxious to get rid of her care and has tried to favor the suit of that Reeves fellow, but Marty despises him."

There was a little park that Brookes strolled in every morning, and the next day he was attracted by the sound of low sobbing beyond some shrubbery. He went over to the spot. Upon a bench, a bundle at her feet and weeping bitterly, was the hop scotch girl.

"Are you in trouble, miss?" spoke Brookes gently. "I have seen you before, and we live in the same neighborhood."

Marty read sympathy and interest in the clear, open face. "I am going away from my stepmother and the man she is trying to make me marry," she said, "and I shall never come back. Oh, sir, is it very far to Wickham?"

"Why do you ask that?" inquired Nevil.

"Because the only friend I have in the world lives there. She was Nellie Foster, and she married Ned Wilton three years ago, and they settled down at Wickham. A year ago Nellie wrote me that they had a darling little baby and I love children, and I know that Nellie would give me a home."

A sudden impulse urged the tender-hearted Reeves to assist this homeless waif. His own life was lonely and her distress moved him to pity.

"If you will trust me, I will see you safely to Wickham," he said.

"Oh, sir, will you?" cried Marty rapturously. "I am sure Nellie will pay you back for the fare."

"Never mind that," said Reeves, and her childish delight looking from the car window and hopeful eagerness when they reached Wickham revealed the untutored soul of the trustful girl.

They reached the former home of the Wiltons to find a sign "for rent" on the neat little cottage, and a neighbor informed them that the family had moved to a farm "somewhere out West."

Marty dropped to a step, a picture of forlorn despair. "Oh," she sobbed, "what a life it would have been to have my old friends, and the baby, and this beautiful garden. It would be like being in heaven! And now I am worse off than ever!" and she broke down utterly.

"Look up in my face, Marty," spoke Reeves seriously. "I am as much alone in the world as you are, but I think experience a mutual trustfulness. You crave a home of comfort and happiness. Will you share it with me, as my wife, right here and now?"

And Nevil Brookes, with a grateful, loving life partner smiling and singing all day long in their little paradise of a home, never regretted that he had wedded "the hop scotch girl."

The Midnight Man

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

When Robert Ward was taken ill in the boarding house of Mrs. Mary Durand, that motherly hearted lady was solicitous and helpful. There was something about the silent, dignified man that enforced respect, and his attentions to her daughter, Lucille, delicate and sincere, had won the latter, too.

Mrs. Durand was a widow and had a hard time getting along and Lucille worked with a zest and uncomplainingly. She was educated and refined.

During Ward's illness mother and daughter divided the most perfect care of him. In addition to that Mr. Ward loved music, and it was his delight afternoons to leave the door of his room open while Lucille in the parlor played for him his favorite tunes.

Just as Ward was getting well Mrs. Durand was taken ill and died. While saying little, as was his way, Ward deeply sympathized in the fervent grief of the stricken orphan girl. Mrs. Durand had died deeply in debt. He volunteered to clear up her affairs as much as possible without distressing Lucille.

"It will be necessary to sell all of the furniture and lease in order to pay the debts," he said.

"I don't know what I shall do," spoke Lucille depressedly.

"I have tried to think out a way for you," replied Ward. "I am a man of few words and I can condense my recommendation briefly. Marry me."

She regarded him in profound wonderment. Then a slight flush overspread her sorrowful face, but she remained silent.

"You know little of me," proceeded Ward, "and I shall tell you nothing more than that I am an honest, respectable man of clear record with a great liking for you and a fair income. I do not suppose you feel anything deeper for me than the kindly interest in everybody that is natural to you, but I shall make it the object of my life to bring you happiness."

They were wedded and settled down in a pretty cottage at Everdeen, a quiet suburb. Ward was all that was chivalric and thoughtful, but he never explained the business that took him each afternoon to the city and he always came home on the last train. It got to be so that the neighbors began to get curious and designated him as "the midnight man," and all this secretiveness and mystery troubled Lucille. She grew still more uneasy when, one day accompanying her husband on the train to the city, as Ward went forward to the smoker one of two men passing him in the aisle said:

"Wasn't that Bob Ward who was in the state penitentiary for so many years?"

A nameless dread chilled Lucille's heart. Penitentiary! Had her husband been an inmate of a penal institution—a criminal, a convict?

A few days later Lucille endured new distress of spirit. At their little home her husband had a room which held some bookcases, a desk, and which was his special den. Lucille found the door open. She crossed the room to open the window for ventilation and could not help but notice in an open cabinet weapons, handcuffs, and what she decided was a set of burglar's tools. She fled precipitately from this Bluebeard closet and was wretched and tearful all that day.

It was late that night when Lucille, awaiting the return of her husband, heard a strange noise in the den. She threw open the door of the den and the light from the other room revealed a startling sight.

A man had got half through the outside window and the sash, with an old-fashioned catch, had imprisoned him there, his body half in the room. He could be nothing less than a thief, Lucille realized. She acted speedily, bravely. Seizing the pair of handcuffs from the cabinet she rushed at him and slipped them over his wrists and then held him at bay with a leveled weapon.

"Come quick!" she cried breathlessly, as she heard the footsteps of her husband on the porch, and fluttered forth her sensational story as Ward entered the room.

"One of the spies of the Trust, eh," spoke Ward, after a keen glance at the captive. "After some of my incriminating papers? Well, they this day passed into the hands of the government, and the case will come on tomorrow. Your occupation is gone, my man, for after a year's work I have traced down the hundreds of thousands of dollars of which the Trust has swindled the government."

He coolly released the captive and thrust him out of the house. Then he turned to Lucille with his customary welcoming kiss.

"My brave little woman!" he commended, "you faced a desperate criminal, for that man is a dangerous convict, once in my keeping when I was a prison warden."

"And not an inmate?" With a wild cry of relief and joy Lucille threw herself into the arms of the husband she had distrusted. A few days later Robert Ward received a large fee for his services in running down the officials of a high up but dishonest Trust, and Lucille never told the man she now loved and trusted so devotedly of the dark hours when she had been haunted by an apparent mystery in his life.

The Independent State of [illegible] had applied for membership in the League of Nations.

The visitors will come in two special trains, one bearing Ontario delegates, and the other those from Quebec and the Maritime Provinces.

"Get acquainted" will be the order of the day as soon as the delegates reach the city, for that purpose Monday morning being left vacant. For the afternoon there will be a motor trip around Burrard Peninsula to Coquitlam, and the party will be the guests of New Westminster while passing through the Royal City.

Morning and afternoon sessions for business will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, the delegates being entertained, it is anticipated, by various public bodies, at luncheon each day. Among these will be, in all probability, the Board of Trade, the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs, and at some early stage of the gatherings Premier Oliver will extend a welcome on behalf of the Province.

A trip up the Inlet to the North Arm will be one of the most delightful events of the convention.

On Wednesday evening the annual banquet always one of the most important features of the convention, will be held in the ball room of Hotel Vancouver.

This function will end the proceedings as far as Vancouver is concerned, and on Thursday morning the party will take boat to Victoria and in the afternoon will be taken to the magnificent gardens of R. B. Butchart, at Tod Inlet. In the evening there will be a ball or reception and on Friday morning there will be a motor trip around Esquimalt and Gordon Head.

Meanwhile the ladies of the party will be well looked after and a series of pleasant gatherings for their delectation are being arranged. One of these will be a trip by boat to Wigwam Inn, on the North Arm, and some of the ladies' organizations have other entertainments under way.

There will be no formal function when the party returns from Victoria, as the members will go immediately to their trains, en route for home.

All these plans are tentative at present, but the above is a general outline of the suggested entertainments.

Business matters to come before the convention are under consideration by the local branch of the association, which has 162 members in British Columbia. There are 4,100 members in the Dominion.

ARABS AND BRITISH CLASH

Cairo, April 27.— Fighting is reported to be taking place between Arabs and British troops in Palestine. No details have been received here.

Two thousand Bedouins attacked Semakn, south of Lake Tiberias from which the small British force withdrew after a fight in which they suffered a few casualties.

The incident was not important according to the official view, being merely a local development of recent Bedouin cattle forays.

A deputation representing the Canadian Manufacturers' Association waited on Premier Drury and Hon. Walter Rollo yesterday to request several amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act.

HUGE DRIVE NOW TO STAMP OUT CANCER

OFFENSIVE AGAINST ONE OF MAN'S TERRIBLE SCOURGES.

A great medical offensive against one of the most terrible scourges of mankind, cancer, will be launched in this city May 13 and will be pursued until May 29 in a series of thirty-two public meetings. The whole medical profession, led by the most eminent of its members, will spend two weeks and a half in attempting to increase public understanding of the mysterious disease which causes one death in every ten persons more than 40 years of age.

Cancer can be stopped. That is the big fact that will be emphasized in the public meetings to be directed here by th American Society for the Control of Cancer. It can be arrested. While the medical profession does not yet know the cause of cancer, and while doctors as yet know no cure, they do know that it can be checked and probably held if people can be taught to recognize the disease in its first stages and to seek medical attention before it is too late.

The cardinal points of the New York city campaign, according to F J. Osborne, secretary of the society will be:

1. Cancer is not a blood lisease, but always starts as a local affair. Hence cancer can be cured by removal if discovered and treated early enough.

2. Cancer in the beginning may cause no pain or other symptoms of ill health.

3. Cancer is probably not hereditary.

4. Cancer is not contagious.

5. No up-todate doctor will treat a condition that might mean cancer without thorough examination.

6. The cancer patient must learn to seek treatment as promptly as a patient with appendicitis.

Among the physicians who will address the professional meetings between May 13 and May 29 are: Dr. Harvey R. Gaylord, director of the State Institute for the Study of Malignant Diseases, Buffalo, N. Y.; Dr. Howard Lithienthal, attending surgeon at the Mount Sinai and Bellevue hospitals, New York City; Dr. Robert B. Greenough, director of the Cancer Commission at Harvard Medical School; Dr. James Ewing, director of Cancer Research at the Memorial Hospital, New York City; Dr. Francis Carter Wood, director of the George Crocker Special Research Fund, Columbia University; Dr. Otto V. Huffman, dean of the Long Island Medical College; Dr. William Francis Campbell, 394 Clinton street, Brooklyn, and Dr. John O. Polak, 297 Clinton avenue, Brooklyn. These meetings will be under the auspices of the Academy of Medicine, the New York County Medical Society and the Kings County Medical Society.

OUR PHONE TROUBLES NOTHING TO VIENNA'S

BUSINESS MEN DEMAND PRIVATE CONTROL OF WIRE SYSTEMS.

Vienna, April 28.— Canadians who sometimes may be dissatisfied with the telephone, telegraph, or postal service in America should come here if they want to see a realy disorganized means of communication.

So demoralized is the telephone service of Vienna that a great mass meeting of business men has been held and has demanded that thsi service be taken from the Government bureaucracy and turned over to private control.

It is almost impossible to get central, and once obtained the line usually is cut after less than one minute's conversation. The telephone employees assert they are overworked, undernourished and the whole equipment run down. The Minister of Communications admitted to the mass meeting that the telephone and post and telegraph system generally had railed and that the post office had paid more than 15,000,000 crowns last year for stolen parcels. Armed guards are now placed on all mail transport.

The worst factor in the situation is said to be the inability of officials to enforce discpline under the present government where varous councils of workmen and soldiers operate to make the employees lax and independent.

One man who attempted to telephone from a postal sub-station was told by the attendant the other day to go to a public automatic station and "don't worry me."

TAKE SALTS TO FLUSH KIDNEYS

Eat less meat if you feel Backachy or have Bladder trouble.

Meat forms uric-acid which excites and overworks the kidneys in their efforts to filter from the system. Regular eaters of meat must flush the kidneys occasionally. You must relieve them like you relieve your bowels; removing all the acids, waste and poison, else you feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment; the channels often get irritated, obliging you to get up two or three times during the night.

To neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a table-spoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine and bladder disorders disappear. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive; harmless and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then, thus avoiding serious kidney and bladder diseases.

RUSSIAN GRAIN PLENTIFUL

Col. Malone, M. P., Finds Soviet Not Unwilling to Supply France

Parsi, April 28.— "Soviet Russia has plenty of grain, and is willing to consider the question of fulfilling the obligations to France contracted by the Czarist regime," said Colonel Malone, M. P., an authority on Russia who has just returned from a tour of that country.

"The French Imperialists may imagine they can get more from a reactionary Government, but they are making a mistake. They should trust the Soviets immediately, in order at least to settle conditions in Europe.

"It is in the interest of all allied governments to follow the example of Premier Nitti, who is far sighted, and is doing his utmost to arrive at peace and trade relations with Russia."

CAR TROUBLES IN COURT

People who sell their cars and do not inform the department at Toronto are inviting trouble for themselves, according to the results of a Police Court case this morning. Gordon Fitzgerald faced a charge of disposing of his car without supplying the necessary notice of the sale to the Department of Highways, Toronto.

It appears that the car in question had changed hands three times, and while the police took the number on account of a breach of traffic bylaws, they were unable to locate the offender. Fitzgerald was fined $10 and costs, and it was intimated by the Police Department that numerous other cases would be prosecuted unless the parties got busy and gave notice of the sale of their cars.

A local youth was fined $1 and costs for a breach of the traffic bylaw. He refused to stop when requested to do so by a traffic control officer.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

sor, Newhinney of West Bruce, Celder of North Oxford, Hall of Parry Sound, Govenlock of North Huron, Curry of South-East Toronto, McLeod of Stormont, and McAlpine of Brockville throwing their votes against the amendment. The Liberal "Yeas" were backed up by the following Lobor men: Homuth (South Waterloo), MacBride (South Brant), Halcrow (East Hamilton), Swayze (Niagara Falls), MacNamara (Riverdale).

Demanded a Vote.

An amusing feature of the vote on the Brackin amendment was that it was demanded not by the Liberals but by the Conservatives. When the amendment was put it was declared "lost," and there was no call for the yeas and nays. But the Conservatives, having been voted down by a solid Liberal block, were not minded to allow the Liberals to escape going on record on their own amendment, and Hon. Mr. Henry demanded the yeas and nays.

Mr. Brackin returned the compliment on the main motion when it appeared likely to be declared carried without the yeas ond nays. If he expected to line the Conservatives up against the referendum he was disappointed, for nearly all of them voted for it.

The final vote may be indicated by giving the names of those who voted against it, since there were but a dozen of them: Halcrow, MacNamora, Macbride, Henry, East York; Lennox, North York; McCrea, of Sudbury; Ecclestone, of Muskoka; Ross, of Kingston; O'Neill, of Southeast Toronto; Pincard, of East Ottawa; Rennie, of South Huron, and Ammassen, North Waterloo.

All the other members of the House with the exception of the absentees voted for the resolution. Those not present were: Hon. Mr. Ferguson; Brig.-Gen. Hogarth and John Joynt, of North Huron; Bragg, West Durham; Godfrey, West York; Greenlaw, St. Catharines; Ireload, South Hastings; J. B. Johnstone, East Simcoe; W. J. Johnston, South Lanark; McCreary, North Lanark—who moved the resolution; Oke, East Lambton, and Racine, of Russell—six Conservatives, four U.F.O., one Labor and one Liberal.

C. F. Swayze, the Liberal whip, skipped the last vote, but was called to time. "If I have to vote," he said, "I will support the resolution."

The last hours of the debate were not distinguished by particularly brilliant speaking, though both Mr. Dewart and the Prime Minister spoke.

Mr. Drury Speaks.

Mr. Drury stated with emphasis that the verdict of the House as o result of the free and open discussion would be worth ten times as much as a fettered party vote would have been.

The Premier declared that the Government was on sound ground in accepting the legal opinions given, but even if those opinions were not sound he was confident that if the people voted the Dominion Government would not dare to refuse to make the law opply if it did not. There was only one chance out of a hundred that if the people voted that their verdict would not be made effective, and they were prepared as a Government to accept that one chance.

Finally Mr. Drury declared that his Government would see to it thot the will of the people would be made effective. "If the Dominion Government does not implement the wish of the people, and it is within the power of this Government to do so, it will implement that verdict."

U.S. OLYMPIC TEAM SHUTS OUT SWEDES

AMERICANS REGARDED AS SURE WINNERS OF SECOND PLACE

Antwerp, April 27.—The American hockey team tonight defeated the Swedes in the Olympic contests by a score of 7 to 0.

The first half ended with a count of five for the Americans.

The American team will compete Wednesday night against the Czecho-Slovaks for second place, the Canadians having already won the championship.

The Swedes put up a strong defensive game tonight. One of the features of the American play consisted of three remarkable goals scored from long range by Geran in one minute of the first half.

New York, April 27.—Commenting on the winning of the Olympic hockey championship by the Winnipeg Falcons last night The Evening World says today: "The victory only serves to strengthen the opinion that Canada produces the greatest hockey players in the world."

GEDDES REFERRED TO THE SINN FEIN POLICY

STATEMENT OF BRITISH AMBASSADOR AT WASHINGTON EXPLAINED

London, April 28. — The question was raised in the House of Common yesterday whether the Government's attention had been drawn to "the recent oxcial statement of the new British Ambassador to the United States, in which he declared that proposals for the secession of Ireland from the British Empire had been rejected."

Andrew Bonar Law replied that the Ambassador undoubtedly referred in his speech to the well-known secessionist policy of the Sinn Feiners, which, he said, of course, had been repudiated by the Government. It was never considered by the Cabinet, Mr. Bonar Law declared.

On his arrival in the United States recently Sir Auckland Geddes, the new British Ambassador, referring to the Irish question, said in a written statement:

"It should, I think, be known that proposals for the secession of Ireland from the British Empire have been submitted to the British Cabinet, but, as announced by the Prime Minister in the House of Commons, have been rejected."

The couriers, who were travelling by airplane from Koenigsberg to Bitebsk, in Soviet Russia, were forced to land in the Baltic province.

PRICE OF POTATOES IS NOT JUSTIFIED

OTTAWA WOMEN WANT TO KNOW WHAT BECAUSE OF BIG CROP

Ottawa, April 28.—At a largely-attended meeting of women in the city hall yesterday afternoon it was decided not to purchase potatoes until the price is reasonable.

Official's Argument Unsatisfying.

C. W. Baxter, fruit commissioner of the Department of Agriculture, gave figures intended to indicate that various causes had operated to contribute to high prices in potatoes, such as "late blight" in some parts of Canada; the wholesale destruction of potatoes in the Prairie Provinces by frost; the poor harvest of potatoes in Saskatchewan and Alberta, when only fifty per cent. of the crop was gathered in, and varions other contributory causes, but this answer was not very clear in reply to Mrs. Adam Shortt's pertinent enquiry as to why, considering that all the evils enumerated by Mr. Baxter had happened during the fall and that potatoes from the same crop were sold last Christmas at $1.65 a bag, they have jumped to over $5 a bag with all those evils eliminated.

Bought at $1.85 at Christmas.

Mr. Baxter queried the $1.65 price but a Mr. Ross, who also spoke, said that he had bought potatoes himself last Christmas at $1.85, and openly asserted there was no possible justification for the present abnormal price.

R. B. Faith of the Ottawa Farm Journal, also vainly tried to stem the rising tide of indignation against the present high price when he, too, suggested there was a great scarcity of potatoes in Eastern Ontario, and that farmers were even having to buy them for their own tables.

LIGHTEN BURDEN EX-SERVICE MEN

ACCEPTABLE AMENDMENTS TO SOLDIERS' SETTLEMENT ACT APPROVED

REPAYMENT OF LOANS EASIER

NO PAYMENT ON UNIMPROVED LAND REQUIRED FOR TWO YEARS

Ottawa, April 28.—Some amendments to the Soldiers' Settlement Act, which will lighten the burden of the ex-service man who has acquired land under provisions of the statute and desires to secure stock and equipment, were approved in the Commons yesterday. They make easier the terms of repayment of loans granted to the soldier settler for the buying of stock and equipment by extending the period for repayment from four to six years. The settler upon unimproved land will make no payment either of interest or principal of stock or equipment loans for two years. For one year thereafter he will pay interest only. For three years, then, he will make payments sufficient to meet interest and wipe out the principal of the debt. The settler on improved lands will make no payment of principal or interest for two years. Thereafter he will make annual payments sufficient to discharge both principal and interest in the remaining four years of the six-year period. Another amendment will enable the Soldier Settlement Board, when it improves land to make it suitable for occupation by a soldier settler, to add the cost of the improvements to the selling price of the land and make the whole payable in twenty-five years. Heretofore while the price of the land has been spread over twenty-five years, the cost of improvements has had to be promptly met. Another amendment makes it clear that women, ordinarily resident in Canada, who served with the Imperial or Allied armies as well as nurses who served with the Canadian army, may enjoy the benefits of the Soldier Settlement Act.

FOOTBALL NOTES

The Machine Gun Company defeated the Caledonians in a practice game last night by a score of 2-1. [illegible] this is a surprise it must be discounted by the fact that several Caledonian players were playing on the Machine Gun team so as to make up the required number. The Emma Gees were represented by Flowers, N. Metcalfe, Crowe, Ferry, Nicklesh, Hall, Warman, Davies, Fraser, Bell and Metcalfe.

While nothing can be judged from last night's game it is quite likely that this team will present stiff opposition to the Scotchmen when they meet them in the schedule games. On Thursday, the Machine Gunners are booked to meet the DeLaval and this game should be very interesting inasmuch as it will disclose the real strength of both the DeLaval and Emma Gee teams of which little is known of either up to the present.

MEXICANS BATTLE FOR OIL FIELDS

PORT OF MANZANILLO INVADED BY REBELS— REVOLT SPREADS

Headquarters First Divisional Army, Sonora, Mexico, April 27.— An army of Obregon adherents under command of Gen. Gomez, has been battling with Carranza forces under Gen. Murquia for three days for the possession of the Tampico oil fields, and the fall of this territory is expected hourly.

Hermosillo, Mexico, April 27.— Two Carranza gunboats were ordered to the west coast to bombard the town of Quaymas, now held by the Sonora authorities, according to reports reaching officials of the Sonora secessionist government from secret agents in Mexico City.

The coast line about Quaymas has been mined in anticipation of an attack from the sea.

Agua Prieta, Sonora, April 27.— Manzanillo, a port of the State of Colima, is menaced by revolutionary forces, according to an official bulletin issued by the military authorities here.

The bulletin said that Gen. Renteria Luviano, who originally revolted in the State of Michoacan, had invaded Colima and was threatening the capital city, Colima and Manzanillo.

Sonora officials said they believed Cuaymas joined the revolution when the State seceded without a battle. The port of Topolobampo was taken by Gen. Angel Flores during the first week of his campaign in that State, they said.

Sonora officialls said they believed the desire for American warships at Mexican ports was due to the fear of foreigners that the ships of Carranza might bombard the city. Naval bombardment is expected at Mazatlan, the present objective of Gen. Flores, it was stated.

According to the bulletin, Colonel Roldolfo Goltives, who took up arms against Carranza in Nuevo Leon, has broken rail communication between the border, Nuevo Leon and the Gulf of Mexico. Gen. Flores, commander of the first division of the northwest, with headquarters at Culiacan, is reported to be moving toward Mazatlan with advanced forces at Quila, about seventy miles from the port.

Various other military leaders with bands of varying sizes are declared by the announcement to have joined the revolution in the States of Jalisco, Vera Cruz, Tabasco and Tamaulipas.

HAPPY POLLYANNA COMING TO THE GRAND

BOOK IS EXCEEDINGLY POPULAR—THE PLAY GOES ONE BETTER.

Not in years has so much genuine heart interest centred in an American book or play as is now directed toward "Pollyanna," which comes to the Grand Theatre on Saturday, matinee and night, with an excellent cast assembled, by the Pollyanna Producing Company.

The "Pollyanna" stories, which have enormous circulation in many lands, were written by Eleanor H. Porter, of Boston. "Pollyanna" was dramatized by Catherine Chisholm Cushing, the author of "A Widow by Proxy," "The Real Thing," "Kitty MacKay" and Billie Burke's "Jerry." The comedy is in every sense one of fascinating interest and its urgent appeal is to those who have been through the mill of experience. It does not deal with sex problems, nor morbid themes, and is for the many who seek the theatre for real diversion, for harmless merriment and appealing sentiment. And it is full of surprises. The play goes with the spirit of glad philosophy. Pollyanna, a young girl, the orphaned daughter of a western missionary, has gone to live with a crusty maiden aunt in the city. The aunt did not desire her, but through her persistence in playing what she calls "the glad game," Pollyanna not only won the heart of her aunt, but transformed all the grouches of the town. "The glad game" is simple. The player simply tries to be glad over everything; it matters not what happens. So keen is the interest in many cities where "Pollyanna" has played, that local ministers have preached the philosophy of Pollyanna from their pulpits. Young people all over America have organized what are called "Glad Clubs" to attend the play and drink in the beautiful philosophy of the buoyant girl whose gladness converted an entire community into one of happiness.

Lolitta Westman plays the title-role and those prominent in her support are: Pacie Ripple, Wallace Roberts, Earla Elverson, Augusta Durgeon, Peter M. Maguire, Audrey Wood, Geraldine Russel, William Day and others.

MISS LAKE AGAIN A HERNE HEROINE

FOLLOWING "SHORE ACRES" SHE WILL PORTRAY STRONG PART IN "INDISCREET WIVES"

"Indiscreet Wives" is the title decided upon for Metro's next big special producton with Alice Lake at the head of a notable cast. The picture is an adaption of a stage play by Julie Herne, daughter of the late James A. Herne. Its original title was "An Outsider" John E. Ince, who directed Miss Lake in Finis Fox's powerful melodrama, "Should a Woman Tell?" will again guide this brilliant young actress in "Indiscreet Wives."

The production will be made at the Metro studios in Hollywood. Miss Lake has just finished her work at these studios in a picturization of James A. Herne's immortal stage drama, "Shore Acres," hence she is doing two Herne plays—by father and daughter—in succession.

Miss Lake is in the midst of a fortnight's vacation prior to starting her new vehicle. This respite from studio responsibilities is being devoted by Miss Lake chiefly to a new selection of new spring apparel, with emphasis on hats. The actress is partial to chic millinery, and before beginning work in "Indiscreet Wives" will have a complete new assortment of vernal modes direct from the ateliers of Paris.

"Indiscreet Wives" is a modern society drama, with an exceptional leading part for a woman— that of a manicurist who marries above her station and is forced to endure insult and ostracism at the hands of her husband's family. In the end her force of character and sterling honesty gradually break down the barriers of prejudice until she is recognized for her true worth. Miss Herne, who wrote the play, appeared in it on the stage.

PLAY IS DRAMATIC WITH VEIN OF HUMOR

REVELATIONS OF A WIFE OFFERED TO A FAIR AUDIENCE LAST NIGHT

"Revelations of a Wife," showing at the Grand Opera House last night and tonight, proved to be an interesting and at times very exciting mystery story with nothing to it of a character worthy of ministerial disapproval. The part of Alice Sterling is well played by Dorothy Pembroke, who also gives a short address between the third and fourth acts on the injustice of the present system of moral code which allows one law for the man and another for the woman "Why should a woman be expected to reveal everything that has happened in her past life," she says, "when a man is not expected to do the same?" It is principally around this question that the plot revolves, and the complications involved and the climax are extremely interesting.

While the play itself is essentially dramatic, there is a strain of humor running through which relieves the tension and adds to the plot immensely. Georgia Burdell in her role of Kitty Constance, the companion of Mrs. Sterling, and Bennat R. Finn in his capacity as butler, are both alive with Irish wit and humor and play their parts very naturally.

The play last night was well received by a crowded house, the various characters receiving loud applause at different times during the performance.

BIG RUSH FOR SEATS FOR "FI-FI" OFFERING

THIS DEMONSTRATES CONFIDENCE IN THE QUALITY OF LOCAL TALENT

Confidence in "Fi-Fi" and the quality of local talent is amply illustrated by the phenomenal rush for seats which took place immediately the box office opened this morning.

During the day the demand for seats for the first performance was most liberal, and those wishing to see the show on Thursday night will have to get busy and book their seats or take a chance on standing room. It is likely that the rush for seats for the second performance on Friday night will be equally as heavy and those who are wise will book their seats early for whichever performance they intend to patronize. Local talent always presents something worth while, and "Fi-Fi" is certainly in that class.

EUGENE WALTER TO WRITE FOR MOTION PICTURES

AUTHOR OF "PAID IN FULL," "EASIEST WAY", AND "FINE FEATHERS" SIGNS CONTRACT.

JOINS SMITH AND VEILLER

Eugene Walter, author of "Paid in Full," "The Easiest Way," "Fine Feathers" and other notable stage successess, has joined Metro's staff of eminent authors. The dramatist is already at work on a manuscript for the screen, according to the announcement from the Metro offices telling of his acquisition by that big producing and distributing corporation.

Mr. Walter is the third distinguished playright to become associated with Metro within the past few weeks. The other two are Bayard Veiller, author of "Within the Law," and "The Thirteenth Chair" and Winchell Smith, who wrote "The Fortune Hunter" and "Brewster's Millions" and was co-author of "Turn to the Right" and "Lightin.'" These three comprise a formidable dramatic triumph.

Metro's policy in placing the leading American dramatists under contract to write for the screen is in line with the often-repeated conviction of the company's guiding heads that the greatest need of the industry today and its greatest difficulty is to obtain stories by master craftsmen that will realize to the full the artistic possibilities of the silent drama.

Mr. Eugene Walter has frequently been referred to as "America's leading dramatist." He won through to success after tasting the bitterest dregs of adversity. He slept on park benches in New York with the manuscript of "Paid in Full" in his pockets, before he finally obtained recognition. Every prominent manager in the city had rejected the play when he took it to Wagenhals and Kemper, who became interested.

"Where do you live, Mr. Walter?" he was asked, when he presented his play.

"Bryant Park, the second bench from the entrance at Fortieth street," he replied.

The play was accepted and produced in Chicago in 1907. It brought a new sense of realism to the American stage and critics were unanimous in hailing Mr. Walter as the most brillnt wrtier the country has produced. The producton at the Astor Theatre in New York the following season established his reputation beyond question. The play ran for seasons and was produced in nearly every large city in the world. Any number of companies played it on the road and it is frequently revvied.

It wasn't Mr. Walter's first play to see the footlights, however. After he had served in the Spanish-American War with the First Volunteer Cavalry, "Roosevelt's Rough Riders," and distinguished himself among the "wild men of the aristocracy of the East and the aristocracy of the wild men of the West." as a fighter, he wrote a war play, "Sergeant James." It was produced in 1901, but the results were not encouraging.

Since then his plays have included, besides "Fine Feathers," and "The Easiest Way," "The Wolf," "The Real Issue," "Just a Wife," "Boots and Saddles," "The Lie," "The Assassin," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "A Plain Woman," "The Knife," and "The Challenge."

A Business Puller

There is nothing new about selling goods. The same methods are in vogue, with modern modifications, as existed a decade ago.

The sale of goods is attained by four methods---by advertising, by window dressing, by talking, by giving satisfaction.

Advertising is the chief of these methods because it carries to homes by tke cheapest and surest method possible, information as to what you have to sell, and attracts that general attention to your business not otherwise obtainable.

The strong points of advertising are:
Persistency to assure returns.
Continuous and well-directed publicity.
A fair price for commensurate returns.
Quality of value as against mere size of circulation.

In connection with these four strong points of advertising The Review's columns offer space at fair rates based on the quality of its circulation, and the price and results will be found such as to confirm our claim that Advertising in The Review pays.

The readers of The Review are those who appreciate a dependable local newspaper, and whose trade spells "quality" and "cash."

We'll be peased to talk it over with you.

The Review circulates among the best homes and reaches the best of Peterboro's buying public.

A Contract for systematic advertising in the Review means more business for you Mr. Business Man.

MARATHON WILL KEEP ATHLETICS

(By James E. (Ted) Meredith.)

New York, April 8.—Trivoulidas wins the Boston Marathon!

I watched this race with great interest his year, not because it was one of the Olympic tryouts for the team that is to represent the United States in the classic race at Antwerp nor because the boys of this country were pitted against men from Greece and other foreign lands who will return to their native countries to carry their colors in the race at Antwerp, but because of the fact that the classic Marathon has lost much of the prestige which it once held in this country. I do not mean the Boston marathon alone, but all distance races that used to attract such huge interest and have lately passed almost unnoticed.

I was exceedingly anxious to see if the marathon showed any indication of regaining its hold on the public and it is gratifying to be able to say that the number and caliber of the runners and the interest of spectators did betoken a great revival.

When the interest of the public in long races ceases, athletes naturally turn to other events. The effect is gradual slackening in the caliber of distance men.

Marathon races and long-distance running reached their highest state after the Olympic games in London in 1908, when Johnny Hayes captured the feature event. This race started every man who had running aspirations at the game and as a result the United States had a very fine team of marathon runners in Stockholm in 1912. These two events caused promoters to stage long-distance runs and the interest ran high.

The war had a great deal to do with cutting down long-distance running. There has not been an Olympic meet with the marathon a its big event in twelve years.

It is true that this year, judging from the races already run, that the contestants are not up to the standard of eight years ago when Mike Ryan won the race in Boston and established a record that still holds. However, interest has returned as a preliminary of the coming Olympic games. There is plenty of material in training, so I think we shall see some speed shown before the teams are finally picked for each country.

Word comes from Brussels that Guillemot, the French cross-country runner won the Belgian cross-country championship, covering the distance of eight miles in 43 minutes, 25 seconds. Guillemot will be one of the men that our boys will have to beat at long distances. He has a very good record, having won the French, English and Belgian championships.

It is of interest to note that some of the best middle distance men that this country has produced have started as marathon runners. Joie Ray was a great distance runner before he discovered that he could break records from 1,000 yards to five miles. Tom Halin of the Boston A. A. started as a marathon runner and later established an indoor record for the quarter. The marathon had done much to bring out men and it is god to see the interest in it returning.

FAST PACE IN LOCAL BASEBALL LEAGUE

LOUIS YEOTES ACCOMPLISHING EXCELLENT PREPARATORY RESULTS.

Louis Yeotes is certainly setting a fast pace in the City Baseball League this year. Not content with the excellent line-up which he announced recently, he has been working hard behind the scenes during the past week or so and is now able to announce that the Thistles have been strengthened by the signing of two more fast ball players. One is Harold Adams, the well known local ball player, who is at present in Toronto attending the Dental Colege, but who will be back in the city in time for the bal season. He is a splendid centre fielder and a heavy hitter and Louis is to be congratulated on obtaining his services.

A southpaw has also joined the Yeotes aggregation but Louis was averse to mentioning his name yesterday and would say little about him, other than he was a marvel. He has played in the West but is living in Peterborough at present.

Louis Yeotes is certainly making strides with his newly organized Thistles and if Jake Solomon had found it possible to remain in the City League this year there would probably have resulted a fine race between the two. However, the other teams in the league are saying little but are probably doing a lot and when the old familiar "play ball" is again heard on the diamond, it is more than likely that Louis Yeotes will find some opposition to his championship hopes.

Executive— Allan Close, Dr. Scarlett and Hugh Murray. Members to Board of Governors H. A. A. A.: Lieut.-Col. Dr. Thompson and Lieut.-Col. George Ballard.

Watches were presented Coach Wally Barron and Sam Manson for their work in the interests of the club last year.

OXFORD-CAMBRIDGE TEAM NOW SELECTED

COACH NAMES TATHAM, STALLARD, RUDD, MILLIGAN FOR RELAY.

Philadelphia, April 28.— The Oxmeet American athletes in the two-mile college relay championship of the United States on Franklin Field next Saturday was selected yesterday by Coach Shrubb. They are Tatham, Stallard, Rudd and Milligan. Tatham, who injured his ankle on board ship coming across the Atlantic, was again on the track yesterday, and his work was such that Shrubb decided to put him in the race. Shrubb said he expects Tatham to do his half-mile under two minutes. All the British entrants in the relay races and special field events were on the track. Jeppe, the English hurdling champion, slightly injured his knee in striking a hurdle, but is expected to be able to continue his training.

The relay team from Redlands University, California, which is entered in the two-mile championship, arrived yesterday.

N. Y. BILL GIVES BOXING THE CHANCE OF ITS LIFE

CANCER OF BOXING CONTESTS WILL BE REMOVED— 15 ROUNDS

New York, April 28.— New York is going to give boxing the chance of its life and the whole country will be watching the experiment.

Actuated by the wave of popular favor that has brought boxing to Kentucky, caused an increase in the number of rounds from six to eight in Philadelphia, and from eight to twelve in New Jersey, the solons of New York have lent ear to the clamor and approved of fifteen rounds to a decision.

Experts agree that the Walker boxing bill, crowded to the ears with safeguards, is one of the best boxing laws ever passed. If the positions created by the bill are filled with competent, conscientious men and boxing is not a sucess then it never will be.

The whole punch of the Walker bill is in the clause creating a commission to license clubs, boxers, referees, physicians, judges, managers, trainers, seconds and time-keepers. The license commission consisting of three members who serve without compensation, acts independantly of the State Athletic Commisson of three members at $5,000 a year.

Upon the insistence of the International Sporting Club that no-decision fighting was the real cancer of the sport and that a law without decisions would invite abuse, the Legislature approved fifteen rounds with a decision to be given by two judges or the referee if the judges disagree.

Clubs in cities of the first class must pay a fee of $750; in second clas cities, $500; elsewhere, $350. Physicians, referees, judges and managers, $25. Time-keepers, boxers, trainers, and seconds, $5. Five per cent of the receipts goes to the State as tax. The weights and classes are to be the same as those adopted by the International Sporting Club.

Many believe that Governor Smith if he signs the bill, will appoint three members of the International Sporting Club on the License Commission.

The proposed Ontario bill calls for 15 rounds to a decision, the licensing of clubs, boxers, referees, a 5 per cent gros gate levy and honorary commissioners with a paid secretary, but the details will probably be left to the commission.

ENGLISH OLYMPIC TEAM MAY BE WITHDRAWN

£18,000 NEEDED IS NOT FORTHCOMING—BRITISH ARE INDIFFERENT.

London, April 28.— England either will have to withdraw from the Olympic games or make a great reduction in the size of her team if more money is not forthcoming, Decoursey Laffan, secretary of the British Olympic Association, said at a meeting of the association last night.

He deplored the indifference of the British over the Olympics as indicated by their failure to subscribe now. If we do not get more we will have to cancel our entries or send a very small team. We might as well put up the shutters if we have to withdraw. If the public has no interest in the games this year, it never will."

PREVENT APPLE SCAB

Much of the Loss Through This Disease Is Needless.

Careful Spraying Will Do the Trick —Three Sprayings Necessary— Either Lime Sulphur or Bordeaux Mixture May Be Used.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THIS is the most common and most serious disease of apples in Ontario. It occurs wherever apples are grown, and the scab spots on the fruit and leaves are familiar to almost every fruit grower. In wet seasons it causes a financial loss of many thousands of dollars to the fruit growers of the Province. This is to a large extent a needless loss, for Apple Scab can almost always be prevented no matter how wet the season may be, by thorough, timely and intelligent spraying, in combination with the proper pruning of the trees. The scab only develops and spreads during wet weather. The times of the year therefore when we get our wet weather are the times we have to spray if we are going to prevent scab. One spraying with either lime sulphur or Bordeaux mixture is not sufficient to prevent scab, as the rain gradually washes the spray off, and as the leaves and fruits by growing larger develop more surface to cover. In order to be sure of preventing the disease we must spray from three to six times during the season, the number of sprayings depending upon whether the weather is wept or dry. The first spraying should be done just as or soon after the leaf buds burst. For this application use commercial lime-sulphur, strength 1 gallon commercial to 7 gallons of water. If the grower is certain that there is no San Jose Scale in the orchard and very little Oyster Shell Scale, a weaker solution may be used, 1 gallon to about 20 gallons of water, or Bordeaux mixture 4.4.40 formula may be substituted.

The second spraying should be given just before the blossoms open, that is, just when they are showing pink, using commercial lime-sulphur strength 1 gallon to 35 gallons of water, or Bordeaux mixture 4.4.40 formula.

In average seasons the third application should be given immediately after the blossoms have all or nearly all fallen, with lime-sulphur strength, 1 gallon to 40 gallons of water. This is generally the most important spray for the control of Apple Scab and always for Codling Moth, and it must be promptly applied, as a delay of a day or two may make all the difference between success and failure. Bordeau mixture should not be used at this time, as it is almost sure to cause the fruit to be russeted. Arsenate of lead should be added for the second and third sprayings to control Codling Moth and other biting insects.

In seasons of normal weather conditions these first three sprayings should control the scab completely. In some seasons, however, additional applications are absolutely necessary if the scab is to be prevented. The time of these will depend upon when we get our cold, wet weather. In some seasons there is a long period of cold, wet weather between the date when the blossoms begin to burst and when they fall. Sometimes the length of this period is three or four weeks. In such cases it is necessary to give an intermediate spraying between the second and third. Hence, if the grower finds at the end of twelve days or two weeks after he has applied the second spray that the weather is still cold and wet and development of the blossoms is very slow, another spraying should be given at once to protect the young blossoms and foliage. This should be of the same strength as for the third regular spraying, but poison should be omitted because of the bees. It is very important to observe carefully the weather conditions and apply this spray when necessary.

Spraying early in August is an insurance against late infection of Apple Scab and Sooty Fungus. In wet autumns such spraying is necessary to prevent late attacks of scab, especially with varieties such as McIntosh Red and Snows, which are very susceptible to scab. For this application use a weak lime-sulphur solution, 1 gallon to 40 or 45 gallons of water, or Bordeaux mixture. No poison should be used at this time. Often if the spraying is done later than the first or second week in August there is a chance of the fruit being discolored at picking time. Should the dust method prove satisfactory it could be used at any time in the fall without danger of staining the fruit. If the early sprayings are thoroughly done, and the fall is not extremely wet, usually the crop will remain clean without this last application.

Thoroughness in Spraying.—Very few men spray thoroughly enough to get the best results. The object of spraying is to cover the surfaces of the leaves and fruits with a good fungicide (a substance which destroys the spores of fungi), such as lime-sulphur or Bordeaux mixture, so that when a spore reaches leaf or fruit it is destroyed and cannot grow and cause scab. We see, therefore, that if spraying is to accomplish it's object it must be very thoroughly done; every fruit and leaf must be completely covered with the fungicide so that there is not the least space on which a spore can germinate. Thorough spraying necessitates the liberal use of the spray mixture. A large apple tree will require from six to ten gallons or more to cover it properly. Care must be taken to reach every side of the young forming fruit or (in other words) of the calyces or flower cup which develop into the fruits.—Prof. J. E. Howitt, O. A. College, Guelph.

Women Cause Trouble.

There is great agitation in exclusive London club circles in Pall Mall and St. James' over the demand that women be permitted to visit their men friends in these clubs to have a cup of tea of an afternoon or a friendly gossip. One woman who has publicly launched an attack on the hitherto impregnable defences of some of those clubs say that as men are welcome at women's clubs, why are not women welcome at all of the men's clubs.

Here is the reply of one clubman: "A man goes to his club to get away from the distraction of feminine company. His club is a refuge from the worries of business and home."

What worries the club habitue is the fact that women wanted the vote —and got it; they wanted to get into Parliament—and got there; they wanted to be magistrates—and now there are several women judges; and finally, women lawyers are in the inner Temple.

Prayers Not Answered.

Four-year-old Hilda had been to stay with her cousins, two romping, boisterous boys, who had teased her sadly the whole time.

When she came back and was telling her father all about her visit she said:

"Daddy, every night when Jack and Roger say their prayers they ask God to make them good boys."

"That's quite right," said her father.

"But," she added, significantly, "He hasn't done it yet!"

The Wise Man.

"What has become of the man who used to tell us how anybody could get rich raising chickens?" "I guess," said his farmer friend, "he has switched around and is makin' a fortune out o' plans for sellin' chicken feed to the people who started raisin' chickens."

Fitting Expiring Sentiments.

To Vespasian is attributed as an expiring sentiment, "An emperor should die standing!" which seems to have appealed to two sixteenth-century English bishops—Woolton, whose last utterance is recorded as, "A bishop ought to die on his legs," and Sewell, who declared, "A bishop should die preaching."

Why He Hadn't Slumbered.

"I'm surprised at you, Mr. Twobble. You fell asleep right in the middle of Professor Diggs' lecture." "Don't blame me for that, my dear." "Why not, sir?" "I would have fallen asleep sooner, but the person seated immediately behind me kept coughing on the back of my neck."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Birds of Towns.

Somebody must have a love for bird life, if these names, selected at random from the postal guide, indicate anything: Pigeonroost, Ky.; Lark, N. D.; Parrot, Ky.; Sparrow, Ky.; Swan, Tex.; Swallow, Ky.; Wren, S. C.; Crow, W. Va.; Blue Jay, W. Va.; Nightingale, Ala.

Take That Extra Forty Winks.

The sage observation that "It's nice to get up in the morning, but it's nicer to lie in bed" is no longer a shameful confession of laziness. The British ministry of munitions investigating the health and efficiency of its workers found that too-early rising is harmful.

Both Were Satisfied.

A Missouri livery stable keeper put his hand in a mule's mouth to see how many teeth the mule had. The mule closed his mouth to see how many fingers the man had, and the curiosity of both man and mule was satisfied.

A DIFFERENCE IN PIANOS

All pianos are not alike. Don't let anyone get away with the idea that an investment in any piano is a good investment. Ask great artists like Tetrazzini why when she was in Canada she insisted in having a piano of Ye Olde Firme Heintzman & Co., Limited, George and Hunter streets, Peterborough, Ont., and her answer will be very plain, namely that more than any other piano it meets her exacting demands as a great prima donna. Its pure and evening quality of tone has made it the much-sought-for piano, not alone of the great artists, but of everyone who is determined to have the best in music when an instrument is placed in their home.

CONFERENCE IN CITY TODAY WITH PETERBOROUGH REPRESENTATIVE MEN

An important conference took place this afternoon between the heads of the Canadian Pacific Railway and the Civic Development Commission and the City Council.

The C.P.R. officials arrived in town on the noon train from Toronto and were met by President Worth of the Board of Trade, the members of the Civic Development Commission and the members of the City Council and were entertained at luncheon at the Empress Hotel. The conference commenced at two o'clock and was of short duration as the railway officials were compelled to leave the city on the 3.20 train this afternoon. While no statement has been made as to the purpose of the visit, it is generally understood that it has to do with the proposed union station for Peterborough, which is being advocated by the Civic Development Commission.

The C.P.R. officials present were: Mr. McTier, vice-president Canadian Pacific Railway; Mr. J. Fairbairn chief engineer C.P.R., both of Montreal; Mr. M. H. Brown, district freight manager, Toronto; Mr. Grout general superintendent, Toronto; Mr. H. J. Humphreys, divisional superintendent, Toronto, and Mr. Ripley, divisional engineer, Toronto.

Mr. Fairbairn, the chief engineer, was formerly a Peterborough man and a short biographical sketch of his career appeared in The Review of last Saturday.

REGRETS CHAIRMAN'S DEATH

At a meeting of the Utilities Commission, held yesterday afternoon, the following resolution expressing the commission's sympathy to the family of the late Mr. W. H. Moore in their recent bereavement:

"Resolved, that this commission place on record its profound regret on account of the death of its chairman, Mr. W. H. Moore, K.C. Mr. Moore had been a member of the Water Commission from 1904 to 1914, and when the electric light and power business was taken over by the city in 1914, and the Water Commission became the Utilities Commission, he remained a member and became chairman at the beginning of this year. He was active in the work of building up the growing business of both the water and electric departments, and his legal training, sound judgment and long experience in public affairs, combined with his keen interest in the affairs of the commission and his desire to assist in conducting them for the benefit of the people, made him a very valuable member, and his active and zealous assistance will be greatly missed.

"Be it also resolved that this commission tender to the members of Mr. Moore's family sincere sympathy in their bereavement."

JEWS HOMEWARD BOUND

Reported That Thousands Are Now Returning to Palestine.

New York, April 27.—The Zionist organization of America announced here last night that it had received several hundred telegrams from Jews in all parts of the United States, expressing approval of the action of the San Remo Conference in awrding the mandate over Palestine to Great Britain.

It was stated that there are hundreds of thousands of Jews in the ports of Odessa, Constantinople, Constanza and Vladivostok awaiting the opportunity to embark for Palestine.

Many have ventured across the Mediterranean in unseaworthy fishing smacks, and hundreds have been drowned, while others are said to have walked across Europe to reach seaports near Palestine.

MARK STREET BOYS AND GIRLS CONCEPT

MARKED AS ONE OF THE BEST OF ITS KIND THUS FAR.

The prevailing opinion here is that the concert given by the boys and girls of the church last Friday night under the direction of Mrs. Rev. Ross was the best of its kind ever given in Mark Srteet Church.

The program was so varied and intensely interesting, that for two hours the people sat under a spell of wonder, amusement, and delight, never dreaming that such talents were possessed by their own children. The arrangements of the numbers was such that the interest and enjoyment increased as the programme moved forward. From the child of five years to the boy and girl of fifteen, every number, whether solos, duets, trios, quartettes, readings, musical dialogues, instrumentals or choruses, was rendered with splendid ability, and the people were most generous in their applause.

Miss Elsie Champion, organist of the mission band, played the choruses well, while Mrs. W. Gamble ably accompanied the other musical selections at the piano.

"The Robin Song," and "Whistling" by eight girls; "Chinese Motion Song" "Musical Dialogue," "Missionary Dialogue," and other numbers were heartily encored, while the recitations instrumental solo, and "Mother's Band," by four boys and four girls, all under six years, received a storm of applause.

The programme was brought to a close by a boy's chorus entitled "Missionary Bells." The Mispah Benediction proceeds, $56.30, are to be given to the Mission Band work, for missions.

to have been shown and Dr. Bryce, of the Provincial Health Department, was to have been present and deliver a lecture, but both of these arrangements fell through.

Lectures were given on the work of the Association by Dr. McCullough and Dr. Sutton, and Dr. Neal, who is a lung specialist, gave an interesting talk on tuberculosis and other diseases in children, and their prevention. He dealt with the matter thoroughly, bringing out some startling facts concerning tuberculosis among the children.

Well Babies' Clinic.

Dr. Birnie, in a brief address, outlined the history of the organization of the Well Babies' Clinic, touching on the amount of work accomplished in its institution.

Tuberculosis.

In a most practical and convincing address Dr. Neal brought forward the subject of "Tuberculosis Among Children." The young child up to the age of three years, he pointed out, is more susceptible to this disease than at any other stage, and for this reason it is highly important to keep children away from parents who are infected with the disease. Then we should endeaver to wipe out the old fallacy that tuberculosis is hereditary. This is not so. When a child develops tuberculosis it is simply a case of contagion from the parent or some other person with whom it has been intimately associated. For this reason it is very important to see that the child of tender years is isolated from persons infected with the germ.

After the child has reached its third year it develops a certain amount of immunity, but still care must be taken when children are in contact with such patients. A large proportion of children are at some time or another infected with the germ, and it is the duty of the parent to see that the child is kept strong and well, so enhancing its powers of resistance.

The disease may affect any part of the body—the skin, the joints, the glands or any part of the human organism. In fact most hunchbacks and cripples amongst children are so because of diseased joints—a condition which could have been prevented. Tuberculosis of the lungs is most rare among children. There is also, Dr. Neal pointed out, a danger of bovine tuberculosis. This is contracted from the milk of diseased cows, so every precaution should be taken in securing a pure milk supply. Another thing to help in this regard was the providing of playgrounds where the children will be afforded fresh air and exercise.

Dr. McCullough in a brief address on the subject quoted the words of Lloyd George: "How can you have an A1 nation out of C3 men?"

MISSIONARY GAVE HIS LIFE TO SAVE WOMEN

LATE DR. J. MENZIES WAS SHOT AT HUAIKING BY ROBBERS.

How Rev. Dr. James Menzies, formerly of Toronto, met death at the hands of robbers during a raid on the mission at Huaiking is told in a report received by Dr. McGillivray, acting secretary of the Christian Literature Society.

Gaining entrance while the ladies were preparing for bed the bandits seized one and demanded to be shown where the money was kept, the report states. Dr. Menzies, who lived in another part of the compound, answering cries for help, ran to aid calling: "What is the matter." One of the ladies replied: "Robbers." "Many or few?" the doctor asked. "Many," the lady replied.

"Then Dr. Menzies said: 'I am not armed, but—' and he made a rush for the robber who had been left to keep guard at the gate and grappled with him.

By this time the other male missionary heard the alarm and came running along, only to find Dr. Menzies lying on the ground moaning and the robbers gone. He had been shot in three places, and one of the shots, being in the abdomen, was fatal. In about half an hour Dr. Menzies was dead.

"Next morning at daybreak an early riser found a man dead in a field a hundred yards from the compound. This man had evidently been killed by one of the shots intended for the doctor, and probably was the one the doctor grappled with."

No one else received any injuries, though all seven ladies and Mr. Slimmon suffered from shock.

GUN CLUB GROUNDS

The building of the new Alladin Company's factory has compelled the Peterborough Gun Club to seek new grounds, and at an informal meeting held last night it was arranged to move the trap and clubhouse today to a site which has been secured just west of the Catholic cemetery, and five minutes walk from the street car line.

The annual meeting of the club will be held at an early date.

Hon. Dr. Cody received an honorary degree from Wycliffe College at its annual convocation.

AUSTIN CHAMBERLAIN CARRIES WHOLE OF BUDGET PROPOSALS IN COMMONS

Says It Is Duty to Reduce Britain's Vast Credit Load While Trade is Prosperous—Hint to States to Leave Irish Question Alone.

(By Canadian Press.)

London, April 29.—Austin Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer, has carried the whole of his budget proposals. Motions for rejection of an increase in excess profits, duty and corporation tax were defeated in the House of Commons last night by a vote of 237 to 75.

Reduce Debt Load.

Mr. Chamberlain said it was his duty while trade was prosperous to reduce the vast load of debt which was a potenial danger to the country's credit. Nothing was more important at the moment, with British dependence on overseas supplies of food and raw materials, than that Great Britain's international credits should stand high, especially with the United States.

ADVICE TO STATES.

Should Give Attention to Philippines and Leave Ireland Alone.

London, April 29. — The United States Irish resolution was brought up in the House of Commons yesterday and drew several pointed questions. Ronald McNeill, Unionist member for Canterbury division of Kent, asked the Government if it had "any official information regarding a manifesto to be issued in Washington by an organization known as the Philippine Commission for Independence, in which it was maintained that American belief in the principle of self-determination would be demonstrated more impressively by conceding the repeated demands made for independence by ten and a half million inhabitants of the Philippines than by passing resolutions in the Senate expressing sympathy with the cause of Irish independence," and whether "as a mark of respect for the United States Senate" the House of Commons would be enabled to follow the precedent set by the Senate by moving a resolution in support of the Philippine demand for self-determination.

Andrew Bonar Law, replying for the Government, said he had no information on the question, which did not seem to be one in which the British Government was concerned.

Numerous other questions followed, and Sir Edward Carson, Ulster Unionist leader, asked whether it was not better for each country to leave the other alone.

MARTIAL LAW NOW IN SPANISH CITY

(By Canadian Press.)

Madrid, April 29. — Martial law has been proclaimed throughout the Province of Oviedo, according to an official announcement.

This step was taken as a precaution against possible disturbances on May 1. A declaration of a state of siege in Saragossa is reported, this being made necessary owing to the uneasiness prevalent among the miners.

The general strike called in Saragossa some days ago has spread throughout the province.

FIVE WERE KILLED WHEN TRAINS MET

(By Canadian Press.)

Sanborne, Minn., April 29. — Five persons were killed and twelve injured when two passenger trains on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway met in a head-on collision near here early today.

Four cars were wrecked and also both engines.

The accident was said to have been caused by a misinterpretation of train orders.

PROPOSE TO TERMINATE GEORGE ST. PAVEMENT SOUTH AT WESTCOTT ST.

But Will Give Notice of Sewer Work Below That Point in View of Continuing Pavement to Lansdowne Street as Originally Planned.

The city's Board of Works met in business session last evening.

The Colonial Hyde Company's request for drainage near the corner of Lansdowne and Hoggard streets will be granted if the township contribute part of the cost.

The engineer said the city really has no jurisdiction beyond the centre of the street as this is a boundary road. The natural way to get the water away is along the immediate south side of the G.T.R. at a cost of $75.

Using the Street.

John Dignan complained that part of Rink street is being used by the McDonald Lumber Co. as a piling ground for lumber. No action was taken.

For Disposal Plant.

The city engineer was authorized to engage an architect to prepare plans for a pumping station and compressor house connected with the sewage disposal plant.

George Street Paving.

The Board decided to amend their bylaw to provide for paving George street south from the C.P.R. to Westcott street instead of to Romaine street as originally intended. The engineer reported that the sewer between Westcott and Romaine streets would have to be raised before pavement is laid, also that between Romaine and Lansdowne streets there are two sewerless sections—from King Edward to Princess and from Prince to Lansdowne streets. This work would have to be done before pavement is constructed.

The engineer also pointed out that asphaltic concrete pavement would cost $5.60 a yard according to estimates furnished St. Thomas, and the 10,000 yards we need here would run into $60,000. He suggested getting prices of different kinds of pavement and the suggestion was adopted.

The engineer here explained that one's pavement comes cheaper—$2 to $2.85 a yard—and the city has a plant for this pavement, excepting a concrete mixer, which would cost from $2,500 to $3,000. His sympathies, however, do not lie with concrete pavement.

On motion of Ald. Turner Council will be asked to give notice of its intention to pave George street from the C.P.R. to Westcott street and not as far as Lansdowne street as previously given notice of.

Mr. Parsons said he would like to know if this pavement is to be laid this year, as it would be necessary

MUNICIPALITIES SHOULD HAVE DIRECT INTEREST IN HYDRO-ELECTRIC POWER

Such is Conclusion of Conference Between Eastern Cities—Have Right to Share in Profits to be Applied to Ultimate Purchase of Systems—Assume Immediate Financial Responsibility For Operation—Have Forty Years in Which to Pay.

In continued conference yesterday afternoon at the City Council chamber, after a lengthy discusaion, in which Messrs. Elliott and Campbell representing Kingston took a rather skeptical views, believing that they had everything to lose and nothing to gain by the project, the assembled representatives of the municipalities of Central Ontario passed a resolution, moved by Mr. Vicker, Peterborough, expressing the opinion of the Municipal Association as being in favor of the proposed scheme whereby the municipalities would be permitted to assume the financial liabilities of the Hydro Electric plants in return for the advantages to be accrued from them. A copy of the resolution appeared in The Review of yesterday. At the suggestion of Mr. Elliott the word "if considered advisable after due consideration by the various municipalities" were added to the final clause An amendment calling for another meeting in three weeks' time to consider the matter further was introduced by Mr. Boyes, of Napanee, but when it was pointed out that by that time it was likely the Provincial House would have adjourned, and that it would be too late to secure the necessary legislation, the amendment was not favored, and as a seconder could not be found for it, the motion was not voted on.

Traced Power Development.

Mr. Ireland, the representative of the Hydro-electric Commission of Ontario, who arrived at about 4 p.m., accompanied by Mr. Jeffries, went fully into the present system, and what the proposed change would mean. He made an apology for the absence of Sir Adam Beck, who had intended being present for the meeting, but who had been prevented from doing so by important business.

Mr. Ireland commenced at the time when the commission first took over the power systems along the lake front and traced the development from there on down to the present time. From 1909 to 1916 a syndicate controlled the Trent Power systems but in the latter year the Ontario Government purchased the fiscal assets of the Lake Front Power Company, paying a sum of $8,350,000, for which ten year bonds were issued without allowing for a sinking fund. It was the intention, when these ten year bonds were due to issue thirty year bonds, with allowance for a sinking fund to wipe out the debt.

The difference at the present time between the Niagara system and the systems in Central Ontario was that the commission held the Niagara system in trust for the various municipalities, while it held the Central Ontario systems in trust for the Ontario Government.

The object in view, as he saw it, was to consider what was to the best results for the municipalities, and he felt sure that they would agree the best results were to be achieved when the municipalities had a direct interest in the whole system.

Another point to consider was that there was a possibility of large profits accruing due to the increased demand for power, and under the present system the municipalities had no right to share in those profits. If the municipalities took control they would be guaranteed all profits, full equity with all its accruing benefits

If the municipalities were favorable to the scheme legislation would be introduced at the present session to provide the commission with authority to take over the systems from the Ontario Government, and hold them in trust for the municipalities. The period necessary to completely pay for the systems would be 40 years. He felt that the commission would not feel justified in asking for legislation unless they had the support of an overwhelming majority of the municialities in the districts concerned.

Have Direct Equity.

Under the proposed system municipalities would have a direct equity in the generating plans and sub-stations and a full equity in their own distributing systems. It would not be necessary to issue debentures or to put up any cash. It was simply a matter of the municipality entering into an agreement whereby it assumed the financial responsibility and insures a rate being charged sufficient to pay expenses and in return reap the full advantage of profits and provide for the complete ownership of the system at the end of 40 years.

Question of Capital.

Another point emphasised by Mr Ireland was that under the present system when the commission needed capital it was forced to apply to the Provincial Government for an advance This was all right as long as there was a friendly Government in power as there was at present, but that might not always be so. The present proposition would greatly obviate this difficulty.

Which ever way the meeting felt toward the scheme, Mr. Ireland said that he would like an expression of opinion from them one way or the other. Further then that, the commission wanted each municipal council to endorse the scheme independently. Before action could be taken on it would be necessary for the municipality to place a bylaw before the people so that the rights of the ratepayer in the matter were fully safeguarded.

BARONET HELD FOR CANING BOY

D. J. WERNHER SEIZED IN STREET AND CRUELLY TREATED

SAYS LAD SKATED INTO HIM

SON OF DIAMOND MERCHANT LOCKED UP — "JUST SHOVED THE BRAT"

New York, April 29.—A man who described himself as Derrick J. Wernher, son of the late Sir Julius Wernher, wealthy British diamond merchant, was locked up in the West Forty-seventh street station on a charge of feloniously assaulting Frank Sassa, aged 11, the son of Edward Sassa, a tailor, of 113 West Forty-seventh street. Young Sassa, according to the complaint made by his mother against Wernher, was beaten with a cane in front of Raleigh Hall Hotel at 106 West Forty-seventh street, the Englishman's home.

Wernher denied to the police that he was Sir Derrick Julius Wernher, second baronet of his line. He said the title was inherited by a cousin. The British "Who's Who," however, lists "Derrick Julius Wernher" as being 31 years old and the second to hold the title. The prisoner gave his age as 31.

Young Sassa, according to the police, was skating in front of Raleigh Hall, when Wernher, 6 feet 6 inches in height and 235 pounds in weight, turned the corner on his way home. The youngster slipped as Wernher passed him and his knee struck that of the man. Immediately, the boy said he was struck heavily over the back with the Englishman's stick. His hand was hurt, too.

Passersby who saw what was happening, told the police later that the boy cried out in pain and tried to scramble to his feet, but that Wernher, giving him no chance to explain, struck a second time. A large crowd had assembled, and without giving the man a chance to escape,

BEST TAKES BACK HIS CONFESSION

REPUDIATES STATEMENT THAT VERA SCHNEIDER ASKED HIM TO KILL HER

ADMITS HE ATTACKED GIRL

WHILE SITTING ON PORCH OF HOUSE WHERE BODY WAS FOUND

(By Canadian Press.)

Pontiac, Mich., April 29. — Anson Best this morning, in the presence of his attorney, Prosecutor Attorney and a number of newspaper men, repudiated the confession which the prosecutor declared he made in the Vera Schneider murder case. The prisoner maintained that his first story was true, and that the admissions made, according to the prosecutor, in the presence of several officers, wer all false, and due to his fear of the officers and fatigue from questioning.

No Suicidal Intent.

Anson Best, twenty-one years old, a factory worker, last night changed his confession to the killing of Vera Schneider, according to the sheriff's officers, so as to eliminate all allegations of suicidal intent on the part of the girl.

Admitted Attack.

Best, in his original statement, declared that he had killed Miss Schneider because she asked him to.". Last night, however, officers say, he broke down completely and admitted attacking her while they were sitting on the porch of the unoccupied house where her body was found last Sunday morning.

"I did not kill the girl, or have anything to do with it," said Best this morning. "The story I told the officers when they stopped me there that night was true. I had been out walking and was on my way home. That was all. I had not seen the girl, and know nothing of her murder."

AGREES TO MORE PAY FOR LABORERS

CITY'S BOARD OF WORKS VOTE FOR INCREASE REQUESTED

ALD. TURNER OBJECTS TO HOURS

WILL HOLD OUT FOR NINE-HOUR DAY IN COUNCIL

The Board of Works last night desided to recommend that Council grant municipal labourers their request for the following increase of wages, to take effect May first:

Street sweepers, from 40c to 50c an hour; ordinary labourers, from 45c to 55c an hour; sewer and concrete workers, from 40c to 60c the hour. A day to consist of eight hours with time and half for overtime.

Ald. Morrison and Gainey moved in this direction. Ald. Turner, the only other member of the Board present, except the Mayor, voted against the resolution, and gave warning that he will oppose it in Council.

The Mayor, as presiding officer, did not vote.

Insists on Nine Hours

Ald. Turner put up the argument that while in favor of the men getting the increased pay per hour, he objected to the eight-hour. He contended that the men would be better off with a nine-hour day in earning an hour's more pay each day—six hours additional each week—for saving say against contingencies. The principle of greater production so much needed for in the country today, would thus be put into effect. He thought it the duty of all citizens to look on their city as a mother who gives them sustenance, and to whom fealty is due. Such fealty these times is called for in the shape of greater production. He did not think men would object to a nine-hour day for he had noticed last year when the pavement on Water street was under construction, Mr. Sheehy's men at 7 in the morning, sitting with their backs to the wall, enjoying their pipe and waiting for the short work-day to

NEWSPAPER PROPRIETORS WILL SEEK CHANGE IN EXISTING POSTAL SYSTEM

Get Good Reception at Ottawa From Postmaster-General Blondin—Postal Zones in the Proposition—Increase Rates with Distance From Centre of Publication.

Ottawa, April 29.—A deputation representing the smaller daily newspapers of Ontario met Hon. P. E. Blondin, Postmaster-General, yesterday, and made representations favoring the establishment of a zone system for newspaper postage.

Three zone were proposed, the first to have a radius of not more than fifty miles from the centre of publication, the second zone to be not less than 200 miles in radius, and all outside the 200-mile limit to comprise the third zone. A postal rate of one cent per pound within the first zone was suggested, one and one half cents for the second zone, and two cents within the third zone.

Representations were also made looking to improved rural mail service. The Postmaster-General was asked to arrange that rural mail carriers in centres where smaller daily newspapers are published be not sent their rounds earlier than 3.30 o'clock in the afternoon so that subscribers to smaller daily newspapers must get their paper on the day of publication.

The deputation, which was introduced by J. D. Chaplain, member for Lincoln, was headed by W. B. Burgoyne, of the St. Catharines Standard, who stated the case for the deputation. Chas. Dingman, of the Stratford Herald, presented a memorandum representing the views of smaller daily papers as agreed at recent conferences. Other members of the deputation were, J. I. McIntosh, Guelph Mercury; L. A. Guild, Kingston Whig; Capt. McAdams, Sarnia Canadian-Observer. Letters from a number of publishers who could not be present, approving the action of the deputation, were read.

Dr. Coulter, Deputy-Postmaster-General, and H. B. Morphy, member for North Perth; Dr. M. Steele, member for South Perth, and Sam. Charters, member for Peel, were present with Hon. Mr. Blondin, who gave a sympathetic hearing to the representations and promised careful consideration.

OCEAN FREIGHT SLUMP NOW EXPECTED

Liverpool, April 29.—Speaking yesterday at the annual meeting of the Cunard Steamship Company, Sir Alfred A. Booth, chairman of the company, said it was quite prepared for a slump in freight rates, and that the sooner the storm was over the better. Sir Alfred added that he hoped the slump would result in a definite break in the "vicious circle of rising wages and rising prices."

Dublin, April 29.— It is stated that the six persons arrested early Sunday morning in Mill Street, County Cork, on suspicion of being implicated in the holdup of bank officials last November, when eighteen thousand pounds sterling were stolen, were tried by a Sinn Fein court and found guilty.

Following this trial, Republican Army representatives visited the banks concerned, offering to hand over the prisoners and furnish evidence of guilt on certain conditions The bank officials, it is said, refused to deal with the situation, except through constitutional authorities.

MANY PEOPLE ARE KILLED AT POSEN

STREET FIGHTING BETWEEN POLICE AND STRIKERS CAUSES SUFFERING

STATE OF SIEGE IS DECLARED

TRAMWAY TRAFFIC STOPPED AND WINDOWS OF STORES BROKEN

(By Canadian Press.)

Warsaw, April 29.— A state of siege has been declared at Posen and that region, as a result of fighting between the police and strikers.

Unconfirmed reports say numbers of persons have been killed or wounded. The railway workers struck Saturday for higher wages, and Sunday afternoon the strikers held manifestations in the streets, stopping tramway traffic and breaking glasses in stores.

According to latest advices the police are in control of the situation.

SANITARIUM BURNED PATIENTS ARE SAVED

PROPERTY LOSS ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLARS INSURANCE PARTIAL.

(By Canadian Press.)

Windsor, April 29.—The Tuberculosis Sanitarium at Union-on-the-Laake, thirty miles from Windsor, was burned to the ground at an early hour this morning.

The staff and forty-six patients were removed in safety. Property loss is estimated at one hundred thousand dollars, partially covered by insurance.

Practically all the contents of the building were saved

The sanitarium is conducted by the Essex Health Association, and is a publicly supported enterprise.

LONGER TRIP THAN EVER THIS TIME

ENGINEER AND PERHAPS ONE OTHER TO GO TO NEW ORLEANS

INSPECT TYPE OF SEWAGE PUMP

THIS IS PROPOSED TO ULTIMATELY SAVE THOUSANDS OF DOLLARS

J. A. Dalian, provincial sanitary engineer, wrote to the City Council suggesting that Engineer Parsons go to New Orleans and Houston, Texas, and examine the unique pumping apparatus working there in connection with their activated sludge sewage disposal plant similar to what is to be installed here. Mr. J. A. Dallon contended that information on that type of pump applied in Peterborough would eventually save this city thousands of dollars.

The Board of Works discussed the matter last night, and on motion of Ald. Turner and Morrison, His Worship was authorised to send the city engineer and one other person he may select to New Orleans and Houston with a view to securing information which will assure economy and efficiency in the operation of this city's sewage disposal plant.

It was conceded that the three or four hundred dollars this trip may cost would be well spent in securing such information as will assure no mistake and effect a large eventual saving in regard to Peterborough's sewage disposal plant.

LOOK FOR LOWER PRICES.

ECONOMIC AND FINANCIAL conditions in the United States and Canada move in fairly parallel grooves, and the conditions in one react more or less on the other. The announcement that bank deposits across the border have fallen by a billion dollars significantly points to a conclusion that the abnormal economic situation of back-breaking taxes, inflated and preposterous costs, has reached its peak, and that "high everything" a about to experience a shock. In Canada, the reports of bankers and other financial men convey a hint of similar conditions existing here, and every effort should be made to assure a gradual deflation to avoid that economic disaster which would follow a sudden and general slump of any magnitude. The falling off of a billion dollars in bank deposits is significant, for bank deposits in the main move up and down with industrial and mercantile loans. Prodigious bank deposits, in other words, represent prodigious borrowings by the industries and businesses going to the banks to get the money to do their work.

A fall in such loans, whether optional with the borrowers because they don't need them any more or compelled by the banks because they must restrict credits, indicates a slackening of activity in business and industry which previously required those funds.

"At his particular moment," says the Sun and New York Herald, "a reduction of deposits due to a reduction of credits is specially significant for this reason: Higher wages and higher production costs generally have been calling for more and more money to meet payrolls and other bills even though no more materials were being produced, no more goods were being handled and no more business otherwise done. With labor and other production costs still up, therefore, the drop in loans and deposits is nothing less than startling. It shows the volume is down more than the value, expressed in dollar marks, reveals. But it is not necessarily a danger signal. On the contrary, it may be a safety signal. Costs of getting the nation's food out of the soil, costs of getting houses built to shelter the public, costs of doing business or of doing anything have been mounting at so terrific a pace that the real danger has been in the possibility of that flight continuing upward.

Excessive prices paid for labor, excessive prices paid for raw material, and excessive prices charged to the consumer have not merely check the public's buying (in Canada and in Peterborough, as well as in the United States) for lack of buying power to keep up in the mad race, but have been tending to make it not worth while to do more business than was being done, not worth while to maintain even the existing volume of business. It could not be made to pay. All the wheels of industry and business, in truth, have been tending to become deadlocked.

"With the shelves of merchants bare everywhere in the country, with the warehouses of producers yawning their emptiness of supplies, with coal and iron mines oil wells and lumber camps, steels plants and textile mills behind in their output, lower loans and deposits spell no disaster if, by very reason of the lower costs that they foreshadow, production again becomes able to pick up speed.

"In a money market staggering under a mountain weight of loans, deflation paves the way for a return to conditions where it is possible to earn a wage on a reasonable basis and give a return for it, to do business on a reasonable basis and make it pay, to eat, drink and live on a reasonable basis and make both ends meet.

"The worst thing that could happen to the country would be to go on jacking up costs and prices until all industry and all business should become frozen stiff. And the best thing that can happen to the country will be for the gradual resumption of normal costs and normal prices to make it possible for industries to do business on a paying basis and for individuals to meet their costs of living on the basis of a dollar that is worth one hundred cents when you get it or when you spend it."

BEHIND THE "OVERALL PARADE."

THE FAILURE of the "overall parade" in New York last Saturday, says the Commercial, was a surprise only to those who failed to understand the difference between a mental attitude of the people and the over-zeal of a few who let enthusiasm run away with them. True, in some communities the appeal has been universally heeded and the fashion in dress has been set by those who first suggested the overall as a garment for everybody. But to expect that the metropolitan centres would take up the fad was like asking men and women to make the useless expenditure of $4, $5, $6 or $7, and thereby increase the upward trend which has provoked this expression of protest.

The logic of the thing is absurd from the practical standpoint, but behind the desire to show the profiteers that the time has come when gouging must end is a unanimity it were well for all business to analyze and heed.

Unmistakably the high cost of living must stop somewhere. It cannot go on pyramiding itself as it is doing. It is the part of sanity to get an intelligent conception of causes and so pave the way for removal of the evil. But let there be no mistake about one thing—many retailers are exacting profits which are out of all proportion to costs. The writer knows, for example, that recently when green vegetables had a big drop in the market there were retailers who held to the extortionate prices which had been obtained before the big lots were dumped wherever they could fall, and not the slightest effort was made to meet the varying conditions—utter indifference to the justice of a trade transaction, revelling in the orgy which long has kept them drunken, and determined to get all that their vice-like pressure could exact from the far too patient consumer.

The sympathies of the seven millions in Greater New York were with that small band of paraders on Saturday, and that was the biggest things about the parade. Let the profiteer try to understand this sympathy. He has been branded as an un-American, and he is. He has been branded as a breeder of radicalism, and he is. He has been branded as the party who must be held largely responsible for the attempts of the bolshevik element which would overthrow the Government, and he is. In fact, he is all this and much more. He is a blot on the fair name of our country, and he deserves all the opprobrium that can be heaped upon him. If the overall can cover him and smother him, so much the better.

CONTRIBUTED TO DEFEAT.

GENERALLY SPEAKING, criticism of the Dardanelles exedition has been so adverse and condemning that it is some relief to read a contention that the expedition with its appalling loss of life had some effect on the enemy's ultimate defeat.

A great deal of Sir George Arthur's third volume of the "Life of Kitchener" is devoted to the Dardanelles expedition—the one exception which Kitchener allowed or appeared to allow to his condemnation of great diversions apart from the main theatre of war. Sir George explains that he yielded in the first instance to the seeming endorsement by naval experts of Mr. Churchill's opinion that naval guns could demolish the forts in the Narrows and carry the enterprise through with the aid of only a small military force. The opinion was a hasty inference from the success under quite different conditions of land guns against the forts of Antwerp, and it rapidly broke down under trial. But from this beginning there was no going back, and, being in it, Kitchener decided with the rest of his colleagues to go through with it. The familiar narrative becomes a little clearer with the material that Sir George Arthur adds to it, and one sees more vividly the enormous difficulties to which Kitchener was put in his attempt to satisfy the claims of the new front without depleting the main theatre, and the case which the commanders of either could make against him and the Government if he fell between the two stools, as inevitably he did. The Westminster Gazette agrees with Sir George that, in spite of everything, the expedition was a very considerable contribution to the defeat of the enemy and the defence of the East, but the cost and the discredit of it fell heavily upon Kitchener, and all who saw him at this period can testify to the racking anxiety and depression of spirits that it caused him, especially in the last days before the miracle of the bloodless evacuation. It is all the more to his credit that he never for a moment encouraged the ungenerous impulse to blame Sir Ian Hamilton and the commanders on the spot. He knew their difficulties too well.

ALL CANADIANS ARE FOREST OWNERS.

CANADA IS IN a unique position with regard to forests. Not only has she still large forest resources, but about 96 per cent. of the land on which these forests stand belongs to the Dominion or to the Provincial Governments—that is to the people of Canada. Nor is this ownership merely nominal. The different governments receive from the lumberman a price per thousand feet when the timber is cut, and a ground rental for every year the lumberman occupies the land. Thus, in addition to the benefit Canada receives from timber as a great basis of trade and manufacture, the taxes are reduced by the amount of this revenue. It, therefore, doubly behooves every Canadian to do all in his power to stop forest fires. Tourists may start a fire by throwing a lighted match from a smoking-car, or a clearing fire may get away from a settler clearing his land, or a hunter or fisherman may leave his camp-fire still burning when he breaks camp. Everyone should remember that every time these things happen and a fire starts every citizen in Canada is a loser. Those who care to pursue this subject further may secure free of charge a bulletin giving the statistics of forest fires by applying to the Director of Forestry, Ottawa.

NEW YORK'S RENTAL COURTS.

(Brantford Expositor.)

New York has rental courts which are doing good work, but there are some tenants who are not satisfied with its seemingly slow processes, and 25,000 of their number in East New York are threatening to get up a rent strike on May 1. Hence the proclamation by the corporation lawyers that they will urge the courts to issue warrants of conviction forthwith against any tenants who are not willing to arbitrate their grievances and abide by the law. The strike weapon, when improperly used, is a good deal of a nuisance.

WHAT MARSHALL FOCH REALLY SAID

Germany's appeal for an armistice on November 7, 1918, met with the laconic reply, "I have no terms," from Marshal Foch to Erzberger and the other plenipotentiaries, according to Raymond Recouly (Captain X), French biographer of Foch and Joffre, in an article entitled, "What Foch Really Said," which will be published in the May issue of Scribner's Magazine.

Captain Recouly, describing the historic scene of the morning of November 11, when the generalissimo of the Allied forces, attended by a few members of his staff, signed the document in a railway dining car in a forest near Rethonde, a town between Compiegne and Soissons, declared, "the sight of butter seemed to fill the German envoys with joy."

The radio from the Germans asking for "a cessation of hostilities in the name of humanity," was received by Foch shortly after midnight on the 7th, and at 1:25 a.m. on the 8th Foch sent back his answer: "The German plenipotentiaries will have to go to the outpost on the main road from Maubeuge-la-Capelle-Guise." From this point they were brought by delayed stages to Rethonde, which they reached about 7 o'clock in the morning. Two hours later they were in the presence of the commander of the conquering Allied armies.

"There was a cold salute," says Captain Recouly, "a bow in return; no presentations. The Germans took their places at the table in the dining car, where their names were written, and remained standing. The officers seemed embarrassed and upset. Not so the civilians, who did not seem to care at all. They talked familiarly together; it was impossible to believe that their country's fate was hanging in the balance and that they were to sign the most 'kolossal capitulation the world had ever seen."

Foch's piercing eyes, gruff voice and curt manner were impressive. "To whom have I the honor of speaking?" he asked. The Germans replied, "What is the object of your visit?" he asked. Then followed this dialogue:

Erzberger: "We have come to inquire into the terms of an armistice to be concluded on land, on sea and in the air."

Foch: "I have no terms to submit to you."

Count Oberndorff, the diplomatist in the German party, interceded: "If the Marshal prefers we may say that we are here to learn the conditions on which the Allies would be willing to grant us an armistice."

Foch: "I have no terms."

Erzberger, drawing forth a greasy paper: "President Wilson has informed our government that Marshal Foch has been invested with the power of submitting the Allies conditions to the German plenipotentiaries."

Foch: "I will let you know the Allies' conditions when you have asked for an armistice. Do you ask for an armistice?"

"Ja!" exclaimed Oberndorff and Erzberger together.

Foch: "In that case, I will read you the terms drawn up by the Allied governments." He sat down, and the reading began. It lasted an hour, for the document had to be translated. The Germans pleaded for an immediate suspension of hostilities and for time to permit the Berlin government to examine the terms. Again Foch spoke:

"I am but the mouthpiece of the Allied Governments. It is those governments that have drawn up the conditions of the armistice, limiting the delay to seventy-two hours' duration. I have, therefore, no power to suspend hostilities without their authorization."

The Germans at once dispatched a messenger to Spa, with credentials, and the request that his journey to Berlin be "facilitated." When the messenger reached the German outposts, it is related, the troops were so demoralized that they fired upon his white flag. Promiscuous volley firing continued, and the emissary was unable to reach his destination until the next day. Meanwhile the German envoys had notified Foch of their difficulty, and Foch agreed to permit them to send a German officer to Berlin by air. A plane was equipped and ready for the flight, when word was received that the messenger had reached Berlin.

Captain Recouly declares the armistice was signed because Foch and his staff were convinced that Germany was already in the throes of a revolution. The armistice envoys painted a "black picture" of conditions. While the German Government was analyzing the terms the plenipotentiaries remained near Foch in the forest at Rethonde. They were permitted to leave their train, and, guarded by armed soldiers, exercise in the open air. On the afternoon of the 10th Foch informed Erzberger, the head of the delegation, that hostilities would be resumed at 11 a.m. the next day. At 7 o'clock on the night of November 10th the following raido message was intercepted by the French:

"German Government to German plenipotentiaries: The plenipotentiaries are authorized to sign the armistice. (Signed) The Chancellor of the Empire." Three ciphered figures at the end of the message proved its authenticity. More than twelve hours of deliberation and debate over the "harsh" terms followed. Foch granted some concessions and refused the others.

Subsequently the wearied French, English and Germans appended their signatures to the document, and, by prearrangemnt, six hours after the signing, or 11 a.m. of the morning of the 11th, operations ceased along all the fronts. Four years of warfare which had cost more than nine million lives, was at an end.

INDUSTRIAL ALCOHOL

The Canadian Pharmaceutical Journal says: It is encouraging to know that our politicians are "seeing the light," even though dimly, and that the country may be nearing the period of tax-free industrial alcohol more rapidly than generally anticipated. The denseness of the average politician and department head is a condition familiar to all who have had occasion to interview either or both on matters of a technical, professional or scientific nature.

Absolute inability to grasp and assimilate ideas and facts appears to be the chronic condition of the entire membership of Government machinery. In no single instance has this characteristic been more clearly demonstrated than in the matter of alcohol production and use. It has been apparently hopeless to get the politicians to vision alcohol other than as a source of revenue. Its place in the economical sphere was unrecognizable and its potentialities an unknown quantity.

The keeping everlastingly at it of scientists and directors of industries has at last produced results, not startling, but nevertheless encouraging, and hope for the future is warranted. Industrial alcohol is a possibility of the near future.

Industrial alcohol is methyl alcohol denatured. Up to the present this has been represented by methylated spirits, which is a denatured alcohol with wood alcohol (methyl alcohol) as the denaturing agent. The process has been for the Government to purchase the alcohol and have it shipped to Ottawa, there to be subjected to denaturing operations. This cumbersome process has so enhanced the cost as to make the price prohibitive. Also the wood spirit has produced an article unfit for general use in the industries; a few only, such as paint and varnish houses, can use the product.

The proposition now being considered is to provide an article capable of more universal use in the arts and industries, and this is possible by the use of a variety of denaturing agents to be permitted by Government with the operations conducted in bond by licensed individuals or firms. When the decision of the Government to sanition this innovation became known, the distillers, keen to continue their monopoly and strangle hold on the people, sought to secure the exclusive right of denaturing and selling the product, but the commercial interests of the country had become alive to the situation, and, supported by the Research Bureau, organised strenuous opposition to such a suicidal purpose, these efforts were successful in preventing the erection of another monopolistic bar to national progress and efficiency.

The needs of world construction demand the removal of all obstacles, handicaps and privileges which operate to deprive the people of the benefit, which is legitimately theirs, to accrue from the development of natural resources in the production of the necessities of the nation's daily life, either in family, social or industrial spheres. In no phase is the presentday urge more pronounced than in that of fuel for the production of heat, light and power. Wood has disappeared, natural gas is being exhausted, coal supplies are failing and oil is mounting in price to the prohibitive line. Alcohol is the hope of the futre, and millions of tons of material is yearly wasted from which it could be produced, with unnecessary restrictions removed.

YELLOW HORNED POPPIES.

Pebbles of this sea-shore lone,
Yellow poppies find a way.
Magic poppies grow alone
In this barren place of stone.

Salt winds rising with the tide
Turn their green leaves frosty-

Toss their horns from side to side:
Tenser glows the poppies' light,
Like a lantern's in the night.

Beauty rooted in cold stone,
Salted by a ruthless sea,
Bowed the way the wind has blown;
Since this strange, sweet thing can be,
Root, oh poppies, root in me.

A PROBLEM OF THE FUTURE.

Will the Earth Return to Its Gaseous State?

The centre of the earth has a temperature of 195,000 degrees centigrade, according to scientific estimates. This is a concentration of heat that surpasses anything the imagination can conceive and one which scientists say will reduce to a state of vapor all the substances that enter into the composition of the globe. Furthermore, astronomers say that this planet was at one time an aggregation of wholly gaseous matter. Such statements seem somewhat contradictory until it is recalled that early astronomical lessons made the following graphic comparison.

On a globe six inches in diameter, the land to be in proportion should be represented by the thinnest writing paper; the hills by small grains of sand; the elevated ranges by the thick drawing paper; the water in the ocean by a brush dipped in color and lightly drawn over the surface of the sphere. With these facts before us we are perhaps less confused, and better able to imagine a thin-skinned earth with its interior in a doubtful state.

"But we may again be thrown into mental confusion," explains W. M. Butterfield in the Scientic American, "when we are told that a substance in the gaseous state occupies a space 1,800 times greater than when solid, so that the earth, if reduced to gas, would be as large as the sun.

"With a temperature of 195,000 degrees the incandescent gaseous world would shine in space as a world-made sun, with the same brilliance as a fixed star. Circulating about the sun, it would still obey the laws of universal gravitation and be governed by the same principles that govern other material substances.

"But how could the earth, in its present solid state, be reduced to its early gaseous condition? This question can be answered by first reflecting that the speed of the earth's motion in space is eighteen miles per second, and that it rotates about its axis with an equatorial velocity of more than 1,000 miles per hour; and by then comparing the earth, with its colossal speed in its two motions, to a shell from a big gun, which travels at most something like half a mile per second. Both these bodies have the same two motions, forward and rotational.

"Now when we consider that a 100-pound shell, coming in contact with an armor plate, will develop by the concussion sufficient heat practically to melt its way through the armor, we can in a way imagine the heat-developing results if a wild-cat celestial object, chasing uncontrolled through space, should collide solidly with our world in such manner as to combat its forward and twisting movements. The force developed in checking the earth's flight in its orbit, under such circumstances, would be proportioned, not only to the eighteen miles per second at which we travel in this path, but to eighteen plus twenty-six (the ordinary speed of meteors) miles per second, combining the velocities of the two bodies concerned.

"It is quite certain that under such circumstances the wanderer and our own earth would be instantly converted to the gaseous condition, in which they would coalesce and become as one, continuing to march through space in a path and at a speed equivalent to the resultant of so much of their original motions as had not been taken up by the impact. Indeed, instead of this being a fanciful or improbable occurrence, we know from centuries of recorded experience that our earth is continually bombarded with meteors, ranging from the insignificant atom of star-dust to the most important aerolitic alien of several hundred pounds weight, or even a mass measurable in tons.

"It is even suggested by some scientists that no mean part in the support of the sun's radiance is played by the vast number of meteors which rain down upon the fiery surface of that luminary and develop heat when they are checked [illegible]."

GERMAN UNIVERSITIES.

Students Are Numerous But Schools Are Bankrupt.

It was once a proud boast of Germany that of her twenty-one universities three—Berlin (1809), Bonn (1818), Strassburg (1872)—were war-made. The last war, though a disaster, continues the tradition. The University of Frankfort, with an enrolment at present of nearly 5,000, was formally opened in the winter of 1914. The University of Hamburg was dedicated in the spring of 1919. The University of Cologne is in the making. The medical faculty has already been organized and is giving instruction. The faculties of law, theology and philosophy are being organized. Despite the war, or because of it, virtually all German universities show an increase in enrolment over 1913-1914. This is especially true of the smaller and older institutions, such as Griefswald and Rostock. Numerically the German universities are flourishing.

Materially they are in desperate straits. Speaking on behalf of the scientific department Fritz Haber, professor of physical chemistry in Berlin and recipient last year of the Nobel prize, said on March 7: "There is but one thing to do. Use up the funds that were intended for the future. Careful reckoning shows that the laboratories can be kept going in this way for about three years. And then they will resemble old Venetian palaces, which stand empty and afford the casual visitor an interesting picture of places that once had real meaning." Prof. Harnack, now in charge of the Prussian Library in Berlin, states in an appeal for money that where the library subscribed for 2,300 foreign magazines in 1914 it now has 140. He says: "I have appealed in vain to American libraries to exchange foreign magazines for German books."

It is naturally the scientific departments that are suffering most. Salaries for employes of various kinds have increased 500 per cent., apparatus 960 per cent. and chemicals about 4,500 per cent. A gramme of platinum that formerly cost 7 marks now costs 300. The cost of printing has increased so enormously that it is impossible to bring out a scientific work unless the author is in a position to advance the money from his own purse.

Prof. Rubens of the physical institute of the University of Berlin says: "The entire funds at our disposal are not sufficient to pay for heat, light and service. The universities of Berlin, Gottingen, Heidelberg, Leipzig and Munich have asked the National Assembly to appropriate a lump sum of 3,000,000 marks for "scientific and cultural purposes" in addition to the regular budget. There is also a movement on foot to have state institutions whose influence extends beyond the state taken over by the Federal Government.

D'Annunzio's Favorite Dishes.

Innumerable peculiarities constitute the temperament of Gabriele d'Annunzio. He is superstitious to the core and will never sit down to an ordinary meal unless there are eleven at the table. He is fastidious in his choice of foods and will drink only a special kind of Rhine wine. His favorite dish is "scampi," a small crab-fish, found only in the Quarnero. He was a lover of the fish when he lived on the Grand Canal in Venice, says a Fiume correspondent.

So much did he think of the food that he went on a search of all that was written about them and has compiled already a studious lecture on the subject. The fish resembles in color the American shrimp, but is much larger and has a taste milder than lobster, approximating the crab, but considerably more toothsome. "Scampi" is the favorite sea food in practically all of the north Adriatic resorts.

Besides his partiality for "scampi," d'Annunzio is a lover of ice cream. He sometimes divides a large cake of it intended for the whole table, into two halves. He takes one entire half himself, then gives the other half to the remaining ten at the table.

The poet's dining-room must be done in red. The walls must be covered with red tapestry and much of the furniture. Then, too, orders are given concerning the color of flowers, [illegible] noon and night.

Compensation.

Daily Thought.

One no longer hears the old-time talk about "surplus women."

Soldier Poet Died Young

THE war brought forth many poets. Among them Charles Hamilton Sorley holds a distinctive if not a distinguished place. Death came to him when he had seen less than a half-year of service, for soon after the beginning of the battle of Loos he fell at the head of his company as he was leading it against the enemy. He was only twenty years of age, but he had in him the makings of a man who would have been of conspicuous service to the world.

Born in the midst of and brought up in academic surroundings, young Sorley's intellectual life began early. His father was Professor of Moral Philosophy in Aberdeen University, and he first saw the light in that ancient Scottish town on May 19, 1895. His ancestors on both sides were Lowland Scots from the lands between the Tay and the Tweed. When he was five years old his parents removed to Cambridge, where his father had been appointed Knightbridge Professor, and there he was educated at home and in the local schools until he entered Marlborough College in the autumn of 1908, gaining in 1913 a scholarship at University College which he was destined never to avail himself of. It was thought best for his father to give him a short tour on the continent as a break between public school and university, and the war came while he was homeward bound on his way through Germany. He reached home after slight difficulties on August 6, applied immediately for a commission in the army, and impatient at the delay was about to enlist as a private when he read his name in the Gazette as a second lieutenant in the seventh battalion of the Suffolk Regiment. By the time he went to France in May, he was a lieutenant, and he was soon advanced to a captaincy, which rank he held at the time of his death.

The beginning of his school life as a day-boy at the King's College Choir School in Cambridge broadened the awakening mind which had received its first stimulus under his mother's home tutelage. In company with his twin brother, his earlier education had consisted chiefly in singing and marching games in French and English, history stories and fairy stories, reading aloud from the Bible and the Pilgrim's Progress, and the learning by heart of passages from Shakespeare, Scott, Macaulay and Blake. In neither of the boys could be aroused any interest in natural history. Charles' happiest hour came when he was a real pupil in a real school. "He always wanted to grow up, and this was a stage farther on. Each new experience—whether game or book or place or human being—came as an adventure to him; he always criticised eagerly, but he reaped and remembered only the best—nothing else counted." When he went to Marlborough College he was separated from his brother, but they were together during their holidays and they looked forward to the university life that they were fated never to share.

When he entered Marlborough, the school at first absorbed him entirely. "He had a period of hero-worship, very little qualified by criticism, for its demigods among the boys and masters; he abounded in the mysteries of its etiquette and slang; and he would pore by the hour over the blue School List, declaring that he knew by headmark most of the boys in it, which may very well have been the case, as he had a quick memory for names and faces. His attitude towards the school, though essentially loyal and filial, developed in breadth and humor as he found freedom and read and thought for himself. The outdoor life of the school appealed no less to him because his mind was so eager to find and follow the literary ideas of the time. He was especially interested in football, but what he liked best was to tramp, to run, and to ride his bicycle over the surrounding country.

From his earliest boyhood he was accustomed to writing down what came into his mind, and his earliest efforts took the form of long screeds of heroic verse modelled on Scott and Macaulay. "Later," says his mother, "he indulged in stories of the 'shocker' sort, which he used to tell in the dormitory at night as the work of one Jonathan Armstrong. As he grew older he became more and more reserved about his writing. Though his family knew vaguely of his connection with the school magazine, The Marlburian, he never saw fit to enlighten them on the subject." The Master of Marlborough College notes especially that he was a rebel against convention, and that although he had in him the making of a good classical scholar he revolted against the routine of classical education. "In fact Latin literature as a whole failed to appeal to him, whilst he found satisfaction for his soul in the greater passion and idealism of Greek. He was a voracious reader of English literature, but was fastidious. Tennyson and Browning he could not away with. He thought they were imbued with Victorian artificiality and smugness. He was an ardent admirer of authors like Richard Jefferies and John Masefield." And it was apparently easy for him to discover the best things in modern verse. From the anthology of Georgian poetry, he selects as very striking the work of "two poets with strange names," Lascelles Abercrombie and Walter de la Mare, and he notes as "the poet of the tramp and vagabond," Wilfrid Wilson Gibson whom he had previously come across in the pages of the English Review. "And I'm blest," he remarks, "if the truest poem in the book isn't by Chesterton! It is certainly a surprising book, and I am glad to have it."

Philadelphia and Boston played a fourteen-inning 7 to 7 tie on the latter's grounds yesterday. Darkness stopped the game.

CO-OPERATIVE STORES.

Projects of This Kind Now on Foot In Alberta.

The co-operative store as a means of beating the high cost of living is in favor in Alberta just now. No other practical way of bringing down the prices or lessening the average family budget has yet been found, and there is a growing feeling that something might be done by a scheme of collective shopping, which, either in the form of cheaper prices or profit-sharing, offers some possible hope of making a dollar go farther.

Projects of this kind are now on foot in Edmonton, Calgary, and Lethbridge, with a likelihood of them all taking definite shape this spring or summer. In Edmonton the idea originated with the Railwaymen's Union, which has carried on a co-operative coal buying scheme for the past year. This initial experiment worked out very well, and it is now proposed to extend it, the railwaymen being joined in the larger scheme by a number of other workers' groups. The civil service of the Provincial Government had in mind an organization of its own, but has now united with the railroad workers, and the Dominion civil servants, city employes, Street Railway Union, letter carriers, firemen, School Teachers' Alliance, Great War Veterans, and local branches of the United Farmers have also taken up the idea and pledged their support.

The scheme has gone so far that stock is now being subscribed, each shareholder taking not less than $20 or more than $100. A retail store is to be opened, beginning with staple provisions and gradually adding other lines until a full departmental store business has been established. Regular market prices will be charged, but each shareholder will receive dividends from the profits of the enterprise on the basis of his own monthly purchases.

In Calgary a co-operative association is under way as a citizens' move against the H.C.L., and articles of incorporation are being prepared. A store for the merchandizing of foodstuffs will be opened as soon as $12,500 has been subscribed, and an authorized capitalization of $25,000 will be applied for. Each member of the association in this case will be required to pay a membership fee of one dollar as well as his stock at ten dollars a share. Some of the country points around Calgary will also be included in the operation of the scheme.

Labor interests are the movers in the Lethbridge scheme. With the same general complaint against rising costs, the workingmen of the city have put their heads and their purses together and now have a co-operative store proposition pretty well worked out. They are leaving it open to the public, however, and if the scheme carries through it will probably be on a fairly general basis.

Canada's Trade Growing.

A steady growth of Canada's trade in the twelve months ending February 29th last, is indicated in a statement issued by the Bureau of Statistics. Total imports for the year ending February 29 were $993,870,100, while in the previous year it was $35,266,472.

Total exports for the twelve months ending February 29 last were $1,246,341,600, as against $1,216,316,432 in the previous year. The duty collected on imports amounted to $177,766,266 in the past twelve months, as compared with $159,061,948.

During the twelve month period just ended, Canada imported from the United Kingdom goods to the value of $106,605,527 as compared with $74,806,773 in the previous twelve months. Exports to the United Kingdom were $597,091,477 during the year just ended, as compared with $546,790,141 in the previous year, a decrease of approximately $40,000,000. Imports from the United States totalled $764,185,943 during the past twelve months, which was approximately the same as during the previous twelve month period. Exports to the United States were $455,665,317, an increase of about $2,000,000 over the year ending February 28, 1919.

100,000 Stars.

Harvard University, in its work of studying the stars, uses a huge and specially built camera which photographs great areas of the sky. A sixteen-inch doublet telescope, constructed by Rev. Joel H. Metcalf, an astronomer of repute, is used with the specially contrived photographic apparatus.

A photographic plate inserted below the telescope is exposed for hours to the starlight, the scope moving across the heavens to allow for the movement of the earth and stars. Owing to the size of the plates and the great distances involved, it was found that stars around the edge were blurred. To counteract this, the plate, while in the holder, is pushed into a curved form by air pressure, thus remaining at all points equidistant from the focal point of the telescope.

The principal object in using the camera is to photograph sections of the heavens so that the various areas may be studied at leisure, and for as long a time as desired.

On one photograph made with this new camera over 100,000 stars have been counted by astronomical authorities of the university.—Illustrated World.

NATIONAL FIGURES.

Canada's Population Is Growing and So Is Her Debt.

Canada's population is estimated for 1920 at nine million people; her total revenue per head for 1920, $36.11; total expenditure per head, 1920, $75.01, and consolidated fund expenditure per head for 1920, $30.

These figures were tabled in the House of Commons at the request of Hon. W. S. Fielding, former Liberal Minister of Finance. Mr. Fielding asked for details as to revenue, expenditure and population for the years 1891 to 1920 inclusive.

The return showed that in 1891 Canada's total revenue was $38,579,310.88. By 1919 that revenue had grown to $312,946,747.18, and the estimated total revenue for 1920 at $325,000,000.

Expenditures chargeable to consolidated fund were: 1891, $38,343,567.00; 1919, $232,731,282.98; 1920 (estimated), $270,000,000.

Expenditures chargeable to capital: 1891, $3,115,960.04; 1919, $25,031,266.70; 1920 (estimated), $55,000,000.00.

Railway subsidies: 1891, $1,265,705.87; 1919, $43,805.32; 1920, $125,000.00.

War expenditure in 1919 reached its peak load with $446,519,439.48. For 1920 the sum set aside under this heading totals $350,000,000.00. Under the heading of "other charges" are the sums of $68,071.32 in 1891, and $7,283,581.61 in 1919. There is no estimate under this heading for 1920.

Total expenditures for the years named were: 1891, $40,793,306.19; 1919, $697,042,212.47; 1920 (estimated), $675,125,000.

Estimated population in each of the three years follows: 1891, 4,833,239; 1919, 8,835,000; 1920 (for the purposes of this return), 9,000,000.

Revenue per head of population, 1891, $7.98; 1919, $35.42; 1920, $30.00.

Total expenditure, including war, per head: 1891, $8.44; 1919, $78.90; 1920, $75.01.

The figures in the return were prepared by the Department of Finance.

Moore's Lone Hand.

In the Alberta Legislature to-day, the United Farmers of Alberta political party is composed of one member, A. A. Moore, of Cochrane, a farmer and rancher, who came from that famous Ontario county, Bruce. He was born at Lion's Head on October 1, 1876, and studied at the Public Schools of his native town and at the High School at Owen Sound. He farmed and farmed hard in Ontario, and spent his winters in the woods taking out timber. In 1907 he went West and took up a homestead in the Cochrane district northwest of Calgary. He proved up on his homestead, sold it and moved to the environs of the town of Cochrane, where he operated and still operates a dairy farm.

He was raised as a straight Liberal with an interesting break as a youth when he was a Patron of Industry. He is more farmer than Liberal, however, and welcomed the opportunity to try a tilt with the Government's candidate in the by-election rendered necessary by the death of the former Speaker of the Alberta Legislature, Charles W. Fisher. Against an array of speakers that included the Premier, Hon. A. G. Mackay, that seasoned political war horse from Ontario; Hon. G. P. Smith, Hon. C. R. Mitchell and other spellbinders and stump speakers, Mr. Moore waged a plucky fight that brought him a well-earned victory, and immediately the older parties, Liberals and Conservatives, began to see that it was time for them to prepare for a long and bitter battle with the U. F. A.

Mr. Moore has the happy knowledge that he also awakened the U. F. A. to a sense of their political opportunities. He was the pioneer in the field and with his success, the U. F. A. throughout the province decided that it was time for thorough political organization and this is now being accomplished on the basis that their party must be strictly a farmer's affair.

Mr. Moore stands alone in the House, but represents a power that stretches to every nook and corner of Alberta.

Food Value of Fats.

The heat values of butter and other fats are fairly constant. The values given are: For butter fat 9.312; for fat of animal tissue, 9.372, and olive oil, 9.384 calories per gram. The nutritional value of a food is, however, also determined by the presence or absence of certain vitamins. The fat-soluble accessory growth substance is present in beef fat and "oleo-oil," and margarines prepared on such a basis are probably the nutritive equivalent of butter.

Cocoanut oil, cottonseed oil, peanut oil, olive oil and nut and vegetable oils in general contain little or none of this accessory substance and margarines prepared from these are not the nutritive equivalent of butter. With allowance for metabolic products, the co-efficients of digestibility have been found to be: For butter fat, 97 per cent.; for beef fat, 93; for olive oil 97.8, and for cocoanut oil 97.9 per cent.

French Reconstruction.

It has been estimated that for building work alone in the reconstruction of France it will require 22,000,000 tons of material and the labor of 700,000 persons for one year. One hundred thousand houses are to be entirely rebuilt requiring 5,000,000,000 bricks, 1,000,000 tons of lime, 13,000,000 square miles of tile, and great quantities of sand and wood. The reconstruction of railroads and highways will require 3,000,000 and the labor of 15,000 men for one year.

MUNICIPALITIES SHOULD

Would They be Obsolete.

Mr. Elliott raised the question to whether, at the end of the 40 years, the plants and systems would not have become obsolete or worn out and tht municipality would have a "worthless thing on its hands." Mr. Ireland replied that under the system adopted besides the ordinary maintenance expense there was a revenue set aside for renewal or depreciation which would be sufficient at the end of the 40 years to replace the whole system. In other words, at the end of 40 years, they would have a system on their hands which was as good as it was today.

Would Rates Increase?

Mr. Campbell, of Kingston, wanted to know whether the power rates would be increased or decreased under the proposed scheme and also would pressure be brought to bear on municipalities to compel them to buy out their local distributing systems. Mr. Ireland replied that there should be no difference whatever in the price of the power unless it was a small decrease due to the increasing demand. There was no intention of compelling any municipality to undertake its own distributing system. The question was also raised as to why 40 years was fixed instead of 30 years as in Western Ontario. Mr. Ireland said that this was because considerable expense was being gone to in order to make the system as up-to-date as possible, and that rather than place a heavier burden on the people a smaller sinking fund was allowed, and therefore spread over a longer time.

Mr. Boyes wanted to know if it was the intention of the commission to fix a uniform rate and stated that his municipality was very much in favor of such a scheme. It was pointed out that the present legislation called for power at cost and that a uniform rate would not be power at cost.

St. Lawrence Power.

Another objection raised by Mr. Campbell on behalf of the municipality of Kingston was that according to statements made by members of the commission recently that there was a possibility of the St. Lawrence being developed, and it might therefore be against Kingston's best interests to tie its capital up in the Central Ontario system, when it was quite possible that the St. Lawrence power would be cheaper in Kingston. Mr. Ireland thought that was a question which Kingston would have to consider carefully before entering into any agreement. Offhand, he was not prepared to say whether he thought the St. Lawrence power would be any cheaper than the Trent Power. He also thought that within a few years the Niagara, Trent and St. Lawrence systems would all be connected up.

Taxation of public utilities as suggested in Mr. Swailes' bill, now before the House, came in for some sharp criticism, and Mr. Ferguson moved that the members of the Municipal Association take the matter up with their local municipalities and if thought advisable to memorialize the Ontario Government on the matter either by deputation or otherwise.

Mayor McIntyre, who was unable to be present for the opening of the meeting, gave an address of welcome at the close.

BARONET HELD

two of them grabbed him. He protested vigorously, but was held until Policeman Collins arrived to take him in charge.

In the station house, Wernher declared he could not understand why "the citizens should make such a disturbance over what occurred. I just shoved the little brat," the police quoted him as saying in explanation. They said he told them young Sassa almost knocked him down and that his glasses fell off.

Mrs. Elizabeth Sassa, the boy's mother, appeared in the station house as the complainant against Wernher.

The prisoner said he was employed as an editor in the Funk & Wagnalls publishing establishment and that he recently quit the British army. He was a major during the war, he told the police.

According to newspaper files of 1912, Derrick Wernher was described as a graduate of Eton and Oxford.

Wernher was released in $1,000 bail after friends located a representative of a surety company.

WORLD'S CHAMPION SMOKER.

Foch Finishes Big, Full Pipe In Three Minutes.

New sidelights on Marshal Foch, the allied generalissimo during the war, are given by Joseph Cumming Chase, American artist, who painted his portrait and tells about it in the World's Work. He writes:

When I was ushered into his presence and presented, the marshal thrust out his hand rapidly and gave me a grip that reminded me of Theodore Roosevelt.

"Do you speak French?" was his first question.

"I have a little French," I answered, "but it is mostly the argot of the Latin quarter."

This made the marshal laugh outright. In a spirit of boyish mischief, he tried a few slangy Latin quarter phrases on me, evidently to see if I could "get" them. Happily I was able to answer in kind, and this gave Marshal Foch very evident pleasure.

"May I work, or do you wish that I should give attention to you?" he asked.

I did not wish to be unreasonable, but still I could get better results if I had at least a measure of his attention.

In a few moments, however, he made another request.

"May I smoke?"

Possibly had I known what the marshal meant by "smoking," I would not have acceded so readily to his request. The result was that I painted the great French general sitting behind what was virtually a dense smoke screen. I have never seen such a smoker, and I had never imagined that there could ever be one like him. A huge brown pipe lay on the table; as soon as he had gained the artist's acquiescence, the long, thin, nervous fingers of the marshal's and seized it, filled it in a twinkling, inserted it firmly between his lips, and instantly the volcano erupted.

In a second the marshal himself was all but lost to view; now and then I could get a glimpse of an ear, a portion of the head, the nose, and other lineaments, which I had to jot down on my sketch as opportunity offered. It was veritably a case of "low visibility." All the time I could hear the sharp staccato sounds of the marshal's lips, tightly pursed about the pipe stem, as with characteristic rapidity he puffed away. Big as it was, it took the marshal only about three minutes to finish the pipe; and then I busily set to work, for I had a full unrestricted view, but again he seized his tobacco, pressed it rapidly in the bowl, and, in another second, the general's face again became the merest outline behind mighty clouds of smoke. In about three minutes this relay of tobacco was also consumed. I have regretted that I didn't keep exact count, for this exhibition of the smoker's art was the most startling I have ever beheld; I am confident that, in the hour and a half of the sitting, the marshal filled his pipe at least twenty times.

I attempted to keep up the conversation, but my French frequently failed me, and once in particular I became hopelessly entangled. While I was struggling with my sentence, trying vigorously to make my meaning clear, Foch astonished me by breaking into perfect English, telling me in my own tongue what I was trying to say.

"But they told me that you spoke no English," I said, in accents that showed my surprise.

He smiled and said, in perfect English again:

"Sometimes—for my friends!"

I was a little puzzled at first about the color of his eyes.

"What color do you think they are?" asked the marshal.

He jumped from his chair, walked swiftly over to where I was sitting and thrust his face into mine, so that it was only a few inches away.

"See for yourself!" he said.

I feared that the painting made the marshal look too old, and asked him if he thought so. He looked at it quietly and said—the reply has always seemed to me to sum up his character.

"No. I am old. And you must be true."

He asked if he could do anything more for me, and when I said "No," thanking him for the great kindness he had already done, he took an envelope and wrote his signature.

"For the wife of the artist," he said, handing it to me. This is now one of my wife's most cherished possessions.

WAS ASTONISHED AT THE CHANGE

HAD SUFFERED FOR TWO YEARS GAINS NEW STRENGTH AND COURAGE AFTER TAKING TANLAC.

"I am glad to give you this testimonial, for Tanlac has done so much for me," said Mrs. Alphonse Cloutier, of 181 Victoria Street, Quebec, to a Tanlac representative, recently.

"For two years previous to taking this wonderful medicine," she continued, "I was in a very weakened state as the result of indigestion and a disordered stomach. The very least thing in the way of heavy food caused me great distress. Bitter liquid would come up into my mouth and the gas would press against my heart and lungs so as to cause palpitation and shortness of breath. I used to get awfully low spirited and at night I could not sleep. Many a time I have spent a whole night without closing an eye and the next morning I would be in a state of utter collapse. I tried many medicines without getting any relief and my weakness was getting greater every day.

"I heard Tanlac being praised by so many people that I decided to try a bottle myself. I am now finishing my second bottle and the change that has taken place in my health is really astonishing. I never would have believed it possible for two bottles of Tanlac to do so much. It has relieved me of all my stomach trouble, and I can eat anything I want without the least bit of trouble afterwards. The gas has quit forming and I am no longer troubled with heart palpitation or the shortness of breath. My sleep is now restful and unbroken and in the mornings I get up feeling fine and ready to do my housework. I have regained my energy and courage and can truthfully say that my health is better today than it ever was. My aged mother is also taking Tanlac and has derived great comfort and benefit from its use. I cannot recommend this medicine too highly, and I hope this statement will lead others who suffer as I did from general weakness and a disordered stomach to try Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by The Warne Drug Co., and by the leading druggists in every town.

The King's Wine Cellars.

Major Edne Thomas Kingscote has lately been appointed Gentleman of the Royal Cellars, in place of Mr. Thomas Kingscote, who has resigned.

The King's cellars are under St. James' Palace, and it is from these that all the various royal residences, including Windsor Castle and Buckingham Palace, are supplied. Wines are purchased in the wood and laid down. They are then bottled in the cellars, and stored until required.

In Queen Victoria's time these cellars, which cover a quarter of an acre, contained an immense amount of fine old sherry, but when King Edward came to the throne most of this was sold.

The wine required for immediate use is requisitioned by the chief butler, an official whose salary is £600 a year.—Tit-Bits.

Vigo.

The principal industry of Vigo, Spain, is sardine packing. The Vigo district furnishes almost one-fourth of the world's production of sardines. The exports of those in oil in 1918 amounted to 1,017,000 cases of 100 tins each, with an estimated total value of $13,000,000.

The Reason.

The Bogey Man

By ALDEN CHAPMAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

When the mothers of Ellington wished to warn or frighten their children who were troublesome or rebellious, they had a "bogey man" directly at hand without appealing to a vague and distant object of juvenile dread.

Just at the outskirts of the town was a spot marshy and broken. It had been at one time a great resort for wild ducks and geese in the season and some ardent hunter had built a shed house fairly habitable. With the growing scarcity of game it had been abandoned until "Old Moon," tramp, cynic, miser, hermit, it was reported, came along, appropriated the ramshackle hut, patched it up and settled down. All kinds of wild stories were current concerning him. He was old, gray whiskered, had glittering, forbidding eyes and never addressed those who met him. Once or twice a week he would visit the local general store, purchase what provisions he required and then again retire to his gruesome retreat.

Robert Blake, his wife and their little four-year-old child lived in a neat but isolated cottage directly at the edge of the swamp. They had bought it cheap on account of its unfavorable situation, but had made a perfect paradise of its garden space. Economical as they were, however, they had not been able to keep up their payments on the property, illness and lack of steady employment cutting down the income of Mr. Blake. At times they dejectedly feared that they would have to give up their little home.

Doris was a bright, lively little sprite and rarely wandered away from home. Upon her youthful mind Old Moon had been impressed in a way that made her serious, but one moonlight evening she came rushing into the house in a fervent frame of excitement.

"Oh, papa! mamma!" she cried breathlessly, "I've talked to him!"

"Who is 'him,' Doris?" questioned her mother.

"Old Moon. Oh, surely he was the man you once pointed out to me! He was coming from the town, his arms full of groceries, and a bundle fell over and I ran out and picked it up and gave it to him. He set his things on the ground and put his hand on my head and said, 'Thank you, my little cherub,' and then gave me this box of candy. He spoke so kindly, and he can't be a bugaboo, to treat a little girl so nice, can he, now?"

Old Moon was no longer quoted to Doris as a bogey man. In fact, she asked questions constantly about his lonely living place and wanted to see him again. One day her father brought home her first pair of rubbers and Doris gloated over an accession she had long coveted.

"I can go out in the wet grass now whenever I want to, can't I, mamma?" she submitted. "Why, I can even walk along the edge of swamp water, picking pretty pebbles and shells. Oh, what dear, cute little rubbers!"

It was just about dusk one afternoon when Doris started from the house. It had been raining and the fact delighted her, for she could find some puddles to wade through. She ventured in the direction of the swamp. Some distant flowers tempted her and she wandered on and on until a haze coming down over the landscape confused her. She began to cry as she found that she had lost both rubbers in the mud.

Then she saw a spark of light in the distance. She hurried toward it, to arrive in front of a wretched hut. Vaguely she fancied that it must be the oft-mooted habitation of Old Moon. She tiptoed to the sill of a window, glanced within a lighted room and, young as she was, what she saw there chilled and thrilled her—Old Moon lying bound head and foot upon the floor and two men bending over him. One held a hammer menacingly, the other was prodding the helpless captive with a poker.

Doris ran from the spot with a wild cry of fright. It was shrill and echoing. Missing their little one, her father and mother had started to find her.

"Oh, papa! mamma!" gasped Doris wildly as they reached her—"Old Moon in his house and two men are trying to kill him!"

Robert Blake seized a heavy piece of wood and drove in the window sash as he in turn discerned what was going on behind it. The two strangers fled at his appearance. Mr. Blake relieved the old hermit of his bonds.

"They were talking of torturing me with a red-hot poker if I did not disclose the hiding place of my money," he explained. "You have saved it, and me. Ah! is that your child?" as the door opened and little Doris and her mother stood revealed.

It appeared that Old Moon had no inconsiderable treasure hidden in the old shack. The visitation of the burglars had the effect of driving him nearer to his neighbors. His gratitude toward little Doris, who had been the medium of his rescue, led to his building a new and better home next to that of the Blakes. He insisted on helping them out of their money troubles, proving a good friend and neighbor and seeming never to tire of the company of the little child whose adventurous spirit had been the means of transforming "the bogey man" into a happy and rational human being.

Fire destroyed the International Hotel at Windsor, causing about $100,000 damage and driving forty guests into the street.

First Canadian Divorce Granted

IN the middle of an aged volume, bound in legal brown, among the archives of the Law Society of Upper Canada, lies hidden, the story, and if you will, the romance, of the first divorce ever granted in Canada. In an age when divorce is common enough to disconcert conservative people, it is interesting to consider the act of the bearded members of the Legislature of Upper Canada who set the fashion at Toronto in 1840.

It all began with the Rebellion of 1837, although it is perhaps unfair to attribute this "reform" to the spirit of William Lyon Mackenzie. But after the rebellion a paternal Government despatched to the province, among others, the 32nd Regiment of Foot, to pacify the disgruntled settlers of an excited colony. Among the officers of the regiment was Lieut. Grogan, as he would now be called, but then, neither "lef—" nor "loo-tenant," because an officer junior to captain was "Mister Grogan."

The regiment was first stationed at London in which town lived John Stuart, a barrister, and his wife. After some months it was moved to Toronto, and, probably, to show their hospitality, the Benchers of the Law Society surrendered their quarters at Osgoode Hall to the officers of the regiment, and took their offices to the Parliament Buildings.

Strange to relate, Mrs. Stuart, who was a granddaughter of Chief Justice Powell, of Upper Canada, also came to Toronto—to visit her mother. She is even said to have paid a visit to Osgoode Hall, no doubt to pay her respects to the memory of her grandfather, but with the result that either she eloped with Mister Grogan, or Mister Grogan eloped with her—tradition and rumor throwing some doubt upon this part of the legal proceedings.

At any rate, there was a bona fide elopement, and John Stuart, barrister, came from London, but bearing no be-ribboned brief to Osgoode Hall. Instead he carried his trusty pistol to avenge the honor of his name. Justice Riddell has related in one of his accounts of early duels, the manner in which Stuart and Grogan met upon the island. Neither of the principals nor any of the spectators was injured and contrary to the laws of duelling, Grogan fired into the air.

An action for damages was brought and Stuart recovered $3,264 to salve his honor, but unsatisfied, an application was made to the Legislature for a divorce, whereupon, after due consideration, they passed an 'Act for the Relief of John Stuart'—the first Canadian divorce—of which the following is a fair and true copy:

"Third Victoria. Capter 72. An Act for the Relief of John Stuart. Royal Assent Promulgated on the 18th of June, 1841. Forasmuch as John Stuart of the Town of London, Esquire, hath, by his petition humbly set forth, that he and Elizabeth Van Renaselaer Stuart, formerly Elizabeth Van Rensselaer Powell, are both natives of the said Province of Upper Canada; that a marriage was in due form of law had and solemnized between them at the City of Toronto, in the said Province, in the year of our Lord, one thousand, eight hundred and thirty-four; that he has had three children, daughters, born to him by his said wife, all of whom are living, who are between the ages of two and five years; that he continued to enjoy the comfort and assistance of his wife, from the time of such marriage until on or about the twenty-fifth of June, now last past, when on a visit to her mother in the City of Toronto, aforesaid, having eloped with one John Grogan, then a Lieutenant in Her Majesty's Thirty-Second Regiment of Foot, and at that time stationed in the said City of Toronto, and immediately before stationed at the Town of London, aforesaid: she, the said Elizabeth Van Renaselaer Stuart eloped from him, the said John Stuart, and has continued ever since to live apart from him, the said John Stuart; and the said John Stuart commenced an action in Her Majesty's Court of the Queen's Bench against the said John Grogan, for the seduction of his said wife, in which such proceedings were had, that a judgment was therein rendered for him, the said John Stuart against the said John Grogan, for the sum of £671 14s. 3d. damages and costs, as by the record of the said judgment, reference being thereunto as will more fully appear and hath humbly prayed that he might be divorced a vinculo matrimonii from his said wife.

"And whereas the said John Stuart hath made proof of the facts above recited, and it is expedient that the prayer of the said petitioner should be granted: Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Legislative Council and Assembly of the Province of Upper Canada, constituted and assembled under the authority of an Act passed by the Parliament of Great Britain: That the said marriage between the said John Stuart and the said Elizabeth Van Ranaselaer Stuart, his wife, shall, from henceforth, be null and void, and the same is hereby declared, adjudged and enacted, to be null and void to all intents and purposes, whatsoever."

Three short paragraphs that follow declare that either party may remarry and protect the rights of the three children, Mary Sophia, Caroline Elizabeth and Agnes Grant Stuart and any children that there might be from further marriages.

Thus it began.

MAPLE SUGAR MAKING.

Art Learned From the Indians by Early Settlers.

The making of maple sugar and syrup has become but a memory in the recollection of residents in many of the older parts of Canada where even the woodlots have given up their places to cultivated fields. The industry is still, however, an important one over large areas in Quebec, and to a less extent in Ontario and the provinces down by the sea.

Sugar making from the maple which is confined entirely to this continent, had a very early beginning. Before the advent of the white man the Indian had learned to extract and concentrate the sap of the maple tree. On the approach of spring the trees were gashed with the tomahawk in a slanting direction and beneath the opening made was inserted a wooden chip or spout to direct the fluid drop by drop into the receptacle resting on the ground. The sap was caught in a birch dish and boiled in earthen kettles. The small quantity of dark, thick syrup thus made, was the only sugar available to the Indians, and is stated by early writers to have been highly prized.

The early settlers from the Old Land learned from the Indians the art of sugar making, and indeed followed for many years their crude methods of manufacture. Even yet primitive equipment and methods are stated to be used in back sections of the country that turn out their annual crop of dark, inferior syrup and sugar.

For perhaps a century the white man followed very closely the primitive methods of the Indians, save the substitution of iron or copper kettles for vessels of clay or bark. In the early days before the timber acquired much value the axe continued to be used for tapping the trees, the sap was caught in wooden troughs and conveyed in buckets on the shoulders with a sap yoke to a central point to be boiled. No sugar bush was fully equipped without snowshoes which were frequently found necessary in gathering the sap. The boiling was done in large iron kettles suspended from a pole in the open woods in a sheltered location with no protection from the sun, rain or snow or the ashes, falling leaves, moss and bits of bark that were driven about by the wind.

The maple products made by the crude method were strong in flavor, dark in color and variable in quality.

Until about fifty years ago there was little improvement made in the methods of sugar makers; but since that time the advance has kept pace with that in other branches of agriculture until it has become a more or less highly organized commercial industry.

An early improvement was the substitution of the auger for the axe in tapping, coopered buckets took the place of the birch bark "caso" or hewn sap trough, while the kettle gave way to the evaporating pan, which has, in latter years, developed into the modern evaporator with corrugated bottom and separate compartments. Not alone for the conservation of the life of the tree, but also for the cleanliness in sugar making, the wooden spout has almost disappeared in the most advanced sections, in fact the tendency now is toward the use of metal in every article of equipment with which the sap, syrup or sugar comes in contact. Furthermore, the increasing cost of labor is being met by the ingenious inventor, who has provided facilities for taking full advantage of the law of gravitation in handling the fluid, which in a well-equipped plant flows of its own accord from the collecting tank to the storage vat, from thence to the evaporator and, when boiled to a proper consistency, into the receiving can. Indeed where the profile of the sugar orchard will permit of it, pipe lines are laid to conduct the sap from outlying collecting centres to the camps where evaporation takes place.

With all the advance that has taken place in manipulation, sugar making has not lost its romantic side. "Sugaring off" at the sugar camps in the woods is still looked forward to by young and old, who regard the event as a social feature affording rare enjoyment. The tramp to the woods on a spring day, the aroma of the escaping steam, the partaking from a wooden paddle by means of a chip-like scoop, the hot syrup just on the verge of solidifying into sugar, or the tasting of the "wax" that has been allowed to harden on the clean snow, all serve to inspire the reminiscent storyteller and to awaken the amorous instincts of the budding youths. Such was the sugaring off of decades ago, and such it is to-day, where sugar orchards are operated for from two to four weeks in the spring in certain sections year after year.—J. B. Spencer in Canadian Forestry Journal.

Tribute to Our Fliers.

"Out of a population of eight millions no less than 11,000, or one in 800 of the population, took part in Britain's great war in the air. In Canada the people have played a very large part in obtaining supremacy for the Empire. No country of its population provided so many pilots."

This tribute to the remarkable record in aviation that Canada achieved during the war was made by Mr. Frederick Handley Page, inventor of the celebrated Handley Page bombing machine, during an address to the Canadian Club in Toronto. Mr. Handley Page foresees great possibilities for commercial aviation in Canada, owing to the large number of trained pilots available and through the possession of the natural resources essential for airplane manufacture. He stated that commercial aviation in England had been accepted as practical and highly satisfactory, pointing out that not a single accident had occurred in 82,000 miles of aerial travel, during which 4,200 passengers and 49,000 pounds of freight had been carried.

The Roman signal for battle was the unfurling of a red flag. The white flag is a token of peace in every part of the world.

Superstition Concerning Caul.

It used to be the belief that a child "born with a caul" would turn out very fortunate, and that the caul itself would bring luck to those who purchased it. Even lawyers used to buy them at high prices, as a means of making them eloquent, but their chief virtue always has lain in the fact that they were supposed to be an infallible amulet against death by drowning. Hence in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries there was a great demand for them in the British navy.

Sir Oliver Lodge Won Fame First in Science,—Then Teaching Spiritism

SIR OLIVER LODGE, the eminent British scientist, has attracted world wide attention by his investigation of spiritualism and his remarkable utterances on this subject.

Few men of science have had such a brilliant career as this distinguished savant, who is now in his sixty-eighth year. Born at Penkhull in Staffordshire, the son of a physician, he entered the University College, London, at an early age in order to take a scientific course and perfect himself in mathematics. His progress was rapid. At the age of twenty-six he received the degree of Doctor of Science. In 1881 he was elected professor of physics at the newly founded University of Liverpool. In 1887 he became a Fellow of the Royal Society. In 1888 he received the honorary degree of LL.D. from the University of St. Andrews, Scotland. Since then he has received an ever-increasing number of honors from learned bodies in Great Britain and other countries. He was knighted in 1902.

In the course of his career Sir Oliver Lodge has undertaken research work and has made discoveries that have placed him among the world's greatest physicists. This is especially true of his discoveries in electrical phenomena. Some of his discoveries paved the way to many important inventions, including wireless telegraphy.

SIR OLIVER LODGE.

Sir Oliver Lodge, for more than a score of years, has been associated with the English Society for Psychical Research, and is foremost among purely scientific investigators who have endeavored to supply a conclusive answer to those great questions of the ages—"Is there life after death? Can the dead communicate with the living?" As the result of profound study of spirit phenomena, he became convinced that human survival beyond the grave can be scientifically proved.

A man of impressive appearance and magnetic personality, he stands on the platform like a fine old oak that has weathered many storms. Grace, might and stability are associated with the man and his utterances. The background of a great career that made him an international figure before psychic matters were linked with his name gives a measure of weight to all he has to say. His manner is somewhat that of a popular college professor lecturing to his students—easy, informal, illustrative.

How to Test a Diamond.

Diamonds of bright tints, reds and greens and blues, are immensely valuable, but where the tint is slight it only destroys the diamond's beauty.

Colors and tints are due to the presence of impurities.

Testing the genuineness of a diamond is very difficult and only an expert can be absolutely sure. Imitation gems are made sometimes by cementing a thin layer of real diamond on a glass or other crystal body. If such a gem is placed in oil the division between the real and fake crystal can be seen.

There are a few other crystals that will cut glass, so that this test is not fully reliable. Ordinary fakes can be detected with a nail file. Run the file over a corner of the gem. A diamond will not be scratched. No acid will affect the brilliancy of a diamond.

Where Bugs Meet.

The end of a horse's nose is a favorite meeting-place for bugs. In fact, some of them try to raise their families there. And the horse is helpless. Its tail won't reach around that far, and its bit restrains its tongue. A veil is its only protection.—Popular Science Monthly.

Japan's New Year Decorations.

A singular feature to be seen in Japan on New Year's day is a grass rope running from house to house, with symbolical decorations. It is believed to ward off evil spirits during the year.

SALT IN LIVE STOCK RATIONS

(Experimental Farms Note.)

Common salt (sodium chloride) plays an important part in the diet of most classes of farm animals. This will be better appreciated if we stop to consider that, of the minerals in the fluids of the body, salt is present in the largest amount. Salt does not contribute directly to the energy of the body as does the food consumed, but nevertheless it is necessary in the proper nutrition of the body. Besides its physiological action salt serves as an appetizer and increases the palatability of many foods. It also stimulates the secretion of digestive juices, promotes good circulation of the fluids of the body and prevents digestive disturbances.

Of the common classes of farm animals, horses, cattle, sheep and swine, the latter have the least need of salt. This is in all probability due to the difference in diet, that of swine usually consisting largely of grain whereas other classes consume large quantities of roughage in which less salt is found. Too large quantities of salt derange the stomach and bowels of swine causing gases, diarrhoea, convulsions and paralysis, often resulting in death. Nevertheless pigs should have access to salt, the best means of providing it being to keep before them at all times, in a covered receptacle if outdoors, a mixture of salt, charcoal, airslaked lime, bone-meal and wood ashes or soft coal cinders.

For sheep salt is very necessary. Keeping it before them all times is here again the most advisable course for an irregular supply induces scouring. The salt tends to keep the sheep in a good state of health and they are better able to ward off attacks of disease or internal parasites. Furthermore, sheep fed plenty of salt shear a better quality and heavier fleece than do those receiving no salt.

In the case of cows owing to their much larger size and the fact that they are giving daily large amounts of milk which contains considerable salt, a heavier ration of salt is needed. For cows being fed in the stable up to 2.5 ounces per day is recommended. While cows giving a heavy flow of milk require an abundance of salt, at the same time the dry, pregnant cows should not be overlooked as their requirements are even greater. Cattle on pasture usually require less salt than those indoors and the amount necesary varies with the nature of the soil and vegetation. On this account it is advisable to have a supply before them at all times. Either rock salt or ground salt may be used but in eithter case it should be placed in a receptacle in which it will be sheltered from the rain or much of it wil be lost. Young growing animals usually require a larger percentage of salt than do mature animals.

Horses are no exception in the matter of salt requirement. Here again it should be regularly supplied. A cake of rock salt in the corner of the manger where the horse can get it at will is the best means of provision. Horses at heavy work require more than those that are idle or at light work. An allowance of two ounces per day is generally recommended.

PROPOSE TO TERMINATE

to construct a certain amount of storm drainage before paving is done. In this connection he also pointed out that the whole $3,500 in the Board's appropriation for surface drainage is to be spent for storm drainage on Risk street.

Ald. Turner's idea for providing money for all the storm drainage so badly needed is to issue debentures for the $25,000, which this work would cost. The Board, however, would hardly like to risk a bylaw for this purpose being turned down by the ratepayers in the face of so much expenditure to be incurred this year.

Looking Ahead.

On motion of Ald. Turner Council will be asked to give notice of its intention to construct sewers on George street from Westcott to Romaine streets; on George street from King Edward School to Princess street, and on George street from Prince street to Lansdowne street.

In case the street railway is extended in this direction these sewers will be constructed, and the George street paving thus extended to Lansdowne street as at first intended.

Request Turned Down.

S. Caddigan's request for a sewer from south of Romaine street to Monaghan Road to serve his house was not granted. The work would be too costly for one service only.

Crossing Wanted.

The Imperial Oil Company's request for a plank crossing over Perry street to their premises was referred to Mr. Parsons to look into and report, having in mind the concrete sidewalk in contemplation for the Raybestos Co. should their bylaw carry.

Who Were There.

There were present Mayor A. A. McIntyre, presiding, Aldermen Turner, Gainey and Morrison, Engineer Parsons and Street Commissioner H. Evans.

JAKE SOLOMON WEARS A VERY BROAD SMILE

WINS THIRD PRIZE IN TORONTO BOWLING TOURNAMENT

Jake Solomon is wearing a particularly broad smile this week and there's a reason. Last week he went up to Toronto in company with some local bowlers to compete in the five-pin bowling tournament there. There were some pretty good bowlers entered from all parts of Ontario, but Jake was able to make a good showing against them and corralled third prize with a total of 622 for the three games.

Incidentally Jake will probably be sporting a new pair of pants within the next few days, for there was an additional prize of a brand new pair of trousers offered to the highest local scorer by the manager of the Regent Tailors here. When Jake left Toronto on Saturday he had second place, but there were still a few more to bowl, and one of them succeeded in nosing him out of that position into third place.

STUDEBAKER PLANT EMPLOYMENT PLAN

TEN PRIVATE ROOMS FITTED OUT AT SOUTH BEND OF FACTORY

Announcement of an innovation in employment methods is just made by the Studebaker Corporation, South Bend, Indiana. Under the new plan applicants for positions are no longer iterviewed wholesale in public, but are granted personal interviews in private.

When a man applies for a position at the factory co-operative department, which is in charge of employment activities, he is given a number and requested to make himself at home in the spacious waiting room. A Studebaker representative is always available to give advice to applicants. He aids them in filling out applications and helps them decide if they are in doubt, which department they are best fitted for.

"Men prefer and appreciate the opportunity of a personal interview," says Dr. C. A. Lippincott, who is in charge of the co-operative department. "They do not like the idea of having some "hard-boiled" individual bawl out questions or otherwise try to make them feel as small as possible. The men with whom applicants at the Studebaker plant come into contact are trained in courtesy and taught to take a friendly and helpful interest in all who have a desire to join the organization.

"Nor does this interest and co-operation end here. After the applicant becomes an employee, he finds such advantages offered him as anniversary checks, vacation with pay, life insurance and pensions, the chance to own his home on a co-operative plan and co-operative stock purchases. In fact, the longer he remains with the Studebaker Corporation the larger the part he takes as a co-partner in its affairs."

TAKE TEN YEARS TO RESTORE TRAFFIC

CHIEF NEEDS IMPORTATION OF ROLLING STOCK AND HOME DEVELOPMENT

Russian railroad shops, working at a maximum of peace time capacity, will require more than ten years to restore normal traffic with the present facilities of production, according to a survey recently published in the "Economic Life." The chief needs are shown to be the importation of rolling stock and the home development of the transportation industry.

The survey shows that in 1914 the number of locomotives was approximately 20,000 with 16 per cent unfit for use. The present number of locomotives is about 10,000 with fifty-nine per cent out of commission or in need of repairs, and the number of cars 250,000. Lines in operation have also dimnished about twenty per cent.

The maximum pre wor production in the Russian shops was 1,800 locomotives and 40,000 cars annually, and the number that retired each year was 1,300 locomotives and 30,000 trucks. The present need is for 15,000 locomotives and 450,000 cars.

WHISKEY IS OF SHOCK VARIETY

THE WAY SCOTLAND LOOKS ON AMERICAN WET GOODS

Greenock, Scotland, April 29.— A report on American rye whiskey now being imported into Scotland has been filed by the chief constable of Greenock, who declared that the liquor is of the "shock" variety. The American tipple is known locally as "snake-bite," says the chief constable.

The effects of pre-war whiskey, he says, even when it had not been bonded for three years before being sold at retail, were nothing as compared to the effects of some of the overseas brands.

"Whatever their composition," says the officer, "their effects are terrible. They not only poison, but madden. Their intoxicating effects have passed away."

A delegation will proceed to Ottawa on Friday to lay their case before the Minister of Finance.

FALCONS LAUDED BY A N. Y. CRITIC

EVENING TELEGRAM SAYS CANADA TRIMMED US CLEAR AS A HOUND'S TOOTH."

New York, April 28.—Under the caption "Prepare—Olympic slogan," The Evening Telegram tonight comments on the victory of the Winnipeg Falcons at Antwerp Sunday as follows:

"Canadas' tidy triumph in the Olympic hockey tournament emphasizes again how essential it is for American to drive forward in its work of preparation for the international events to come. Canada trimmed us clean as a hound's tooth. The defeat was particularly hard to accept because America has made such a wonderful showing in its opening game against Switzerland, winning by a score of 29 to 0. However, the Canadians had the goods. Let us be the first to give credit where credit is due. Canadas' team, composed of veterans, fully deserved the honors it acquired. It played, fast, clean hockey from the outset.

"While the difference in goals between Canada and the United States was slight reports indicate that the players of the Dominion played with exceptional skill and plainly showed their superiority."

EXPLAIN ADMIRAL'S SUICIDE

Officers Attribute C. B. Brittain's Act to Long Illness.

Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, April 29. —Rear Admiral Carlo B. Brittain, Chief of Staff to the Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic Fleet, who committed suicide by shooting on Thursday last, was in poor health during the most of the time the fleet was in southern waters. He was confined to his bed when the flagship left New York, on January 7, and until after its arrival in Cuba. He was an ambitious, brilliant officer, and it is believed by his fellow officers that his illness brought his mental strain to the breaking point.

On the evening of April 21 Rear Admiral Brittain attended a reception aboard the flagship given by Admiral Henry B. Wilson, commander of the fleet, in honor of Admiral Robert E. Coontz, Chief of Naval Operations. Apparently he was in his usual good spirits. At 4 o'clock the following morning a shot was heard in his cabin and it was found that he had shot himself through the heart.
